BRISTOL — The Newfound girls' hoop team picked up its first win of the season on Tuesday, Dec. 14, as the Bears knocked off Winnisquam by a 58-33 score.

"Great win, more communication and effort on defense, took advantage of fast-break transitions down the floor, finishing at the bucket," said coach Danielle Wilkins, who earned her first varsity coaching win at the helm of the Bears. "We came out strong after the half with confidence, patience and ball movement in the third and fourth quarter."

Newfound got out to a 17-3 lead after one and was up 30-13 at halftime on the way to the 58-33 victory.

Malina Bohlmann led the way for the Bears with 14 points and four steals, while Rylee Barney finished with 13 points and Matti Douville finished with 10 points. Wilkins praised the three-point shooting of Barney and Douville and the strong offensive

Broadband funding could be denied for lack of data

REGION — The Grafon County Broadband Committee could face the denial of its $26.2 million federal grant application with the US Department of Commerce's National Telecommunications and Information Administration (NTIA) due to a lack of specific data. During a digital roundtable hosted by Senator Jeanne Shaheen on Dec. 10, GCBC member Nik Coates said accurate mapping had become a significant problem for the project.

"The providers have challenged our project we have is not good. It's at that census block level - if one house is in there, it's all counted. We were unable to respond in the most effective way. The best thing we could do was grab a survey conducted with about 3,000 people that showed that the challenges are inaccurate. But again, this because of the lack of data," stated Coates.

Last month, the GCBC secured $25,000 in Community Development Block Grant funding for the project. By month's end, contractor eX2 Technology had already begun survey work in 17 of the 39 communities,

A decision on the NTIA grant is expected shortly after the New Year, said Coates.

Last week, Shaheen met with key broadband stakeholders from across the state to discuss the $65 billion bipartisan Infrastructure to bring New Hampshire more than $1 billion for road and bridge repairs, more than $400 million for water infrastructure improvements and a minimum of $100 million to build out high-speed internet access.

Jackson Musgrave's time at LRCC planted a seed that grew into budding business empire

LACONIA — Growing up in Bedford, Jackson, the second-eldest of five boys in the Musgrave family, was unsure of his next steps after high school. He spent the months following graduation working a series of odd jobs with a moving company, officiating youth hockey games and selling Christmas trees. Little did he know, the latter experience planted a seed that would ultimately grow into his own arboreal empire.

Though he enjoyed his time selling Christmas trees, he initially did not think much of it and later that spring decided to explore a potential career as a firefighter. He enrolled in the Fire Protection program at Lakes Region Community College (LRCC) in Laconia. Around this same time, the Musgrave family was preparing to embark on a trip for their annual family reunion, this time hosted by relatives who resided on a Christmas tree farm. It was here that Jackson had an epiphany which would radically change his future goals and aspirations.

“A light bulb went off in my head at the family reunion,” said Jackson. “I had liked selling trees, but it was that moment that I realized, ‘Holy cow, I have a family member that is a wholesale Christmas tree farmer and grows hundreds of thousands of trees!’”

When he returned to LRCC the following semester, he had a plan in mind. LRCC didn’t have established student apartments yet. Instead, they had an agreement with a local hotel down the road from the college on Main Street, on one of the busiest intersections in the Lakes Region. The third floor of the hotel was reserved for student housing.

“I thought, hey, we could probably sell Christmas trees here – I have an idea of how to sell them and I have an uncle that grows them,” he continued.

That entrepreneurial spirit led Jackson to meet with the hotel’s management to discuss his proposed business idea of selling trees in a corner of the hotel parking lot. Understanding the challenges of starting a new business, the two parties negotiated an agreement: the hotel wouldn’t charge him for using the space until he recouped his initial investment, after which he would pay them a percentage of all profits. With a team of fellow LRCC students, whom Jackson counts as some of his best friends to this day, he spent the holiday season selling Christmas trees and learning as he went how to refine his budding enterprise.

“We really engaged the community – people loved the idea of local students in business together,” said Jackson, “but that first year wasn’t profitable. We didn’t order the right trees for the market because Laconia is really more of a city; people would be buying a tree for an apartment and really wanted something smaller than the seven or eight-footers that I had ordered.”

Where others might have written off the experience as a fun experiment, Jackson was motivated. Though he had started off in LRCC’s Fire Protection program, he enrolled in business courses to learn more and improve his strategy for the next season. The following year he leveraged referrals from past customers, placed flyers around town and ran a Facebook advertising campaign. That second year was much more successful, and they actually sold out of inventory twice. Although their retail business was stable, Jackson wanted to go bigger and embark upon forming a wholesale operation of his own. When he began looking for land to start his own Christmas tree farm, he stumbled upon a property in the northern Maine town of Van Buren and could hardly believe what he had found.

“When I saw the price-per-acre, I thought it had to be too good to be true!” said Jackson. “When I went up to check it out, the asking price made much more sense. The trees on the land were planted in 2000 and after the recession of 2008 it had largely been abandoned and was really overgrown.”

While most of the trees on the property were 20-25 feet tall, they were healthy and dropping a lot of cones, resulting in tens of thousands of saplings and growing smaller trees in between. He could see the potential and decided to purchase the land and start down his own path in the family tree business.

As the owner of MMB Trees, Jackson balances day-to-day management of his sprawling tree farm with the interstate logistics of quickly getting those trees to market. Today, MMB Trees is a wholesale, retailer, and grower of farm-fresh Christmas trees and wreaths.

“Most people start from scratch and go years before making a profit – I’m sort of doing it backwards by reclaiming the overgrown land.”

Jackson has expanded his empire, which coincidentally is helping bring him back to his roots. For the past three seasons, he has partnered with a farmer in Bedford to provide wholesale customers in New York and Massachusetts with a convenient pickup location, saving them 500 miles of transportation. In addition to the wholesale lot, Jackson acquired a long-running retail tree stand in Nashua, where he typically sells more than 800 trees each season.

Jackson’s passion and enthusiasm make it abundantly clear that he loves what he’s doing. He credits his time at LRCC as both an incubator for his budding business as well as a support system that helped him grow himself.

“I knew I had a passion for Christmas trees and wanted to continue growing the business. My professors helped me tailor my education back to the business and connect the concepts I learned in the classroom to what I was doing on the lot. LRCC not only provided me with a foundation for continuous learning and the tools to bring my dream to reality, but I also found an incredible community of professors who believed in me and friendships I maintain to this day – many of them even come up to visit and help me at harvest!”

During the holiday season and the busiest time of the year for Christmas tree sales, MMB Trees is harvesting and delivering 14,000 wholesale orders all over the East Coast from Canada to Florida. Today, MMB Trees can be found throughout the state at many retail locations including Whole Foods and are sold through local Boy Scouts troops.

Restoration projects continue at Castle in the Clouds

BY ERIN PLUMMER
mnews@salmonpress.news

MOULTONBOROUGH — Restoration work continued on parts of Castle in the Clouds this year, with plans underway for a major renovation of one of the property's outbuildings. Events at the Castle such as the recent Christmas at the Castle have helped raise money for restoration efforts on the more than 100-year-old structures on the property.

Castle Preservation Committee executive director Charles Clarke said the Castle had a few major restoration projects in 2021.

One of the projects was refurbishing the sun porch, including putting in all new glass, tightening up the structure, and offering better views.

Miracle Farms was putting in some new landscaping.

Work started to restore the interior space in the north tower and two guest beds.

The Castle's next major project is restoring the Maple Lodge upper gatehouse. According to a flyer on the fundraising effort, the building is one of the two cottages at the entrance to the estate and is one of the key components of the estates listing "With National Significance" on the National register of Historic Places.

The timbers have been rotting and the mortar has been failing between the exterior stonework. The roof rafters and decking will need to be fixed as soon as possible. The project would also restore broken leaded glass windows.

The project would restore these elements at a cost of around $500,000.

When restored the building will be a publicly accessible research library and will also be used for archival storage. There will also be expanded office space for educational programming that will benefit local schools.

Clarke said as of Christmas at the Castle in November that half the funds had already been raised. He said they are aiming to start work on the gatehouse by the end of next summer

Popular toys through the years

“Being there for a child is the most noble thing a toy can do.” — Woody

Santa is preparing for his big night, which is just three days away. His elves are always busy working in the toy shop, year after year, and have created memorable toys, that always leave children wide eyed every Christmas morning. Some toys that children found under the tree more than 100 years ago are still popular today.

In 1920, just a mere 101 years ago, the hot toy for Christmas was the Raggedy Ann doll, that sold for $1. Raggedy Ann and her brother Andy were created by a political cartoonist named Johnny Gruelle. In 1921, Lincoln Logs were the hot ticket. Lincoln Logs originally cost 50 cents.

Tinker Toys were first created in 1922, a toy that was a big hit in the 1980's as well. In 1924, the Erector Set was a favorite. In 1925, the classic Teddy bear was a popular, and cost 79 cents.

Crayola Crayons date all the way back to 1926. Crayola means ‘chalk and oily’ in French. Noted is that the original crayons were created in 1903, and the box contained just eight colors. The Radio Flyer wagon came out in 1927 and cost $2.99.

Yo-yo's were all the rave in 1928, and cost just five cents. This toy dates back to 500 BC. In 1929, pop-up books became popular. In 1930 the Mickey Mouse doll hit stores. Mickey was discovered in the cartoon ‘Steamboat Willie’ that first aired in 1928. During Christmas in 1930, demand was so high for Mickey dolls that crafty mothers ended up creating their own.

Finger pain and sock monkeys came out in 1931 and 1932, respectively. In 1933, tin Marx wind-up toys were the new thing.

In 1935, it was the Shirley Temple doll that had little girls everywhere smiling on Christmas day. Monopoly first hit stores in 1937, inspiring decades of family meltdowns...excuse us, family fun. Some people still get excited if they land on Baltic Avenue.

The original view master that became popular in the 80's, first came out in 1939.

In 1940, the Red Ryder BB gun cost $5.00. Everyone loves a good Golden Book and in 1942, they cost just .25. In 1943, green army men became popular. The slinky (who didn't have one?) first appeared under trees in 1945. In 1946, Lionel Trains cost $30. Tonka trucks came out in 1947. The original Clue board game first appeared in 1949.

In 1951, Colorforms cost 25 cents. Colorforms were the invention of art students who liked to be artistic, sans the high cost of paint. In 1952, Mr. and Mrs. Potato Head hit shelves for just 98 cents. Model cars became popular in 1953. In 1954, Scrabble hit stands and in 1955, Silly Putty could be found in stockings everywhere.

Play-Dough (can you ever forget that smell?) first came out in 1956. Barbie appeared in 1959. Anyone who could keep two Barbie shoes in one place for more than 24 hours was/is a special kind of person.

In 1960, the Etch A Sketch was created. A great toy if you had the patience for it. In 1961, even though it was winter, children everywhere wanted a Slip n Slide.

The Easy Bake Oven first appeared in 1963 for $15. In 1964, G.I. Joe appeared for $1.95. Twister appeared in 1966. The Lite-Brite and all its pieces first came out in 1967 for $10. Hot Wheels came out in 1968 and LEGOs in 1969.

In 1970, Nerf balls were being thrown about in homes everywhere. Weebles were a hoot in 1971. In 1973, Shrinky Dinks were a blast. Stretch Armstrong was popular in 1976 and a year later, in 1977, the Atari hit stores. Skiing is by far the best Atari game invented, and Pitfall.

In 1982, He-Man was a hit, followed by My Little Pony in 1982. In 1983, the infamous Cabbage Patch Doll appeared, complete with all of their bizarre names. Even our Editor had one named ‘Merci Rhonda.’ The original Nintendo Entertainment System appeared in 1986.

In 1995, Beanie Babies took over toy stores everywhere. Some rare Beanie Babies sell for thousands of dollars today. Pokemon cards appeared in 1999. In the early 2000's, it was Bratz dolls, Xbox 360's and Playstations. In 2006, the Nintendo Wii almost seemed futuristic. In 2010, the first iPad appeared, and interestingly enough, in 2021, kids old and young have the new version on their Christmas lists.

We hope you all remember this holiday season, that we're all just a bunch of big kids.

Holiday Heartburn

Eat and drink in moderation through the holidays to avoid heartburn

BY DR. JOSEPH CASEY
Plymouth General Surgery
Acid Reflux & Heartburn Center at Spear Memorial Hospital

It's the most wonderful time of the year—food, food, and more food. We are now well into the holiday season. For many of us, the extra indulgence of decadent sweets and rich, fatty (and delicious!) meals with friends and family comes with a hefty side order of heartburn and indigestion.

Add the stress and anxiety that can develop at this time of year, and it's not surprising that more than 60 million Americans report experiencing heartburn at some point over the holiday season. It turns out the holidays are not only a time to celebrate—it can be a time when many of us experience the discomfort of heartburn and acid reflux.

What is heartburn and acid reflux?

The terms heartburn and acid reflux are often used interchangeably. However, heartburn, the symptom that you feel, is caused by acid reflux. If you've ever felt a burning pain or discomfort moving up your chest toward your neck and throat, chances are you've experienced heartburn. Heartburn occurs when an excessive amount of acid migrates up from your stomach and into your esophagus. Even though it may feel like you're having a heart attack (and despite the name), heartburn has nothing to do with your heart. Put simply, it's the sensation of acid irritating your esophagus and throat. If you experience symptoms regularly (more than twice a week), you may have acid reflux disease, or gastroesophageal reflux disease (GERD).

Why do I get heartburn and acid reflux during the holidays?

It's more common to experience heartburn after consuming a large meal, especially one high in fats—and for most people, that's exactly what holiday meals are like. Whether you're celebrating with a lot of family, or a small group this year, fatty foods (such as green bean casserole or gravy) and over-eating can slow down digestion, which also contributes to acid reflux. And that post-holiday meal nap you love to take? Well, that's also not helping. After having a large, indulgent meal, lying down will increase your likelihood of having heartburn and acid reflux. When you're upright, gravity can help keep stomach acid down—but taking a cat nap on the couch while watching football won't stop the acid from making its way into your esophagus.

How to avoid holiday heartburn

Here are some tips to help you avoid the worst of it:

Keep portion sizes small. Allow yourself to have your favorite treats but start with a small amount first. This might be all you need to satisfy that craving.

Avoid triggering foods that are often spicy, high-fat, and greasy. But trigger foods vary among individuals, so keep track of your meals to learn which yours may be.

Reduce the amount of coffee and alcohol that you drink. Avoid sodas and choose non-carbonated beverages instead.

Eat foods that help ease acid reflux, such as vegetables, non-citrus fruits, lean meats, egg whites, ginger, and oatmeal.

Chew thoroughly and slowly. Some digestion starts in your mouth, so less work for your stomach to do! A single plate of food should take you at least 20 minutes to eat.

Try chewing fruit-flavored gum 30 to 60 minutes after a meal. Saliva neutralizes acid in the stomach and helps with digestion.

Use gravity to your advantage. Eat sitting up and avoid laying down within 2 hours after eating. Better yet, go for a walk after meals! Even a short 10-minute walk can aid digestion.

When you're ready to call it a night, set yourself up for comfort. Elevate the head of your bed four to six inches by putting blocks under the legs of the bed or buying a wedge pillow. Using two or more regular pillows can make reflux worse, as it causes your neck and body to bend.

How can I get rid of holiday heartburn?

Despite your best efforts to avoid it, the holidays are a prime time for many of us to experience heartburn. Fortunately, there are many effective treatment options available if you find yourself suffering after the big meal.

Over-the-counter medications

Popular OTC medications for acid reflux and heartburn relief include antacids, like Tums or Rolaids, Mylanta or Maalox. These work to neutralize stomach acid and acid indigestion. They work fast, but usually don't last that long. Some people prefer acid blockers, which reduce the actual amount of stomach acid produced, such as Axid AR, Pepcid AC, or Tagamet HB. These medications take a little longer to kick in, but they have the added benefit of lasting several hours.

Prescription medications

If your acid reflux and heartburn is more regular or severe, and OTC options aren't cutting it, your symptoms may be a sign of a gastroesophageal reflux disease (GERD). In this case, you may require a doctor's visit and prescription medication. These are usually higher dose versions of the OTC brand options, such as Prilosec, Prevacid, and Nexium.

The holidays are a time of leisure. In order to enjoy time with your family and friends, make sure to choose your foods wisely. Remember to pace yourself. Stop eating when you are no longer hungry. Limit the foods that tend to negatively affect your digestion. Avoid or limit the foods and beverages that cause you discomfort.

Having heartburn every once in a while is normal. Maintaining a healthy diet and exercising can help digestion and your health overall. If you regularly experience symptoms of acid reflux you should talk to your doctor about prevention and treatment options. The Acid Reflux & Heartburn Center at Spear works with primary care providers to develop an individualized and comprehensive treatment plan. In addition to personalized evaluations, the Center offers diagnostic testing with the latest medical technology, medications, and minimally invasive surgical procedures. You can learn more by contacting the Acid Reflux & Heart Burn Center at 603-536-5670.

Have a safe and happy and 'heartburn-free' Holiday Season.

NORTH COUNTRY NOTEBOOK

By JOHN HARRIGAN

Of Christmas, and traditions, some of them pretty strange

JOHN HARRIGAN

THIS PHOTO has run before, but it seemed a fitting way to say “Merry Christmas, from our house to yours.”

Editor’s note: Mr. Harrigan was unable to submit a new North Country Notebook column in time to meet our press deadline for this week’s edition. The following column was originally published on Dec. 24, 2016.

Few grownups would be likely to associate Christmas with cruel and unusual punishment, but waking up to a blanket tacked up over the head of the stairwell to block all view of the Christmas tree and its presents would seem to fit. And then there was the Interminable Breakfast.

I don’t know where our parents learned these unusual holiday practices, but any doubters can ask my siblings, although their memories are not as sharp as mine.

Neither do I know where the idea of opening two presents on Christmas Eve came from, but I’ve since learned that this is a wide-spread tradition, so in that, at least, our household was normal.

The two gifts business was preceded by the entire family singing carols around the McPhail upright piano, with our grandmother White at the keys. We were a family of singers and could break into pretty good harmony, our grandmother singing along as she hit the chords with aplomb and lightly tripped the notes between. It was a scene that younger members of the family could be lulled into thinking would last forever. Yet the old McPhail and many of our loved ones are gone, and only the memories live on.

On Christmas morning we tore away at our stockings pinned at the foot of our beds, my brother and I soon bringing ours to our sister Susan’s bed to compare loot. At the bottom of each stocking we were sure to find an orange, a humdrum thing today but back then a supreme treat, fresh fruit next to impossible to find during winter.

But then we would rush to the stairs only to find the way blocked by a blanket. “Not ‘til we’re ready,” Mom or Dad would shout from below as they rushed around for last-minute gifts they’d somehow kept hidden.

And then, permission granted, downstairs we’d rush, to give the tree and gifts a quick scan before the final, inevitable show-stopping command “Not until we’ve had breakfast.”

Relatives in Bethlehem and Lisbon and over in Andover and Jone-sport, Maine, were scandalized at this inhumane treatment, thinking, perhaps, that our parents were scarring us for life.

This behavior must be an inherited trait, because with my own kids I did the same, only different. While the rest of the household was still asleep or up tearing away at stockings, I was up early and in the kitchen, preparing the basic elements of breakfast and leaving the eggs for last. At what I figured was a reasonable hour, say 8, I selected what was and still is my favorite wake-em-up variety of Christmas music, Mannheim Steamroller, which I always called “Manhattan Steamroller;” and turned it up full blast.

“Not until we’ve had breakfast,” I’d yell when I herd the stampede coming down the stairs. But at least I spared them the blanket.

This column runs in weekly newspapers covering two-thirds of New Hampshire from Concord to Lower Quebec and parts of western Maine and northeastern Vermont. Write to campguyhooligan@gmail.com or Box 39, Colebrook, NH 03576.

Edward Jones: Financial Focus

What are your financial resolutions for 2022?

As you know, 2021 was full of challenges. We were still feeling the effects of the COVID-19 pandemic when supply chains shut down and inflation heated up. So, if you’re like many people, you might not be sorry to see the year come to a close. But now it’s time to look ahead to a brighter 2022. And on a personal level, you may want to set some New Year’s resolutions. You might resolve to improve your health and diet, and possibly learn some new skills, but why not make some financial resolutions, too?

Here are a few ideas to consider:

- Prepare for the unexpected. If you haven’t already created an emergency fund, now may be a good time to start. Ideally, you’d like to have three to six months’ worth of living expenses in this fund, with the money kept in a low-risk, liquid account. (If you’re retired, you may want your emergency fund to contain up to a year’s worth of living expenses.) Once you’ve got this fund established, you may be able to avoid dipping into long-term investments to pay for short-term needs, such as costly home or auto repairs or large medical bills.
- Boost your retirement savings. The pandemic caused many us to reevaluate our ability to eventually enjoy the retirement lifestyles we’ve envisioned. In fact, 33% of those planning to retire soon said they started to contribute even more to their retirement savings during the pandemic. According to a study from Age Wave and Edward Jones. This year, if you can afford it, increase your contributions to your IRA and your 401(k) or other employer-sponsored retirement plan.
- Reduce your debt load. The less debt you carry, the more money you’ll have available to support your lifestyle today and save and invest for tomorrow. So, this year, resolve to cut down on your existing debts and avoid taking on new ones whenever possible. You can motivate yourself by measuring your progress – at the beginning of 2022, record your total debts and then compare this figure to your debt load at the start of 2023. If the numbers have dropped, you’ll know you were making the right moves.
- Don’t overreact to the headlines. A lot can happen during a year. Consider inflation – it shot up in 2021, but it may well subside in 2022. If you changed your investment strategy last year to accommodate the rise in inflation, would you then have to modify it again when prices fall? And inflation is just one event. What about changes in interest rates?

How about new legislation coming out of Washington? And don’t forget extreme weather events, such as wildfires and floods. Any or all of these occurrences can affect the financial markets in the short term, but it just doesn’t make sense for you to keep changing the way you invest in response to the news of the day. Instead, stick with a strategy that’s appropriate for your goals, risk tolerance and time horizon. You may need to adjust this strategy over time, in response to changes in your own life, but don’t let your decisions be dictated by external events. These aren’t the only financial resolutions you can make – but following them may help you develop positive habits that can help you face the future with confidence.

North Country Chamber Players hire new Executive Director

Elizabeth Baker McClain of Center Tuftonboro is poised to become the North Country Chamber Players' new Executive Director in January, after nearly two decades of leadership from Joyce Petkovich.

ANGEL LARCOM
angel@salmonpress.news

FRANCONIA — The North Country Chamber Players selected Elizabeth Baker McClain of Center Tuftonboro to continue the nonprofit's legacy as it enters its 44th season. In January, Baker McClain will take the helm, filling the shoes of Joyce Petkovich, who oversaw the organization for nearly two decades.

Baker McClain brings more than 20 years of professional fundraising to the role and said her new position would fulfill a life goal.

"I went to Emerson College and graduated with a BFA in stage management and arts management, and I've never done anything with it. I've been in fundraising for my whole professional life, and I'm very excited to finally be able to do something that I had planned on doing when I was in college," stated Baker McClain.

For more than five years, Baker McClain served as the Director of Campaign Operations and Director of Development for the Brewster Academy in Wolfeboro. Her previous experience included the United Way of Massachusetts Bay and Merrimack Valley, Tufts University and the Unitarian Universalist Association. She also holds a Master's degree in Business Administration from Southern NH University.

Baker McClain said her passion for stringed instruments started as a child. Her father, husband and teen son are all guitar players, and her first professional role was the development director for a flamenco dance company.

"I've never done a role like this before, but I was excited about the possibility of doing something that wasn't solely focused on fundraising. The idea that I could do other parts of managing and arts organization is such a wonderful opportunity, and I cannot wait to be more fully involved," stated Baker McClain.

NCCP Artistic Director and co-founder Ronnie Bauch said the organization was transitional in both leadership and musical talent. Over the last two seasons, the Chamber Players welcomed three significantly younger musicians as members.

"We still have six or seven original members and a big legacy in terms of the community and our educational work. We're going through a period of succession and regeneration, not only in terms of the executive director position but also in terms of the organization's future," noted Bauch.
