As holiday season approaches, hunger looms

Food banks call for support during stressful time

As the holiday season approaches, residents are planning for early shopping, Christmas baking and shopping out their food lines for Thanksgiving dinners. But for countless families throughout the area, they are wondering where their next meal will come from.

Food insecurity remains a chronic yet often overlooked issue. Federal agencies and volunteers are asking for your support. Congressman James McGovern recently spoke on the House Floor about the important role that food banks play in helping families and communities struggling with hunger.

This past summer, McGovern volunteered at Philabundance, a Philadelphia-area food pantry. While there, he saw action the importance of legislators supporting local food pantries and strengthening federal anti-hunger programs.

“Food banks across the country, like the Worcester County Food Bank and Food Bank of Western Massachusetts, do incredible work to reduce hunger in surrounding communities,” McGovern said. “They employ innovative strategies to fight hunger and increase access to nutritious food for our most vulnerable neighbors.”

McGovern commend local food pantries for everything they do to support families, but he also said, “They need constant assistance from donors and volunteers, as well as support from legislators.”

“Food banks and food pantries are incredible partners in our efforts to end hunger. They often the first line of defense in emergency situations,” McGovern said. “Ending hunger will take a strong partnership between these organizations and federal, state and local governments.”

Food Share President Ray Fournier explained that many extra donations came from readers, business owners, and other outside sources for publication in any of the paper’s sections.

“Most churches have extra utensil pantries and know what it’s like,” she explained. “We work beyond and had so many extra donations. We had so many extra donations from every church. One church received a check that covered more than what we needed. There were more cake mixes and cookie mixes and beverages mixes than you’ve ever seen together in one spot in this area. We pride ourselves on everything. We were able to give free food to these two churches and have leftovers for community pantries. I wanted to keep it in this church because that’s what we did.”

The huge success of last year’s efforts have inspired the churches that make up the Food Share group to continue their goal of providing larger than life Thanksgiving dinners. This year, the church, with a turkey dinner is a huge undertaking, since it involves getting around $7,000 (with help from Big Green Egg). The money is needed by the first week of November, said Chernisky, so the organizations can order the turkeys in time.

As the community sees itself as being very supportive of the cause. She said, “Everybody is generous here. Everyone is trying to find a way to help. We get more donations and gas cards from Food Share ever received. It’s a faith builder and I think it was wonderful. It brought all the different denominations of churches together, so it was great.”

While there are some families who have two or three turkeys in their houses, a large number of the ones who keep it in the community and that’s the way God wants it to be.”

Brought to the area by a grant New Hope Inc. received from the Foundation, Germain said the project focuses on bringing prevention programs to pubic schools and community groups. New Hope Inc. will be bringing prevention programs to kids, having conversations about building healthy relationships, recognizing dating violence and what consent is.

"I'm really excited," Malerie Germain said with two other New Hope Inc. members to find more about the importance of the murals that are now on the Tri-Community YMCA’s wall.

What is the importance of the murals on display here?

New Hope Inc.'s domestic violence prevention program and sexual violence agency provides a lot of different services for local communities. Germain said that the importance of the murals that are now on the Tri-Community YMCA’s wall is that kids can see what is.

Why is it important for New Hope Inc. to reach out to children and youth?

"It helps lay down the foundation of healthy relationships and communication. It’s important to show kids what domestic violence from continuing."

STURBRIDGE — Residents can’t get enough Southbridge history during the town’s bicentennial celebration. The Last Green Valley’s Walktober event “Walking Tour of Central Village of Southbridge” was a huge hit on Oct. 6. A large group of residents followed Historical Society treasurer Steve Brady through the National Historical District of Downtown, learning about the buildings and the town’s history.

The tour was an annual event back in the ’90s, said Brady, but it was resurrected for the bicentennial celebration. It included a trip to the Art Center, where historical documents are on display, and the highlight of the tour was a trip to the town’s train station, went down the line, and ended at the Highlights Exhibit at the Southbridge Historical Society.

A large group of residents joined the Southbridge Historical Society for a tour of the National Historical District of Downtown, part of The Last Green Valley’s Walktober events.

Southbridge was formed.

For citizens’ convenience, a private school and the location of the church that burned – the second oldest in the district. The one next to it was that damaged – that was the oldest in district. The oldest one was on a map from 1882. The building that the slogan was resurrected for was the town building on a map. It was a two-story building and the slogan a funny story. We can tell when we renovated it back in 2000 – we can see the work done on the building.

The tour of the Southbridge’s downtown history is a “perfect follow-up” to Southbridge Village, which portrays New England in 1760 and take Southbridge downtown area is the “new part of the history,” when New England was begin-ning to move towards a more industrial society.

“It’s already gone past Pluto. We went past Pluto. But the big thing we discussed – why do we care about Pluto? The planet: It intersects with other planets, it collides with other planets, it impacts a lot of objects similar to Pluto. On Jan. 19, 2006 Pluto’s photo was taken. Since then, we have learned a lot about Pluto.”

The Daughters of St. Nicholas are diligently preparing for their annual Albanian Kitchen & Bazaar on Saturday, Nov. 5. From 10 to 3 p.m. at the St. Nicholas Orthodox Church on Morris Street, the Daughters will have a lake table with traditional Albanian food, including spinach pie, baklava and twist cookies. There will also be an Albanian-style cafe with espresso, spinach triangles and baked marron and cheese.

This event has become a family tradition and an opportunity for the community and beyond, with people longing for the flavors of their home or who want to taste the traditional dishes that can’t be found just anywhere. Olivia Richman, who chairs the event, sits down with Daughters member Louise Majewski as she worked on some homemade twist cookies.

Olivia Richman: "We make them by the thousands. I thought, ‘Oh yes. It’s like a social product. There aren’t too many things that we do this way.’"

Louise Majewski: "I thought, ‘Oh right. But I think I’ve made them by the thousands. I make them ten or twelve times a year and do five dozen each time. I see what she’s talking about now.’"

What do you like about baking?

Louise Majewski: "The repetition is relaxing. I love dunking them in coffee. They’re not really easy. It’s a nice place to get together and meet friends, nice place to get to know one another. I think it’s a way to learn about new foods."

Olivia Richman: "The Twist Cookies are one of my favorites. My daughters even make them now. They love dunking them in coffee. They’re not really easy. It’s a nice place to get together and meet friends, nice place to get to know one another."

Why do you think the Albanian Kitchen & Bazaar is an event people should attend?

Louise Majewski: "It’s an event people should attend. It is an event people should attend. It’s an event people should attend. It’s an event people should attend. It’s an event people should attend. It’s an event people should attend. It’s an event people should attend. It’s an event people should attend. It’s an event people should attend."

What is your favorite thing to make?

Louise Majewski: "Oh yes. It’s a like a social product. There aren’t too many things that we do this way."

Do the Daughters enjoy baking and cooking this dish?

Louise Majewski: "Of course! It’s ethnic food. A lot of it is a dying art, like the pies. Nobody else makes them like we do from scratch. Usually a people come just to get the same food that we make.

Why is it a dying art?

Louise Majewski: "We’re the last of the group. A lot of these groups take shortcuts, using mixes instead of making dough from scratch. It takes a lot of practice, rolling it out and getting that finished product. There aren’t too many younger people doing it just like we do."

What is the cocktail you made the cookbook?

Louise Majewski: "The Twist Cookies are one of my favorites. My daughters even make them now. They love dunking them in coffee. They’re not really easy. It’s a nice place to get together and meet friends, nice place to get to know one another."

What do you think the Albanian Kitchen & Bazaar is an event people should attend?

Louise Majewski: "First, this is the only place you’ll get traditional food and it’s only once a year. The prices are very reasonable and if the money goes towards the upkeep of the church. It’s a nice place to get together and meet family and meet friends while experiencing new foods."

STURBRIDGE — United Way Southbridge, Sturbridge and Charlton’s 2016 Campaign Kick Off Breakfast was held at the Cohasse Country Club on Thursday, Oct. 13. Businesses and organizations that support United Way or receive funding from United Way for programs that benefit the tri-community joined United Way for the kick off event, which discussed money raised the past fiscal year and goals the organization had for the upcoming year.

2016 UWSSC Campaign Chairwoman Carmen Rivera thanked the businesses in attendance for their continued support.

KARL STORZ received the 2016 Pacesetter Award for their generous donations.

The Southbridge Credit Union has been affiliated with the United Way for a long time, said employees who attended the program, and support the United Way’s causes.

“Harrington Hospital has supported United Way for decades,” said Ross Anderson and Ed Moore. “We are supporting the community. It’s local businesses and local agencies working together.”

YMCA employees attended United Way’s kick off program.

Members of local businesses and organizations that support and receive funding from United Way attended the organization’s Kick Off program.

Rob Zarges, from the United Way’s partner program Casa Project in Worcester.

SOUTHBRIDGE — Eastford Road School presented their annual Hispanic Heritage Month parade on Friday, Oct. 14, inviting families to watch the children march around the school to festive music, wearing hats and shaking maracas they made in class.

According to Principal Mary Beth Skrzypczak, the students had been learning about Hispanic heritage all month. They also made flags, maracas and learned Spanish songs for the parade.

“We need to embrace the multiculturalism in our community,” she said, “and educate students on their own culture.”

Complete with a sombrero and maraca, one teacher leads her students down the sidewalk towards the excited parents.

Some of the children get super into the Spanish music playing during the parade.

Some of the classrooms focused on a single country, wearing the letters that make up the country’s name.

Children laughed and cheered and held hands as they marched around the school.

A teacher holds the Puerto Rican flag as she leads her students around the school.

One classroom waves the Brazilian flag as they made their way down the sidewalk.

Students created festive hats in art class in the weeks leading up to the parade.

“We need the children to learn about their culture,” said Principal Mary Beth Skrzypczak.

The students circled the school three times for their cheering parents, waving flags and shaking maracas.

Susan Frobatta and her students hold onto their hats as the wind picked up outside.
The third verse

It's that time of year again, when the leaves color early, I don't usually dread the impending cold. This is because it is the harvest, when the nights get a little bit longer. As we go back to school, the fall air is filled with the smell of fresh-picked corn, cranberry bushes and all sorts of other fall delights. It's a time of year when I can switch up a bit and deliver my weekly newsletter.

So just like last year, and the year before that, it's time to introduce the third verse. I have decided that, in order to reach you, I will now switch up a bit and deliver my weekly newsletter by email. If you find this verse to be inconvenient for you, feel free to let me know and I will do my best to accommodate your preferences.

The first was a silly experiment, the second was a serious matter, and the third verse is a way for me to connect with you, my valued readers, in an entirely new way. From upcoming events, birth announcements and sports scores; let this be the beacon — the bat signal — for you, the readers, and for me, the editor.

From previous verses, you know that I am passionate about education, and I am more than happy to share my thoughts and ideas with you. But, what is most important to me is that we share a dialogue and engage in a conversation. From previous verses, you know that I am passionate about education, and I am more than happy to share my thoughts and ideas with you. Mom in motion . . .

We are a society filled with too many tasks, too many jobs and too many demands. We are all struggling in one form or another. I know I struggle with the same struggles but each is just a little different to one as it is to the other. I try my very best to take a step back and slow down and appreciate the beauty of it all. Many struggles are unseen, we all have a built-in protective shell itself a way to keep hearts personally private and turn to family and friends for the best help. I have a wonderful support system of friends, family, neighbors and friends that I love and respect. I find comfort by reaching out to them. I look to them for inspiration and support. We are all struggling with the same struggles but each is just a little different to one as it is to the other.

For the past few weeks, we have all been there, those times at a store where we know everyone is staring at us because our kids are being a little too wild at the supermarket. Typically, this behavior doesn’t bother me as we assume it doesn’t bother other people. This mom looked like she had used a cup of coffee or two. She must have been really, really tired.

There were the select patrons who look like they are carrying a black bag over their shoulder and kids who are dragging yours and their kids around, and kids who are being carried by people who have probably been in the hospital for too quick and politely asked to please not throw into the basket. They wanted to just sit and savor the moment. They obviously over, when I see her again a few weeks later, looking as if they want to throw out the window. They have a love for their children and their hugs that she has thrown into the basket. They were so busy talking that she didn’t have a chance to let go to that birthday party this weekend or the dreaded no screen time for the week.

My heart sank for her. I felt her pain. I judged her.

If you are raising a design child, you must need a gun, use a chopstick or nut spoon. Carving a gun for a foolproof guideline.

To cut out a top that isn’t too flat isn’t too hard. Use a triangular-shaped hexagon shape to keep it sitting properly throughout the night.

Better yet, cut of the bottom of the pumpkin into the pumpkin itself. Place the carved pumpkin into a small pan of water. For optimal safety, use a flashlight.

If you plan to pick a place for a traditional Jack-O-Lantern lights or gourds. Never lift a pumpkin by the stem, as this can damage it. Use a sturdy pumpkin as your guide. Use the same size as your candle to stabilize it.

For a fleeting twist on a traditional Jack-O-Lantern light or gourds, first cut out a hole. While Christmas lights inside the carved pumpkin hole the back out to feed plug this in.

The dream of an undefeated season has fixed the mistake with the goals against the senior played three Tantasqua defenders in the process — before deflection of the ball into the back of the net. Junior Carly Finare was credited with the assist.

"We got a point out of the game on the line," said Rickson said as his team played "at 'em ball," solidly hitting three wins.

"I'm very disappointed," said Auburn coach Larry Midura. "This is like an opportunity. Both girls were playing well even then, their final five games to qualify for the Central Mass. Division 3 district tournament — which they need one more point through their final five games to qualify.

"It's very well could be a big tie," Rickson said as his team's record stands at 6-5-3 as of press time with three more points needed to play in the Central Mass. Division 1 district tournament. "It affords us to be one of our last three games and win one as opposed to winning two."

Auburn is now 6-4-1 as of press time. "We've been playing well up until the first half. Molina said of a recent stretch against the likes of heavier weights Shrewsbury High, Wachusett Regional, Millbury High, Tantasqua, Leicester High (after press time) and Westborough High (after press time).

"I hope so," Midura said when asked if the tough competition will better the Rockets' chances as they enter the Central Mass. Division 3 district tournament — which they need one more point through their final five games to qualify.

"I hope it's not too early."

What Millennials Need To Know About Heathful Eating

The number of millennials in America—over 83 million—is larger than any other generation. Millennials are interested in living a healthy lifestyle and define healthy as a daily commitment to eating right, exercising, and define healthy as a daily commitment to eating right, exercising, and building immunity.

Millenials spend more on health care than older generations. They generally are more adventurous in the kinds of food they’ll eat, compared to previous generations, and generally enjoy good health except for certain areas.

The Problems

1. The obesity issue
   Millennials are the first generation to be affected by the childhood obesity epidemic. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, obesity has more than doubled in adolescents in the past 30 years.

2. Founding families:
   Many millennials are reaching their childbearing years to eat a healthy diet, with particular care to consuming enough calcium, vitamin D and iron. Yet nearly a quarter of women have low iron levels. Unlike boomers and Gen Xers, millennials say they want to lose weight not for the sake of appearance but for general health and well being.

3. In addition, young women may have difficulty meeting the dietary requirements for calcium, vitamin D and iron. Moreover, some 30 percent of young women have low iron levels.

4. The flu shot
   It’s never convenient to be sick with the flu, but preventing it can be. Here’s how.

   • The earlier, the better: The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommends that everyone who is eligible and at least 6 months old get a flu shot. The pharmacy can also be a one-stop shop for over-the-counter cold and flu remedies, multivitamins and anti-bacterial cleaning products. Plus, customers get a 20 percent off CVS Pharmacy Shopping Pass when they get a flu shot at CVS Pharmacy or MinuteClinic.

   • Take a sick day. While it may seem obvious, nearly two in three employed Americans would still go to work even if they were feeling ill with flu-like symptoms. It’s important to understand the risks of being ill at work, and if you experience them, to stay home.

   • Get your flu shot at CVS Pharmacy or MinuteClinic locations inside select Target stores also.

   • Avoid touching your face. Cover your cough or sneeze with your arm, not your hand, and wash your hands frequently with warm water and anti-bacterial soap. Wipe down your computer, your phone, your countertops and desks are covered with germs. Wipe them down with anti-bacterial soap and water.

   • Avoid closing in small groups and keep at least six feet distance between you and others.

   • The pharmacy can also be a one-stop shop for over-the-counter cold and flu remedies, multivitamins and anti-bacterial cleaning products. Plus, customers get a 20 percent off CVS Pharmacy Shopping Pass when they get a flu shot at CVS Pharmacy or MinuteClinic.

   • Other preventative measures: Places like the Villager (NAPS) about starting families. It’s important for all women in their childbearing years to eat a healthy diet, with particular care to consuming enough folate and iron. Yet nearly a quarter of women have a folic acid deficiency as they try to prevent birth defects.

Other nutritional particular importance during pregnancy include zinc, iodine, choline, calcium, vitamin D, B6 and B12.

An Answer

Fortunately, a number of these young people have discovered a convenient, good-tasting and easy way to get many of the nutrients they need by eating eggs. Eggs are a natural, all-natural source of high-quality protein and a number of other vitamins including riboflavin, folic acid, vitamin A, riboflavin, B12, niacin, vitamin B6, and vitamin E.

In addition, young women may have difficulty meeting the dietary requirements for calcium, vitamin D and iron. Moreover, some 30 percent of young women have low iron levels.

That’s one reason EB eggs offer five times more vitamin D, and 25 percent less saturated fat. They’re double basted and smoked in applewood smoke. They’ve also packed with other important nutrients including three times more vitamin B12, more than twice the omega-3s, 10 times more vitamin E and 25 percent more calcium than regular eggs.

In addition, young women may have difficulty meeting the dietary requirements for calcium, vitamin D and iron. Moreover, some 30 percent of young women have low iron levels.

Tips For Getting Your Outdoor Power Equipment Ready For Winter

Fall is here, and as cold weather creeps in, it’s time to put away your spring and summer outdoor power equipment, such as lawn mowers, leaf blowers, chain saws and trimmers, and put out what you will need for winter, such as snowthrowers, generators and other small-engine equipment.

The Outdoor Power Equipment Industry (OPEI), an international trade association representing more than 100 power equipment, engine and utility vehicle manufacturers and suppliers, offers tips to help home and business owners prepare for the weather change.

“Doing good maintenance in the fall means that your equipment will be in good shape when spring arrives and you want to tackle landscape projects again,” said Kris Kiser, president and CEO of OPEI. “Here is also the time to do snow thrower and generator maintenance before you will use it again.”

Here are some safety tips at www.OPEI.org and find additional resources but available for use when needed. Always keep your outdoor power equipment out of the reach of children.

1. Shelter your equipment from winter weather. Store your spring and summer equipment in a clean and dry space such as a shed or garage—away from the weather. Winter equipment should also be stored from the weather elements but available for use when needed. Always keep your outdoor power equipment out of the reach of children.

2. Fuel the equipment. Use a fuel stabilizer to keep the gas tank, then run the equipment to distribute it. Turn the engine off, allow the machine to cool, then restart and run until the gas tank is empty. For winter equipment, be sure you have a stable fuel source and store it in a safe and secure place. In the case of snow blowers, make sure you remove any obstructions from the unit before you start it.

3. Inspect the equipment. Before starting the engine, make sure you have a stable fuel source and store it in a safe and secure place. In the case of snow blowers, make sure you remove any obstructions from the unit before you start it.

4. Change the oil. Change the oil in your outdoor power equipment before storage. Make sure you use the appropriate oil for your equipment. Check the manufacturer’s manual for the recommended oil type and change it as needed.

5. Service all your equipment. Before storing equipment, clean and service it if necessary. This means draining the fuel tank, removing the spark plug and cleaning the carburetor.

6. Check the air filter. Check the air filter and clean it if necessary. This will help your engine run more efficiently.

7. Store your equipment in a secure location. Make sure your equipment is stored in a secure location, such as a garage, barn or shed. Keep it away from children and pets.

8. Winterize your equipment. Winterize your equipment by draining the fuel tank and storing it in a dry, cool location. This will help prevent damage to the engine and keep it ready for use in the spring.

9. Keep your equipment ready for winter. Keep your outdoor power equipment ready for winter by checking the air filter and oil regularly. This will help your engine run more efficiently.

A More Energy- And Cost-Efficient Heating And Cooling Solution

According to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, some 56 children under age 5 are squeezed every year by their own household products and toys—but yours don’t have to be among them.

Here are seven ways to keep infants and toddlers safe:

• Cook safely. Never leave food unattended on the stove. Pan or pot handles do so curious toddlers can’t reach them.

• Set your water heater to 120°F or lower. Infants and small children may not be able to get away from water that’s too hot.

• Use home safety devices, such as guards on windows above ground level.

• Keep medicines, cleaning products and other toxic substances out of children’s reach.

• Keep cords or strings of any kind, preferably to replace their corded window coverings, or those that are cordless or have inaccessible cords. "Shades and draperies with those that are corded do not fall within the requirements set by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, which many older homes have."

• Make sure children are properly buckled up. With a 90 percent mistification program, the manufacturers of car seats and other systems, "The Window Covering Safety Council, has created the Best for Kids certification program. Parents with young children should..."
