A different kind of school board

BY OLIVIA RICHMAN
NEWS STAFF WRITER

THOMPSON — Business students at the Tourtellotte Memorial High School are taking what they've learned in class and bringing it to the real world. To fund a trip to New York City, the students are soliciting advertisements from local businesses for a Monopoly board all about the Quiet Corner (also designed by the students).

"It uses skills where they have to interact with adults," said business education teacher Trish Tupaj. "It shows them the importance of keeping clear business records. They each get to play a director or business marketing role. Someone will be designing the cover, and the board itself. It's about networking. It can all be used in the real world, so making these connections is important."

The idea to create a Quiet Corner Monopoly came to Tupaj when her students approached her with their goal: To take a class trip to New York City.

"It seems like a big goal," said senior Justyna Gil. "We want to see businesses from the marketing aspect, and there's so much of that in New York City. I think it will be satisfying to see that we met our goal. It'd be a nice way to sum up the whole year."

The class started to brainstorm ways to get them there, and came across a Junior Achievement program called My Company.

The students learn how to begin a company, design a business plan, sell corporate stocks, develop and design a product, go to production and finally market the product. The class must now raise $7,500 to go to production. The goal is to make $2,000 in profits for the bus trip, meals and other travel expenses.

This sounds like a hefty goal. But it's not at all daunting to the young entrepreneurs. In fact, some of the students have already made progress. Gil already sold a Monopoly space to Thompson House of Pizza.

"It went really well," she said. "The manager seemed really interested and excited for us. He was excited to place an ad on the game board."

On her way home, she stopped in with her folder of information and asked to speak with the manager. She discussed the board game and told him about the class' goal.

"It made me feel like we can actually achieve our goal and that it's not that hard. If we all come together, it will happen," said Gil.

Her classmate Sidney Ratliff is also inspired. She has already discussed ad space with several companies and is currently waiting for a final offer. She felt the uniqueness of the project really made people interested in the concept.

"All the skills I've learned throughout my classes here, especially the business classes, have come in handy," said Ratliff.

The eagerness of the business students and their early-on accomplishments have really impressed Tupaj. Their drive has gone above and beyond expectations.

Crystal Gauvin hopes to compete in the 2020 Olympics.

KILLINGLY — What was your New Year's resolution?

For Crystal Gauvin, it was to continue working her way towards qualifying for the 2020 Olympics. She has her eyes set on Tokyo. And with her astounding aim, this archer is sure to hit that bulls-eye.

Growing up a swimmer, the Killingly resident always had the Olympics as a goal. But when Michael Phelps — who is a year younger than her — started getting his gold medals, she realized it was time to finally push herself.

"As a compound shooter traveling the world, shooting with Olympic athletes, I've always watched the Olympics, every sport," she said. "I can't get enough of it. But it was tough for me to watch Rio. It was my friends. It was my teammates. People I spent all year with. They got to be there. That was the final straw."

Despite being the second best compound bow archer in the world — and number one in the US — she never made it to the Olympics since compound bows are not yet part of the events. So one year ago she switched to the recurve, a more traditional bow, in hopes of achieving her dreams. And she is well on her way: Gauvin

SOME HEAVY LIFTING

DANIELSON — Killingly High's Derek Turner hoists Ellis Tech's Gavin White in the 170-pound division wrestling match Saturday at Ellis Tech. Turner pinned White at three minutes and Killingly topped Ellis Tech to lift its dual meet record to 25-1. Story in today's sports section.

Rovero to step down

KILLINGLY — After being involved in public service for more than 50 years — first as a member of a local recreation committee, city council, board of selectmen, and Putnam's Police Commission and as mayor of Putnam for 14 years — state Representative Danny Rovero (D-Killingly) said on Jan. 29 he will not seek reelection to the 51st House District seat in the Connecticut General Assembly.

"It has been a tremendous honor and privilege to serve as the 51st District House representative for eight years. I've always given my best effort to this position, and enjoyed many times being the first person to show up early at the Capitol on Monday morning ready and willing to work for the people of my district. But with Killingly more than 50 miles removed from Hartford, the travel and demands of this job have started to take its toll and I am afraid my health will no longer allow me to represent the district to the best of my ability. This was not the easiest decision to make. I will truly miss engaging with and helping the people in my district. While I have decided not to seek reelection, I will continue to be involved on a local level, close to the people, which is the best part of government," Rovero said.

Rovero was first elected as state representative in November 2010. Since being elected, Rovero has worked with state legislators to create an eight-town Enterprise Zone, an expanded regional industrial park generated new job opportunities; and helped established the Center for Healthy Aging which serves Pomfret, Putnam, Thompson and Woodstock.

During his eight-year tenure, Rovero has advocated for fiscal accountability, supported efforts to improve the state's

AARP names Flexer its Capitol Caregiver

DANIELSON — State Senator Mae Flexer (D-Danielson) was recently presented with the 2017 Capitol Caregiver Award by the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) as well as the 2017 Family Caregiver award by AARP Connecticut. The AARP cited Senator Flexer's consistent record of championing legislative efforts to improve healthcare and the quality of life for seniors in Connecticut.

"After working their entire lives, Connecticut seniors have earned a secure and relaxing retirement. I have worked alongside the AARP to help smooth the transition into retirement, to ensure our seniors have access to the healthcare and financial supports they need to enjoy their golden years, and to ensure that financial planners put the interests of seniors first," said Flexer. "The AARP has been a great partner and advocate in these legislative efforts, and I am honored to receive their recognition for the work we have done together. I look forward to continuing our work in the 2018 legislative session as we make Connecticut an even better place for our seniors."

"AARP congratulates Senator Flexer for her continued advocacy to protect core senior services that help older adults access services at home like the CT Home Care Program for Elders and family respite. These programs not only help seniors and their family caregivers, but also save taxpayer money on costly nursing home care," said Nora Duncan, AARP Connecticut State Director.

In the 2017 legislative session, Senator Flexer led the charge on numerous initiatives affecting seniors, including: Making Retirement Security Available to Everyone; Senator Flexer worked with AARP Connecticut to continue the implementation of the Connecticut Retirement Security Program, which passed in 2016. Once fully implemented, this program will ensure that all Connecticut employees at businesses with five or more employees will have the opportunity to participate in a retirement savings program in order to build a strong financial foundation on which to begin their retirement.

Fighting the Millstone Subsidy: Senator Flexer led the fight in the Senate against a subsidy for the Millstone Nuclear Power Plant. Senator Flexer and the AARP argued that this subsidy would cost Connecticut ratepayers an additional $300 million a year for energy. Millstone claimed the subsidy was needed to continue operations, but declined to disclose their financial need and prove the subsidy was necessary.

Ensuring Better Financial Planning for Seniors: Public Act 17-120 establishes advertising and disclosure requirements for financial planners who are not otherwise regulated by state or federal law. It prohibits financial planners who do not meet certain education requirements from expressing or implying that they have special training, education, or experience serving seniors. It also requires that these financial planners disclose, upon request, whether they have a fiduciary duty with regard to each recommendation they make. These changes will ensure that seniors know they can trust the advice of the financial planners they consult when planning their retirement.

Helping Seniors Stay Close to Family: As Connecticut's population ages, creative ways to allow elderly people to stay close to home or to family members are being sought, and temporary health care structures, also known as "Granny Pods," are a potential way to do that, according to the AARP. These structures would serve as a more affordable alternative to nursing homes, allowing seniors to receive the care they need while maintaining the independence of living in a home of their own. Senator Flexer supported the successful passage of Public Act 17-155, which will allow municipalities to approve the placement of granny pods on residential property.

Suspect nabbed after chase from Brooklyn Walmart

BROOKLYN — On Monday, Jan. 30, at approximately 7:30 p.m., Connecticut State Police Troop D Troopers were dispatched to the Brooklyn Walmart located at 450 Providence Pike, for a suspicious vehicle in the parking lot. A Troop D QLTF Trooper recognized the license plate given out over the radio and knew that the owner of the vehicle, Joshua Robinson, 28, of 35 Chestnut Street, Danielson, had two active arrest warrants.

Troopers along with a State Police K9 Unit secured the area and began a search for the individual. Troopers determined that Robinson was hiding inside Walmart and began a systematic search for him. After a short time, Troopers spotted Robinson in the garden department and ordered him to surrender. Robinson, who had a significant lead on Troopers, burst through a fire exit and fled on foot across the side parking lot and into the woods. Troopers sprinted after Robinson and entered the woods and caught up with him. Troopers placed Robinson on the ground and handcuffed him. Robinson was transported back to Troop D where he was processed and charged with Failure to Appear in the First Degree 53a-172, Failure to Appear in the Second Degree 53a-173 and Interfering with a Police Officer 53a-167A. Robinson was held on a combined bond of $56,000 and appeared in Danielson Superior Court on Tuesday, Jan. 31 for the above charges.

Members of the Connecticut State Police are committed to combating drug activity in the "Quiet Corner" and anyone with information regarding the illegal sale of narcotics are encouraged to call the Troop D QLTF anonymous Tips Hotline at (860) 779-4950 or message the QLTF Facebook page.

Quiet Corner Shouts marches in Hartford

HARTFORD — The chant rose from a dedicated contingent representing Quiet Corner Shouts (QCS) at the second annual Women's March at the Capitol in Hartford on Jan. 20 — "Tell me what democracy looks like. This is what democracy looks like."

Lofting a large 5-foot by 7-foot banner emblazoned with the national logo for the Women's March and the words, "Connecticut. Rise. Resist," and "Nevertheless We Persist," the local delegation was asked by organizers to lead the march due to its highly visible sign.

Quiet Corner Shouts formed in the wake of the National March on Washington one year ago. What began as simple gathering of Windham County women post-march, rapidly became an official Women's March Huddle with over 200 members and followers, many of whom live in Pomfret and surrounding towns. QCS is working for human rights, the environment, affordable health care, freedom of the press, social justice, equality for races and genders, a peaceful world, equitable education and other issues.

On Jan. 20 nearly a dozen members of the group joined the thousands of pink-hat wearing, sign-holding peaceful citizens wrapping the entire perimeter of the Capitol building. The crowd was marked by the young and old, representing a diversity of racial/ethnic backgrounds and gender expressions. Marchers and speakers gave voice to many issues of concern displayed on colorful signs, including education, reproductive rights, sexual harassment and violence against women, voting rights, international peace/nuclear weapons, voters rights, and the environment.

Numerous marchers approached the QCS delegation after seeing its large banner, some to say they had heard of our organization. Many wanted their picture taken in front of our banner. Others who hailed from various parts of the state extolled their fondness for the Quiet Corner. All were unanimous in their hope that these protests will lead to increased political action and meaningful change at all levels of government.

One of the goals of QCS is to help candidates who share these values get elected. Quiet Corner Shouts welcomes others (of all backgrounds and genders) to work to forward these goals. Participation in this first anniversary post-inaugural Women's March illustrated the group's unified and continuing criticism of the current administration. Its participation also illustrated the group's collective refusal to remain silent.

QCS meets on the second Thursday of the month at 5:30 p.m. Individuals interested in membership in Quiet Corner Shouts! can find further information on Facebook and request membership to the group.

Boyd discusses business with CBLA council

POMFRET — State Rep. Pat Boyd (D-Pomfret) recently joined the Connecticut Business & Industry Association's (CBIA) Small Business Advisory Council and Manufacturing Advisory Council for a two-hour brainstorming session in Hartford on growing small businesses and manufacturing in Connecticut.

He was one of three legislators invited to the discussion with the influential councils, including Sen. Paul Doyle (D-Wethersfield) and Rep. Pam Staneski (R-Milford). The legislators and councils, which are composed of business owners and CBIA members, discussed workforce development for the manufacturing industry, transportation infrastructure's impact on business, and Connecticut's fiscal challenges.

Michael Brault of Bristol-based Ultimate Companies told lawmakers the state must do more to promote manufacturing as a viable career option.

"We are suffering from a narrative that says manufacturing is not a good career choice," Brault said. "At this point in time, that argument is patently false."

Boyd said the session was productive. "The only way we are going to be able to grow jobs in Connecticut is to listen to the needs of the private sector and create a climate that develops a productive workforce," Boyd said. "I was honored to be invited to brainstorm with our state's top business leaders on how we can continue to promote economic growth. I'm committed to continuing the conversation that must result in real action."

Durand is Day Kimball Employee of the Year

PUTNAM—Thompson resident Kim Durand, clinical manager at Day Kimball Healthcare at Home, has been named employee of the year for 2017 at Day Kimball Healthcare (DKH). Durand's selection was announced at a staff event celebrating all of DKH's 2017 Employees of the Month on Jan. 15, where DKH President and CEO Anne Diamond and DKH Chairman of the Board Joseph Adiletta presented her with the award and a commemorative engraved clock.

"Kim is so deserving of this award. Her long history of providing not only the best clinical care but also such caring and compassion to her Day Kimball HomeCare patients is a shining example of what we strive for each and every day across our organization," said Diamond.

es and services of Day Kimball HomeCare, the medical home health care division of Day Kimball Healthcare at Home. She also provides support, mentorship, and education to the HomeCare nurses in the field.

"As a member of our Day Kimball Homecare team for nearly 27 years, Kim's level of professionalism and her dedication to our patients and staff is second to none," said Day Kimball Healthcare at Home Executive Director Renee Smith. "In her role as Clinical Manager, Kim consistently exceeds even the highest expectations for being a clinical expert, mentor and educator for nursing staff, advocate for patients and families, and role model for other leaders. Kim's level of dedication also extends to her commitment to professional growth as a nurse and leader.

Our entire team at Day Kimball Healthcare at Home couldn't be happier or more proud of Kim for receiving this well-deserved award."

"I am honored to be chosen for this award from a group of equally deserving colleagues," Durand said. "It is a pleasure working in the community where I grew up and I appreciate the opportunity to give back to that community every day. I thank all who were involved in this decision."

Durand grew up in Thompson where she currently resides with her husband, two of her three daughters and one of her three grandchildren. She attended St. Vincent's Hospital School of Nursing and Assumption College, both in Worcester, Mass., to obtain her diploma of Nursing. Durand is currently enrolled in the Masters in Nursing Program Management through Western Governors University, online. She is also certified in Integrated Chronic Care Management through Sutter Center for Integrated Chronic Care.

The other 2017 employees of the month who were honored include: Deb Seney, housekeeper at Day Kimball Hospital; Lilybeth Ly, physical therapist at Day Kimball Healthcare Center in Danielson; Philip Axtel, RN, Emergency Department at Day Kimball Hospital; Laura Kroll, RN, BSN, community liaison nurse for Day Kimball HomeCare; Rebecca Rainville, CNA, medical assistant at Day Kimball Medical Group; Jessica Stailing, CNA, patient service representative at Day Kimball Medical Group; Christine Peer, CNA, pre-certification/registration clerk at DKH's physical medicine office in Plainfield; Judy Favreau, RN, case manager at Day Kimball Hospital; Stephanie Schapp, CMA, medical assistant at Day Kimball Medical Group; and Janet Yannotti, RN, ambulatory care unit at Day Kimball Hospital.

GAUVIN

is currently 13th in the country, despite being brand new to it.

"There was a trial for the indoor world championships in December, which is held every two years," she said. "Only three people can make the team in each division, and I qualified in the third spot, tied with a five-time Olympian. We had to have a shoot off match."

Gauvin beat the Olympian six to nothing.

An indoor competition consists of shooting 600 arrows from a 20-yard range at a target that's just over an inch in diameter. An outdoor competition for a recurve bow is just as challenging, 70 meters from a 10-ring target the size of a softball.

While Gauvin has only been with the recurve bow for a year, she's been into archery for five years. And it all started as a bet. A challenge with her husband, Gauvin "kicked his butt" with an old hunting bow. Fueled from the win, the two went to a local range in Manchester and got informed about good equipment from a five-time Olympian who worked there.

"I definitely think I had some natural talent," said Gauvin. "But I also grew up a swimmer and competed internationally. I had that mental side of how to train and work hard, how to perform under pressure. Archery, unlike a lot of sports, is way more mental than most people realize. It really comes down to can you repeat the same thing over and over again."

And while archery may sound like a very intense sport, one of Gauvin's favorite things about it is that it's accessible to everybody. There's no age limits. There's no preferred shape or size. In fact, at a national level tournament in Kentucky, Gauvin saw a 4-year-old shooting next to someone in their 80s. It was that sense of togetherness and supportiveness that first drew Gauvin to archery competitively.

While her husband and she loved to race mountain bikes, once he became naturally faster than her they ended up not ever riding next to each other. But with archery, no matter how much better she got, she was able to practice and compete right there with her husband.

The process to the Olympics will start in fall of 2019, she said, and the event will be open to everybody. But while it's open to everybody, Gauvin has noticed a lack of competitive women in archery.

"There might actually be more women than men that are into archery in the recent years," she said. "Due to Hunger Games generating interest. But the biggest thing that I see, payouts are so different between men and women."

That staggering difference — with men earning up to six figures, and women barely breaking even — has caused many women to drop out of the sport. And with less women competing, there's been no push for higher payouts. It's a cycle that has left competitive archery dominated by men.

"In a big Vegas tournament last year, it was opened up so a female could shoot in a men's division," said Gauvin. "Only one woman chose to do that."

In the tournament, where everyone had to shoot perfectly to place, 13 men shot a perfect score. The woman only dropped two total. With the same equipment, same determination and same practice, there seems to be no real reason (besides arm length) that a woman can't compete with men. And while kicking butt (of either gender) is kind of Gauvin's thing when it comes to archery, right now she has her eyes on the prize: The Olympics.

She is practicing six days a week, two to four hours a day. She also does specific targeted exercises for her muscles, fitting in what she can during her full time job as an economist. With endless dedication and astonishing talent, Gauvin is perhaps well on her way to the 2020 Olympics. And the part-time archery coach is hoping it may inspire other local men, women and children to pick up archery themselves.

"Try new things," she said. "You never know what you might have a hidden talent at. You just haven't done it yet."

Fire and Ice Festival set for Feb. 10

PUTNAM—Downtown Putnam will once again host a single ice block competition — the eighth annual Fire & Ice Festival. On Saturday, February 10th from 12:00 to 10:00 p.m., the public is invited to visit this community event, boasting more than four dozen ice carvings, ice photo opportunities, glowing fire torches, fire dancing performances, rose sales, a wedding cake decorating contest, and more.

Ice carvings will decorate the streets of downtown Putnam with both pre-carved ice blocks and live demonstrations on display. Throughout the day, patrons can watch as 300-pound ice blocks are transformed into a variety of shapes and figures — all of which are sponsored by local businesses. From noon to 5 p.m., watch as professional, amateur and group carvers create their masterpieces, with an awards ceremony at Putnam Congregational Church at 6 p.m.

Despite the icy February weather, there will be plenty of ways to keep warm, with dinner and drink specials available at local restaurants. The festival also provides an opportunity for newcomers to discover the many shops and galleries of Putnam. The Putnam Congregational Church will be a hot spot of activity throughout the event, featuring roaring fire pits and free hot chocolate.

From 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. the Putnam Congregational Church will also feature a special wedding cake contest, aptly titled, "Icing on the Cake." Professional and novice bakers from around the area will be showing off their culinary masterpieces. All entrants will be judged based on originality and best flavor. Submissions are still being accepted, with the application available on www.discoverputnam.com. In keeping with the romantic feel of the day, roses will also be available for purchase from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. at the church.

As the sun goes down at the Fire & Ice Festival, fire torches will fill downtown Putnam with an ambient glow. Adding to the spectacle of the festival, visitors will be wowed by fire dancing performances from Sasha the Fire Gypsy. Performances will take place at 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. with Sasha combining choreography, theatrics, acrobatics, and dance with speed, difficulty, and excitement.

Woodstock students use technology at Chamberlin Mill

The turbine parts and plans

WOODSTOCK — Woodstock Academy's aerospace engineering recently partnered with Chamberlin Mill Inc. to create a model of the mill's water turbine as a part of efforts to preserve the historic mill located on Old Turnpike Road in Woodstock.

"Recent research on the mill, in connection with a National Register nomination, has suggested that the current mill configuration dates to about 1900, though the site has been used for grist and sawmills since the 1700s," said Jean McClellan, from Woodstock, who has led much of the preservation efforts.

Students in Peter Sumner's class visited the mill and then studied the 1872 patent drawings of the original water turbine with the mill's technology expert Andrew Quigley. The class then created a digital model and used a 3D printer in Woodstock's Spirol STEAM Center to print parts to build a working model of the turbine. The small model is about a 10th of the size of the original and can be used as an educational tool to demonstrate the historic mill technology in classrooms or at the mill since the original turbine is not easily visible to visitors.

Students have used the 3D printer to make small parts and pieces before but, according to Sumner, this is the first "major outside project."

Jeff Paul, co-owner of Whitcraft in Eastford and proponent of STEAM (Science, Technology, Engineering, Arts, and Math) education at Woodstock Academy, is a member of the mill's board and formed the connection between students and the mill restoration project.

"The primary goal for the Chamberlin Mill is education," Paul said. "What's really exciting is that the educational opportunities are accessible now and Peter's class will provide insights that will be valuable during the ongoing restoration of the mill."

This spring, architecture students aspire to recreate the entire mill with both digital and 3D printed models that Paul hopes can be used for classroom presentations and "to assist in creating architectural plans that could be used to support further mill development."

"The mill provides many types of learning opportunities - archeology, science, history, engineering - for students of all ages," said Paul.

While studying and creating the turbine students also learned about the history of mill technology in the region. Sumner said that his students were able to see "the progression of the industry".

"Newer technologies were introduced at the mill starting with a water wheel, then a water turbine, and finally a Studebaker engine," Paul said.

"A goal in all of our courses is real-world application, but it is

The assembled turbine

even better and if our students can make those applications while partnering with members of our community like the Chamberlin Mill," said

Christopher Sandford, Woodstock's Head of School.

Dearys will perform at YMCA benefit

WOODSTOCK — Tim and Mackenzie Deary are heading back to the stage on April 7-8 for a reprisal of Andrea Bocelli and Celine Dion's famous duet, "The Prayer" in Broadway Live's upcoming show "The Conncert" at the Center for The Arts at Woodstock Academy.

The Conncert is a musical performance featuring over 30 regional vocalists, accompanied by a 16-piece orchestra, benefitting the Hale YMCA Youth and Family Center. With regard to the YMCA's credo based on youth development, healthy living and social responsibility, the event is a musical production centered around performances arranged and performed by local families and individuals. The Conncert performances will be performed at the Center for The Arts at Woodstock Academy. For more details and ticket information can be found at www.theconncert.com.

The Dearys, brother and sister, are no strangers to the stage. Most recently Tim performed in "Broadway Live ... 2015" where he sang "Run Freedom Run" from the Broadway musical "Urinetown" among other hits. As a French Teacher at Pomfret School he continues to use the stage as an outlet to express his love of culture, life and music. Mackenzie Deary recently completed her Master's degree in Public Policy at the University College London. She has been involved in musical theater since her debut as Tiny Tim in A Christmas Carol at the young age of 5. She is delighted at the opportunity to be back performing with some of the area's most talented performers.

"It is an honor to once again be performing "The Prayer" alongside my brother, Tim, because the song has such a deeply profound significance to our entire Deary family," said Mackenzie. "It's truly a beautiful song that gives me chills each time I hear it."

"We are thrilled that Tim and Mackenzie are appearing in this benefit concert for the YMCA. They are both very talented and gifted performers; and the fact that they are bringing "The Prayer" back to the Broadway Live stage is a real treat," said executive co-producer David T. Panteleakos.

Walk planned for Woodstock Middle School playground

WOODSTOCK — With approximately $35,000 left to raise to meet their $100,000 goal, playground committee members Crystal Adams and Joan Fortin are lacing up their sneakers to raise funds to build a playground at Woodstock Middle School and help clean up their community along the way.

Just over 148 miles of roads crisscross through Woodstock Connecticut, and Adams and Fortin say they are determined to walk at least 100 of them between March and the end of June to raise funds for the new playground planned for behind the school. Along the way they plan to pick up trash wherever possible.

"Bringing a playground to our community is all about exercise, movement, physical fitness and fun. Instead of talking about the importance of exercise and movement, we are going to put our words into action and walk across Woodstock," Fortin said.

The duo is hoping community members can join some of these walks.

"When we are planning to walk a quiet back road where there is a place to park, we'd like to post the date, time, walk location and mileage to the Woodstock Middle School Playground Facebook page in case a few others can join us," Adams said.

Adams has spoken to State Representative Pat Boyd, who has agreed to join them on one of their walks. Adams and Fortin will post photos of their walks to the Facebook page as well as update the total miles walked and the number of bags of trash they have collected. They hope their walk will inspire individuals, families, and businesses to pledge an amount per mile or make a flat donation to the playground fund. More information can be found at <https://wmsplayground.wordpress.com>. They will wear bright-colored t-shirts for visibility. Follow their progress on <https://www.facebook.com/wmsplayground/> on Facebook.

Uncle Arthur's elixir

I didn't take communion at my church. I wiped the table, the menu and the arms of the chair with hand sanitizer at the restaurant. I listened for a few seconds before I chose a seat at the movie theatre to determine the relative health of those nearby. My precautions might not make any difference, but other than the flu shot, which I got several months ago, there isn't much else one can do. I don't want to get the flu. Neither should you.

In my family lore, there is a story about the pandemic of 1918. My Great Uncle Arthur sent a letter to his sister, my grandmother, that he was coming to visit from his home in Wales. He planned to stay for several months. He gave her all the details. When he arrived after a long journey, no one met him at the train station. His feelings were hurt. There was no livery service. He hoisted his trunk and a crate of scotch, so the story goes, and walked to my grandparent's house only to find that they and my father, an 11-year-old, had the flu. Arthur nursed them back to health through the use of ample amounts of scotch. They were lucky. Many Americans and others worldwide were not.

NANCY WEISS

I'm not sure we are facing a pandemic, but according to health statistics the flu season is worse than it has been since the swine flu of 2009.

When my daughters started school, they were taught that when they sneezed, they should sneeze into their elbows. Now the practice is very common and seems like a fine idea. When the person checking my groceries sneezes into her T-shirt sleeve, it feels healthier than sneezing toward the floor or toward me. I appreciate the nearly universal practice among younger people. Does it limit the spread of air born goo? I think it does.

On a trip to Japan we saw many people wearing surgical-type or "sickness" masks. Often white, they are the polite way to go about in public when not feeling well. Some are quite fashionable and are scented or contain moisturizing lotion. It is assumed that the wearer benefits from containing her own breath and doesn't spread disease to others. One thing for sure: on seeing people wearing masks, the whole concept of illness becomes more real. They are walking reminders of the itty-bitty viruses that are lurking everywhere.

There is a great deal of pressure to go to work when sick. Some act as if it is a badge of honor. They are so important or so stoic that nothing will keep them away from their desks. It can be awful for everyone else. Children are another matter. They can be fine one minute and sick as dogs the next. Nothing sends a chill down the spine of a mother working outside the home as dramatically as a call from the school saying that your child is ill and you must come immediately. In my experience the anxiety is always softened by the comforting presence of the school nurse, who has seen it all and just wants everyone to feel better.

As the movie theatre darkened and the previews began, I listened to the sounds of breathing all around me. I like to hear my husband's breath as he sleeps or the little short pants of my grandson when he is dreaming. My father had emphysema, so his breath made me anxious. A co-worker breathed loudly through his mouth and annoyed me. The people seated nearby were not coughing or sounding congested. They were quietly waiting. They seemed healthy. Perhaps they were listening to my breath as well. Wait... was that a cough?

Putnam reader salutes Weiss

To the editor:
 You truly have a gem in weekly columnist Nancy Weiss. Each edition of the Villager she produces well written, thoughtful columns, which demonstrate not only her creative writing skills but her ability to cut through topics in a fair fashion.

Her column of January 20, "Agree to Disagree" is a perfect example of her aforementioned skills. In view of the polarizing atmosphere in our country today, she was able to bring the ability to discuss issues in a civil manner to a level that was understandable to everyone. Her closing suggestion about listening and learning from others and being able to express ourselves and form cogent arguments is food for thought in our everyday dealings with others.

She's definitely on target with the fact that we need debate clubs in schools and require training in Robert's Rules of Order.

Lou Holtz, the famous University of Notre Dame football coach once said, "God gave us two ears and one mouth, so we could listen twice as much as we talk." Good advice for all.

So Nancy, keep up the great job. Through your thoughtful writing let's hope that people can "agree to disagree and sometimes agree to agree."

On Woodstock's budget

Well, here we are again, budget season. While we have yet to get final revenue numbers from the state for this year, ending Jun 30th 2018, we must begin planning for next year's budget which will come before the Board of Finance starting in early March and will go before the voters in May. Despite not having actual revenue numbers for this year, Woodstock will be fine as we have had significant surpluses year after year for several years now. In fact, during the Audit revenue in December, we learned that we had over one million dollars in surpluses for fiscal 2017 which ended June 30, 2017 — $574,882 in excess revenue (read excess taxes), $294,962 in expense surpluses from Town Government (surpluses we have seen for several years now — must be from cutting the lifeguard and swim program at the town beach), and an additional $160,000 from the education budget ($154,000 went to the "non-lapsing account" and $6,000 more into the BOE health care account despite a gentleman's agreement to not put any more into this account as it is already some $300,000 over funded!). What does all this mean? You paid roughly $1,030,000 more in taxes than was necessary to support town government and the school system. Roughly 1.5 mils or 6% more than needed. Don't worry; it will go to a good cause. The state is broke and will be looking for where it can cut funding and we are on top of the list.

How does this happen? It's a lot easier than you think. Budgets are put forward that are meant to serve primarily those who are in town government or employed by the school system. Notice I didn't say the kids. Every year spending budgets go up and up while state revenues go down, down, down. These next few years are going to be a real test for property taxpayers. If you think Prop 46 is all you need to keep taxes in line, you're sadly mistaken. Prop 46 doesn't compensate for declining state revenue; in other words, as state revenue declines property taxes have to go up to offset the lost revenue especially when we spend to the limit as we have for the last several years.

Restructuring of both town government and education is going to happen but it will not come easily. The entrenched are going to fight it every step of the way. In town government, restructuring has started. With a new first selectman, and having replaced another, there seems to be a realization of the need. On the education side, well they are requesting a legal opinion to allow them to make increases in tuition expense at Woodstock Academy an exception to the limits of Prop 46. In the 39-year history of Prop 46 this kind of expense has never been allowed and would, for all practical purposes, throw Prop 46 right out the window as if this can be considered an "emergency" expense there would be no limits to what else could be "declared" and emergency. Someone needs to tell them to turn the binoculars around. The problem isn't Prop 46 and more spending, it is a continuing loss of state revenue.

While there is no doubt that we can cover cuts in state funding this year — your tax dollars are stuffed into every crack and crevice that could be found — we cannot cover all likely state revenue cuts going forward. Restructuring is going to be required. We simply cannot continue the spending ways of the past. Others have done it. Massachusetts has done it and not only spends less per student but gets better results according to recently published articles. You read almost weekly about towns around us having to make cuts and changes in education budgets. Remember 80 percent of our spending is for education. We cannot only look at town government to cover the necessary reductions going forward. Woodstock voters/taxpayers need to get involved now. If you can't attend meetings, check out the videos of the Board of Finance meetings available through the town website — link in the center column near the bottom. See your town government in action; you may be surprised. If you don't have time for a full meeting watch the Jan. 9 meeting: start at 1 hour, two minutes and watch the next 10 to 12 minutes for a taste.

Opinions expressed are mine and may not reflect those of the Woodstock Board of Finance.

Taking advantage of employer sponsored retirement plans

Employer-sponsored qualified retirement plans such as 401(k)s are some of the most powerful retirement savings tools available. If your employer offers such a plan and you're not participating in it, you should be. It may offer great benefits in your financial plan and assist you in Planning Well.

FINANCIAL FOCUS
 JIM ZAHANSKY
 INVESTMENT ADVISER

UNDERSTAND YOUR EMPLOYER-SPONSORED PLAN

Before you can take advantage of your employer's plan, you need to understand how these plans work. Read everything you can about the plan and talk to your employer's benefits officer. You can also talk to a financial planner, a tax advisor, and other professionals. Recognize the key features that many employer-sponsored plans share.

Your employer automatically deducts your contributions from your paycheck. You may never even miss the money-out of sight, out of mind. You decide what portion of your salary to contribute, up to the legal limit. And you can usually change your contribution amount on certain dates during the year.

With 401(k), 403(b), 457(b), SARSEPs, and SIMPLE plans, you contribute to the plan on a pretax basis. Your contributions come off the top of your salary before your employer withholds income taxes. Your 401(k), 403(b), or 457(b) plan may let you make after-tax Roth contributions—there's no up-front tax benefit but qualified distributions are entirely tax free.

Your employer may match all or part of your contribution up to a certain level. You typically become vested in these employer dollars through years of service with the company. Your funds grow tax deferred in the plan and taxes are not paid you withdraw your money from the plan. You'll pay income taxes and possibly an early withdrawal penalty if you withdraw your money from the plan.

CONTRIBUTE AS MUCH AS POSSIBLE

The more you can save for retirement, the better your chances of retiring comfortably. If you can, max out your contribution up to the legal limit. If you need to free up money to do that, try cutting certain expenses.

Why put your retirement dollars in your employer's plan instead of somewhere else? One reason is that your pretax contributions to your employer's plan lower your taxable income for the year. This means you save money in taxes when you contribute to the plan—a big advantage if you're in a high tax bracket. For example, if you earn $100,000 a year and contribute $10,000 to a 401(k) plan, you'll pay income taxes on $90,000 instead of $100,000.

Another reason is the power of tax-deferred growth. Your investment earnings compound year after year and aren't taxable as long as they remain in the plan. Over the long term,

Community banks lead the way

Despite the partisanship that has taken hold from Washington to Connecticut, contributing to gridlock in the nation's capitol, there appears to be one issue that Republicans and Democrats can generally agree upon, and that is promoting local economic growth through our nation's community banks.

At a time of political polarization, it was encouraging to learn that the Senate Banking Committee last month accomplished something rare. The Committee passed a bill developed by Republicans and Democrats on a bipartisan basis, that is designed to tailor financial services regulations to ease the burden of red tape on locally-based community banks. Economic Growth, Regulatory Relief and the Consumer Protection Act passed with support from senators from both parties, and will now head to the Senate floor for a vote.

This legislation represents the best opportunity for Congress to support local communities, by advancing meaningful reforms for the community banking sector. After seven years of congressional hearings, every provision in the multipronged bill has already passed a House or Senate committee by a bipartisan vote as standalone legislation.

Since the financial crisis, members of both political parties have lamented the decline in the number of community banks around the nation. Now is the time for them to stand up for their communities and support the institutions, like our community banks in eastern Connecticut, that make a meaningful impact every day. Members of Congress who truly believe in helping the community banking sector should support this legislation.

The bill has broad support for good reason. Regulatory burdens are plaguing locally-based community banks, which provide nearly half of the banking industry's small business loans, despite making up less than 20 percent of its assets. Despite their low financial risk and high economic reward, Main Street community banks suffer from an onslaught of regulations — exacerbated by Washington's response to the 2008 Wall Street financial crisis — that is limiting the nation's economic growth.

By reforming complex regulations on community bank mortgage lending and capital requirements, and while focusing oversight on the risky financial firms that caused the crisis, Congress can and should promote true community-based growth that extends beyond stock market gains and shareholder dividends. For instance, the bill would exempt many community banks from stringent new data-reporting requirements on mortgage loans, freeing lenders to focus on the borrower's needs instead of regulatory paperwork.

The only question is whether the bill can remain focused on community banks to maintain its broad backing. The bipartisan allies on the Senate Banking Committee wisely resisted any changes to the bill to keep it focused on community banks, and lawmakers will need to continue to counter attempts by the largest banks to extend the scope of relief to Wall Street. We cannot let the largest and riskiest megabanks jeopardize these policies. All U.S. Senators from both parties, including our own Senators, should sign on and fight for this vitally important legislation.

These recent events have shown there is broad support for common-sense financial reforms despite our acrimonious political environment. Now all members of Congress should seize on this common ground to achieve a rare bipartisan show of unity that will help local communities like those in eastern Connecticut.

History of slavery in northeastern Connecticut

Recently I received an email from Trent Pappas, Jr. with a correction and clarification about the ownership of Michael's Market. "Mike Pappas was my uncle. Trent Pappas, Sr., his brother, was never involved with the business. George and Carl were. Trent Sr. was a builder and co-owned Pappas and Pockowski Builders out of the N. E. Ct. area with Paul Pockowski of Dayville, CT until 1972 when Trent Sr. and his wife Pearl purchased Ross Hill Park Family Campground in Lisbon, CT" (1/26/18).

February is Black History Month so the remainder of this column will be related to our African-American residents and related topics. Now I'm imagining that you usually associate slavery with the Southern States. However, New Englanders did own slaves and there were some right here in Killingly and Northeastern Connecticut. Ellen Larned's History of Windham County, Connecticut gives references for some slaves. However, census and probate records have been found to be one of the best resources for documenting the town's very earliest slaveholders and learning the names of some of these non-white inhabitants. (Note: I use the outdated term Negro primarily because that is how the non-whites are referenced in the 18th century documents which have been used as resources).

James Danielson, probably early Killingly's wealthiest individual, sent one of his much-trusted slaves to Boston with a load of produce from the farm (Larned, op. cit. Vo. I, p.166). This slave was not the only African American in Danielson's household for at the time of his death in 1728 he had five "Negro servants" valued at 725 pounds: Cesar, Ziproah, Dinah, Hannah, and Jethro. The Danielson family continued to have non-whites working for them throughout the 18th century. Since Col. William Danielson had an iron works in present-day Danielson by 1770, it is quite possible that his slave helped in the day-to-day workings of this establishment in addition to assisting with the farm work. It is also quite likely that the non-whites helped construct some of the stone walls which are still visible today.

Sampson Howe, another wealthy Killingly individual, was one of the earliest inhabitants of the section of Killingly that eventually became Thompson. When he died in 1736, he left his slave Leah to son Sampson Howe and his man-servant Cesar to son Perley Howe, minister at Dudley, Massachusetts and by 1746 the minister on Killingly Hill/Putnam Heights (Larned, op. cit., p.324). Whether Perley Howe kept the slave is unclear.

In 1727, John Parks, who lived in the Stone Road section of Killingly, apprenticed his Negro servant Charles Dungen to Killingly trader Nell Elicksander (Alexander) for 21 years with the stipulation that Charles was not to frequent taverns nor ale houses. He was to be freed when his indenture was finished and was to be given five pounds (Killingly Land Records, Vo. 1, p. 111).

Josiah Dwight, minister in Thompson's church society/Killingly, left a "Negro woman and a Negro child" when he died in 1749. (Plainfield Probate, Vo. 2, p. 43). "A very serious calamity befell his son, Captain John Dwight, February 18, 1750. His house was consumed by fire, the family escaping from their beds with only the clothes that covered them. One 'negro' servant perished in the fire" (Larned, op. cit., p. 533). (Most of the above was extracted from a 2008 Villager article).

In researching materials for Black History Month I began rereading my old copy of Black Yankees by William D. Pierson. He mentioned Phillis Wheatley, a young Boston female who became the first African-American female to publish poetry. I was quite intrigued since women were often considered uneducated in 18th century New England (not always rightly so). I wondered how a slave had been able to accomplish this feat. Since I'm becoming more comfortable with searching the internet, I found much of interest. The site www.biography.com/people had the following: "A pioneering African-American poet, Phillis Wheatley was born in Senegal/Gambia around 1753. (At the) early age of 8, she was kidnapped and brought to Boston on a slave ship. Upon her arrival, John Wheatley purchased the young girl, who was in fragile health, as a servant for his wife, Susanna. Under the family's direction, Wheatley (who, as was the custom at the time, adopted her master's last name) was taken under Susanna's wing. Her quick intelligence was hard to miss, and as a result, Susanna and her two children taught Wheatley to read and she was actively encouraged in her literary pursuits by the household. Wheatley received lessons in theology, English, Latin and Greek. Ancient history was soon folded into the teachings, as were lessons in mythology and literature. At a time when African Americans were discouraged and intimidated from learning how to read and write, Wheatley's life was an anomaly.

"Wheatley wrote her first published poem at around age 13. The work, a story about two men who nearly drown at sea, was printed in the Newport Mercury. Other published poems followed, with several also being published, further increasing Wheatley's fame. In 1773, Wheatley gained considerable stature when her first and only book of verse, Poems on Various Subjects, Religious and Moral, was published, with the writer having received patronage from Selina Hastings, the Countess of Huntingdon, in England. As proof of her authorship, the volume included a preface in which 17 Boston men, including John Hancock, asserted that she had indeed written the poems in it.

Poems on Various Subjects is a landmark achievement in U.S. history. In publishing it, Wheatley became the first African American and first U.S. slave to publish a book of poems, as well as the third African woman to do so.

"While ultimately freed from slavery, she was devastated by the deaths of several Wheatley family members, including Susanna (d. 1774) and John (d. 1778). In 1778, Wheatley married a free African American from Boston, John Peters, with whom she had three children, all of whom died in infancy. Their marriage proved to be a struggle, with the couple battling constant poverty. Ultimately, Wheatley was forced to find work as a maid in a boarding house and lived in squalid, horrifying conditions.

"Wheatley did continue to write, but the growing tensions with the British and, ultimately, the Revolutionary War, weakened enthusiasm for her poems. While she contacted various publishers, she was unsuccessful in finding support for a second volume of poetry. Phillis Wheatley died in her early 30's in Boston, Massachusetts, on December 5, 1784."

FINANCE

this gives you the opportunity to build an impressive sum in your employer's plan. You should end up with a much larger balance than somebody who invests the same amount in taxable investments at the same rate of return.

For example, you participate in your employer's tax-deferred plan (Account A). You also have a taxable investment account (Account B). Each account earns 8 percent per year. You're in the 28 percent tax bracket and contribute $10,000 to each account at the end of every year. You pay the yearly income taxes on Account B's earnings using funds from that same account. At the end of 30 years, Account A is worth $1,132,832, while Account B is worth only $757,970. That's a difference of over $370,000. (Note: This example is for illustrative purposes only and does not represent a specific investment.)

CAPTURE THE FULL EMPLOYER MATCH

If you can't max out your 401(k) or other plan, you should at least try to contribute up to the limit your employer will match. Employer contributions are basically free money once you're vested in them (check with your employer to find out when vesting happens).

By capturing the full benefit of your employer's match, you'll be surprised how much faster your balance grows. If you don't take advantage of your employer's generosity, you could be passing up a significant return on your money.

For example, you earn $30,000 a year and work for an employer that has a matching 401(k) plan. The match is 50 cents on the dollar up to 6 percent of your salary. Each year, you contribute 6 percent of your salary ($1,800) to the plan and receive a matching contribution of $900 from your employer.

Know your options when you leave your employer

When you leave your job, your vested balance in your former employer's retirement plan is yours to keep. You have several options at that point. You may consider taking a lump sum distribution. This may be a bad idea because you will pay income taxes and possible penalties on the amount withdrawn. Plus, you're giving up continued tax deferred growth. You may leave your funds in the old plan, growing tax deferred if your plan permits. You might want to roll over your funds to an IRA or a new employer's plan if it accepts rollovers. This is often a smart move because there will be no income taxes or penalties if you do the rollover properly. Plus, your funds will keep growing tax deferred in the IRA or new plan.

Taking advantage of these plans may be an important step in Planning for financial goals.

"I've always done what I thought was right for my district and voted for legislation that set Connecticut on the right fiscal path. More than anything else, when I first ran, I made the promise to my grandchildren that I would not mortgage their futures. I hope that during my time at the legislature, I have lived up to that promise and have made our state a better place to live, work and raise a family," Rovero said.

Rovero currently serves as vice chairman of the Aging Committee, majority whip at-large, and is a member of the General Law and Public Safety and Security committees. Previously, Rovero was mayor of Putnam for 14 years, a member of the Killingly Charter Revision Commission, chairman of the Northeast Council of Governments, and served on the Northeast Regional Committee on Aging.

"Rep. Rovero has been a great friend and dedicated public servant," said Speaker of the House Joe Aresimowicz, D-Berlin. "Throughout his time as a legislator, Danny has worked tirelessly for his constituents in Killingly, Putnam and Thompson.

They have been fortunate to have such a strong voice advocating on their behalf in Hartford, I, along with the rest of my colleagues in the General Assembly will certainly miss working with him at the Capitol, but after 50 years in public service, this time off is well deserved."

Most Americans do not know, or refuse to accept, the facts surrounding their potential need for long-term care and the costs associated with it. According to the Genworth Cost of Care Survey of 2015, seventy percent of Americans over the age of sixty-five will eventually need some type of long-term care. In addition, by the year 2040, twenty-two percent of the population will be over the age of sixty-five, which is a ten percent increase from the year 2000. Yet, this survey showed an increasing number of people over the age of forty refusing to believe they will ever need long-term care.

PLANNING FOR LONG-TERM CARE
The truth is that Medicare does not pay for ongoing long-term care (although it will pay for intermittent stays at nursing facilities). Medicaid is the largest payer of long-term care services. Medicaid is a federally and state funded needs-based benefit that will provide for various types of long-term care depending on the state's regulations. In 2013, Medicaid paid for fifty-one percent of the national long-term care bill totaling $310 billion. The actual costs for long-term care are staggering. The Genworth Survey reported that, nationwide, the average bill for a nursing home is approximately $80,300 and for home health care, approximately $44,616 with a variety of options among and in between these levels of care. Although not a popular topic among Americans over the age of forty, long-term care is an increasingly important one.

We are in the business of providing options for people in planning for their potential long-term care needs. If you, a loved one or a client needs help figuring out their options, please call BORNER, SMITH, ALEMAN, HERZOG and CERRONE LLC at 155 Providence Street, Putnam. ## Putnam Head Start has monthly meeting

NEWS STAFF WRITER

PUTNAM — Putnam Head Start held their monthly parent meeting/event on Wednesday, Jan. 24, which featured three speakers discussing finance and budgeting.

The monthly meetings are meant to not only educate families participating in Head Start, but provide a time to socialize with other parents in the program. The meetings range from various topics such as math and science, parenting, healthy eating, financial literacy and more. The topics are picked based on suggestions from families.

"Head Start believes in educating the families on everything," said Family Services Coordinator for Head Start & Early Head Start Ashlyn Ellsworth. "We provide child care and light refreshments. We want it to be a time for us to all get together and learn something new."

January's meeting was all about budgeting. The three speakers were not only local experts on the topic, but parents participating in the program.

Rachelle Alix from Putnam Bank spoke about monthly budgeting, and even gave out budget worksheets to help families stretch their money. Another Head Start parent, Kim Harris, talked about couponing, "something she enjoys doing that helps her family save money," said Family Advocate Michelle Giard. The third speaker is Christine Gaumont from Vita, a free income tax preparation service for low income families in the area.

"We're just hoping they can use this information to help with their monthly budgeting and expenses, and filing income taxes," said Giard.

Families can participate in the income tax preparation program by signing up at the 211 information line.

"This information empowers them with resources they will need beyond the times that they're with us," said Early Head Start Home Visitor Louise Brodeur. "It gives them the tools."

Added Ellsworth: "This is something that costs, but we're giving them resources on where they can find it for free. Rather than spending their limited resources."

The Head Start monthly meetings also allows families in the program to bond.

"It's a good chance for parents to get together and meet one another and interact," said Giard, "while their children play together."

Ellsworth recalls families that ended up carpooling once they met each other at the meetings.

"It's about socializing," she concluded. "They bond with other families. They know that they're not the only ones going through certain situations."

Fiddling around in the Quiet Corner

BY OLIVIA RICHMAN
NEWS STAFF WRITER

EASTFORD — Around 20 people were gathered in Amanda Manso's Eastford home last week to play the fiddle together. And the Quiet Corner Fiddlers are looking for other passionate musicians and curious beginners to join them every Tuesday night, from 7 to 9 p.m.

Each week they meet at a different member's home. And last week, Manso was the host.

"It was just wonderful," she said of the experience. "Someone had said to me, 'Where else can you get together every week and just make new friends?' Everyone is happy to come together. There's the bantering, the jokes... It's so much fun every week."

And there's fiddling of course. Manso was one of the initial members of the Quiet Corner Fiddlers, which formed 11 years ago.

One of the founders, Chuck Morgan, was giving fiddling lessons at EastConn, and Manso participated in the six week course. She had already played the violin all throughout her childhood, and was excited about getting back into playing music.

"I loved playing the fiddle," she said. "But I loved the comradery even more. There were probably 10 other people there. And after six weeks, we all wanted to keep playing together."

Two months later, Morgan contacted everyone in the class via email and asked if they'd be interested in meeting once a month at his home to continue fiddling together.

It started with five core members. But word got around, and now there are over 25 fiddlers in the group. Last year, the Quiet Corner Fiddlers performed at a packed house in Willimantic for their 10 year anniversary.

"I love playing the fiddle," said Manso. "It's much more relaxed and laid back, unlike your standard orchestral type of violin playing. And all of the fiddle tunes — especially the ones from 200 years ago — have stories behind them. I love that."

And while she loves the instrument, Manso is adamant that there's nothing better than playing with others. It's encouraging. And fun. There's socializing and refreshments. There's just a sense of togetherness.

"Playing the fiddle is another way to express myself," she said. "And it's just another whole facet of my life now. I love calling myself a fiddler. I've started going to music festivals and I volunteer to work the weekend. There are jams, impromptu jams. You pull up a chair, take out your instrument, and play. It's just amazing the friendships that develop. I go to these festivals every year and I get to know everybody. I've branched out into that."

As a teacher assistant at Head Start, Manso also loves incorporating music into the classroom. She feels music is an awesome way for children to learn.

Anyone interested in joining the Quiet Corner Fiddlers can contact Chuck Morgan at (860) 423-5403.

Rich history at Thompson Historical Society

Passionate about Thompson's rich history, Ron Tillen has written several books about the town's unique buildings and organizations.

BY OLIVIA RICHMAN
NEWS STAFF WRITER

THOMPSON — Earlier this month, Thompson resident and Historical Society member Ron Tillen presented his book "Thompson Public Library" to library patrons, discussing the history of the town.

"I'd like to see the town's history saved and preserved," said Tillen. "If you lose your connection with the past, you forget the lessons of the past. As they say, 'Those who don't know their history are doomed to repeat it.' This information relates to a lot of people that live around here. They need to have some appreciation for what it was people did to make such a nice place to live."

Tillen wrote the book in 2002, which was exactly 100 years after the building was opened up on the hill.

"It seemed an appropriate thing to write about, and a chance to discuss some milestones along the way," he said. "I think it was a very worthwhile thing to do. And it was kind of fun to do as well."

When the Historical Society took over ownership of the old library building last year they renamed it the Ellen Larned Museum. Larned was the inspiration, of course. Born in 1825 to a good family from around this region, she formed a little private book club in 1882. By 1898, said Tillen, she held a meeting asking if anyone had an interest in forming a public library. Over 50 people showed up. She already had enough books for a library. But now they needed funding.

The building was purchased by primarily four people. There was Lisah Converse and Joseph Gay. Then there was John Doan and Norma Rene, both "multi multi millionaire families who owned big houses up here on the hill."

In 1902, the building was created with Spanish tile roof and stone walls. Tillen became interested in the library once he was retired.

"My wife was concerned that I would be bored," he joked. "Since I'd been working 60 hour weeks. The first thing I did was write the history of the fire engine company, because the town had minutes going way back."

Formed in 1832, the fire engine company had an involvement in the creation of the library. So naturally, Tillen began researching the library's history soon after.

Originally from England, Tillen viewed Thompson as a "small village left behind by time, by the modern world." He felt it was a peaceful place that still had the charm of a town common and old houses, and other historic buildings. It was apparent to a once outsider like Tillen that Thompson had a rich history.

"There's something about this place that speaks to you," he said. "You can understand that it's just so historical. And it does go back to the early colonial times."

One thing that surprised Tillen about the library's history was how fast it had grown. What started as a small donation from the fire engine company, turned into a revered public library inspired by Larned's love of books.

"There's a quote from James Russel Lowell," said Tillen. "The opening of a free public library is the most important event in the history of the town." It is interesting that even the very first settlers that came to this region, even as long ago as early 18th century, had a library club. There's always been a thirst for knowledge — and entertainment."

What drew Tillen to collecting all of this rich history is his personality, he confessed. "I'm afraid I'm obsessive," he laughed, noting that his career spent in technology gave him a desire to always know more about everything.

Currently, the old library building needs a new roof.

"It would be wonderful to have it redone with Spanish tiles, so it no longer leaks," he said. "We need another roof that will last for another 100 years. Once upon a time in 1902, residents thought enough about the town and about the need for a library to put the money together to put that building up on the hill."

Killingly grapplers seek Class M state crown

BY CHARLIE LENTZ
VILLAGER EDITOR

DANIELSON — Who better to ask than Rafael Calixto about Killingly High’s chances to win the Class M state wrestling crown this season? After all, coach Calixto’s Ellis Tech matmen captured the Class M state title last year — and Calixto got a first-hand look at Killingly in the final match of a quad meet at Ellis Tech last Saturday.

“They’re a solid team this year,” Calixto said. “We knew they were going to be tough this year. I think they’re one of the top teams for the Class M tournament, absolutely. They’re solid. They’re above average in just about every weight class. We wrestle a tough schedule. We see a lot of tough teams. They’re probably one of the better teams we’ve seen from 108 (pounds) all the way to heavyweight. They’ve got somebody decent at every weight class.”

Killingly defeated Ellis Tech 50-15 last Saturday to lift its record to 25-1. The Redmen are perhaps the favorites to add another championship plaque to their trophy case. Killingly won the Class S state championship in both 2008 and 2009 and took home the 2003 Class M state crown. Coach Rich Bowen, in his 32nd season, has another strong lineup. Part of the success springs from a strong wrestling ethos in town which starts with the Killingly Youth Wrestling program.

“The youth has helped. I don’t know if we have great depth but we good numbers,” Bowen said. “But our kids from the youth are all wrestling here varsity with me now so they all have good experience, which is nice.”

Coach Calixto lost many talented Ellis Tech wrestlers to graduation last June, including New England champion JoJo Gonzalez. He knew the match against Killingly on Jan. 27 would be a tough one. Ellis Tech’s dual meet record was 15-9 through last weekend — and the Golden Eagles were one match away from 100 victories over the last four years after last Saturday’s competition. Calixto wrestled at Windham High School, followed by a career at American International College, and then he competed for the Puerto Rican National Team. His team won the state championship last season and he knows a good program when he sees one.

“Killingly does a great job. Their kids are all well-coached and they’re good wrestlers,” Calixto said. “We’re young. Our guys didn’t just lay down for them. We’re battling. They’re just better than us at this point.”

Bowen wasn’t quick to accept the status of favorite to win the state title. The Class M state meet is scheduled for Feb. 16-17 at Guilford High School. Guilford, along with Lyman Memorial, attended last Saturday’s quad meet at Ellis Tech.

Tigers playoff hopes precarious after loss to Bulldogs

THOMPSON — This one might haunt Tourtellotte Memorial's nine seniors. Tourtellotte snatched defeat from the jaws of victory last Friday night against Lyman Memorial and coach Neil Bernier hopes the 62-56 overtime loss won't shut the Tigers out of the Division V state tournament.

"It's getting desperate now," Bernier said. "We're running out of time. We're running out of time for these mistakes to be cured. It's not going to be easy. We pretty much have no margin of error."

Tourtellotte led Lyman by five points with under two minutes left in regulation before falling to the Bulldogs on Jan. 26 at Canty Gymnasium.

"Tonight, we were there, we were up 47 to 42, and we decided to leave guys open," Bernier said.

Lyman Memorial senior guard David Lopez torched the Tigers for 25 points. The loss dropped Tourtellotte Memorial's record to 5-8. With eight victories needed to guarantee a berth in the state tournament, Tourtellotte needed three wins over its final seven games to qualify. Two of those final seven games are against St. Bernard (an 88-39 loss on Jan 19) and Plainfield (a 69-22 loss on Jan. 24) and are likely foregone conclusions.

"We have seven games left but we St. Bernard and Plainfield at the end. Basically we have to win three of five," Bernier said.

Among the final seven opponents are Ellis Tech and Wheeler. Tourtellotte defeated Ellis Tech 65-39 in their first meeting on Dec. 27 and the Tigers downed Wheeler 67-43 in their first meeting on Jan. 9. Tourtellotte again plays Ellis Tech on Feb. 8 and Wheeler on Feb. 2 — if the Tigers defeat those two teams they still must gain one more victory to earn a tourney berth.

"Wheeler and Ellis Tech are the teams that we have to beat," Bernier said.

The Tigers almost pulled out the victory over Lyman Memorial. After surrendering a 47-42 lead late in regulation, Tourtellotte senior forward Ben Leveille canned a three-pointer with :21 remaining in regulation to tie it at 50-50. But the Bulldogs outscored Tourtellotte 12-6 in overtime.

"Ben (Leveille) made a huge three to bail us out and put it in overtime," Bernier said. "And then, unfortunately, we missed too many free throws, too many layups at the rim, and those are killers. At the end of the day we left too many points on the board by missing nine out of 19 free throws. I get lost on how many point-blank shots we missed."

Bernier lamented several lost opportunities this season that could have mitigated a need for a feverish finish in the quest for a tourney berth. The Tigers fell to Griswold 61-47 on Jan. 11 and lost 45-37 to Windham on Jan. 12. Bernier said both games were winnable.

"We've let a few opportunities go by the wayside — this one, Griswold, Windham. We've let three golden opportunities escape us. When they come up — if we miss one more — we're probably done," Bernier said.

Lopez led the Bulldogs with 25 points. Senior forward Mike Franchi added 13 points for Lyman. The win lifted Lyman Memorial's record to 5-6. Senior guard Simon Silvia led Tourtellotte with 19 points. Senior center Jackson Padula scored 14 points for the Tigers. Tourtellotte is next scheduled to play at Wheeler on Friday, Feb. 2. Time is running out for nine seniors.

"We have our work cut out for us. We have a team loaded with seniors. It's good to sit here and say you want it more than the other team but you have to play smart too," Bernier said. "That's the pressure we've put ourselves in."

Woodstock icers finding their identity

POMFRET — After the Zamboni spreads a layer of water it takes some time before the rink freezes — a young hockey takes a while to solidify as well. Woodstock Academy's identity is slowly crystalizing as the season nears the half-way mark and the Centaurs were solid in a 3-2 victory over Suffield/Granby/Windsor Locks last Saturday at Pomfret School's Jahn Rink.

"This proved right here that we can really play with anybody," said Woodstock coach Mike Starr. "It's a good confidence boost moving ahead."

Starr said SGWL could have melted a lesser team's composure.

"That was a solid 45 minutes of hockey," Starr said. "(SGWL) is a D-I school. It's well-coached. They're fast. The message going in was 'They're fast. They're going to be physical. So we need to match it.' And the kids did. They played fantastic."

Junior winger Matt Odom scored two goals to help the Centaurs defeat SGWL. Sophomore forward Jake Starr scored one goal for Woodstock. Jake Black, Guerin Favreau, and Ethan Thorpe each notched one assist for the Centaurs. Junior goaltender Dylan Shea made 20 saves for Woodstock. The win over the Wildcats lifted the Centaurs record to 4-6 — Odom has lifted his game as well.

"Odom is really starting to relax a little bit. I think at the beginning of the year he was a little tense, trying to do a little bit too much," Starr said. "He's new to the team. I don't know if he was trying to prove himself but he's been relaxed the last three games. I think he's having fun with it now and it's good to see."

Odom tallied with 57 seconds left in the first period to give the Centaurs a 1-0 lead. The Wildcats answered early in the second period but Odom responded with his second goal with 34 seconds remaining in second frame to give Woodstock a 2-1 lead. Jake Starr pushed the lead to 3-1 with 12:31 left in the third period before the Wildcats tallied a late goal with 2:38 left in the match.

Coach Starr was pleased that the Centaurs never allowed SGWL to take the lead.

"We always ask the kids — whenever we're winning a game

— what's the score? And they always say zero-zero, because they know that's the way I want them to play," Starr said. "Play like we're tied zero to zero. Play like there's no score or play like we're losing the game. Play with a little more sense of urgency."

The Centaurs are coming together with a lineup filled with underclassmen.

"We only have one senior (Pat Delaney) right now that's playing a regular shift on forward. Mike Scott can fill in, he's another senior — so our forwards are basically a mix of juniors, sophomores and two freshmen," Starr said. "I really think the underclassmen — the sophomores and the freshmen — have really stepped up well this year. The juniors are acting like leaders on the ice and that's what we need. Even defensively, our defense is really starting to come around and play strong and smart. We're just trying to minimize our mistakes right now and we're doing a pretty good job."

Julian Cultrera and Tyler Gazdik each scored one goal for SGWL. Goalie Dan DeGagne made 21 saves for the Wildcats. The loss dropped SGWL's record to 5-7. Woodstock Academy is next scheduled to play at Watertown/Pomperaug on Saturday, Feb. 3. Woodstock Academy is scheduled to return home on Saturday, Feb. 10, when it will face the Redhawks, with the puck set to drop at 8:15 p.m. at Jahn Rink on the campus of Pomfret School. While the Zamboni keeps smoothing over the rink's rough edges — Starr hoped the Centaurs do the same.

"We've got some tough games coming up," Starr said. "If we play 45 minutes like we played tonight, if we can keep that up and we can pressure the other teams, I'll match our lines with anybody."

there. We had a couple teams here today that were tough that we were able to handle. We've got Foran next weekend, it's a real solid team down at the other end of the state," Bowen said. "Hopefully we're in the mix (for the state title), that's for sure. So we'll see what happens."

The Redmen will compete at the Foran Duals on Saturday, Feb. 3. Bowen doesn't duck tough competition.

"We just switched up to go down and see Foran, so that will be a nice battle for us," Bowen said. "They're right with us in the state. We've got to see them."

Killingly's 106-pounder, junior Danny Charron, was undefeated through last weekend. Senior Zach Caffrey, at 182 pounds, has only one loss this season.

"We've got a pretty solid squad throughout," Bowen said.

The State Open meet is scheduled for Feb. 23-24 at Floyd Little Athletic Center in New Haven, coming one week after the Class M state meet.

"The Opens are a whole different ballgame. First you've got to push through the M's and see who you get through first — then the matchups (at the Opens), you've got to just battle and take one at a time up there," Bowen said. "Hopefully you have a good day. If you're on, you're going to be good. If you're off any little bit, it's a tough tournament."

Bowen wrestled at Killingly High School back in the day and he went on to compete at Rhode Island College. He's coached a lot of good wrestlers over his 32 years at Killingly so he doesn't take this year's team for granted. The veteran coach looked forward to the challenge of trying to pin down another state title.

"It's like you don't know when they're coming and you try to keep them together. It's a long season so you hope you don't get nicked up with injuries, and other things happen, you keep them up with grades," Bowen said. "So it's a long season. Hopefully we can keep it together here the next couple weeks and make a real run. That's our hope."

Tourtellotte girls look forward to state tourney

VILLAGER EDITOR

THOMPSON — After a two-year absence Tourtellotte Memorial has reached the Class S state tournament and the reward will last beyond the first round of the playoffs in late February. The tourney berth is also a motivating force for the underclassmen.

"It's been two years since we've been in the state tournament," said coach Carla Faucher, in her 20th season. "My seniors were in it as freshmen and we haven't been back since then and it's always been one of our goals to make the state tournament."

Faucher's seniors — Katey Kwasniewski, Skyla Wesoloski, and Becky Torres — were in the program the last time the Tigers earned a spot in the state tourney. Now Faucher's underclassmen can see the benefit of hard work.

"Don't pick up a basketball in November and think you're going to be successful right off the bat. We play in the summer league in Putnam. I encourage all of the kids to play in that. It gets them playing together. And I tell them that we're not there to assess you or what have you. This is a time where you can try things, experiment with certain moves, get comfortable with your shots. Get comfortable with playing inside or outside, depending upon your position," Faucher said. "And that gives them team building over the summer and understanding how each other plays."

Sometimes all the work in practice and the off-season doesn't pay off. That was the case the past two seasons, when the Tigers fell one victory shy of making the post-season two years ago and came up two wins short last season. After a slow start this season Faucher wasn't so sure her team would reach its tourney goal. The Tigers' record was 2-4 over its first six games, senior guard Katey Kwasniewski missed the Clipper Classic with a sprained ankle and junior forward Lauren Ramos was on the shelf in the early part of the schedule while rehabbing a knee injury suffered during the soccer season last autumn.

"The season kind of looked bleak," Faucher said. "We had injuries but weren't playing up to our potential."

The turning point came on Jan. 16 when the Tigers played host to Putnam High. Tourtellotte entered the game with a 5-7 record but eked out a 35-33 victory. The Tigers followed that victory with wins over St. Bernard and Griswold to gain the required eight victories needed to earn a berth in the state tourney.

"All of a sudden from the Putnam game forward we started really gelling," Faucher said. "They're really beginning to believe in the themselves."

The tourney berth helped confirm Faucher's belief in her team and their belief in themselves.

"It gives them something to say 'Hey, we made the state tournament.' Their season extends further," Faucher said. "It's something they can say they've accomplished as a team."

And the accomplishment makes it easier for Faucher to help her team navigate a tough schedule in the Eastern Connecticut Conference.

"It shows that our program can be a strong program. We play in a difficult division in the ECC so we always have to work hard to get those eight wins," Faucher said. "Every win that we get you can see that they start believing in themselves and their abilities."

That belief helped the Tigers put together a four-game winning streak midway through the season with wins over Gilbert, Putnam, St. Bernard, and Griswold.

"All of sudden, once we got those wins, they played together as a team and they really came together," Faucher said.

Winning has a way of making practices more bearable.

"They understand we're not pushing them in practice. We're not pushing them in games. They understand the reason why. I think if you're constantly losing and you're constantly pushing them, they don't understand, it's not working," Faucher said. "When you win, now they can believe in why we do what we do and reap the benefits."

Tourtellotte is next scheduled to play host to Wheeler on Friday, Feb. 2, with tipoff set for 6 p.m. at Cnty Gymnasium. The Tigers conclude their regular season at home against Windham on Tuesday, Feb. 6. First-round games in the Class S state tournament are scheduled to begin on Feb. 27 — Tourtellotte will be there.

"That's what we work for. Everything's getting towards the next goal, that's always been the state tournament," Faucher said. "Play together. Play hard. Play smart. And we'll win as a team."

Putnam boys still hunting for tournament berth

BY CHARLIE LENTZ
VILLAGER EDITOR

PUTNAM — Coach Shawn Deary likely expected his Putnam High team to have wrapped up a berth in the Division V state tournament by now. But the Clippers have stumbled in a few close games and senior guard Connor Holloman has been hobbled by some injuries this season, including a strained hamstring that kept him out of Putnam's 61-53 loss to Cheney Tech on Monday at Putnam High School — a nine-point deficit after one quarter didn't help.

"We started getting down on ourselves to the point where we weren't finishing," Deary said. "I'm hoping we can figure out what it was and get through it."

The Clippers record stood at 6-6 after the loss to the Beavers on Jan. 29 and Deary is still seeking the eight victories needed to guarantee a berth in the state tournament.

"Eight's going to be the goal. I'm still shooting for 10 or 11 (wins)," Deary said. "So we're going to have to pick up one or two that weren't on my checklist."

The Clippers fell behind Cheney Tech 11-2 after one quarter and although they made several nice runs — getting within five points late in the fourth quarter — they could not hit enough buckets to pull out the comeback. Deary said they need to connect on those shots down the stretch in order to make the playoffs.

"We definitely need to really focus on putting the ball in the hole a little bit better, rebounding a little bit better, with those two things done — we'll win games," Deary said.

The Clippers failed to clear the boards against Cheney Tech, allowing too many second-chance points.

"We have position. We have the habit of jumping up with them instead of boxing out, waiting for the ball to come down to us," Deary said. "We've been working on it, and working on it, but it's a tough one."

Putnam pulled within seven points, 33-26, on a three-pointer by freshman guard Colby Livingston with 5:10 left in the third quarter. And the Clippers cut their deficit to 55-50 on a putback by junior center Tyion Harris with 1:02 left in the game — but couldn't pull off the comeback.

"Coming down the stretch after missing, I don't even know how many easy shots, we were still in the game," Deary said. "We did things right but we just didn't finish around the rim."

Harris led Putnam with 19 points and has been a bright spot for the Clippers as the season has progressed, rapidly improving his game.

"They're definitely working on the things they need to work on," Deary said. "You pick a couple of things and you work on them. Being kids, they forget the things that they know — the little things they did well they all of a sudden don't do again. So it's continuously reminding them what they need to do."

Deary hoped Holloman's sore hamstring heals quickly.

"Connor being out hurts us a little bit so hopefully he'll be back," Deary said. "Hopefully by the end of the week he'll be back but we'll see."

Junior guard Sebastian Ramos added 12 points for Putnam. Jake Montas led Cheney Tech with 21 points. The win lifted the Division III Beavers record to 8-7.

Putnam is next scheduled to travel to Parish Hill on Friday, Feb. 2, with tipoff set for 7 p.m. The Pirates were 8-5 through 13 games. Coach Deary likely expected to have wrapped up a tourney berth with eight games left in the season — but better late than never.

"We've really got to focus," Deary said. "We're going to push on. Everybody's beatable."

Akana named Tri-Town American Legion coach

Jason Akana

PUTNAM — Jason Akana, a former Tri-Town American Legion baseball standout, was named recently to take over the coaching reins of the Tri-Town American Legion senior division baseball program. Tri-Town represents American Legion Post 13 in Putnam, Post 67 in Grosvenordale, and Post 111 in Woodstock.

"We feel we've been fortunate to find the right person to take over our program. Jason Akana is a quality person with great baseball knowledge and a love of the game. It's the committee's feeling that he is able to impart the values of American Legion baseball on and off the field to the young men in his charge," said Ronald P. Coderre, Tri-Town executive committee chairman.

Coderre said the 45-year-old Akana may be small in stature, scaling in at five foot eight inches, but when it comes to baseball knowledge he's a giant. As a player in high school and college, he's always had to battle for the right to prove himself. Despite his size Akana has succeeded and surpassed expectation at all levels.

Akana not only brings a solid playing resumes to his new position, he's also enjoyed success as a coach along the way. He's served as a coach for many years in the Thompson Little League and organized coaching clinics in Thompson. He's also served as the Tri-Town assistant coach for the past two seasons.

A 1991 graduate of Tourtellotte Memorial High School, he played three years of varsity baseball as a middle infielder for coach Tom Auclair. He also enjoyed three summers on the diamond as a player for Auclair with the Tri-Town American Legion program.

"Playing for coach Auclair provided me with the solid fundamentals of the game. Many of the techniques and basics of the game that I espouse and teach were gained during my high school and Legion years," said Akana. "My goal is to transfer the knowledge I have of the game to my players. I want to instill a winning attitude on and off the field in these young men. I'm hoping to improve on our wins and losses but most of all I want them to learn and master the nuances of the game."

As a baseball fundamentalist, Akana expects his players give 110 percent effort. A taskmaster for the little details that make the difference, his philosophy is work hard, practice hard and the wins will come. This is a philosophy he learned playing for his earliest coach, his dad, Michael Akana.

In addition to Coach Auclair, Akana played briefly at Eastern Connecticut State University for Coach Bill Holowaty and one year at Manchester Community College, where the team went to the National Junior College World Series before bowing out in the championship game.

Akana enjoyed his greatest success on the collegiate level at Worcester State University where he played for Coach Dirk Baker. In three seasons with the Lancers he achieved significant success, eventually emerging as the leading Div. III hitter in the nation with a .514 batting average, which was also tops in the country on all NCAA levels. He also enjoyed a brief stint in professional baseball with the Meridian Brakemen in the Big South Independent League in Mississippi.

"In all my years in baseball I've learned you have to respect your opponent. In so doing you push yourself to do better in all aspect of the game. I hope to infuse this respect in the Tri-Town program," said Akana.

Akana inherits a good group of returning players from his predecessor John Foucault. The Towners are returning the majority of last season's team and a good crop of players ready to make the jump from the junior to the senior level.

Akana and his wife of 20 years, Christie, reside in Thompson. The couple have three children, Kobe, 17, a senior in high school, Brayden, 14, an 8th grader and 10 year old Grace. Akana's employed as a health and safety engineer in the bio-tech industry in Worcester, Mass.

Cecile "Sis" (Boucher) Kallio, 67

ATTAWAUGAN -- Cecile "Sis" (Boucher) Kallio, 67, passed away peacefully surrounded by her loving family on January 2, after a courageous battle with cancer. Sis was born in Putnam, on September 6, 1950. She was the daughter to the late Norman and Theresa (Blain) Boucher. She leaves behind her loving husband of 48 years, John Kallio Sr.

In her earlier years, Sis was a member of the 4H Club, adored horse back riding, and played the accordion. On September 20, 1969, Sis married her high school (Killingly High School class of '68) sweet heart and soul mate, John. They briefly lived in Hawaii while John, a US Navy veteran, was stationed in Pearl Harbor. Sis and John returned to the Kallio family farm in Connecticut and raised two sons and a daughter.

Sis was a hard-working seamstress with a strong work ethic. She retired from Symbol Mattress Company in Dayville in 2012. For over 30 years, she often could be found with her husband volunteering during the many Game Suppers and functions at the Thompson Rod and Gun Club. They enjoyed hosting family and holiday gatherings and picnics at their home and at their former summer cottage on Quaddick Lake.

In the quieter moments at home, Sis enjoyed a good book, word search and crossword puzzles, and watching Wheel of Fortune and Jeopardy. She had an amazing green thumb and her variety of house plants thrived under her tender care. In the spring and summer, Sis and John planted vegetable, herb and flower gardens. In her retirement, she loved playing Bingo, Michigan Rummy and venturing out with her aunts. Warm days were spent outside, under the shade of a tree, with her husband and dogs, Willow and Sasha (Rocky and Pee Wee).

What Sis loved most of all was her family. Her love was immense and unconditional.

In return, her family adored her and loved her fiercely.

Sis is survived by her husband John Kallio Sr.; her son Johnny Kallio Jr., and his fiancée Christie Spetrini; daughter Lisa Bernier and husband David; son Eric Kallio and girlfriend Christina Brodeur; her grandchildren Brittany Lawrence and husband Scott, Maxwell and Jonah Kallio, and Jake Bernier. Sis also leaves behind her brother Kevin Boucher and significant other Lori Neirodzinski; sister Patty Kozlowski and husband David; nephews Matthew and Mark Kozlowski; aunts Jean Morris and Cecile Blain; sister-in-law Laila Paige, niece Audrey Murphy and husband Mickey; and many great-nieces and great-nephews, cousins and two foster great-granddaughters she considered her own.
