Caulway is living the adventurous life

CHARLTON RESIDENT IN PROCESS OF APPALACHIAN TRAIL JOURNEY

CHARLTON — Charlton resident Bill Caulway just came back from completing the northern half of the Appalachian Trail on Aug. 5 after spending three months hiking around 15 hours a day.

On Saturday, Aug. 20, Caulway will already be back on the AT again, heading back down Harper's Ferry, West Virginia and making his way through the Smokey Mountains to Georgia.

The AT is about 2,200 miles. It's an accomplishment not many people can claim. But it's also an experience that Caulway recommends to anyone – young or old – who needs an adventure or time to be in nature and think.

Olivia Richman sat down with the hiking and nature enthusiast to discuss his unique experiences and recommendations for others looking into hiking the AT.

How difficult is it to hike the Appalachian Trail?

"It can be pretty difficult because of the mountains. When you hit Sage's Ravine in Connecticut, it immediately starts to become more mountainous. Once you hit Gray Lock in the Berkshires then you hit the first 3,000-foot plus mountain. You go into Vermont and it's walls of rocks and boulders and stones. It's very roll-

ELLIOTT GRADUATES FROM POLICE ACADEMY

BY OLIVIA RICHMAN
NEWS STAFF WRITER

CHARLTON — Charlton resident Patrick Elliott graduated from the Special State Police Academy in New Braintree as part of Class #27 on Aug. 5.

While Elliott has a vast amount of experience as a firefighter, police officer and EMT, the police academy course was "a whole different animal."

He said: "It was much harder. The first couple weeks were difficult. But once I got accustomed to how things work up there, it was an amazing experience. It's all very structured. They say when you can eat, what you can do. Once you fall in line, you don't think anymore. You move through the motions. It's something I never experienced before, that uniformity, the structure."

His father, John Elliott – a lieutenant at the Worcester Fire Department – said the accomplishment was huge.

He continued: "I couldn't

CHARLTON NATIVE HONORS RED SOX LEGEND IN ART CONTEST

BY OLIVIA RICHMAN
NEWS STAFF WRITER

CHARLTON — Charlton native Brendan Whipple is participating in "Play Me, I'm Yours," an international organization that combines art and music by placing painted street pianos all around major cities across the world — including Boston, the location where Whipple is participating — for people to play and admire.

Street Pianos Boston has more than 60 upright pianos and grand pianos that have been tuned up and fixed by local technicians and then painted by local artists. The pianos will be up throughout the month of September.

"What I'm painting for the piano is similar to what I did a lot when I was younger. I really like sports. I watched a lot of baseball with my dad. I am always drawing pictures of athletes. I'm painting a giant portrait of David Ortiz across the front of piano, honoring his final season," said Whipple. "I do abstract, but I mostly do representational thing, things from life. I've always been interested in people and portraits,

Encouraged by his art teachers in Charlton, Brendan Whipple pursued his love of art and turned it into a career after attending art school in Boston. He will be participating in Street Pianos Boston, put on by "Play Me, I'm Yours."

Hurricane an important point in region's past

BY OLIVIA RICHMAN
NEWS STAFF WRITER

STURBRIDGE — For the 78th anniversary of the Hurricane of 1938, Opacum Land Trust will be hosting a fundraiser dinner on Sept. 21. Attendees will gather at the Publick House for dinner, drinks and to listen to featured author Stephen Long discuss how the hurricane impacted the area's communities and forests.

Stonebridge Press has been speaking with local historians, experts and even people who witnessed the hurricane as part of a series leading up to the fundraiser. This week, Olivia Richman spoke with Larry Lowenthal, a volunteer for the Last Green Valley and a member of the Opacum Land Trust's Financial Committee. An author and historian, Lowenthal had a lot of interesting material to share.

For more information on the fundraiser or to purchase tickets call 508-347-9144 or email info@opacumlt.org.

It all started 12 years ago, when Lowenthal began working on a video about East Brimfield's Lost Village. The Lost Village

EAGLE SCOUT PROJECT HELPS OUT LOCAL CHURCH

BY OLIVIA RICHMAN
NEWS STAFF WRITER

CHARLTON/SOUTHBRIDGE — Seventeen-year-old Charlton resident Garrett Mandeville completed his Eagle Scout project in June, helping out the community in a huge way.

The Troop 160 Boy Scout redid the signs at St. John Paul II Parish's church and the La Salle Reception Center, as well as re-landscaping and weeding. From planning to execution the Eagle Scout project took almost 300 hours.

Mandeville chose this particular project because he felt the church has done so much for the Boy Scouts, sponsoring the organization for many years. The Boy Scouts can't give the church money, said Mandeville, but they can do community service. So that's what Mandeville set out to do.

"I felt really good about the project," he continued. "I pretty much grew up at that Redoing the signs at St. John Paul II Parish took a lot more work than everyone expected. Garrett Mandeville also redid the "enter" and "exit" signs," one of which had been knocked down.

Concert added to Old Home Day lineup

BY OLIVIA RICHMAN
NEWS STAFF WRITER

CHARLTON — In an effort to keep adding to the already exciting and memorable Old Home Day, the Old Home Day Committee is announcing a new event on Sunday, Sep. 5 — a concert at the Overlook tower from 4 to 6 p.m.

"Usually there's not much going on Sunday, except the Alumni Dinner," said Chairman Kathleen Walker. "We also don't have a concert series in Charlton like some other towns do. This is an addition to the normal schedule. It's an opportunity for people to get out and sit outside. They can bring their own chairs or sit on lawn, on a blanket, and listen to some really good music."

The band playing at the first ever Old Home Day concert is New Bay Colony Band.

Hand-picked by Charlton Police Chief James Pervier, New Bay Colony Band has been playing classic rock since 1973. While fun for all ages, Walker said that many older people will hear music from when they were younger. For very young children, there is the annual Saturday night concert geared more for a younger crowd before the fireworks, said Walker.

Old Home Day has been going on for 120 years and is the "best of small town America," said Walker, who noted that the festival brings the community together and makes people happy to be living in the area.

She said: "We get feedback from people who moved out of Charlton years ago and it's the one thing they remember about this town. They come back just for Old Home Day. We are noted as one of the top towns to live in in Massachusetts because of events like Old Home Day."

One major part of Old Home Day's Monday celebration is the parade at the end of the day. Filled with fire trucks, floats, high school bands and old cars, the parade is just another thing that "makes people happy," said Walker. "You just see people lined up on the sides of the street … It's something that makes people feel attached to other people. We all feel better when we feel that connection."

Another way that Old Home Day celebrates the community is their award ceremony, where citizens are recognized by the town and Sen. Anne Gobi for their community service and other things they've done to help out the town. Sometimes these are individuals who may not otherwise be recognized.

Old Home Day also features a road race (with participants from all over New England), a kid's run (which was added last year), a frog jump, a bike race for younger children, a soap box derby, an art show and flower display, live music, karaoke, hot air balloon rides (weather permitting), 80 vendors (featuring homemade items, food, crafts etc.) and a tractor pull.

Said Walker: "Just thinking about all of these activities makes me so happy. It all just goes back to feeling safe, happy. … People can get caught up with all the bad things in the news. It stands out in their memories — a good time where everybody is happy, running around and enjoying the day together. It's simple entertainment. It's something that we all need in our lives."

Bicentennial celebration continues with fireworks, concert

SOUTHBRIDGE — It was unfortunately pouring on Saturday, Aug. 13 during the Southbridge Bicentennial Fireworks Show and concert. But that didn't stop Southbridge residents from coming to the municipal airport to celebrate the town's bicentennial with some music, rides, food, fireworks and games.

Southbridge Rotary President Ron Tremblay and Town Council Chairman Esteban Carrasco Jr. were all smiles despite the gloomy weather.

Despite the rain, Lauren, Phoebe and Michael Langevin (along with other residents) couldn't wait to see the fireworks.

Members of the Island Castaways Band, which played music between the rain: Heather Peck-Oullette and Jason Oullette.

Southbridge High School students came up to enjoy the celebration.

John Hart and Jonathan Martin and other members of the Boy Scout Troop 160 helped the Southbridge Rotary sell glow sticks.

Steven, Elaina, Raf and Deanne Cardenas were excited about the carnival food.

Kayak for a Cause benefits Make a Wish

STURBRIDGE — Almost 40 kayaks (and canoes) took part in the Cedar Lake Association's annual Kayak for a Cause on Sunday, Aug. 7. Money raised at the popular fundraiser benefited the Make A Wish Foundation. Sunny, warm weather and the calm lake made the fundraiser a great time for people to enjoy the outdoors and each other's company.

"This was a great turnout. We're very pleased!" said Pat Wondolowski, pictured with Terri Ricard. Both women are the co-chairman of the Kayak for a Cause Make A Wish Foundation event.

"This is a great way to give back," said Jodi Salerno, pictured with Sean Carroll. "We also get to be out on the water with the community."

"This fundraiser is a great idea," said Michael Aspesi, pictured with his daughter Lilly, 5.

Brimfield residents Tristen and Tayln Vallee enjoyed the outdoor fundraiser.

Jack Carol and Tim Prue couldn't wait to get out on the water.

Alexis Aspesi and Alina Laverdure had a fun time hanging out at the fundraiser.

Jim Brozek and his son Nick kayak together on the lake every week.

"It's awesome to do this every year," said Josh Cottone, with daughter Starr. "We live on the lake so this is great."

'Magical moments' make their way to JEL

Children couldn't wait to be called on stage during Ed's act.

SOUTHBRIDGE — Well-known magician and balloon twister Ed Popielarczyk visited the Jacob Edwards Library on Tuesday, Aug. 1, entertaining a crowd of more than 30 children with his "Ed Popielarczyk's Magical Moments" magic routine. The event was sponsored by the Southbridge Cultural Council as part of the JEL's annual summer reading program.

"Kids love gags and slapstick humor and Ed was the grand master of this niche," said Library Director Margaret Morrissey. "He is a high energy guy who had the kids literally rolling around laughing."

With fun jokes, improv, audience participation, creative magic and balloon sculpting, the children were captivated throughout the entire performance. Even adults couldn't resist.

More than 30 kids ended up showing up to Ed's magic show at the Jacob Edwards Library. With high energy and a lot of gags and slapstick humor, Ed was a huge hit.

Relating to children was one of the ways that Ed's magic show was a huge hit at the JEL. Margaret Morrissey said his slapstick humor was one of the reasons kids loved him.

A wand one was one of the many props that Ed used throughout the routine.

Using a great amount of expression and movement, Ed was able to keep the children fixated on him throughout the entire show, proving why he is such a well-known magician.

Children (and adults) couldn't help but laugh at Ed's silly antics.

Audience participation was a huge part of the "Ed Popielarczyk's Magical Moments" show.

The audience couldn't get enough of Ed's program. It was hard for them to look away. It was also hard to stop laughing. According to Margaret Morrissey some children were even on the ground, rolling in laughter.

Heart to Heart Poker Run a success

CHARLTON — A little rain didn't stop Heart to Heart Foundation's 8th Annual Poker Run from being a success. On Aug. 6, bikers from all over the area gathered at the Beagle Club to participate in a long ride that benefited a local woman with breast cancer. This is Heart to Heart's 21st year as an organization. Dick Fiske Jr.'s father started it in hopes of raising money for cancer patients. Now, Heart to heart Foundation helps out anyone with a "catastrophic illness." So far, the family-run organization has raised an impressive $230,000.

Chet McDonald, Director of the Harley Owners Group said this was his third time participating in the Poker Run. The chapter has been supporting Heart to Heart Foundation for eight years.

Ray and Marcia Robidoux couldn't wait to get out and ride!

"I go on a lot of different runs throughout the year," said Paul Drako Girard, pictured with his customized bike.

"We've been doing this run for seven years now," said Melanie Woodcock, pictured with husband John. "His brother passed away seven years ago. This is something we are passionate about."

"I can't wait to ride!" said Jan Fiske, pictured with David Fiske.

"When someone needs help, they are referred to us," said Dick Fiske Jr.

Local historian digs deep to research Hurricane of 1938

was a mill community in East Brimfield that had more than 100 occupants. After the major flood in 1955 (which did a lot of damage to the area), the housing in the area had to be destroyed because it was below the maximum flood level.

The interesting nature of the project kept Lowenthal hooked. It was because of his heavy involvement with this natural disaster, that Ed Hood approached him to start looking into the Hurricane of 1938. Lowenthal started interviewing people around Brimfield, but none were quite old enough to have experienced the hurricane. So he did a bit of research.

He started with his own book, "Titanic Railroad: The Southern New England," which was a story he wrote about New England's "last great railroad war." The railroad was supposed to run from Palmer to Providence, but finally realized it would never come to be.

It read: "In November 1933, the contractor sold rights to Charles P. King to remove lumber in the SNE trestles, as well as to cut cordwood. The lumber-men were cutting in Southbridge when the 1938 hurricane struck; so much wood was felled by the storm that the lumber market collapsed and no more work was done along the SNE roadbed."

From just that paragraph alone, Lowenthal realized the hurricane had done a huge amount of damage to the area and destroyed a lot of places to work. But it was also interesting, he noted, because it created a lot of new opportunities for work, especially for young men.

An article about the hurricane from the Southbridge Evening News on Sept. 23, 1938 confirmed his observations. The article discussed the damage done to the Sturbridge fairgrounds and flooded roads that could only be traveled by boat. Telephones were still out. Electricity was out. The ending of the article read: "Every available man and boy in town has been called out for emergency work."

Noted Lowenthal: "This was the end of the Depression. There had been some recovery from the worst of it. But in 1938 there was a secondary recession because the Federal Reserve tightened up too soon. It created renewed unemployment. But at least all the young healthy men could find work cleaning up after the hurricane."

There were other interesting accounts in other local papers. In the Palmer Register, it read: "Never in the town's history has such a storm been witnessed." It discussed an interesting story on Cooley's Bridge (Route 20), which was completely covered with water and buckled in the middle. It was not able to be used. Two men were on either side of Cooley's Bridge and ended up actually exchanging cars to get to their respective destinations.

An article about Brimfield read: "The beautiful common in the center of the town was a tangled mess of trees and wires. The beautiful church, which stood so proudly on the knoll, was a wreck. The top of it was blown to pieces. Houses on the flats suffered much damage. Someone attempted to get to Brimfield from Wales by horseback last Thursday and the road was so piled with wires and trees that he had to cut his way through them. At one point in Wales, the hurricane had blown down 128 telephone poles in a row."

According to Lowenthal there were two "enormous" events taking over the newspapers at the time in New England: The hurricane and Hitler trying to destroy Czechoslovakia, ready to start World War II.

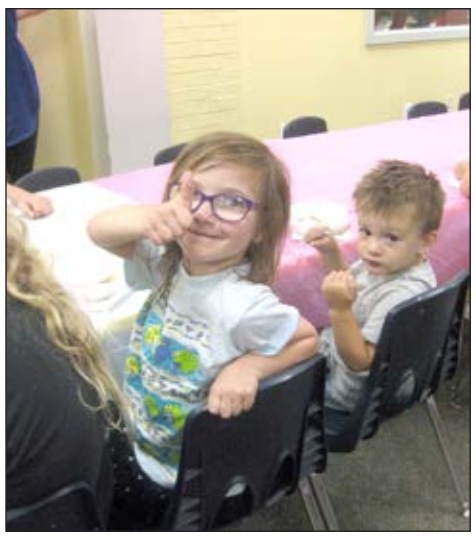
SOUTHBRIDGE — On Friday, Aug. 5, the Jacob Edwards Library celebrated the end of their summer reading program with an Ice Cream Social. Reading certificates were distributed at the event.



CASA Project seeks volunteers

The CASA Project, a non-profit organization celebrating its 35th anniversary this year, seeks CASA (Court Appointed Special Advocates) volunteer guardians ad litem to help abused children find safe, permanent homes as quickly as possible.

CASA GALs fact-find and submit court reports to the Worcester County Juvenile Court. CASA GALs also advocate for needed educational, medical, and mental/behavioral health services while the child is in the care of the state. A CASA volunteer works with one child or sibling group at a time. All of the children are victims, and 70 percent are under 12 years old. Approximately 40 percent of CASA's children are under 6 years old. Both men and women are needed. CASA takes about 6-10 hours per month, and most activities are done at the CASA volunteer's convenience. CASA provides free volunteer training classes. CASA also provides professional guidance and support for every CASA GAL volunteer. If you can find two hours per week to help, The CASA Project needs you. Call The CASA Project at 508-757-9877 or visit our website: www.casaworcester.org or email us at volunteers@thecasaproject.org.

Olympic observations

This year's Summer Olympics in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, evoke a lot of memories. For me, it's only the ninth Summer Olympics in my lifetime, so watching them is a real treat, even if it means watching events I never would watch normally.

So, this past week, as I witnessed the Olympics, I had some scattered thoughts, which I will attempt to organize here. Call it a smorgasbord of thoughts, quick bullet points, or nuggets not necessarily organized into a cogent stream.

• Mind that Dirty Water: One of the major storylines surrounding this year's Olympics was the state of the waterways, in particular, Rio's Guanabara Bay — the site of Olympic rowing and sailing events. Reports of raw sewage, human waste, garbage and bacteria-infested water dominated headlines before the games even got underway two weeks ago. Even as the rowing and sailing got started, the water was still reportedly filthy, with one report even stating that Olympic officials sent out memos to athletes warning them not to ingest water and to cover up all open wounds before making their way down to the bay.

So imagine my surprise when after witnessing New Zealand dominate a race, I see the rowers scooping up water with their bare hands and soaking their legs with it? Either the water isn't as dirty or dangerous as they are making it out to be, or the athletes don't care. I know it's probably a normal thing to cool down leg muscles with water that are no doubt on fire after a race like that, but if it meant infection, one would think that's a post-race practice they would avoid!

• Bruised Up: You may have noticed while watching the swimming competitions that many of the athletes sported these weird, circular bruises on their arms and shoulders. Doing a little research, I found out that these bruises are being caused by a process called "cupping," a pressurized rehab process in which athletes use glass, cup-like devices to suck blood to the surface of the skin (hence the bruise) to promote healing in sore muscles. The process works much like a hickey. Just in case you were wondering.

• Out of Balance: As I witnessed the USA gymnastics team (cutely dubbed "The Final 5") completely dominate the team competition this year, I ended up watching some of the balance beam competition, which by the way, is completely terrifying. The balance and skill it takes to flip around on that beam is beyond comprehension.

• Table Tennis Trance: Flipping around the Olympics coverage, I found myself locked in on a table tennis match between Japan and China, which seemed like it was moving in fast forward. The hand eye coordination it takes for this lightning-fast display is insane. Plus, I dare any of you to try to attempt any of these arm twisting serves they pull off. It defies all physical laws.

• The Art of the Volley: Speaking of volleying, I got to watch both sand and indoor volleyball last week, with the USA male sand volleyball team beating Qatar, and the USA women's indoor team defeating Puerto Rico. I also took in a Canada vs. Brazil men's indoor match, which obviously had the home crowd in their favor. I think I often take for granted how athletic volleyball is. Some of these players are absolute freaks of nature, with arms 4 feet long. It's like they are genetically created to spike a volleyball. And by the way, have you ever tried to block a spike before with your face?

• Beat Boxing: Before heading to bed last Saturday night, I kept my kids up to watch an Olympic boxing bout (lightweight 60 kg) between USA's Carlos Balderas and Japan's Daisuke Narimatsu — a quick, three-round pound fest that had my 5-year-old son in awe over the massive punches, especially the face-melting, high-speed instant replays that look like a slow-mo scene out of "Rocky."

Needless to say, I soaked up some re-enactment punches to the body and head before bed that night. That one is one me. Now if you'll excuse me, maybe I should try this "cupping" thing.

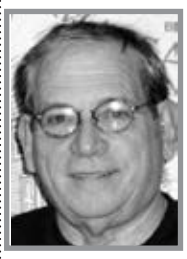
Selling albums: Part 4



Treasures in Your Home

Paul Joseph

The most common albums we encounter are Lincoln cents. About half the collections have one, and sometimes several blue Whitman albums with almost complete sets. Most were filled with coins pulled out of circulation. While many are void of any rarities, you should be aware of what to look for.

Lincoln cents and Indian Head cents were both produced in 1909, and the 1909 coins of each series can be valuable. From 1909 to 1981 the cents were primarily French bronze (mostly copper). After that they were converted to a zinc based composition. 1909 would have been Abraham Lincoln's 100th birthday, so the design was changed as a commemorative. The reverse design featured two sheaves of Durham wheat, and are known as "wheaties." In 1959, (Lincoln's 150th birthday) the reverse design was changed to the Lincoln Memorial reverse. Today, the reverse depicts the Union Shield.

Wheaties (not the cereal) remain the focus of most cent collectors. They were minted at three mints — Philadelphia (no mintmark), Denver (D), and San Francisco (S). The mintmark can be found under the date. Mint-marked coins of the 1910's and 1920's are always more valuable than Philadelphia-produced cents. Coins of the 1910's and 1920's are more valuable than the 30's, 40's and 50's. All Lincoln common date coins are sold in bags of 500, 2,500, and 5,000 at bulk prices. Many dealers say: "These bags are unsearched by us." While that could be true, I doubt these haven't been searched through at some time, so I'd take that claim with a grain of salt.

Let's take a look at some of the more valuable Lincoln cents in three grades (Good 4, Very Fine 20, ND Almost Uncirculated, AU 50). There are five varieties of Lincoln cents for 1909, the first year of production — 1909 ($2.50, $3.75, $9); 1909-S ($455, $100, $190); 1909 VDB, the designer's initials at 6 o'clock on the reverse ($10, $11.50, $13.50); 1909-S VDB ($560, $650, $900), and the 1909-S over horizontal S ($60, $135, $200).

Remember that the designer, Victor David Brenner (VDB) knew that rich folks didn't care what the reverse design would be. However, he knew that the coin would circulate widely among poorer people. That is why he put Durham wheat (the main ingredient of the newly invented poor man's food-spaghetti) on the reverse. Then he made sure word got out what the "stuff" on the reverse was. The result — instant acceptance by the lower classes.

Other valuable Lincoln cents (from most valuable to less valuable):

• 1955/55 double die is the widest spaced doubling on any U.S. minted coin in history (picture accompanies this column) is valued at $875, $1,050, $1,300).

• 1922 Plain, made in Denver, but the dies, which were made in Philadelphia never had a "D" engraved on them ($4,400, $650, $2,600).

• 1914 D (low mintage) is valued at $130, $250, $1,900.

• 1917 with a double died obverse ($100, $250, $2,000).

• 1922, weak D: These dies were actually sent from Philadelphia with D mintmarks, but the D was almost completely removed due to over polishing. With Denver being the only mint producing cents in 1922, the staff felt the pressure of getting as much use out of the dies as possible. Values are $50, $150, $550.

Preparing you home for sale

Realtor's Report

James Black

The home sales this year are more of a beauty competition than anything else. As we get closer to a shift in the market it is becoming more and more important to make all necessary repairs to your home and stage it so it shows in its best light. We are still experiencing multiple offer situations and above asking price offers in many areas. The common thread with these home are that they have great curb appeal and are staged and are not in need of repairs.

Sellers more often than not think that they will just leave the painting, refinishing floors, replacing of carpets and such to the buyer because they may want a different color or may want to put carpet over the hardwoods. In reality, if the buyer sees the home is well maintained and is very clean they may look past some of their preferences and be happy with the home. If we don't stage and make the repairs they assume it's not a nice house and must need more work that is hidden and ask for a huge discount or move on to another home. You almost always will make several times your investment for these types of updates. However, I suggest talking to a local realtor who can look at your home, neighborhood and the needed repairs to see if it will be worth the investment.

In practice, I have seen almost every time this year that we gave the seller a list of repairs to make and they made them as well as had a staging consultation and they followed the instructions that we sold the home within a couple days for asking price or above. It appears that the buyers especially in price ranges that attract more first time home buyers are willing to pay a premium for a home that they don't need to do any work to. I am also finding that the majority of the appraisals that have been done on the homes we have listed, come at the value offered. This means the appraisals are typically taking into account the improvements and condition of the home and appraising at a premium.

Diversification is still important for retirees

Financial Focus

Jeff Burdick

During your working years, your primary investment goal is generally growth – you need your money to grow so that you can eventually afford the comfortable retirement lifestyle you've envisioned. But when you retire, should you change course and adjust your investment strategy from "offense" to "defense"?

Actually, it's not quite that simple. To begin with, even while you are working, you don't want your portfolio to be completely filled with growth-oriented investments, such as stocks. If it were, you would likely be taking on a degree of investment risk that's too high, because, as you may know, stocks will fluctuate in price – sometimes significantly. And if you only own stocks, you could take a big hit during a market downturn. That's why you need to have an array of investments – stocks, bonds, certificates of deposit (CDs) and so on. By spreading your investment dollars this way, you can give yourself more opportunities for success while reducing the impact of volatility on your portfolio (keep in mind, though, that diversification, by itself, can't guarantee profits or protect against all losses).

Now, let's fast-forward to your retirement date. Once you retire, you may need to look at your investment portfolio somewhat differently – instead of "building it up," you may now want to think of "making it last." So, your first impression might be that instead of maintaining the diversified portfolio you had when you were working, you need to switch to predominantly "safe" investments, such as CDs and Treasury bonds, to reduce the risk of losing principal.

And such a strategy might indeed be effective – if your retirement were only going to last a year or so. But the chances are reasonably good that you could be retired for two, or possibly even three, decades. If that's the case, then you will have to deal with a threat to your lifestyle that you might not have considered: inflation. We've had low inflation for several years, but that could change in the future. Consider this: Even at a relatively low 3% inflation rate, prices double roughly every 25 years. And depending on your personal needs and spending patterns, your personal inflation rate might be even higher.

To protect yourself against inflation, you will find that investments such as CDs and Treasury bonds are typically not much help. In fact, in a low-rate environment, your returns on these investments may not even keep up with inflation, much less keep you ahead of it. That's not to say they have no value – they can provide you with an income stream and help lower your overall investment risk.

But to defend your purchasing power, you will still need some growth potential in your investment portfolio during your retirement years. Your exact percentage of stocks and other growth-oriented investments will depend on a variety of factors – your projected longevity, other sources of income, family situation, risk tolerance and so on. You may want to consult with a financial professional to ensure that your portfolio mix is suitable for your needs.

Many things may change in your life when you retire – but the need for investment diversification is not one of them.

School's in session

MOM IN MOTION

Jill Rousey

Where did this summer go? I know we say that every August, but, seriously, the summers get shorter and shorter every year.

Maybe it is because my kids are getting older, and we have too much going on in our day-to-day lives, and less time for relaxing outings, but we didn't even make it to the beach this summer! I have just a couple more weeks to go until the life of chaos and homework is back in full swing. As I look over my growing list of school supplies and clothes that are too small, I almost want to cry at my bank account running in fear at the look of pencils, jeans, sneakers, and a hundred notebooks!

If you are smart you probably hold on to extra supplies for the future or even ask for a supply list for the next year ahead of time. However, if you are like me, it's nearly the beginning of school, and your supply list, which came last week, is still sitting folded in half on your desk, not touched. I know I have things to do to get ready for the impending school year, but I also have so many other things to do! It is times like these we all wish we could freeze time, get a coffee IV, or add more hours to the day and find a way to miraculously never be tired. But alas, I have to face the dreaded "to-do" list. Well here are some easy ideas for getting back to school supplies, and not breaking the bank to do it, and to get things ready without the house going into stress overload.

First off, for school supplies, buy in bulk and split with a fellow mom friend. Or get on your favorite social media and ask advice. I did, I requested tips on where to buy school supplies cheap. My lovely friends answered and here is what they had to say:

• "Cheap? A dollar store! Great place

Try apple cider vinegar for what ails you

Take the Hint

KAREN TRAINOR

Apple cider vinegar has been a staple in kitchen cupboards for generations. Hailed as a "health tonic" for a myriad of ailments, the natural liquid, made from fermented apples, has a centuries long history of health benefits that are being rediscovered today. From relieving heartburn and halting halitosis, to stabilizing blood sugar and soothing arthritis pain, ACV serves as a natural and inexpensive alternative to modern medicines. Through the years this column has shared a variety of apple cider vinegar hints. If you can stand a few more, the following pages spotlight the virtues of apple cider vinegar.

Note: Always check with your doctor before ingesting raw apple cider vinegar as use may effect tooth enamel, bone density, decrease potassium levels, interfere with medications, etc.

FYI: The key to reaping the many advantage of apple cider vinegar lies in choosing ACV in its natural, unfiltered state, which means purchasing (or making) vinegar that includes the "mother enzyme" of vinegar — a white, filmy substance that occurs as the liquid is fermenting. Thus, pass over the clear amber bottles of processed apple cider vinegar that crowd supermarket shelves.

Natural apple cider vinegar, complete with the "mother" will be labeled as such. The whitish mother enzyme, produced by fermentation contains healthy raw bacteria and enzymes that have been credited with health benefits. Raw ACV is unprocessed, unfiltered and not pasteurized. Typically, it has a brownish hue, with a visible whitish organic material is visible through the glass. The label should state it is organic. Stay away from apple cider vinegar in plastic bottles, as not all are certified BPA free.

Health Benefits of ACV: What's the secret to apple cider vinegar's healing properties? It is common sense that if apple cider vinegar aids in regulating the pH in the body and keeps it alkaline, it would keep harmful microorganisms and bacteria away, as they cannot thrive in an alkaline environment. In addition, a substance in vinegar, acetic acid, can kill bacteria and/or prevent them from multiplying and reaching harmful levels. And let's not forget to credit ACV's main ingredient. Apples have long been touted as a health boosting fruit that promises to "keep the doctor away."

How much ACV can you safely consume? According to Carol Johnston, PhD, associate director of the School of Nutrition and Health Promotion at Arizona State University, a tablespoon of apple cider vinegar mixed with eight ounces of water and taken before a meal is a safe dose. Some people prefer to add honey or maple syrup to mask the taste of straight vinegar, while others drink it in hot tea. Of course, you can always reap the benefits of raw ACV the most traditional way – enjoyed in a fresh salad.

Apple Cider Vinegar Detox Bath: To release toxins from your body and draw excess uric acid out, try this detox bath. Praised for its ability to cleanse the body both inside and out, this simple, but effective bath also offers pain relief for those with arthritis and gout. The apple cider vinegar returns the skin to its ideal pH. As a bonus, an ACV bath aids in decreasing body odors better than deodorant.

Simply add two cups of unfiltered apple cider vinegar into a tub of hot water. Relax in the tub for at least a half hour or until the water has cooled. Towel dry without rinsing.

• Arthritis/Achy Joints: ACV is a natural pain reliever, and many studies have proven that the vinegar works especially well in decreasing arthritic and joint pain.

Applying a bandage poultice of ACV targets pain at its source. Heat up a cup of water with three tablespoons of apple cider vinegar, including the mother enzyme. Soak a cotton or flannel bandage in the mixture for at least 15 minutes. While solution is still warm, dip affected joint area in the mixture to wet the area. Apply warm bandage over the joint, wrapping it to a snug (not tight) fit.

An ACV massage bath is another method to treat arthritis and joint pain. Pour 12 ounces of raw apple cider vinegar into a warm tub of water. Soak in the tub for at least ten minutes, then massage aching muscles and sore joints. Enjoy another ten minute soak and repeat.

• Insulin Resistance and Diabetes: Medical studies reveal ACV taken with a high carb meal improved insulin sensitivity by 19-34 percent and significantly lowered blood glucose and insulin responses. In addition, research shows two tablespoons of ACV before going to bed can reduce fasting blood sugars.

In 2007 Diabetes Care published findings that concluded taking two tablespoons of apple cider vinegar before bed lowered morning glucose levels by up to 6 percent. Other researchers reported that apple cider vinegar taken with meals slashed blood sugar levels by 30 percent.

"Vinegar appears to have effects similar to some of the most popular medications for diabetes," stated Arizona State University researcher Carol Johnson.

Note: Check with your doctor before ingesting ACV if you are taking medication for diabetes or insulin resistance.

• Weight Loss: Raw apple cider vinegar has been praised as a natural weight loss supplement, attributing its success to its ability to lower glucose levels and help you feel fuller at mealtime. In fact, a research experiment reveals those who drank ACV with a high carb meal ingested up to 275 fewer calories the rest of the day. Moreover, a three-month study of overweight participants proved that those who took apple cider vinegar daily reduced the size of their waists.

The good news is, it doesn't take a daunting dose of ACV to be effective. A double blind Japanese study found the following: In a 12 week experiment, participants who daily ingested a 16 ounce drink with one tablespoon of ACV added, had lower BMI, less visceral fat, and lost more weight than those whose drinks didn't contain vinegar. As a bonus, the vinegar also lowered the participant's triglycerides. Another study in Japan reported that mice whose high fat diets were supplemented with acetic acid (the main ingredient in vinegar) developed up to 10 percent less body fat than control mice.

Prevention Magazine reported: "Acetic acid, the main component in vinegar, may interfere with the body's ability to digest starch."

Still not convinced apple cider vinegar can be the key to successful weight loss? An abundance of ACV weight loss testimonials are available online from dozens of health site sources.

• Acid Reflux and GERD: While it might seem counterproductive to treat acid with acid, acid reflux is often caused by the lack of acid in the body. Taking two teaspoons of apple cider vinegar every day (diluted in water) has been known to relieve the symptoms of acid reflux and GERD better than many over the counter remedies.

To halt indigestion before it begins, drink a teaspoon of ACV with a teaspoon of honey in a warm glass of water about a half hour before you eat a meal that you expect won't agree with you.

• Tummy Troubles: The antibiotic properties in ACV has been proven to relieve diarrhea caused by bacteria. What's more, pectin from the apples has also been proven to stifle gastric spasms. According to "The Blaylock Wellness Report," apple cider vinegar can also help prevent dysbiosis, an imbalance between good and bad bacteria in the gut, according to author Dr. Russell Blaylock. He recommends drinking a teaspoon of organic vinegar mixed with four ounces of water with each meal to aid digestion and ease reflux conditions.

• Heart Health: Here are more reasons to eat salads: A decade long study revealed that women who ate a vinegar based salad dressing five to six days a week each week lowered their risk of ischemic heart disease. Want more? The June of 2011 issue of Journal of Agricultural and Food Chemistry reported that ingesting apple cider vinegar significantly lowered triglycerides and cholesterol. And the British Journal of Nutrition also claimed that apple cider vinegar can lower cholesterol. The lower numbers were attributed to apple cider vinegar's acetic acid content.

• Colds and Flu: Many ACV drinkers swear downing a tablespoon or two of at the first signs of a cold or the flu halts the bug in its tracks. If you've got chest congestion or a stuffy nose, a teaspoon of apple cider vinegar in a glass of water can help relieve congestion. The pain of a sore throat can be soothed by gargling with a tablespoon of ACV in a glass of warm water.

to get those additional wish list items for the class as well."

• "Those really expensive office supply stores typically make up for their ridiculous prices during back to school season. I got an abundance of notebooks at $.17 cents each!"

• "Get a few other parents in on it, and go to the wholesale stores and buy in bulk! Divvy it all up amongst the kids, and you'll probably have extra."

The other battle is school clothes. If they aren't growing out of it within a few months they have probably destroyed them. How many of you can relate to buying a $30 pair of jeans for your kid thinking "At least this will last through the winter" only to see your kid put them on before Halloween and they don't even button anymore? I love thrift stores for just this reason. Every parent has to donate some wardrobe item that was worn just once, if ever, and is still in perfect condition. Don't break the bank buying new clothes for your kids. Get the necessities, socks and underwear, and go through their clothes! Take a few hours and make your kids try on everything (they tend to hate this, so it's a great rainy day project with the promise of a fun movie and popcorn if they can get it done quickly!). I found my son had more clothes than a teenage girl. Sure I will get him some new tee shirts and jeans, but only enough to last him until Hanukkah, when I will get him more. I could easily spend less than $100 on a new school wardrobe, and everyone is happy. The one thing I will say, don't be cheap with the shoes. Sure they will grow out of them sooner than you'd like. Or they have walked the sole off the bottom first. But with the amount of running around and walking and phys ed these kids have, a good sturdy supportive pair of shoes is worth it.

So there you have it, a few tips to make this whole process of sending our kids back to school a touch easier. And as always if you have any tips to share send them along! I love hearing from you.

Please write in and share your thoughts! As always, take what you want from what we discuss as advice or information, share with me your favorite tip or recipe and join me on our next edition of "Mom in Motion." E-mail me your thoughts and tips at jill@stonebridgepress.com.

'Your life is on your back, it's a whole different world'

ing, not so bad. The first two days in New Hampshire it's OK. Then you hit Moosilauke Range, which is the beginning of White Mountain Range, where it really starts to get to 3,000-4,000-foot peaks. It's not uncommon to hold onto roots and rocks or ropes to get up the ledges. It's not uncommon to be walking through a river on the trail. During this, you're carrying a 30-pound pack. Your life is on your back. It's a whole different world."

Bill Caulway at the top of Katahdin at Baxter State Park on the northern terminus of the Appalachian Trail.

Wow. That sounds difficult. What made you decide to do this?

"A lot of people, when they're younger, love backpacking and say they want to hike the Appalachian Trail. I've been given the opportunity to retire early, so I went for it. I read a lot of books about it. Last year, I hiked the Long Trail in Vermont, which starts in Massachusetts and goes into Canada through Vermont. I got almost to the end but I ended up with a health issue. I realized I loved it."

So, it started with shorter hiking trips?

"I did a lot of Shakedown Hikes, which aren't as long and give you an opportunity to figure everything out. You take your gear, everything is perfect. You go out for three nights or a week. You come back and realize you didn't have enough nutrition or that you felt uncomfortable in the boots and sleeping bag. You figure all of it out. People I talk to about it say it's such a benefit because you find out you may not actually like it. You haven't committed all the money and time to do it, leaving your job for six months. You find out the easy way and can escape if you don't like it. If you flew down to Georgia it would be a lot more difficult."

So, what made you decide that, yes, hiking was definitely for you?

"The hikes I did were in Connecticut and Massachusetts and Vermont. I did them with my wife. What pushed me over the edge was seeing people that were not happy turn into very happy people on the trails. It changes you very positively. You have a lot of time to think. Everything becomes small. Everything important to me is on my back. I can't control very much, only my decisions. Not the trail, not the weather. Life becomes very simple and I love that. Everything is stripped away and compacted down into a small space. All you need to do is find a place to find food every four to five days. Besides that, on your own. That's what I liked the most about it — the simplicity of each day."

How were the people you met along the trail?

"The people on the trail – hiking it, maintaining it – are just different. They're supportive. If you say your lighter is dead, there will be three lighters next to you. They'll let you borrow things. It's a community, a fellowship. You are out there, hiking, meeting other people with the same mindset. It's all ages. I've met people that just graduated high school to people that are 80. Nobody passes judgment on what you do, how much you do. They say 'hike your own hike.'"

So the people you meet are another reason you enjoyed hiking the AT.

"Every day you wake up and what you see something you've never seen before. Even though it's hard and everything you get, you earn. There's no gifts. Even a Coca Cola at a trail stop is amazing. It's called 'trail magic.' You hiked 15 miles to get that Coke. It feels wonderful. You cherish it. It inspires you. And the awesome beauty of it. You're in some areas that are pristine and untouched. You find birds and animals that aren't afraid of people, really. The little red squirrels we call micro-bears because they attack your food at night. Chipmunks we call Chipzillas. They scream and yell at you. They'll steal your dinner when you turn around."

How does it feel to be out there away from technology and society?

"You disconnect from the news. Information is rare. You don't get very good service. If you do there's usually a bounce at the top of the mountain. There will be service from the top, so you can send a few texts – but can't call people. A lot of people have GPS trackers so family members can track them, which I have."

How did it feel to be away from your wife and family?

"It's very hard. It's the hardest part of the trip. If anybody gets sick or if anybody needs you, you're not available. You don't know about it. Nobody can communicate with you. Your phone on airplane mode all day long to save battery. You get a trail family, which is pretty cool – they're at the same shelters and towns with the same people. You hang out together because your pace is about the same. That's a lot of fun."

What is your advice for people who many be interested in doing the AT or another longer hike?

"Try it. Try it. Just try it. Trained for six weeks at Wells State Park in Sturbridge with my backpack. Got up to 11 miles in five hours. If you go out and do that in your local state park – see how it feels. You may get drawn into it. Just try things a little at a time. The year before you go read about it and study it. That's part of the fun. Prepping is part of the pleasure. You get excited for it. You learn a lot."

Whipple pays tribute to 'Big Papi' with piano art

"I'm painting a giant portrait of David Ortiz across the front of piano, honoring his final season," said Whipple. "I really like sports. I watched a lot of baseball with my dad. I am always drawing pictures of athletes."

ART CONTEST

especially of pop art-style athletes and actors."

Whipple heard of the project while attending Mass Art in Boston in 2013. As a pianist, Whipple was in awe of all of the pianos around his apartment and school. He went around playing them and noticed they were painted. Earlier this year, Whipple noticed that the organization was asking for local artists to participate in the upcoming Street Pianos Boston event.

When Whipple heard he was accepted he was "very excited."

He continued: "I was happy to be a part of it. I love painting and playing music. It was cool to be part of a group art project that was passionate about both sides of it."

As of press time, Whipple was about a third of the way done with his painting, which has to be completed by Aug. 26. He's been working on it out of a studio in Boston called the Design Center. He has been living in the city since his sophomore year of college.

While he loved his art classes in Charlton and felt the teachers were very encouraging, he is happy to be in a big city.

He said: "There is so much to do that's within walking or train distance. It's never boring. Things like this happen that you sometimes don't see in smaller cities and towns."

Whipple has been drawing and painting for as long as he can remember. While most children are into art and finger painting and drawing, Whipple said he "never grew out of it." The more encouragement he received from his teachers and peers, the more certain he became that he wanted to make a career out of art. He started to build a portfolio up in high school and then became a graphic design major at Mass Art. He currently works as a graphic designer at the Boston Children's Hospital.

The "thoughtlessness" of painting is what kept Whipple interested. He could turn off his critical thinking side for just a little bit and focus on his creative side, "which is more relaxing and peaceful." It took away all of his worries.

"I haven't given much thought to how many people will see the piano I painted," said Whipple. "I can't even imagine in numbers how many it will be. I was excited just to be able to do it for myself. It's an interesting experience. I've never painted a piano before so even if nobody saw it I'd be happy. It's very cool. It's an added bonus that people will see it. I would like to see what people think of it."

Charlton resident graduates from Police Academy

Patrick Elliott posed after the graduation ceremony with parents John and Lisa Elliott and his sister Kate Elliott. Said his father: "I'm so proud of him. He stepped up to the plate."

Patrick Elliott has also taken courses to be a firefighter and taken EMT classes. He said: "I always wanted a chance to help people. It's a crazy world out there right now. Sometimes you just want to do everything you can to help somebody else, even if it's something small."

believe how hard it was. Every single weekend he was here doing homework. All weekend. It was crazy. The stress level was way up there. I'm so proud of him. He stepped up to the plate."

Olivia Richman sat down with Elliott to talk about what led him to pursue the Special Sate Police Academy, an inspiring journey that took a lot of hard work and dedication.

How did this all begin?

"I started when I was 16 with the junior firefighter at the Charlton Fire Department. I did that until I was 18."

What got you interested in taking on that role?

"My dad is a firefighter for Worcester Fire Department. It kind of naturally happened. I was curious. You can't do much as a junior firefighter but you learn the equipment and how things work. I let it drop for two years when I started working. At 19 I came back and started the fire academy through them."

What made you decide you wanted to come back?

"My dad was doing a construction project. The chief asked if I was interested. They were looking for new members. I just walked down and signed up again. It's a chance to help people. A chance to get out the door and do something most people don't get to do every day. It's exciting."

How long did you do that for?

"I worked for them for two years. They told me to get my EMT [license] so I signed up and did that, working EMS for them for a little over a year. I decided to sign up to work full-time EMS in Worcester. They are the secondary private company running out of the UMass Hospital system. While I was doing that, I was putting applications in for the Worcester Airport, where I was later hired."

What made you apply to the Worcester Airport?

"It's kind of a weird niche up there. You do everything. You're a police officer, an EMT and a firefighter. There's only four places in the United States that still do that. It was interesting, something different."

How did that go?

"They gave me an interview and got me up there. A couple months later they sent to South Carolina to get my ARFF certification — Aircraft Rescue Firefighting. It's a week course down at the South Carolina Fire Academy. They had an actual burning 747. It was a very different firefighting experience."

Wow, that sounds very intense!

"I worked for several months then they got me into the Police Academy. That was a four month adventure."

Why did they suggest that you attend the Police Academy?

"They're now looking at making me a field training officer for newer members that come up to the airport. They want me to use my experiences from the Police Academy to train people that will be going in the future."

How was your experience at the Police Academy?

"The first three weeks were a stress desensitization training, to build your stress level up as high as they can. The whole goal is to make it so when you're in a stressful environment, dealing with people that don't want to deal with you, it helps you stay calm and handle it."

Wow. That sounds difficult. What made you pursue all of these things over the years?

"I always wanted a chance to help people. It's a crazy world out there right now. Sometimes you just want to do everything you can to help somebody else, even if it's something small. Working at the airport, you can do a lot to help people just by letting them know you're there, ready to do anything they need."

Is there anything you'd like to add?

"A shout-out to Assistant Chief Mike Mahan. He's one of the ones that helped me get started with this whole adventure, he pushed me. He pushed me to get my EMT and do a lot of things with the Charlton FD. It led me down this whole road."

What do you do when you're not working?

"I'm a big outdoors guy. My dad and I like to go fishing all the time."

OBITUARIES

Evelyn A. Young, 82

STURBRIDGE — Evelyn A. (Margevich) Young, 82, passed away peacefully at home in the comfort of her family on Saturday, Aug. 13, after a short fight with leukemia.

She leaves her husband, Alex Young, Jr., to whom she would have been married to for 61 years this coming Sept. 3. She also leaves her two sons, Gary Young and his wife Sharon of Palmer and Sandwich, Tim and his wife Deb of Northboro; her daughter, Margaret "Peggy" Wood of Deep River, Conn.; her sister-in-law Anne Marie (Young) Kwasniewski of West Seneca, N.Y.; her six grandchildren, Jordan, Cheneille, Andrew, Alyssa, Caroline and Julianna; and nieces and nephews.

She was predeceased by her only sibling, her brother, Edward Margevich, Jr., formerly of Cambria, N.Y., and her sister-in-law, Dorothy A. Young, formerly of Tonawanda, N.Y.

She was born on Oct. 31, 1933 in Sykesville, Pa., the daughter of late Edward and Ann (Gasper) Margevich, Sr. She was raised and educated in North Tonawanda, N.Y. She graduated from North Tonawanda High School and received her Associate Degree from Niagara Community College.

Evelyn began her married life as a homemaker and as the children got older, she worked in the banking industry, beginning with Western Savings Bank in Buffalo, N.Y. In 1975, following her husband's job transfer, the family relocated to Sturbridge, where she worked for Shawmut Bank and Fleet Bank prior to her retirement in 1990.

Evelyn enjoyed travel, especially to Florida each winter. Cross-Country trips and visiting national or presidential library sites were also favorites. Along with her husband, she was an avid Buffalo Bills fan and PGA golf follower. She enjoyed quilting, reading, and certain collectibles; she was a bird enthusiast, and loved her "grand-dogs". Evelyn served as the first treasurer of the local Women in Business Club. Mostly, she loved being a mother and grandmother, caring for her family. Evelyn looked forward to Christmas Eve with her family each year, and could always been at her grandchildren's school or athletic events.

The family wishes to thank the UMass Memorial Hospital, University Campus, 6th Floor West doctors, nurses and staff for their outstanding care during her hospital stay, and the VNA Care Network and Hospice of Worcester nurses, Paulette and Holly and PCA staff, Jessica, for their expertise, compassion, and superb care in Evelyn's final days.

AUBURN — The 2016 Auburn Boys' Basketball Summer League wrapped up its season this past Wednesday evening, Aug. 10, with a championship showdown between the No. 10 seed from Tantasqua Regional and the No. 4 seed from Worcester Tech. Tech survived a strong effort from the underdogs and pulled away late, earning a 67-56 win to take home the title.

Those in attendance at the Auburn High School gymnasium were treated to a high-energy, fast-paced contest with loads of big plays, and most notably, a standout performer on each side. Adam Phillips of Tantasqua and Ian Mwalago of Tech each posted a game-high of 25 points to lead their respective teams in the final.

Tantasqua finished their regular season at 5-5 in the 18-team league, earning the 10th seed and rolling through three rounds of playoffs to meet Tech in the championship. Worcester finished their regular season campaign at 7-3.

The other schools represented in the hotly contested, long-running league included (in order of regular season finish) Sutton High, David Prouty Regional, Hopedale High, Uxbridge High, Quaboag Regional, Grafton High, Bartlett High, Leicester High, Northbridge High, the Bancroft School, Abby Kelley Foster, Auburn High, Oxford High, Quabbin Regional, Millbury High and North Brookfield High.

"This league is great, and that was a great game to watch, just phenomenal," Andy Niedzwiecki, Auburn High's varsity coach and assistant to Bob Muir who runs the league said after the entertaining final. "Mooch [Muir] does a great job every year with this, I think like 36 years now. I really want to thank the town of Auburn, especially Dr. Brunelle for letting us use the gym this summer."

When the ball tipped, the action was fast and furious and through an entertaining first 20-minute half, Tantasqua held a slim lead at 36-32. That lead was due in large part to the play and hot shooting of Phillips, who poured in 19 points with three 3-pointers to help carry the load.

"I knew going into the game our team needed a floor general, so I tried to step up and fill that role," Phillips said of his efforts in the finale. "We're scrappy, hungry, and we never give, and I think we're going to have a great [high school] season."

"We talked about how this is a great start to that season and that I really think it can catapult us to a fast start," summer league coach Dan Peretti said after the defeat. "We came together pretty well here at the end of the season and through the last three or four games."

While Tantasqua still played a spirited second half, foul trouble for their big men led to issues defending the eventual championship game MVP, Mwalago, who knifed his way into the lane on a number of occasions, and when he didn't hit a great shot, he was going 4 of 5 from the line down the stretch.

Phillips and forward Ben Garrett each had six points in the second half; Garrett finished his night with 10 in all. Tantasqua got solid contributions from a handful of players including Drew Peretti, Cam Arello and Connor McCaffrey, but Tech made a push late and some costly turnovers allowed them to open a big lead in the game's waning moments.

With 4:07 to play, the game was tied at 54-54, but Worcester went on a 13-2 run to close out the game. With the win, Worcester Tech, in their second straight championship game, got to taste victory and bring home the coveted T-shirts and trophy associated with the title game win.

"I thought we did a really great job up until the last three minutes of the game," Coach Peretti noted, "but then they really outplayed us to close it out."

Shepherd Hill's Anctil helps Worcester Mass Fury to football win

Shepherd Hill alum Brett Anctil had 5 carries for 67 yards to lead the game in rushing, but no carry was bigger than his second quarter 41-yard misdirection run for a touchdown, which gave the Worcester Mass Fury (4-2) some breathing room in a convincing 33-0 victory over the Boston Colts (0-6) Saturday, Aug. 13 at Worcester State University in Eastern Football League action.

church. I attended Trinity Catholic Academy, the parish school. I went there my whole live. I'm involved in the Parish Youth Ministry."

Mandeville's mother, Tina, was overwhelmed with joy at the idea of her son doing a project for the church.

She said: "It was natural for him to want to do something for the church. Scouts encourages and inspires the boys to always do something positive in their community. We were so happy he chose to do something at the church and for our parish as an opportunity to give back to something that's meant so much to him and our family for so many years."

Mandeville joined the Cub Scouts around eight, encouraged by his mother. At first, he was against it. He wondered if it'd be boring. Now, Mandeville said that any boy should join Boy Scouts.

He explained: "It teaches you a lot of things. Not just outdoor skills, but life skills. Being loyal, friendly, kind, brave and all that jazz. That's a guideline on how to be, really."

His mother noticed that Boy Scouts allowed the troop to feel as if they were part of a team. They had a fellowship and became bonded.

"They began to rely on one another really," she said. "They're there for one another. It's really nice to see. It's a wholesome environment for them and that's amazing. To see them all come together to make such a positive difference in their community is just so exciting."

Mandeville also enjoyed camping and being outdoors. But the biggest thing for him was the message that he's carried with him for years. Mandeville said he would never say he's "done with Boy Scouts," because the lessons will be with him throughout his whole life. He said: "I will use the Scout Oath and Law for the rest of my life."

The Boy Scouts re-did the landscape around each sign, front and back.

Outside of Boy Scouts, Mandeville is very involved with the church and the food pantry. He also enjoys archery and being outdoors. Mandeville is also an "avid gamer," and loves jazz. He is currently looking at colleges, but no decisions have been made as of press time.

"I'm so proud of him that beyond the project being done – people recognized the work. They're so appreciative seeing the work being done," said Tina. "He was very dedicated. His message is that the benefits and lessons he learned from Boy Scouts will be carried with him for many years."

Local woman achieves Toastmasters award

STURBRIDGE — Rori Coakley, a resident of Spencer, recently achieved a Competent Communicator award from Village Toastmasters in Sturbridge.

Rori Coakley

Coakley achieved this honor by following Toastmasters International's Competent Communication manual. She presented 10 speeches, each focused on developing a specific skill of successful communication, such as use of visual aids or perfecting a persuasive argument. As a young professional and recent graduate of the Isenberg School of Management at UMass Amherst, Coakley's speeches covered a range of topics, including how to break undesirable habits and how to save tens of thousands of dollars while earning a college degree.

Prior to joining Village Toastmasters in the fall of 2014, Coakley was a college student and a real estate investor looking to improve her public speaking and communication skills.

"Toastmasters built my confidence speaking in front of an audience," said Coakley, "and taught me that public speaking is a hard skill that can be learned with practice. Through coaching and constructive evaluations, the club provides a safe, encouraging environment to make mistakes and kick fears to the curb."

Currently, Coakley is working as a licensed real estate agent for RE/MAX Professional Associates, which has six offices in central Massachusetts. She aims to continue to hone her communication and leadership skills at Village Toastmasters by pursuing advanced awards.

News Briefs

Voter registration deadline for Primary is Aug. 19

Secretary of the Commonwealth William F. Galvin reminds Massachusetts residents that the deadline to register to vote or to change party enrollment for the Sept. 8 state primary is Friday, Aug. 19.

Persons who are U.S. citizens, residents of Massachusetts, and who will be at least 18 years old on or before the State Primary are eligible to register to vote. On the last day to register for the primary, registration will close at 5 p.m. Friday throughout the state. In addition, mailed registration forms must be postmarked by Aug. 19, to be eligible to vote in the State Primary on Sept. 8.

Eligible voters can register online by visiting the office website at www.registertovotema.com.

Those who register to vote by the deadline are not only eligible to vote in the primary — which is on Thursday, Sept. 8 this year — but are registered for the Nov. 8 general election.

Voter registration forms are available online at http://www.sec.state.ma.us/ele/eleifv/howreg.htm. They can be filled out on-line then printed out and signed, or printed out first, then filled out by hand and signed. Signed forms must be brought to the local town clerk or city election department.

Voters registered in a political party (Democratic, Republican, Green-Rainbow, or United Independent) may only vote in that party's primary. Voters registered as "unenrolled" (commonly referred to as independent) may vote in any party primary and will remain unenrolled.

"If you wish to change your enrollment status," Secretary Galvin said, "you can also do it by going online at www.RegisterToVoteMA.com."

Offices to be voted on in the primary are party nominations for Representative in Congress, Governors Councilor, Senator and Representative in the General Court, Sheriff, County Commissioner in Barnstable, Bristol, Dukes, Norfolk and Plymouth Counties, and to complete terms for Register of Deeds in Dukes and Suffolk Counties, and District Attorney in Bristol County.

For information on voter registration, check the Secretary's website at www.sec.state.ma.us/ele. If you are uncertain of your registration status, Secretary Galvin urges you to check with your city or town clerks or registrars of voters before the deadline.

Sturbridge Boy Scouts to host food drive

STURBRIDGE — Members of Sturbridge Boy Scouts Troop 161 will hold a food drive from noon to 4 p.m., Saturday, Aug. 27, at Stop & Shop Supermarket in Sturbridge.

"Help us to fill up 10 shopping carts!" is the theme of the food drive, which will benefit the St. John Paul II Food Pantry and the St. Anne-St. Patrick Church Pantry.

Members of the troop will be outside the store asking shoppers to consider buying non-perishable food and personal care items that will benefit hundreds of area people struggling to feed their families. According to the Worcester County Food Bank, studies show that since the 2008 recession, the hunger rate for households in Massachusetts has increased by 40 percent, from 8.3 percent to 11.4 percent. About 12 percent of the population in Worcester County receives food assistance from the food bank and its network of food pantries. The St. John Paul II Food Pantry alone distributed more than 200,000 pounds of food to needy families in Southbridge and Sturbridge last year.

The food pantries are in need of all kinds of food, but there are some foods and personal items that they don't normally receive from the food bank. These include crackers, canned spaghetti and ravioli, mac & cheese, jelly, hamburger helper, tuna helper, soups, beef stew, coffee, tea, fruit juices, instant potatoes, condiments like ketchup, relish, mustard and mayonnaise, tooth paste, toilet tissue, bath soap and shampoo. The high cost of food together with the rising cost of utilities, rent and other living expenses has made it harder for struggling families, said Len Lazure, co-director of the St. John Paul II Food Pantry, which was founded in 1991.

"It means many people have tough decisions to make: buying food or paying the rent, the utilities, the car repairs and other costs," he said. "Seniors, most of them living on fixed income, often have to choose between buying food and buying medication."

One of the fastest growing programs at the St. John Paul II pantry is the senior supplement program, which this year increased the number of senior programs from two to three times a month. 2009, the average number of seniors coming to the food pantry each month was 12. A year later, when the Senior Supplement Program was launched, the average was about 50 each month. Today, that number has climbed to about 150 each month.

With the help of about 70 volunteers, the food pantry serves about 350 families or about 1,000 people each month. The pantry is open every Tuesday between 3 and 5 p.m. and every Thursday from 9:30-11 a.m. The Senior Supplement program is open beginning at 9:30 on the second, third and fourth Wednesday of each month.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be adored, glorified, loved and preserved throughout the world now and forever. Sacred Heart of Jesus pray for us. St. Jude, worker of miracles, pray for us. St. Jude, helper of the hopeless, pray for us. Say this prayer nine times a day, by the eighth day your prayer will be answered. It has never been known to fail. Publication must be promised. Thank you Saint Jude for granting my petition. Please continue your help. K.L.
