The third verse

It's that time of year again, when the colored leaves fall; I would daresay it's the most beautiful season of all.

It's the harvest, when the nights get a little more cool; the jackets come out, and we go back to school.

Playoff baseball, and football of quality highest; and also the day of my birth … so I'm guess I'm a tad biased.

But it's also time to continue a newfound tradition; it's quickly becoming my most favorite edition.

You see, it's a week in which I can switch things up a bit; and deliver my weekly words with a smidge more wit.

So just like last year, and the year before that, it's time; it's the third verse of my annual column, written completely in rhyme.

THE MINOR DETAILS
ADAM MINOR

The first was a silly experiment, the second a thank you letter; so as you can deduce, this verse needs to be just that much better.

I need these words to be honest, passionate and delivered with tact; it's an earnest call for you, my valued readers, to act.

Because feedback is the lifeblood of any local publication; we don't do this alone — we need reader participation!

Whether it's a letter, picture, or story submission; we covet your stories — after all, local is our mission.

So let this be the beacon — the bat signal, if you will; for you to get involved and show off your skills!

This is your newspaper, after all, so here are some hints; for you to leave on our pages your unique fingerprints.

Schools, sports, events … it's all fair game to us; even if you think it may seem superfluous.

Because if it's important to you, than it is important to me; because we are a reflection of what you want us to be.

Some may disagree on how it is all presented; we welcome the discussion, it is never resented.

But at the end of the day, this newspaper is yours to call your own; your wish is our command, you sit on the throne!

It's not often I say "No" to someone who sends something in; unless it's libelous, vulgar or otherwise in obvious sin.

I've said it before, and I'll say it again, 'til I'm blue in the face; send me your content, and we'll make you the space.

So how do we do this, logistically speaking? How do I provide the answers you are seeking?

The first thing to remember is that my e-mail is updated; thanks to some hackers this summer who left me frustrated.

Instead of ".com" remember to type in the ".news" ending; or else your message will bounce right back to you, never sending.

Although e-mail is preferred, you may also use fax or mail too; you can even visit my office in person when it's convenient for you.

No matter how you do it, the door is always open to submit; stories, pictures, calendar items and obits.

From upcoming events, birth announcements and sports scores; letters and columns and so much more.

The sky is the limit, so don't wait, start now, take the hint; and discover the wonder of seeing your work on newsprint!

Adam Minor may be reached at (508) 909-4130 if you choose; or send me an e-mail at aminor@stonebridgepress.news.

AUBURN — Earning the Eagle Scout rank exemplifies a lengthy commitment to service, and what better way to accomplish the feat than honoring those who provided the ultimate service? For Benjamin Soponski, his Eagle Scout project not only united his Boy Scout troop but the community.

Soponski, 17, is a junior at Bay Path Regional Vocational Technical High School in Charlton and a member of Auburn's Boy Scout Troop 121. While visiting Hillside Cemetery in town recently to remember his grandfather, a veteran, he noticed that the plaques honoring several other veterans were overgrown and in rough condition. In that moment of pensive

Clown intimidation trend irks police

'WE ARE ASKING PEOPLE TO USE COMMON SENSE THIS HALLOWEEN'

BY KEVIN FLANDERS
NEWS STAFF WRITER

AUBURN — As the spate of clown-related incidents continues across the country, police are warning residents that clowning around in a threatening way this Halloween season could land you behind bars.

In nearby Auburn, charges of disorderly conduct and disturbing the peace will be sought in Worcester District Court against an Auburn father. Police said the man, who was not identified as of press time, got into his car dressed as a clown and followed a bus full of middle school students to their bus stop. The incident created extreme fear among the children and also caused them to hide under a nearby backyard deck to avoid the man, police said. A few parents reported that their children remained deeply frightened and upset long after the incident.

It was later revealed that the suspect is the parent of one of the students aboard the bus. Even though

Dog park plans moving forward in Auburn, Uxbridge

BY KEVIN FLANDERS
NEWS STAFF WRITER

It can be challenging to find a safe, expansive area to walk dogs, but our four-legged friends in two local towns will soon have a brand new place to stretch their legs.

Officials in Auburn and Uxbridge are proceeding with plans to establish dog parks.

In Auburn, officials are currently seeking to acquire grant funding from the Stanton Foundation for their dog park project. The town held a public hearing at the Sept. 26 Board of Selectmen meeting to examine its first potential site.

After gathering feedback from residents at the public hearing, most notably the abutters of the proposed location, the town plans to present additional sites at a future selectmen's meeting this fall.

"The town will continue to collect feedback from residents prior to finalizing a site candidate, after which approval from the Board of Selectmen shall be sought in order to pursue the grant," said Town Planner Matthew Benoit.

In Uxbridge, meanwhile, the goal is to build a dog park utilizing about three acres of land at the Sutton Street Fields (two of which would be enclosed with

Town Clerk's Office announces early voting

AUBURN — We are excited to announce that all registered voters will be able vote before Election Day for the first time ever in Massachusetts.

Early voting will begin on Oct. 24 and continue through Nov. 4. Prior to the enactment of this new law, the only way a registered voter was allowed to vote prior to Election Day was through absentee voting. Although absentee voting will still be available for registered voters who qualify, only those who will be absent from their city or town on Election Day, or have a disability that prevents them from going to the polls, or have a religious belief preventing the same, are legally allowed to vote by absentee ballot.

Unlike absentee voting, early voting is for every registered voter. Registered voters do not need an excuse or reason to vote early. Regardless of whether a voter wants to take advantage of early voting, vote absentee or vote on Election Day, the first step is making sure you are registered. To check to see if you are registered to vote, and to find information on how to register to vote, you may visit the Secretary of the Commonwealth's website: www.sec.state.ma.us/ele. If you need to register to vote, you may do it online by visiting: www.RegisterToVoteMA.com. All you need is a license or an I.D. issued by the Registry of Motor Vehicles to apply online.

Early voting can be done in Auburn at Town Hall, 104 Central Street, during the following dates:

- Mondays: Oct. 24, 31, 8 a.m. to 7 p.m.
- Tuesdays: Oct. 25, Nov. 1, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.
- Wednesdays: Oct. 26, Nov. 2, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.
- Thursdays: Oct. 27, Nov. 3, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.
- Fridays: Oct. 28, Nov. 4, 8 a.m. – 1 p.m.
- Saturday, Oct. 29, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Please note, however, once a voter has cast an early voting ballot, the voter may no longer vote at the polls on Election Day.

For the first time in Massachusetts, the first choice all voters will make is which day to vote. Early voting will make the most fundamental right of our citizens more convenient than ever to exercise. We encourage all of our citizens to exercise that right and take advantage of the opportunity to vote on their schedules.

Frost, Moore announce grant for Auburn Police Department

AUBURN — Rep. Paul K. Frost (R-Auburn) and Sen. Michael O. Moore (D-Millbury) are pleased to announce the Auburn Police Department will receive state funding to purchase additional emergency response equipment.

The grant, amounting to just over $13,800, will be used to acquire portable radios, batteries, headsets, and chargers.

Frost stated, "I am thankful for the great work the Auburn Police Department does day and night in protecting our community. I know this grant will assist in their ongoing efforts as communication is always key especially during times of emergency and crisis."

"As a former law enforcement officer, I recognize the importance of providing our public safety officials with the tools necessary to effectively perform their duties," said Sen. Michael O. Moore, who serves as Senate Vice Chair of the Joint Committee on Public Safety and Homeland Security. "Congratulations to Chief Sluckis and the entire Department. I am confident that this funding will assist with their ongoing mission to keep the community safe."

The grant, part of the Community Trust Fund, was set up by the Legislature to retain revenue from the sale of "United We Stand" license plates. Every few years funding is distributed to communities to assist police and fire services in enhancing their emergency response capabilities.

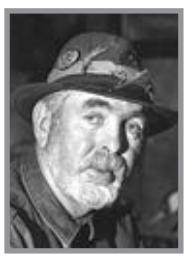
The beginning of archery season in Massachusetts



The Great Outdoors

RALPH TRUE

Archery deer season opened this past Monday in Massachusetts and it has numerous archers spending a lot of time in their tree stand or ground blind, waiting for a big buck to present a good shot.

Archers are a special breed of hunter that take their hunting very seriously. Many have also spent a lot of time scouting prior to deer season and get a bit upset with another archer if they set up their stand close to their spot. To avoid this problem, a hunter should look around to make sure that another tree stand or ground blind is not close by. There are a lot of woods out there, and there is no need to encroach on another hunter.

Archers also need to check with landowners prior to hunting their property. It can avoid a lot of problems during the deer-hunting season. Again this year, deer hunters will not be able to do any Sunday hunting in Massachusetts. It is way overdue but the politicians move very slowly in getting any changes made to our hunting regulations. As previously mentioned in last week's column, the crossbow bill is still the same, allowing only disabled hunters the opportunity to use them, although they have relaxed the regulations a bit. Not every archer is a Davie Crockett, and often make poor shots that result in the loss of the animal. The use of a crossbow could have had different results if the hunter was allowed to use a crossbow. They are extremely accurate if they are used properly.

Goose hunting provided some great shooting last week. Setting up in a cornfield last week, I bumped into an old friend that I have known for years. Bob Bromley has been a sportsman all his life and also mentored his son, taking him hunting and fishing, showing him the proper way to enjoy the sport, and he is now working for an outfitter guiding fly fishing and waterfowl sportsmen. More on his new job in the coming weeks.

Locally, trout fishing anglers are catching many of the recently stocked trout from Wallum Lake in Douglas and Webster Lake. The newly stocked rainbow trout average 12 to 14 inches. Bottom fishing anglers are catching most of the fish on power baits. Hopefully some will be left for ice fishing anglers this winter.

Saltwater fishing for tautog has anglers in Rhode Island waters catching limits of legal size fish. It really picked up last week, according to the Snug Harbor fishing report. Crabs are the number one bait at this time of year. Using a pair of scissors to cut the crabs in half, exposing the meat of the crab, I carefully place the half crab on a 3-0 circle hook and lower it to the bottom. It is not long before a bite is realized. Carefully raising the tip of the rod, a sudden surge in the line has the rod tip bending into the water. When using circle hooks you never set the hook. The hook slowly turns and the fish hook themselves. No more jerking the rod with few hook ups. Anglers using circle hooks catch far more fish than the conventional hooks. Love them or hate them, I prefer circle hooks for much of my bottom fishing. Give them a try.

Sea bass continue to provide fast action on the Rhode Island coast and at the Block. Striper fishing was slow at the Block during the first part of last week but improved substantially during the second half of the week.

Local duck hunters harvested numerous ducks during the opening season last week with a good number of mallards and wood ducks providing some fast shooting. The male wood duck is a magnificent bird that provides great eating and numerous feathers for the fly tying angler.

Take a kid fishing and keep them rods bending!

"As many families continue to struggle, coat donations are needed more

LEARNING

The tough middle school years

Rockets Review

MATT CARLSON
ASSISTANT PRINCIPAL
AUBURN MIDDLE SCHOOL

I have worked in a middle school setting for more than 14 years. Starting out as a seventh grade math teacher and advancing to assistant principal, one might think that I had carefully carved out a career path and was successfully achieving a set of pre-determined goals.

Nothing could be further from the truth.

Graduating with an undergraduate degree in accounting, I never would have imagined that this would be my life's work. However, beset with economic urgencies and an astonishing discovery that accounting was boring, I took the leap into education. I excitedly signed my contract, collected my books and embarked upon writing creative lesson plans that I could set music to or have students rap about. I bought shirts and ties in the school colors and made sure to decorate my room with posters and regalia that my students would like in hopes they'd like me. The only thing I didn't do was think about what I was actually doing. I just took a job in a place exactly like the only place in which I had ever been deeply miserable. I was going back to middle school.

Recently, I saw a trailer for the soon to be released movie, "Middle School: The Worst Years of My Life." The title was no surprise to me. The scenes of angst and hijinks, fitting in or sitting out, triumph or tragedy, were all too familiar so many years later. I still wear the badge of honor that I survived middle school with pride. Most adults have more than one tale of horrific embarrassments at that age. The newly born pimple, the haircut that ruined three grades, the romantic rebuffs sent by note, the inability to sit at the cool kids table after paying them off with the cookies your mom made for after school band practice are among the many. The years between 11 or 14 are physically, mentally and socially straining. They are also the most frustrating to watch by those of us who made it to the other side as better, happier and stronger individuals. I'll bet most would trade an eight-hour alligator "rassle" for a one hour sit down with a sullen, hopeless young tween or teen. No words can make them believe that better days lie ahead. So if this middle school mentality has been going on for years, why haven't things changed?

The more things change, the more they stay the same. Today's middle school is far different in philosophy than the one I attended 25 years ago. We openly and avidly acknowledge the needs of the children to be given the ability to find their gifts and talents and celebrate their successes. We act as a community to support each other in times of trouble. We urge faculty and staff to reach out to these young learners and make connections that will impart a sense of belonging. We deplore bullying and are very vocal and proactive in that regard. However, we are still running a school and as such are responsible for educating a diverse pool of learners in a variety of academic classes. For better or worse, our students are accountable to standardized tests. They are expected to be ready and prepared for work, school or military after leaving our system. We owe them a chance at a happy and productive life. We have the rulebook for achieving these goals and have to impose those rules on those who, by their very nature, are rule resistant. Just like Rafe, the main character in the movie, these young people who are bursting at the seams to make their own mark, are trying to rewrite and rework the rules to bear the mark of their generation.

Change takes hard work and sacrifice, a frightening proposal for some. As adults we should take pride in a student who stands up for their beliefs. In order to encourage that, we too have to form our own opinions and stick with them. When our beliefs infringe on other human beings' beliefs, we need to show flexibility and human compassion. It seemed in the movie trailer, as it does in life, that adults are seen as either all good or all bad. It's up to us to demonstrate the beauty of a good old-fashioned compromise. We need to cherish the youthful creativity of those we work with at the middle school level, while still providing constructive guidance. The movie reviews say that it contains negative social commentary on testing and the lack of fine arts to nurture young imaginations. Perhaps if we took some of its cues to heart, the sequels for the next generations would be "Middle School: When I Met Myself."

Is the real estate market seasonal?

In the fall, I always think this is a good topic to discuss. I think most consumers believe the market is seasonal and there is some truth to that. I think it most important to look at the numbers though. We also want to concentrate on our local market rather than nationally because real estate is a local business even though it can be affected by what is going on nationally and internationally, such as interest rate changes and any news that can positively affect consumer confidence and buyers ability to purchase a home.

If we look at the last 12 months then we see 8,080 homes sold in Worcester County according to the Multiple Listing Service Property Information Network, and during the months of December through February 1,545 homes sold, which encompasses just over 19 percent of the homes that sold in the last 12 months. In the previous year, the number was 20 percent. This data tells me that there is a dip in the winter, but the market just doesn't completely stop. So if you are thinking about selling your home and you are thinking about waiting until the spring because homes don't sell in the winter, I would suggest evaluating your goals to see if it makes more sense just to sell in the winter rather than wait.

Realtor's Report

James Black

The interesting thing is that the market that we have been in for the past few years has been one of shrinking inventory. If I actually go back to 12/01/2014, we had 2,861 homes for sale, on 5/01/2015 we had 2,677 homes for sale, 12/01/2015 we had 2,614 homes for sale and on 5/01/2016 we had 2,179 homes for sale. This shows a shrinking inventory and today we are up to 2,341 homes for sale in Worcester County as of today, and on 10/16/2015 we had 3,154 homes for sale. All this data shows that the inventory builds up and sells off in the fall and winter months and shrinks as we go through the winter with homes selling or being taken off the market. This is a great opportunity for a seller who wants to get their home sold now rather than wait until the spring market.

I would suggest if you are thinking about selling your home now or in the spring to start interviewing realtors and find out what they are saying about your local market in your town, neighborhood and price range. If we break down this data to that level, some towns and price ranges are hot and selling quickly while others are not.

This data covers all of Worcester County, and again, real estate is extremely local and you want to hire an agent who understands your local market and can interpret the market to make sure you are making the right decision for your goals.

Tips to carve out a Halloween display

Take the Hint

Karen Trainor

No traditional New England harvest display would be complete without a parade of fat pumpkins and a sprinkling of assorted gourds.

The simple pumpkin, rich in both nutrition and heritage, has long served as an object of intrigue. In the 17th century fairy tale, Cinderella's coach magically appeared from a large, stout pumpkin; and even today, generations of Native Americans hail the pumpkin's healing seeds as a medicinal sedative. Add in the mystique of the annual Halloween Jack-O-Lantern, and its no wonder both pumpkins and gourds remain an autumn wonder, touted for both their culinary and decorative virtues. Here are some tips to "carve out" a fun fall display!

For carving, choose pumpkins with a sturdy stem, as this is the sign of a healthy pumpkin. Never lift a pumpkin by its stem, not only do you risk it breaking off, a stemless pumpkin ages faster.

If you are tracing a design to carve from a pumpkin or gourd, use a chopstick or nut spear to press into the gourd for a foolproof guideline.

To cut out a top lid that won't fall inside the pumpkin, carve a hexagon shape to keep it sitting pretty throughout the night.

Better yet, cut off the bottom of the pumpkin instead of the top. Place the carved pumpkin over a candle safely set on a plate, or for optimum safety, simply use a flashlight.

If you plan to place a pillar candle inside your Jack-Lantern, first cut a hole in the bottom of the pumpkin the same size as your candle to stabilize it.

For a festive twist on traditional Jack-O-Lantern lights or candles, stuff a string of small white Christmas lights inside the carved pumpkin. Make a hole out the back to feed plug through.

Need a creativity boost? Log onto these websites for pumpkin and gourd designs you can download for free: www.pumpkinmasters.com or www.spookmaster.com.

Carving a gourd? Here's a hint to halt the hassle. Simply place a towel inside a large bowl to hold the gourd steady. Place the gourd in the padded bowl to keep it from moving while you trace or cut.

Did you know? The Japanese considered the gourd a lucky token and believed a set of six gourds had the power to improve health and spiritual power. Plus they believed the set of gourds could produce six fortunes!

Want your Jack-O-Lantern or gourd sculpture to last longer? A spray of Lysol or other disinfectant will prolong life of pumpkins and gourds.

For long term storage, put a thin amount of petroleum jelly on the exposed, sawed edges. This prevents water from getting out. If water gets out, your pumpkin will shrivel.

Stretch the longevity of a Jack-O-Lantern by giving it a bath. Let the pumpkin float for a few hours, or even overnight, allowing the insides fill with water. Put a little bleach in the water if you wish to prevent mold. The pumpkin absorbs the water and become very firm. Anytime your pumpkin shrivels, soak it in a bath of cold water for one to eight hours to rejuvenate it. **

Another way to extend a lighted Jack-O-Lantern's life is to poke a vent hole or two in the top of the pumpkin to vent the heat and slow the rotting process.

FYI: Jack-O-Lantern Lore — Legend has it the Jack-O-Lantern evolved from an Irish tale involving a drunkard named Jack. According to the longtime yarn, Jack was a trickster who playfully deceived family members. His fate was sealed the day he attempted to trick the devil into climbing an apple tree. Once Jack convinced the devil to climb the tree, he placed crosses around the tree truck, trapping the devil. With the devil cornered, Jack refused let him down until he promised not to take Jack's soul when he died. The story goes that many years later when Jack died, he couldn't get into heaven, yet he was turned out of hell too, because of the devil's long ago promise. Jack found himself with nowhere to go. He asked the devil how to leave the gates of hell as there was no light to guide him. According to the tale, the devil threw him an ember from the flames of hell to help him light his way. Jack put the burning ember inside a hollowed out pumpkin. From that day on, it is said that Jack wandered the earth without a resting place, lighting his way with his lantern, thus the legend of the "Jack-O-Lantern," was born.

A little bit of kindness

MOM IN MOTION

Jill Rousey
jill@stonebridgepress.com

We are a society filled with loss, loneliness, broken hearts, and fear. I see people every day struggling in one form or another. Not everyone has the same struggles but each is just as difficult to one as it is to the other.

I urge you, my lovely readers, to step back and show someone as much kindness as you can. Many struggles are unseen, we have become a generation of built up walls around ourselves, dishonesty out of fear, hearts permanently affixed to our sleeves, and so on.

I was grocery shopping the other day and I saw a mom who was struggling to keep her two children in the shopping cart. They wanted to touch everything, buy everything, and scream about everything. For those of us that are parents, we have all been there, those times at the store where we know everyone is staring at us because our kids are being lunatics. Typically, this behavior doesn't bother us as much as we assume it does other people. This mom looked like she could have used a cup of coffee and an extra set of hands. There were the select patrons giving her dirty looks and mumbling to themselves about controlling her kids, and there were the sympathetic stares from people who have probably been there before. She started out quietly and politely asking them to settle down, which turned into pleas and bargaining to buy them that treat they wanted if they just sit nicely until the shopping trip was over, when I saw her again a few aisles down she was full out yelling at them to sit down and be quiet or there was some harsher punishment coming in the form of not being able to go to that birthday party this weekend, or going to bed early, or the dreaded no screen time for the rest of the day.

My heart sank for her, I understood. I had been in her shoes. I went up to this poor frazzled mom and said, "Excuse me, hi. I just think you should know… you're doing a good job. It will get easier." She just stared at me wide eyed as I smiled and started to walk away. "Thank you, really" she called back to me as I made my way to pick out my tomato sauce. It only took two seconds for me to say those words, but I'd like to believe she genuinely needed to hear that.

Many people think kindness has to come in the form of money, and while most of us would greatly accept that type of gift, there are so many other ways to give.

Here are some examples of things you can do to spread that kindness to others that may take little to no effort at all:

• We all see those pan handlers on the side of the road holding their cardboard signs asking for help. Many just roll up their windows and ignore them while silently passing judgment and hushing our kids when they ask what that person is doing. Before passing judgment step back and appreciate what you may have that they do not. Keep an extra bottle of water in your car, or a piece of fruit. Next time you see one, give them something to drink or eat. It is not much to you, but it might be the highlight of their day.

• Next time you go grocery shopping, perhaps offer to put someone's cart back for them.

• Scoop out an extra serving of dinner and pass it to that neighbor you know works insane hours.

• Tell someone who is struggling that they are doing a good job.

• See a car while driving that has their gas tank open? Take a second and roll down your window and tell them.

• Ask a friend, "is there anything I can do for you?"

• Put a note in your spouses car, just to wish them a good day.

There are many things that can brighten someone's day. Try one, or a few, and enjoy that good feeling it gives you. I hope you all have a wonderful day!

Please write in and share your thoughts! As always, take what you want from what we discuss as advice or information, share with me your favorite tip or recipe and join me on our next edition of "Mom in Motion." E-mail me your thoughts and tips at jill@stonebridgepress.com.

More on why people collect

Antiques, Collectibles & Estates

WAYNE TUISKULA

Some of my past columns have offered reasons that people collect. There may be a connection to happy times in their lives, it may be because they couldn't afford things when they were younger and want to own them now or they may just have an interest in historical items from the past.

"The National Psychologist" website provides a further explanation of the psychology of collecting. During the 1700's and 1800's aristocrats scoured the globe searching for "fossils, shells, zoological specimens, works of art and books." They housed their finds in special rooms called "cabinets of curiosities." Some of the more advanced collectors opened museums with all of their finds.

Modern collectors may collect everything from "Cracker Jack toys to manhole covers." The "National Psychologist" says that some collect for the pure enjoyment and others collect to expand their social lives. They enjoy the camaraderie of meeting and sharing information with others who also collect what they do. They claim that building a great collection brings status for others. Some people find security and a calming effect in arranging, classifying and cataloging items.

The United States Mint estimated that 120 million people set aside quarters that honored the 50 states. Collecting is part of our culture with scouts able to earn merit badges in collecting. Words were coined to identify many types of collectors. A stamp collector is a philatelist. Numismatics is the study or collecting of coins. Deltiologists collect postcards and horologists collect clocks. There are even names for collectors of more obscure items. Phillumenists collect matchbooks or matchboxes and sucrologists collect sugar packets.

The website rewireme.com provides a list of reasons of "why collecting things you love is good for your brain." Collecting builds observational skills. It improves organizational thinking and enhances pattern recognition. Collecting awakens a desire for knowledge. It inspires creativity. They state that it may forge a commitment to a good cause. By prominently displaying collections it may install a desire to work with a cause related to the collection. It fosters social connections. It may pave the way to a career. Mineral collectors may become geologists. They note that a 19th century student at the University of Cambridge collected beetles. His interest developed into his life's work. The student was Charles Darwin.

Moneycrashers.com notes seven reasons to collect coins. The reasons are to make money, for the challenge, it's educational, for the metal content of the coins, the hobby can be passed on to children and it's a way to relax. If you don't already collect something, there are plenty of reasons to start.

My friends at the Finnish American Heritage Society of Canterbury, Conn., were kind enough to invite me to appraise items and speak at the "Finn Funn" event at the Tori (Finnish Marketplace) at the Fitzwilliam VFW, Fitzwilliam, N.H. on Oct. 29. I'll be appraising items from 9 to 11 a.m. and speaking and doing additional appraisals from 1:30 to 3:15 p.m. The second session of the antique radio auction will take place on Nov. 13 in Carlisle, Mass. Other future events are currently being scheduled. Please see www.centralmassauctions.com for more information on upcoming events.

reflection, an inspiration was had and an Eagle Scout project was born.

"Both my grandfathers and uncles were in the military, and the veterans have always had a place in my heart," Soponski said. "I am interested in history and have always respected the sacrifice that our veterans have made for us."

Joined by members of his troop, friends and family members, Soponski spent the last two Saturdays cleaning the plaques and trimming the surrounding area at Hillside Cemetery. The group spent about five hours on each Saturday to complete the project, inspiring several people in the process. While they were finishing their maintenance activities each day, cemetery visitors stopped in to inquire about the project. These visitors were thrilled to see a group of young people who care enough about veterans to take the time to maintain their plaques.

And with Veterans Day less than a month away, the project meant a lot to veterans and their families. Now the plaques will be in top shape for all who visit them next month.

"They shook my hand and were very thankful for what I was doing to honor the veterans," Soponski said of the visitors who dropped by. "It made me feel good to see fellow scouts, friends and family alongside me, helping to complete this project."

For Soponski, the journey to become an Eagle Scout began long before he came up with the idea for his project. It represents the culmination of countless hours of hard work, and his troop and family are excited to join him in his accomplishment.

To earn the rank of Eagle Scout – the highest rank attainable for a Boy Scout – he must amass several merit badges and excel in leadership and service.

"Becoming an Eagle Scout is an honor that not too many scouts get to achieve. It shows that all of the life lessons you learned in scouts will be part of you forever," added Soponski, who has spent ten years with the same troop.

Thinking back on the troop he grew up with, Soponski has great memories of building friendships while gaining valuable experiences. From teamwork exercises, to camping excursions every summer at Rutland's Treasure Valley Scout Reservation, to great community activities right here in town, scouting built lifelong bonds between Soponski and his friends. As Cub Scouts, they even got to visit the USS Massachusetts for an overnight stay.

"Scouting has taught me many skills that I will use for the rest of my life," Soponski said. When asked about his favorite part of scouting, he replied, "All the good friends and people I have met – and all the great memories I have of those years."

'We want everyone in Auburn to be treated with kindness' several outreach and educational services to help businesses and organizations better serve residents with specific needs.

Dementia is a chronic disorder of the mental processes caused by brain disease or injury. Alzheimer's disease is the most common type of dementia – with over 5 million Americans living with the disease – and Millhofer is hoping to improve community experiences for those struggling with dementia in Auburn.

"I hope to break down any stigmas and ensure that local businesses accept and value people with dementia," said Millhofer, who will focus on critical retail and financial businesses. "There is a lot of hard work before us in developing dementia respect and inclusion. I'm in awe of the openness of [Auburn Senior Center Director] Mignonne [Murray] and the entire Auburn Senior Center staff for their determination to deal straight-on with dementia difficulties."

According to research conducted this year by the Alzheimer's Association, 120,000 Massachusetts residents have Alzheimer's disease, with an expected 25 percent increase by 2025 to 250,000. Additionally, dementia costs U.S. businesses billions each year, including increased absenteeism for employees who are caregivers for their family members. In 2015, 332,000 Massachusetts caregivers provided over 370 hours of unpaid time to care for loved ones.

Dementia sufferers are often made to feel unwelcome in hectic commercial environments, but Auburn officials are hoping to exemplify with this training program the need to embrace those with dementia and their families.

"This is not a one-off project, but instead the start of a process of community engagement and collaboration to make a friendly environment for our residents with dementia," Murray said.

Unless you have cared for a loved one with dementia, it's hard to envision the daily challenges and demands, officials said. Caregivers spend countless amounts of money on out-of-pocket expenses, in addition to taking time away from work and often losing jobs because of their family commitments.

And far more Americans will deal with the hardships of dementia in the coming years. Over the next two decades, population growth will occur almost entirely in the 60+ demographic, according to a University of Massachusetts-Boston study. Moreover, 2016 Auburn census data shows that over a quarter of the town's population is over the age of 65.

"While we know that many of our older citizens are receiving excellent care and are satisfied with life in Auburn, many are living with significant hearing, vision, cognitive and ambulatory disabilities," Murray added. "Eyesight, hearing and mobility problems start during a person's forties and fifties, so we want everyone in Auburn to be treated with kindness."

As part of the ongoing training program, each Auburn business will be encouraged to evaluate its customer base and then develop strategies that create a welcoming environment for seniors and those struggling with dementia. Though the commercial climate often dictates a fast-paced, sales-driven environment in many businesses, officials remind employees to always consider the struggles of elderly residents and their families. Sometimes taking a little extra time to assist a senior can have a major impact, they said.

"It's important for businesses to understand the wants, needs and behavior of customers with dementia," said Millhofer, who holds a master's degree in organizational leadership, as well as permanent teaching certifications in both Massachusetts and New York. "Auburn training will focus on how to recognize the signs of dementia and how to communicate effectively with people with dementia. For example, customer-facing employees should speak clearly, listen carefully, be patient, and respond to looks of distress."

Businesses completing the training program will receive window and door stickers stating: "We are dementia-friendly."

For more information about local resources available to those affected by dementia, educational materials for employees, or training opportunities as part of the Auburn program, contact Millhofer at dmillhofer@town.auburn.ma.us, or call 508-832-7730.

fencing). Officials from the Uxbridge Dog Park Committee are currently in the design phase of a three-phase grant that will enable them to fund the park.

Moving forward, the group needs to raise about $17,000 for the construction portion of the effort. They are accepting donations from residents and business owners interested in supporting the project. Checks should be made payable to Uxbridge Dog Park and mailed to Uxbridge Town Hall (21 South Main Street, Uxbridge, MA, 01569). In addition, there is another fundraiser for brick pavers through which residents can make donations by visiting www.polarengraving.com/UxbridgeDogPark.

"The Uxbridge Dog Park originated about three years ago when Laura Hamel started a Facebook group," said Uxbridge Dog Park Committee Co-Chairman Cindy Scott. "A small group of interested people began meeting on a regular basis. We did a lot of research, visited other dog parks, reached out to other towns who had dog parks for their experience and suggestions, and met with town leaders for advice. But it wasn't until a year ago, when we met Officer Josiah Morrissette [Uxbridge Police Department], that things really started to move forward more quickly with our goal."

Last year, Officer Morrissette was also working on bringing a dog park to Uxbridge. He was planning to submit a grant application to the Stanton Foundation, and with the help of the Uxbridge Dog Park Committee, they worked together to gain Board of Selectmen approval to submit the grant request.

"The mission of the Uxbridge Dog Park is to provide a safe, clean and secure environment where owners may exercise and train their dogs off leash. It provides effective socialization opportunities for people and their dogs, and it also enhances positive interaction between dog owners and the community," Scott added.

The Stanton Foundation grant has provided significant funding to turn a portion of public land at the Sutton Street Fields, commonly known as 100-acre Lot, into a large dog park for residents of Uxbridge and possibly surrounding towns to use. The grant covers one hundred percent of the funds needed for the design phase of the project, as well as ninety percent of the construction costs. The remaining ten percent (roughly $17,000) must be contributed by the town through fundraising.

For more information about the project, visit www.facebook.com/Uxbridge-Dog-Park or send an email to dogparkcommittee@uxbridge-ma.gov.

Police: 'Clowning' around will have consequences

such incidents may seem to some like harmless pranks, police are hoping residents will think twice before acting in ways that scare people.

"We are hopeful that others will learn from this incident and not repeat these types of behaviors," read a statement issued by the Auburn Police Department. "We sincerely appreciate the assistance of those who contacted us with information that led to this individual being identified."

Reports of threatening clowns have surfaced throughout the country, with the majority of the incidents concentrated in the Carolinas. From clowns accosting pedestrians and drivers, to people in clown outfits posting threatening messages on social media pages, police have received thousands of reports nationwide. Many people are blaming it on a social media firestorm, while others ascribe more sinister reasons to the excessive clown appearances.

Regardless of the cause, police have had enough. As Halloween approaches, law enforcement officials are warning residents that incidents which frighten the public will not be viewed as pranks but crimes.

"Whenever you're putting people in fear – even if you think it's just a prank – the police are going to respond," said Uxbridge Police Chief Jeffrey Lourie.

The Uxbridge PD's school resource officer recently spoke to students about the clown epidemic. Many of the national incidents have involved teenagers dressing as clowns, and reaching out to students has been an effective tool for police. Lourie said the program was well-received by students and their parents.

Meanwhile, police departments across the country are cracking down on social media threats in the wake of multiple schools being threatened nationwide as part of the clown craze. Several of the schools were forced to shut down as investigations ensued.

"We continue to monitor social media for potential issues. We are taking any and all complaints very seriously, and we are asking people to use common sense this Halloween season," said Leicester Police Chief James Hurley.

Police throughout the area will be stepping up patrols this Halloween. They ask residents to enjoy themselves responsibly and recommend keeping the clown garb in the closet – at least for this year.

"Clown costumes may not be the best choice given everything that has happened. We're encouraging people to stay away from that based on what's going on," Hurley added.

Auburn resident participates in Legislative Seminar

BOSTON — Sen. Michael O. Moore (D-Millbury) welcomed Shannon Regan of Auburn to the State House for the Citizens' Legislative Seminar (CLS). Shannon, who already serves the Town of Auburn as a staff assistant to the town manager, was nominated by Moore earlier this year to participate in the civic education program.

CLS is a citizen seminar that aims to better educate the public on the Commonwealth's legislative process. Established in 1976 through a collaborative effort of the Massachusetts Senate and the University of Massachusetts, the two-day seminar features presentations by Senators and staff on aspects of the day-to-day experience of legislators in the Commonwealth.

"I appreciate Senator Moore nominating me to participate in the Citizens' Legislative Seminar," said Shannon. "I had such a positive experience and thought the seminar was informative and covered a vast amount of topics within the two day period. I highly recommend anyone to attend if they want to have a more active role in local and state government."

"I commend Shannon for taking time from her busy schedule to learn about the legislative process," said Moore. "It's always great to see local residents civically engaged — especially the millennial generation. I'm sure Shannon found her experience to be both rewarding and informative."

The CLS culminates in a simulated legislative hearing and Senate session where participants are invited to use what they have learned and participate as "Senators" in a live debate in the Senate Chamber. During the 77th CLS, Shannon participated in a legislative debate regarding paid family and medical leave. CLS participants debated the same bill passed by the Senate in July.

Shannon was joined by two other residents of the Second Worcester District who were nominated by Senator Moore including Erin Baniukiewicz of Grafton and Mary Krumsiek of Millbury.

Rockets — now 6-0 — need overtime to get by Northbridge

NORTHBRIDGE — Lasell Field was treated to extra football when the Auburn High and Northbridge High varsity teams met on Friday evening, Oct. 14. And the Rockets and their fans made the half hour trek home happy, as they survived an 18-10 overtime scare to improve to a perfect 6-0.

Auburn will attempt to remain undefeated when they host Southbridge High (1-5) on Friday, Oct. 21 at 7 p.m.

The Rams dropped to 3-3 and will travel to Sturbridge to face Tantasqua Regional (2-4) on the same date and time.

Tie sits differently for Auburn, Tantasqua girls' soccer teams

STURBRIDGE — After 80 minutes of competitive high school girls' varsity soccer at the Reservation on Monday, Oct. 17, Auburn High and Tantasqua Regional exited the pitch all square at 2-2. Both teams earned a point for their efforts, but the Rockets and Warriors had mixed feelings about the end result.

"I'm very disappointed," said Auburn head coach Larry Midura. "This is like an opportunity lost. Both goals [against], not only the goals but even their runs down the field were defensive lapses."

On the flip side, Tantasqua head coach Matthew Rickson was pleased with the tie.

"We got a point out of the game and we were being outplayed the whole game," he said. "We were playing flat… they dug deep and found the guts to tie it up."

Both of the Rockets' goals were scored by senior Jianna Baroni, while seniors Camie Hall and Abby Befford tallied for the Warriors.

Strangely enough, Tantasqua nearly won the game in the waning moments after being outplayed when senior Meaghan Kelley had a partial breakaway, but Auburn freshman keeper Danielle Schmeling made the best of her five saves to preserve the draw.

"She's just got to learn to come out on balls," Midura said of his keeper on the Warriors' two goals, but she appeared to have fixed the mistake with the game on the line.

The Rockets took a 1-0 lead into the halftime break when Baroni dribbled nearly 35 yards untouched — slicing through three Tantasqua defenders in the process — before depositing the ball into the back of the net. Junior Carly Filiere was credited with the assist.

The Warriors then tied the game in the 45th minute. Kelley crossed the ball in from the left side, which landed in front of junior Meghan Meserole. She then advanced to ball further to her right via a header, which Hall scored on.

Baroni then tallied her second of the contest in the 62nd minute to help the Rockets reclaim the lead. She fed a pass over to senior Jordyn Abasciano, who then one-touched a pass to Baroni. Her shot beat keeper Kelsey Emrich, but aside from the two goals against the senior played well, finishing with 20 saves.

"Kelsey came up big today," said Rickson. "She was focused, she was communicating."

Tantasqua then salvaged the tie and coinciding point with under two minutes remaining when Kelley once again sent a cross toward Auburn's net. The lofted bail sailed over the reach of Schmeling and toward Befford, who reached her head out to score like a sprinter crossing a finish line for a better time.

"This very well could be a big tie," Rickson said as his team's record stands at 6-5-3 as of press time with three more points needed to play in the Central Mass. Division 1 district tournament. "It affords us to tie one of our last three games and win one as opposed to winning two."

Auburn is now 8-4-1 as of press time.

"We've been playing well up until the first half," Midura said of a recent stretch against the likes of heavyweights Shrewsbury High, Wachusett Regional, Millbury High, Tantasqua, Leicester High (after press time) and Westborough High (after press time).

"I hope so," Midura said when asked if the tough competition will better the Rockets' chances once they enter the Central Mass. Division 3 district tournament — which they need one more point through their final five games to qualify. "I hope it's not too early."

Jillian MacDonald of Auburn takes a corner kick in first half action versus Tantasqua.

Auburn's Brianna Leon kicks the ball out of harm's way before Tantasqua's Meghan Meserole can interfere.

Auburn's Jordyn Abasciano sends the ball past a hard-charging Tantasqua defender.

‘Sense of family and togetherness’ has Minutemen nearing district berth

SPORTS CORRESPONDENT

CHARLTON — For a coach, rebuilding a team from the bottom up can be a daunting task, but for Bay Path Regional girls’ varsity soccer coach Tammy Legere, the hard work and commitment that her team puts in each practice and game makes her job that much easier.

On the afternoon of Friday, Oct. 14 in front of a home crowd at George L. Fowler Memorial Field, Brianna Waskiewcz registered a hat trick to guide the Minutemen (6-4-1) to a 6-1 victory over Colonial Athletic League foe Nashoba Tech (1-8-1).

Along with Waskiewcz, Nalin Icoo, Jayden Pantalone and Arianna Girardi also registered goals for Bay Path. For Nashoba Tech, Abby Duffer netted the Vikings’ lone goal in first half action.

When it comes to the most important aspect of trying to rebuild a program, Legere said, “working together as a team and not getting frustrated.”

In the wee minutes of the first half, the Bay Path offensive and defensive units displayed a sense of teamwork that earns teams victories. With help from Rachel Ostigun, Icoo fired the first Minutemen goal from the backfield, which sailed over the head of the Nashoba Tech goalie Caleigh Sherwood into the upper left corner.

Waskiewcz netted her first of three goals from the middle left side of the box and deposited the ball just past Sherwood. That was then followed up by a goal from Girardi that snuck into the bottom right corner to put the Minutemen up 3-0.

As the first half was about close, Duffer carried the ball up from midfield and put the Vikings on the board.

Then, in the third and 26th minutes of the second frame, Waskiewcz buried two more goals to give Bay Path the 5-1 edge over Nashoba Tech. With five minutes remaining in regulation, Pantalone snuck the Minutemen’s sixth and final goal into the bottom left-hand corner just under Sherwood’s reach to seal the victory.

The 6-1 win over Nashoba Tech is a stepping stone that Bay Path can build off in hopes of making a run at the Central Mass. Division 3 district tournament and Legere knows that her team’s “sense of family and togetherness” and being able to grow from mistakes will take them there.

“You just have to tell them what they’ve done right and also tell them what they’ve done wrong. If you always tell them what they’ve done wrong, then they’re not going to grow,” she concluded.

Bay Path’s Haley Swenson looks down to boot the ball further down the field.

Bay Path’s Mackenzie O’Connor prepares to pass the ball down the field.

Bay Path’s Anna Israelian dribbles the ball ahead of a Nashoba Tech defender.

Friday’s Child

Ten-year-old Yessenia and seven-year-old Jeremiah are a sibling group of Hispanic descent. Yessenia is an energetic fourth grader who enjoys playing with other children, riding her bike, playing outside, and listening to music. She loves fashion and enjoys trying on different outfits and jewelry. Yessenia enjoys school and although behind grade level, she is making progress with the help of her Individualized Educational Plan (IEP). Yessenia is strong minded and at times can become frustrated when things aren’t going her way. She is continuing to learn healthy ways to communicate and learn coping skills.

Jeremiah is an independent child with is talkative and has a wonderful sense of humor. Jeremiah enjoys reading books, coloring, and playing with his cars. He plays well with other children and enjoys being with his friends and teachers. Jeremiah is currently in the 2nd grade. In play therapy, Jeremiah receives support around understanding limits, boundaries, and following directions.

Yessenia and Jeremiah are part of a sibling group of three. They will need a family that will allow them continued contact with their brother who is not able to be placed with them at this time. Their social worker is open to exploring families who are prepared for two energetic, funny, and courageous siblings who are ready to be placed with their forever family!

What does Adoption Cost?

It costs little or nothing to adopt a child from foster care. Unlike international or private adoptions, there is no adoption agency fee. There are also a number of free post-adoption support services available to families statewide, including support groups and respite care. Children with special needs who are adopted from the foster care system are eligible for ongoing financial and medical assistance after adoption. These children are also eligible for a tuition waiver to attend a Massachusetts state college or university.

To learn more about Yessenia and Jeremiah, and about adoption from foster care, call the Massachusetts Adoption Resource Exchange (MARE) at 617-54-ADOPT (617-542-3678) or visit www.mareinc.org. The sooner you call, the sooner a waiting child will have “a permanent place to call HOME.”

Put A Great New Face On Your Fireplace

(NAPS)

Here's a hot tip from decorating experts: A small change can have a big effect on the look of a room.

For example, consider refacing your fireplace. It's as easy to do as changing your kitchen countertops—and with today's natural thin stone veneers, it's also cost effective. That's because when you're looking for materials that are beautiful, durable and versatile, natural thin stone veneer can be a surprisingly affordable choice, which can even help to raise the resale value of your home.

From the Pyramids to the Parthenon, natural stone has long provided aspirational design and durability. Now, natural thin stone veneer can be cut from 100 percent natural quarried stone… so even a thin slice offers some of the same durability, low maintenance and aesthetic qualities of the thicker version. In addition, natural thin stone veneer is widely available.

Because of its reduced weight, natural thin stone veneer is extremely versatile. It requires no additional foundation support and installs, often easily, over existing rigid materials such as brick and concrete block, turning a small remodeling project into one with impressive design results. Ninety-degree angles that can be cut from full-thickness stones are used in corner applications, concealing the true thickness of the stone. The overall cost-effective result is a unique fireplace that looks like a traditional full-thickness installation.

Natural thin stone veneer is available in a multitude of stone types, including limestone, granite, bluestone, sandstone and quartzite, and is available in a wide variety of styles, textures, cuts and colors, making it easy to integrate into existing design schemes from modern to traditional.

What's more, unlike its man-made counterparts, natural thin stone veneer doesn't fade in color, so your fireplace will maintain its lasting beauty.

Because custom or one-of-a-kind products often come with a hefty price tag, homeowners are generally unwilling to splurge on renovations. However, because stone is a natural, nonmanufactured product, no two pieces are exactly alike—offering a custom look every time. Natural thin stone veneer makes this opportunity one step more convenient, as it gives you the custom-made look in a most cost-efficient application.

For those who are eco conscious, natural thin stone veneer offers many sustainable attributes. It is also virtually maintenance-free, which will allow you to spend less time worrying and more time enjoying your "new" fireplace with family and friends.

Tips For Getting Your Outdoor Power Equipment Ready For Winter

(NAPS)

Fall is here, and as cold weather creeps in, it's time to put away your spring and summer outdoor power equipment, such as lawn mowers, leaf blowers, chain saws and trimmers, and get out what you will need for winter, such as snow throwers, generators and other small-engine equipment.

The Outdoor Power Equipment Institute (OPEI), an international trade association representing more than 100 power equipment, engine and utility vehicle manufacturers and suppliers, offers tips to help home and business owners prepare for the weather change.

"Doing good maintenance in the fall means that your equipment will be in good shape when spring arrives and you want to tackle landscaping projects again," said Kris Kiser, president and CEO of OPEI. "Now is also the time to do snow thrower and generator maintenance and review safe handling procedures so you are ready when the snow flies."

First, review your owner's manual for your equipment. Re-familiarize yourself with how to handle your equipment safely and any maintenance needs. If you lost your manual, you can usually find it online.

1. Service all your equipment. Before storing equipment, clean and service it yourself or take it to a small-engine repair shop. For instance, drain and change engine oil and dispose of old oil safely. Service the air filter and perform other maintenance activities as directed by your service manual. Check all winter equipment and see what maintenance and repairs are required, as well.

2. Recharge the battery. If your equipment has a battery, remove and fully charge it before storing or to ready your winter equipment for a sudden, unexpected weather event.

3. Handle fuel properly. Unused gas left in gas tanks over the winter can go stale. It can even damage your equipment. For equipment you'll store over the winter, add fuel stabilizer to the gas tank, then run the equipment to distribute it. Turn the engine off, allow the machine to cool, then restart and run until the gas tank is empty. For winter equipment, be sure you know the appropriate fuel for your equipment. Most outdoor power equipment, for instance, was designed, built and warranted to run on 10 percent or less ethanol fuel.

4. Shelter your equipment from winter weather. Store your spring and summer equipment in a clean and dry place such as a garage, barn or shed. Winter equipment should also be away from the weather elements but available for use when needed. Always keep your outdoor power equipment out of the reach of children.

5. Do a yard cleanup. Clear the paths you use regularly, especially during the winter. Make space in your garage or basement before the weather changes so you have room to store larger yard items, such as patio furniture, umbrellas and summer toys.

6. If you are getting out winter equipment, such as a generator or snow thrower, review safe handling procedures. Familiarize yourself with your equipment, making sure you know how to turn the machine on and off and how to use the equipment safely.

7. Find and prepare to fill your gas can. Buy the type of fuel recommended by your equipment manufacturer no more than 30 days before you will use it. Remember, use fuel with no more than 10 percent ethanol in outdoor power equipment. Also, fuel goes stale and will need to be replaced if you have not used it within a month. And remember to use a fuel stabilizer if recommended by your manufacturer.

Get more information on safe fueling for outdoor power equipment at www.LookBeforeYouPump.com and find additional safety tips at www.OPEI.org.

When the weather turns chilly, it's time to swap out your lawn mower for your snowblower.

A More Energy- And Cost-Efficient Heating And Cooling Solution

Ductless mini-split systems can save homeowners up to 25 percent on their utility bills and allow for individual, room-by-room temperature control.

(NAPS)

As the temperature plummets, homeowners will crank up the heat to keep warm and toasty—quickly burning through money and energy. In fact, home heating uses more energy and costs more money than any other system in your home, typically making up nearly half of your utility bill. So what's the best way to keep the cold out, the heat in, and your energy bill down?

There are several types of heating systems that range from blowing hot air through ductwork to piping hot water through your floor. Forced-air systems, the most common type, heat quickly and evenly, but many are not energy efficient and some users complain that moving air is noisy and blows allergens around the house. In addition, they require ductwork, which many older homes don't have.

Americans are largely unaware of one heating option called ductless mini-split systems, distributed by several companies including Fujitsu General America. While the majority of HVAC systems in Asia and Europe are already ductless, they are rapidly gaining traction in North America, with mini-split systems projected to enjoy an annual growth rate of 14 percent each year through 2020.

Energy Bill Savings Up To 25 Percent

The high energy efficiencies of mini-split systems can save homeowners up to 25 percent of utility bills simply because they eliminate wasteful ducts. In fact, duct losses can easily account for more than 30 percent of energy consumption, especially if the ducts are not sealed tightly or are located in an unconditioned space such as an attic or crawl space. Ductless mini-splits forgo those energy losses typically associated with forced-air systems. This is particularly good news for older homes, homes without existing ductwork or homes with seasonal additions, such as a sunroom. Installing ductwork is expensive and requires cutting holes in walls, floors and ceilings, or decreasing closet space. Ductless systems require only a two- or three-inch hole just outside the wall and are also whisper quiet.

End Energy Waste And Thermostat Wars

Mini-splits feature custom zone control, enabling homeowners to connect two to eight indoor units to a single outdoor unit. Since each of the zones has its own thermostat, you heat only the areas you want and disregard those that are unoccupied. This can represent a significant savings considering the kitchen, dining room, living room and bedrooms are left unoccupied for at least 40 percent of the time. In addition, everyone can adjust each room to the temperature he or she wants—year-round—virtually eliminating the "thermostat wars," with family members fighting for their personal climate preferences.

Extra Low Temperature Protection

It's important to choose a reputable heating and cooling system that is equipped to handle your individual requirements. Fujitsu General's line of mini-split systems have a performance success rate of more than 99 percent and come in numerous sizes, styles and rated outdoor temperatures. The Extra Low Temperature Heating (XLTH) Series features outdoor condensing units engineered to operate in temperatures down to -15° F, lower than any other mini-split available today.

Mini-split systems may take as little as a day or two to install, depending on how many units you put in. To learn more or find a contractor nearby, call (888) 888-3424 or visit www.constantcomfort.com or www.fujitsugeneral.com.

Seven Safety Tips For Protecting Your Child

(NAPS)

According to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, some 70,000 children under age 5 are injured every year by common household products and toys—but yours don't have to be among them.

Here are seven ways to keep infants and toddlers safer:

1. Cook safely. Never leave food unattended on the stove. Turn pot handles so curious toddlers can't reach them.
2. Set your water heater to 120° F or lower. Infants and small children may not be able to get away from water that's too hot.
3. Use home safety devices, such as guards on windows above ground level, stair gates and guardrails.
4. Keep medicines, cleaning products and other toxic substances where children can't see or reach them.
5. Make sure children are properly buckled up. With a 90 percent misuse rate for installing car seats and boosters, parents should visit a car seat inspection station in their area to learn how to properly install and use them.
6. Always check the age label on toys. Small parts—whether from toys, pieces of food such as hot dogs or grapes, or anything else—can become a choking risk for children who have small throats and tend to put things in their mouths.
7. Check window coverings for exposed or dangling cords, which can pose a strangulation hazard to infants and young children.

Parents with young children should replace their corded window coverings with the many cordless products.

To assist the consumer, the Window Covering Manufacturers Association (WCMA) created the Best for Kids certification program.

For their products to be eligible for certification as safe for homes with small children, manufacturers must meet specified program criteria and submit their window coverings to a designated third-party testing laboratory.

A few simple precautions—such as installing cordless window coverings—can help you keep your children safe at home.

Throughout the year and particularly during October, which is National Window Covering Safety Month, parents are urged to maximize window cord safety by taking these three steps:

- Install only cordless window coverings or those with inaccessible cords. Replace window blinds, corded shades and draperies with those that are cordless or have inaccessible cords. Look for the Best for Kids label.
- Move all cribs, beds, furniture and toys away from windows and window cords of any kind, preferably to another wall.
- When window cords are present, keep them out of sight and reach by shortening or tying them up and away.
