Booklovers' Gourmet reopens in new home

Gus Steeves

Deb Horan shows off the new children's section, in the center of the new store's back room.

BY GUS STEEVES
CORRESPONDENT

WEBSTER – After 25 years in its rather cramped but friendly old home just down the street, Booklovers' Gourmet has new, more spacious and brightly-lit digs at 72 East Main St. Technically, Deb Horan and a caravan of friends moved everything at the end of March, but the pandemic closed things down for a while afterward. She's been open again for a few weeks. "It gave me more time and took a level of stress off. I could make sure I wasn't missing anything and set it up as I wanted to," she recalled of that time.

Regular customer Bob Crowther of Auburn visits daily and describes the store as "my mental health treat to myself." He and at least a dozen other people helped Horan pack and move countless boxes of books, postcards, jewelry and other objects; paint and organize the new space; lay flooring; provide bookshelves and do many of the other things needed to start in a new place. Horan and Crowther also give a lot of the credit to new landlord Ed Keegan, also a long-time store customer, for making things happen by coordinating work on the various utilities. "It's really good when your landlord wants you to succeed as much as you do," Horan said.

"She has so many supporters, and so many people volunteered their time at critical times," Crowther added.

Horan said she always wanted to run a bookstore that's more of a "cultural center" than just a store. While the old location had many of those features – art shows, music, book groups, politics, people just talking over coffee – she said she wants to add a few things to the new space. Among them are a small back room for private readings and similar activities, more space for live music and speakers, expansion of product lines to include more local crafts and jewelry, journals, candles and other items, and will eventually open a couple evenings a week. She also recently started her own

Nichols receives grant to prepare for remote learning

BY JASON BLEAU
CORRESPONDENT

DUDLEY – As Nichols College prepares for what promises to be a unique and challenging return to operation in the wake of the COVID-19 pandemic, the college has received some financial support to allow it to adjust to remote learning which is expected to be at least partially embraced this fall.

The school recently announced it has received a $25,000 Presidential Grant for Alternative Academic Delivery from the David Education Foundation which will be used to enhance training in the digital classroom. The college had already been utilizing an education model called HyFlex in its graduation programs allowing students to attend class either in person or remotely. This approach will now be utilized for undergraduates as well with the grant helping train educators in blending the two models.

Heather Richards, an academic instructional designer at Nichols College, designed the modules that will serve as the basis for the instruction. The training will first provide faculty

Dudley Charlton District lays out plan for fall

CORRESPONDENT

DUDLEY – After weeks of deliberation, several public meetings and much input the Dudley Charlton Regional School District has decided to embrace a hybrid learning plan for the new school year.

The School Committee voted in a 4-3 decision to support a reentry strategy for students on August 10 which proposes the first two weeks of learning be handled remotely before transitioning to a hybrid format that includes both n-class and online learning. The full plan was made available for parents and citizens on the school district's website following the vote. Remote student learning is expected to begin September 16 and move to a hybrid format on October 1 for PreK through 4th grade. The remaining grades will move to a hybrid format on Thursday, Oct. 15.

District Superintendent Steven Lamarche released an email discussing the reentry strategy where he acknowledge that the "decision weighted heavily on the (school) committee" and called it merely a starting point. "Our goal is to get to full in-person learning as soon as we can. The entire process is imperfect, and our work was centered on the health, safety and well-being of staff and students," Lamarche said.

The district hosts nearly 4,000 students in seven buildings including the shared Shepherd Hill Regional High School in Dudley. Parents and educators have made their concerns and opinions heard in several forums over the last few months as a decision approached. According to the plan students will be broken up into cohorts labeled A, B, C, and D with differing scheduled for in-person learning, remote learning, and independent learning. Cohorts A and B will consist of general education students, cohort C will consist of special education students, and cohort D will consist of high-needs special education students. Lamarche estimates about 10% of the student population will make up cohort C while another 5% will be included in cohort D. Wednesday will be a universal independent learning day for all students to learn from home. As the start of school approached, Superintendent Lamarche said the dis-

More chickens coming to Oxford?

Gus Steeves

Several young chicks seek warmth under a floodlamp.

BY GUS STEEVES
CORRESPONDENT

OXFORD – Rachel Perez wants to make owning chickens and ducks easier.

Although she was not present (and could not be reached for comment after the fact), the last Board of Selectmen's meeting briefly discussed her proposal. In brief, she sought to have them sponsor a Fall Town Meeting article to exempt some chickens and ducks from the requirement to get a special permit. The board reached a consensus, but did not vote, against doing so, recommending Perez try it via the citizen petition route.

Currently, the town zoning bylaw does not clearly define what it means by "agriculture," nor does it specify backyard poultry per se, but states agriculture is a "permitted by right" use in all four residential districts. In the five commercial districts, it's also "permitted by right," but there it clearly states "on parcels of more than five acres."

That acreage is designated in state law, where Chapter 40A, Sec. 3 exempts any kind of "commercial agriculture" from zoning if the property is more than five acres or more than two acres and producing at least $1000 per acre of income per year. It does not, however, specifically prohibit agriculture on smaller parcels, just allows towns to zone for

it. Many aspects of agriculture do have to meet other criteria as well.

The concept of backyard chicken rearing has been growing for several years. But it jumped in popularity with the pandemic, which may feel has demonstrated the fragility of the nation's large-scale food-production and transport sectors when supermarkets started seeing bare shelves for various products. In most cases, those disparities have largely been filled since then, but prices are generally higher now for many of them. That sparked a run on several products early in the Covid-19 days, one of them being chicks.

According to commentary by Chris Lesley, editor of Chickens and More magazine, recently published in some papers and online at msn.com, "some of the fears COVID-19 has generated – such as the fear of food scarcity or the fear of purchasing contaminated food products – can be eased by owning backyard chickens." By having chickens, he notes, he supplies his own family, but also helps the broader community. "By harvesting eggs from my backyard, I'm helping to make sure that those who cannot produce their own food have access to it in grocery stores."

Officials tighten restrictions on social gatherings

Gov. Charlie Baker announces new regulations to slow the spread of COVID-19.

BY KEVIN FLANDERS
STAFF WRITER

REGION – State officials are tightening regulations and enforcement policies in an effort to slow the spread of COVID-19.

On Aug. 11, Gov. Charlie Baker announced a new set of initiatives aimed at curbing a recent statewide uptick in new cases. These include stricter rules for gatherings on both public and private properties.

Baker has expressed frustration in recent weeks over residents ignoring mask and social distancing guidelines at large gatherings. State officials are worried that many residents have become too complacent.

“The notable decline in COVID in Massachusetts, especially in comparison to many other states, has caused some residents to feel a bit too relaxed about the seriousness of this virus,” Baker said. “There have been several reports of big parties, illegal sports camps, and weddings.”

Effective Aug. 11, the limit on attendees at outdoor gatherings was reduced from 100 to 50 people (the indoor gatherings limit will remain at 25 people). These restrictions apply to all types of gatherings, including those on both public and private property.

Additionally, due to the recent increase in positive COVID-19 cases, step two of the Commonwealth’s third phase of reopening has been postponed indefinitely. The Baker Administration hopes to see a renewed statewide commitment toward slowing the spread.

“We have asked a lot from the people of Massachusetts since March. Businesses have been closed for months, and everyone continues to sacrifice to deal with this virus,” Baker said. “But we have to continue working hard to keep this virus out of our communities as we head into the fall.”

The Baker Administration also announced that, starting last week, additional town-by-town data will be published weekly to better illustrate the spread of COVID-19 at the community level.

Also, free COVID-19 testing sites in 17 communities have been extended through Sept. 12. Locations include Agawam, Brockton, Chelsea, Everett, Fall River, Framingham, Lawrence, Lowell, Lynn, Marlborough, Methuen, New Bedford, Randolph, Revere, Springfield, Taunton, and Worcester.

Restaurant rules have also been updated as part of the Governor’s latest guidance. Effective Aug. 11, alcoholic beverages may only be served for on-site consumption if accompanied by orders for food prepared on-site.

State officials will also be stepping up enforcement to ensure compliance.

“The administration will be taking measures to ensure that bars masquerading as restaurants will be closed,” read a statement released by the Baker Administration. “Public safety officials, including state and local law enforcement, have the jurisdiction to enforce these orders. Event hosts in violation of these orders will be subject to fines or cease-and-desist orders.”

In addition to utilizing police resources, the Baker Administration has assembled a COVID Enforcement and Intervention Team that will be responsible for ensuring compliance. Members will receive and review complaints against businesses that aren’t following state regulations.

The COVID Enforcement and Intervention Team includes members of the Executive Office of Public Safety and Security; the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency; the State Police; the Department of Labor Standards; the Division of Professional Licensure; the Department of Public Health; and the Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission (ABCC), among several others.

The intervention team will work closely with the ABCC and local licensing boards to identify and fine noncompliant restaurants. The suspension or revocation of liquor licenses is also possible for businesses that do not comply with safety regulations.

You are not powerless unless you choose to be so

Thank you. Your letters and emails expressing your prayers, good wishes and concern for my recovery are overwhelming. I always do everything I can to answer each correspondence, so if you haven't yet received a reply, you will. Thank you for your care and concern. It strengthens and encourages me.

POSITIVELY SPEAKING

After expressing encouragement, the most asked question is, "How can you remain so positive while facing so much?" It's a question I have been asked most of my adult life. The answer is simple but not easy.

I remain strong and positive because of my chosen optimism. I say chosen because it is a choice. I could crumble under the weight of stage 4 stomach cancer and mentally give into it and my body will quickly do the same ... or I can expect the best outcome and fight with my medical team to extend my life and overcome the odds. It is a choice I've made. Like I said, "simple but not easy."

It's simplistic to say I choose to be optimistic when you look at the data. Fewer than 5% of the people afflicted with stomach cancer live five years. It's easier to give in and say I have a 95% chance of dying, rather than making the harder assumption, that I'll be one of the 5% to live beyond five years. I must sell and convince myself I'm a "five percenter!" If I just look at the data and take it at face value, I'd begin believing I have no responsibility for my health. The numbers already tell me what will happen. The data insinuates there is no patient impact on who lives and dies. I know that's not true and understand the choices I make about my health do have a profound impact.

I am not powerless in this fight. One of the important aspects I've learned about surviving stomach cancer is my overall health, so I make a list and carry it with me as a reminder of all the positives I have going for me in my battle.

I don't smoke and have never smoked or used tobacco in any way.

I'm not overweight. I am not a diabetic. I don't have any other health problem. I walk and keep moving. Okay. That all works in my favor. What else? Almost every doctor or medical professional will tell you that the attitude and outlook of the patient plays an important role in treatment and recovery.

I believe I will be a survivor. The next question is always, "How can just believing help?"

If I believe I will survive, my mind and body conspire together to make it so.

Think logically about this ... if I believe I can survive, I wake up in the morning and get my body moving. I go about my daily business believing I'll still be here in five years and plan accordingly. My mind believes and my body responds.

Of course, I realize, as I always say, there are some medical realities that optimism may not overcome. No person lives forever. There is always an end of life here on earth, but numerous studies prove that optimistic people live longer, happier, and more successful lives than pessimistic people do.

So, a long answer to your question of how I can remain positive under the weight of a negative diagnosis. It is a simple answer but not easy in execution. It all begins with the choice to live and not die.

A charming young lady, ninety-one years young, wrote to me this week saying, "I was born a pessimist and I rely on you and your column to keep me going."

She was born a pessimist? Now she can be a "born again" optimist! In the ninth decade of her life, she's reading this column and using it to change her mindset. You are never too old ... it is never too late to join us! As I always say, it begins with a choice. Make the decision to change your life and become more optimistic. You really can do it.

Imagine what our nation and world would be like if the majority chose optimism. Optimists don't riot, loot, or destroy property. A nation of optimists would not act this way, but that's a subject for next week.

For me, I choose to live, and in addition to longer life, optimistic people are happier, healthier, and more productive than others.

Why would you choose otherwise?

Local historian chronicles 1918 pandemic in new book

WORCESTER — In the spring of 2018, long before the COVID-19 pandemic hit, Linda Hixon, lead historian of the Hopedale Women's History Project and former instructor at Worcester State University, wanted to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the influenza pandemic of 1918 through personal tales of those affected.

Throughout the world, the 1918 pandemic killed the most people in the least amount of time – estimates say between 5 and 10 percent of the world's population died between September and November 1918, with about 675,000 dying here in the United States. Having spearheaded book projects on Worcester's military heroes from the Civil War, the Spanish-American War and World War I, she decided that chronicling this historic event was of paramount importance. Thus was born "The Grip: The 1918 Pandemic and a City Under Siege."

Shawn Driscoll, a student in the Master's program at Worcester State at the time, collaborated with Hixon. He is currently a second year Doctoral Research Fellow at the University of Massachusetts-Lowell; his field of study is twentieth century American History with a concentration in Vietnam Conflict history. Together, they decided to invite high school students and volunteers to participate in this project.

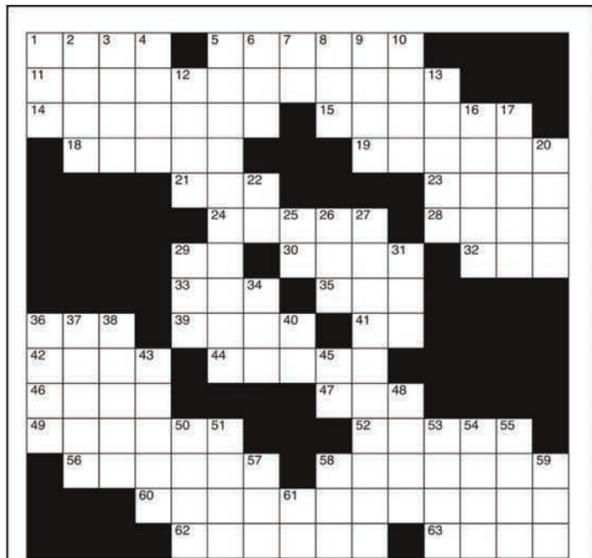

Driscoll approached Worcester Academy and Worcester Public Schools, and almost 20 students and ten volunteers joined the effort to remember some of the nearly 1,000 people who died in Worcester from influenza. Altogether, about 50 profiles were written on the victims of the "Spanish Flu," all of them either residents of the city or dying within the city's limits. But that is less than ten percent of the total number of victims who died here in Worcester. Very few photos of the victims could be found, although some volunteers wrote biographies of family members who perished during the epidemic. Photos of those loved ones have been included in the book.

The book also includes chapters by local historians and academics on the city's response to the influenza epidemic. The chapters range from the effort of the local media to inform the public; the volunteer efforts of local groups to try and aid the sick, the dying, and the orphaned; the creation of an emergency hospital to take the strain off the local medical establishment; how influenza impacted the African-American population of Worcester; how local cemeteries dealt with the influx of the dead; and an account of the Worcester County town of Milford, where the local population of poor immigrants was devastated by the disease.

Worcester County District Attorney Joseph D. Early has written the forward for "The Grip: The 1918 Pandemic and a City Under Siege." Early's family lost a member to influenza – Helen Labuski, who died on December 31, 1918 at barely 18 months old. Helen was the last death in 1918 as influenza resurged in Worcester. Once the death toll began to fall the city attempted to return to "normal," but they did so too soon – hundreds more would die between mid-October when the restrictions eased, and May 24, 1919 when Bertha Mackey became Worcester's last official death from the influenza pandemic.

"A project like this, remembering the victims of a medical disaster, is important at any time in history. But I believe it is most important now because we have forgotten the lessons of the past. We have forgotten that human lives are more important than economic gain. We have forgotten to keep our neighbors safe by wearing masks and keeping our distance," Hixon said. "We have forgotten to protect the vulnerable by keeping public gatherings to a minimum. Worcester's powers-that-be took similar steps in 1918, but not without a fight and not until it was too late, and more people died than was necessary. And restrictions were ended too soon, leading to even more deaths. Worcester was not alone – this happened in most cities and towns across the country during that pandemic 100 years ago, and more people died. The fact that we have forgotten those lessons is to our shame. More will die because we have forgotten our past."

"The Grip: The 1918 Pandemic and a City Under Siege" offers insight into a previous pandemic and lessons for effectively dealing with the current one. The book will soon be available at the Amazon Marketplace store, Changing History Books. For more information, please contact Linda Hixon at-508-373-8315.

Friday's Child

Hi! My name is Alyssa and I love to give hugs!

Alyssa is an affectionate girl of Caucasian descent. She enjoys toys with movement and sounds. She is also a fan of bouncing on therapy balls and watching Disney movies! Alyssa is able to communicate through her facial expressions and physical gestures. She has been observed to respond to familiar names, faces, and preferred activities by smiling and waving her hands in excitement. Alyssa has been introduced to communication devices and is using picture symbols to choose between activities and objects. She also uses an iPad with assistance. In her current placement, Alyssa seeks out staff for attention and responds well to positive praise. Alyssa likes to face where she can see her peers and she will seek interaction by reaching for others or holding hands.

Legally freed for adoption, Alyssa would do best in a two-parent family with older children. Any interested family should be open to working with the providers in Alyssa's life to ensure she reaches her fullest potential! Alyssa will need to maintain contact with her sister and grandmother once a placement is identified. The open adoption agreement calls for six visits per year once she is placed, and then three visits per year post-adoption

Who Can Adopt?

Can you provide the guidance, love and stability that a child needs? If you're at least 18 years old, have a stable source of income, and room in your heart, you may be a perfect match to adopt a waiting child. Adoptive parents can be single, married, or partnered; experienced or not; renters or homeowners; LGBTQ singles and couples.

The process to adopt a child from foster care requires training, interviews, and home visits to determine if adoption is right for you, and if so, to help connect you with a child or sibling group that your family will be a good match for.

To learn more about adoption from foster care, call the Massachusetts Adoption Resource Exchange (MARE) at 617-6273 or visit www.mareinc.org. The sooner you call, the sooner a waiting child will have a permanent place to call home.

Preserve your garden produce for delicious winter meals

Extend the life, flavor, and nutritional value of squash with proper harvesting and storage. Only store blemish- and damage-free fruits and vegetables to reduce the risk of mold and decay developing during storage.

Harvest zucchini when the fruit is six to eight inches long and scalloped squash when three to six inches in diameter. Store these in a plastic bag inside the vegetable crisper drawer in your refrigerator for several days.

Wait to harvest winter squash when the fruit is full-sized, and the rinds are firm and glossy. The portion touching the ground turns from cream to orange when the fruit is ripe. Use a pruner to harvest the fruit, leaving a one-inch stem on each fruit. Cure all winter squash, except for acorn, in a warm, humid location. Then move to a cool, dry, well-ventilated area to store for several months. In the past, gardeners stored these, potatoes, onions, and fruit in wooden racks that maximized storage space and allowed air to reach each layer of produce. An updated version, Gardener's Supply Orchard Rack, adds convenient drawers to this traditional storage system.

Boost your cabbage harvest with this trick. Remove firm full-sized heads but leave the lower ring of leaves and roots intact. The plant will form several smaller heads.

Harvest cucumbers based on how you plan to use them. Pick the fruit when it is 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 inches long if you plan on making sweet pickles. Allow the cucumbers to grow a bit bigger, three to four inches, if dill pickles are on the menu. Harvest those for slicing when the skin is firm, bright green and the fruit is six to nine inches long.

Turn a portion of your harvest into something delicious. Fermentation is a relatively easy preservation technique used for thousands of years. Preserve some of your cucumbers as pickles, cabbage as sauerkraut, and berries as preserves with fermentation. Store fermented fruits and vegetables in a cool, dark place or extend their shelf life by canning the finished product. For most projects, you just need the fruit or vegetables, water, salt, and spices. The desired ingredients are placed in a covered vessel, like Gardener's Supply three-gallon Fermentation Crock. Weights are used to keep the fruit and vegetables submerged in water throughout the fermentation process.

If your garden is still producing when frost is in the forecast, extend the harvest season. Cold frames and cloches are tried-and-true techniques used for extending the growing season. A modern method employs floating row covers. These spun fabrics allow air, light, and water through while protecting plants from frosty conditions. Cover the plantings and anchor the fabric in place. Lift to harvest and enjoy several more weeks and even months of garden-fresh produce.

Select the storage and preservation methods that work best for your garden produce, growing location, and lifestyle. Once you enjoy home-grown produce in winter meals, you will start growing more produce to eat fresh, share and preserve.

Gardener's Supply Company Wooden orchard racks maximize storage space, while allowing air to reach each layer of produce.

All your hard work is paying off with a bountiful harvest. Fresh produce is filling your garden, countertops, and refrigerator while the garden keeps producing more. Preserve some of your harvest to enjoy throughout the winter with some tried-and-true or updated variation of food preservation techniques.

Hanging bundles of herbs to dry is a long-time practice that works. Harvest herbs in the morning just after the dew has dried off the leaves. Rinse, allow them to dry, and remove any damaged or dried leaves.

Gather the dry herbs into small bundles and secure with a rubber band. Use a spring-type clothespin to hang the bundles from a clothesline or hanger in a warm, dry, airy place out of direct sunlight.

A modern twist on this tradition is the space-saving StackIt Herb Drying Rack (gardeners.com) hung from the ceiling. You will be able to dry large quantities of herbs in any narrow, out-of-the-way space.

a look into the student experience and also learn how to increase their own social presence in the process.

"At Nichols, we are used to face to face. Our faculty are 'present,' very engaged, and the students love them," Richards said in a press release. "The modality of the digital realm is more challenging in terms of connectedness. It takes effort and intention on the part of the faculty. Students need to see them as real people."

The training is designed to provide educators with tools and techniques to synchronize their teaching methods to accommodate both in-person and online learners. After learning the student perspective and how to expand their social presence participants will then partake in a series of one-hour courses led by members of the faculty based on individual interests and feedback from the first lessons covering such topics as assessments, project-based courses and adapting to the new learning environment.

"This grant, as well as the others Nichols has received from the Davis Educational Foundation, will decidedly enhance teaching and the professional development of our students," said Mauri Pelto Ph.D., the Vice President for Academic Affairs at Nichols College. "In particular, it will advance the strides we have already made in alternate academic delivery with our graduate programs and allow us to expand and invigorate our HyFlex model for undergraduate students."

Nichols plans to package and publish the sessions once the training is complete.

YouTube channel for store events.

"It's a lot more feasible to do [those things] here than in the old space," she noted. "... I kept feeling more and more cramped [there]. It was time, even though it was hard to make the final decision to move after 25 years."

For now, though, Horan said she's "not really planning that far ahead for any big events" because of the pandemic. She's just glad to be seeing "people I haven't seen in a while."

The new space makes it a lot easier to see everything. Not only is it bigger, the wide expanse of glass along the western wall and much of the northern one lets afternoon sunlight in. While Horan noted that has already proven to be very warm in summer – making her glad she added some blinds – it'll be particularly welcome in winter.

"This place has been an absolute oasis," Crowther said. "I just enjoy the community who come in here. It's a very congenial environment."

At the time, he was sitting and talking to another pretty regular customer, Joan Bernard of Thompson.

"I love supporting her and think it's great she reaches out," Bernard said. "Leave it to Deb to do this in the middle of a pandemic and make it work. ... [During the shutdown,] many people were placing web orders and told her she wouldn't make it. She defies all the negative projections."

Judy Ferrara of New York said she's "awestruck by it." She's July's artist, and has been involved in several group shows at the old Booklovers' Gourmet.

This month, she's displaying 31 small, square box-like pieces she's collectively calling "Bibelots," a French word she said means "small objects, curiosity, beauty and rarity." They feature "intense patterns" in black and white laden with MC Escher-inspired imagery that reflect what she's been affected by in the world. She picked out two specifically – one entitled "immigration" and the other "Josephine Baker Makes and Appearance." The former's her look at the immigration issue; the latter's an abstract visual biography of the only woman to speak at Martin Luther King's famous "I Have a Dream" rally.

Ferrara said her goal is to "invite viewers to come in close to examine the patterns." It's her "fourth version of working in this material," a process that began in 2009 when she took an afternoon workshop on "zentangle drawing."

"I didn't know it'd ultimately change my art for the next 11 years," she added.

"This is a great venue because we make art. We do it because we love it, and we love it when it can be seen," she said. "...I don't know if people understand what it takes to put up a new show every month. It's a very complicated job on top of all your other jobs."

Horan said having art shows was one of the things she "really wanted to continue."

"I feel like I'm at home in this space," she added. "I like spending time here. It's a change, but it's a good change."

Gus Steeves can be reached at gus.steeves2@gmail.com.

Above: Deb Horan cashes out a customer. As anyone who'd been to the old store can see, there's a lot more space to move around.

Even AARP Magazine online reported on the trend early last month, noting that some firms will rent chickens and coops, some of them shipping across the country. They advise three things before joining the flock of owners: Check local bylaws, talk to your neighbors, and do some homework on chickens themselves.

"Make sure to consider your overall budget and what your lifestyle looks like both pre- and post-pandemic," the site states.

In our area, bylaws vary somewhat regarding how much space, what kind of housing, and other features backyard chickens must have. But most of them prohibit roosters (due to noise).

That's not a problem for personal food supply. Unlike many species, chicken hens routinely lay eggs without fertilization. Most breeds lay pretty close to daily when mature, although production can be affected by weather, usually slows down as the bird ages and during winter, and won't begin for several months while they're growing. Most hens also have periods where they go "broody" (some breeds much more often than others); during such times, they don't lay much, but want to sit on eggs. That's ideal if you can get fertilized eggs, but there's no way to tell if a chick will be male or female until well after hatching.

Town Manager Jen Callahan said the town had not yet seen any language for such a change.

Chair Dennis Lamarche said he didn't favor such a change, arguing the special permit process is there to protect neighbors. But if Perez takes the petition route, he said, "then we're leaving it up to the people."

Other selectmen generally agreed or wanted more information. John Saad said he saw the idea of "changing the special permit process" as being different from "deviat[ing] from what we already have." He said he feels the latter is "a mistake" and Oxford needs

"rigid laws" to address such issues.

"There's a big deal about people wanting chickens in their backyard ... but it can get out of hand," he said. Gus Steeves can be reached at gus.steeves2@gmail.com.

Thank you, United Way

To the Editor:
The St. Vincent de Paul Society would like to express their sincere Thanks to the United Way of South Central Massachusetts for their generous grant, which will assist in providing emergency fuel to the disadvantaged of Webster and Dudley. It is our hope that with these funds we will reach more families who have been directly affected by the virus to overcome hardships due to

Friends of the Gladys E. Kelly Library say thank you to the Janet Masler Trusts

To the Editor:
On behalf of all of the Friends of the Gladys E. Kelly Library, Inc. I would like to thank the Janet Masler Humanities Trust for awarding our organization two grants.

The second grant will be used to improve concert lighting and to create a defined performance space for the musicians. With the success of the concert program a need was created to make the community room more conducive to live music. The improvements will allow the audience to have better viewing opportunities of the musicians as well as to enjoy the music.

The Janet Masler Humanities Trust generous support will allow the Friends to continue to offer these new and improved concerts free of charge to the public to be enjoyed by all, young and old. We are very grateful.

Are radar detectors legal?

CHIEF'S CORNER
STEVE WOJNAR

The question of radar detectors was brought up to me recently. These are devices used to detect transmissions from a radar unit used by police to check the speed of vehicles. The question was, are these devices illegal to use in Massachusetts? Radar detectors are still legal in Massachusetts.

There are some states where their use is prohibited. Other places restrict the placement of these devices, for example, they cannot be mounted on the windshield. Some states ban them for commercial vehicles and federal law prohibits their use in many places, such as military bases. If you have one of these devices, and plan to travel out of state, it is important to check the locations where you will be going. These detectors are not fool proof and may work only when the police "radar gun" is activated. The radar units used by police can be left on or may be operated on demand. In the case of the latter, the radar detector may sound only briefly.

These units could be a distraction for drivers, and they cannot be placed in any area which obstructs the clear view of the road. The rules for locating these devices are the same as GPS Units, cell phone mounts, ornaments, and other objects. They must not be in a location that interferes with the safe operation of a vehicle. Impeded operation falls under MGL Chapter 90 Section 13 and a violation can carry a civil fine.

The most important thing to remember is to watch your speed. If you use a radar detector, do not treat it as an open invitation to violate the law. Drivers are always encouraged to take extra time to travel to their destination, drive at safe speeds, minimize distractions, and exercise caution. The goal is to prevent accidents and injuries.

In addition to the Coronavirus Pandemic, there is a great deal of turmoil taking place in our state and around the country. We continue to serve the people of Dudley and work with the community to improve the quality of life for everyone. With so much discussion around police reform taking place, there are several documents posted on our Facebook page which can serve as a source of information for people. I continue to thank the men and women from my department for their continued dedicated service to the Town of Dudley during these trying times. Thanks also go out to the many Police Officers, Fire and Emergency Services members, public works, government and all other "essential" personnel for their continued hard work and service. We greatly appreciate the support we receive from our community.

Thanks again for your questions and comments. Please send them to me at the Dudley Police Department, 71 West Main St., Dudley, MA 01571 or email at swojnar@dudleypolice.com. Opinions expressed in this weekly column are those of Chief Wojnar only and unless clearly noted, do not reflect the ideas or opinions of any other organization or citizen.

EDITORIAL A change of opinion signals growth

As the world turns, so do people's opinions — even moreso now that it's an election year. Further, there has been so much civil unrest currently, in addition to the fact that we are all living through a global pandemic. We are all constantly being bombarded with opinions. You see them on social media, the radio, television, newspapers, and even on signs in people's yards.

As overwhelming, and sometimes unsettling, as this can be, it is actually quite healthy to have and share your opinions. Some individuals have no issue sharing their opinions, while others tend to shy away. Perhaps the latter is on to something but we digress. As we write this, and as you read it, somewhere, two people are in the midst of a debate.

When we share opinions, it's a sign that we are yearning to be more educated and more knowledgeable about the world we live in. The problem arises when a person will insult, lie and attack to turn their opinion into truth. It's important during a debate or heated discussion to remain open minded, as hard as that can be at times. When harsh words are exchanged, they are here for good.

There's also a difference between facts and opinions. When an uninformed person tosses out talking points with misinformation, the point of the conversation goes right out the window. Likewise, both facts and opinions can and do change. Sometimes a person will have a light bulb moment that changes everything they thought they once knew, leading to a change in their mindset. A researcher can find new discoveries, which can alter something that prior, was fact.

A person's viewpoint on something can change over the course of their lifetime. Growth happens every day with all of us. What we once thought when we were 17, could be and is likely vastly different than how we think at 50.

With that said, it's also important to not hold an individual to past statements or actions that may have been troubling. When we hold people accountable to things they did and said in the distant past, they are less likely to share their opinions, and that would be a bad thing.

Opinions are important to share, but that doesn't mean they are right. Backing up an opinion with facts is crucial and responsible. We can all agree that when it comes to personal choices that don't hurt anyone else, other's opinions are irrelevant.

We must also remember that as individuals, our life experiences have brought us each to a unique place, unlike anyone else we encounter, therefore nothing is ever cut and dry. We are seeing this too much in today's politics. Instead of looking at things issue by issue, people are automatically jumping behind one party and calling it a day. The fact remains that we are living in a complicated world, and our thoughts are naturally all over the place, and that's a good thing. Rejecting labels is refreshing.

As we grow our opinions evolve and shape who we are. So while we all have opinions, (on more than just politics) it's important to be flexible with them. Changing how we think does not make us weak, it's a sign of maturity and intelligence.

Today you will be with me in paradise

BEYOND THE PEWS
 BY FR. LUKE A. VERONIS
 SAINTS CONSTANTINE AND HELEN GREEK ORTHODOX CHURCH, WEBSTER

The first person to enter paradise — who was he? The Virgin Mary? Saint Paul or Saint Peter? One of the other great saints of history? Who was the first person to enter into paradise?

Imagine, it was a criminal! Someone being crucified next to Christ, who admitted that he was getting what he deserved. We don't know his crime. We don't know much about the man. But we do know that in his last moments of life, this criminal turned to Jesus and after admitting that he was guilty for his crime, he asks in humility and repentance, "Lord, remember me in your kingdom." And Jesus responded without hesitation, "Today you will be with me in paradise."

Think about this outrageous response to a criminal. Someone is being punished to death for a crime they admit doing, and yet, Jesus still accepts this person, in his last moment of life, and opens up the gates of paradise for him.

What would we think of that, if we knew someone on death row today being punished for a crime that the law say deserved death, and then we have Jesus saying to them, "Today you will be with me in paradise."

I don't think there can be a greater example of the extreme and excessive love and mercy of God! This is who God is. Throughout the Old Testament we hear the description that "God is compassionate and gracious; slow to anger and abundant in loving mercy."

Saint Paul says it in different words, "God desires everyone to be saved and come to a knowledge of the truth." (1 Tim 2:4)

Saint John the Evangelist put it this way, "For God so loved the world that he gave his one and only Son that everyone who believes in Him will not perish but will have eternal life. For God did not send his Son into the world to condemn the world, but in order for the world to be saved through him." (John 3:16-17)

And the Apostle Paul goes on to explain, "God demonstrates His own love toward us, in that while we were still sinners, Christ died for us... when we were enemies God reconciled us through the death of His Son." (Romans 5:8,10)

Here we focus on the most fundamental characteristics that describe God - His unconditional love and boundless mercy, for all people, including even those whom the world says deserve imprisonment and death.

Too often, we in the world focus on punishment, on retribution, on what we consider justice. In fact, we put justice far above mercy and love. Maybe that's why we in the United States now have the largest prison population in the world. We have gone from incarcerating 300,000 people in 1970 to almost 2.3 million of our own citizens today. Imagine, China has four times our population, and yet we incarcerate 600,000 more people than they do. In fact, we have almost the equivalent number of prisoners than the next two highest countries, China and Russia combined.

There are so many shocking statistics when it comes to our prison system. Can you believe that more than half a million people sit in county jails without having been convicted of a crime. They've been arrested, but simply can't pay bail as they wait for their trial.

The median average bail is $10,000, so these men and women just can sit in prison for months, waiting their trial. Their families left helpless, waiting for their parent to come out and go to trial. Can you believe that half million people are incarcerated for non-violent drug offenses. They may have problems with addiction, but prisons are not the place to help drug addicts find healing. And here's one more stat - It's simply shocking to think that one in every 50 Americans is under some type of control by the Correction Industry. One out of 50!

We are a society that wants to be tough on crime, and we want to punish those we think deserve it, yet, putting so many people into prison negatively impacts not only the prisoners themselves for the rest of their lives, and this surely includes some who haven't even committed crimes, but also it severely impacts the lives of the children and families of prisoners. Prison and judicial reform, and a new understanding on punishment, rehabilitation, and restoration are desperately needed in our country.

We should remember our Lord's words at the Last Judgment, "I was hungry and you gave me something to eat, I was thirsty and you gave me something to drink, I was a stranger and you invited me in, I needed clothes and you clothed me, I was sick and you looked after me, I was in prison and you came to visit me... Whatever you did to the least of my brothers and sisters, you did to me."

Archbishop Mark of the Orthodox Christian Prison Ministries said, "In prison, the simple acts of kindness are magnified: writing a letter to someone in prison, offering a Bible Study in the local jail, making the wife or family member of a prisoner feel welcome in church. These are the acts of proactive mercy our Lord calls us to."

I remember when I went into a prison in Framingham every Monday night for three years, leading a Bible Study to a small group of anywhere from three to 10 men. These prisoners were in for all kinds of crimes. One was serving a life sentence without parole. Another ended up serving 25 years before getting out. Others served much shorter times. What I learned during my visits there was that even though these men committed terrible crimes, they were still children of God. The divine image in which they were created may have been hidden, it may have become distorted, it may have been covered up by either the hurt and abuse that they themselves received sometime in their lives, or by the violence and crimes they themselves committed on others,

Saltwater fishing opportunities

TRUE

Fly fishermen are ready to enjoy some great fishing on saltwater in the coming weeks. Bonito and False Albacore migrate to numerous saltwater bays and estuaries in both Massachusetts & Rhode Island during the month of August. They provide the angler with some great exciting fly fishing, and they are edible table fare, although many anglers release their catch because of the somewhat strong taste of the fish.

They travel in somewhat large schools, and are often spotted by their constant feeding habits on or near the surface of the water, similar to bluefish. They also are caught on small lures and plastic baits, and provide a lot of fun catching them on light spin cast rods. It can become a bit crazy on the water, as anglers chase after the schools of bonito and false albacore with their boats, trying to stay with a school of active feeding fish.

Many of the fly-fishing public take their fishing seriously and become quite agitated with "GOGANS" (weekend warriors) as they plow through an actively feeding school of fish with their boats, driving the fish away from the area. I find it best just to sit and wait for a school of bonito to resurface and start feeding right around the boat. The areas around Galilee RI provide a lot of action every year for this hard fighting fish.

Fluke and seabass fishing around Carpenters Beach area to the Charlestown Breachway area is best during a high tide. The outgoing tide seem to provide the best action. Fishing for seabass around the "Hooter" is also providing some great seabass fishing. The seabass limit in Rhode Island increases to six fish on Sept. 1. Hopefully, no major storms like tropical depressions will be heading up our coastline in the coming weeks. It sure can negatively impact the fishing for a week or more Massachusetts has decided to extend their seabass season for anglers fishing on charter boats only? The season was slated to end on Sept. 9, but because of the Covid-19 pandemic, their season was started late, and will now be extended to Oct. 9 of this year. "The extra days should result in the same harvest, if they had started the season on time," the report stated.

The extra 31 days will not include anglers fishing from shore or in there privately owned vessel, which will end on September 8 of this year. "Because black Seabass catch rates are at their peak in the spring when the fish are near shore, aggregated, and aggressively feeding and interest in the fishery, it is at its highest," the report stated.

Local bass anglers are enjoying some great freshwater fishing, with numerous largemouth bass being caught almost every week. Releasing the fish to fight another day is extremely important and will provide another angler with the thrill of catching it again. Many anglers are taking the opportunity of entering the fish into the MF&W freshwater fishing awards program. The catch and release program only require you to submit a photo of the fish, along with some other simple requirements necessary to win a pin. Check it out on page 13 of your 2020 hunting and fishing abstracts.

Joe Gareri recently

took a trip to Maine to do a little freshwater bass fishing, and was rewarded with a five pound, 11 ounce largemouth bass,

How can you prepare for the "New Retirement?"

A generation or so ago, people didn't just retire from work - many of them also withdrew from a whole range of social and communal activities. But now, it's different: The large Baby Boom cohort, and no doubt future ones, are insisting on an active lifestyle and continued involvement in their communities and world. So, what should you know about this "new retirement?" And how can you prepare for it?

For starters, consider what it means to be a retiree today. The 2020 Edward Jones/Age Wave Four Pillars of the New Retirement study has identified these four interrelated, key ingredients, along with the connected statistics, for

living well in the new retirement:

Health - While physical health may decline with age, emotional intelligence - the ability to use emotions in positive ways - actually improves, according to a well-known study from the University of California, among others. However, not surprisingly, retirees fear Alzheimer's and other types of dementia more than any physical ailment, including cancer or infectious diseases, according to the "Four Pillars" study.

Family - Retirees get their greatest emotional nourishment from family relationships - and they'll do anything it takes to help support those family members, even if it means sacrificing their own financial security. Conversely, retirees lacking close connections with family and friends are at risk for all the negative consequences resulting from physical and social isolation.

Purpose - Nearly 90 percent of Americans feel that there should be more ways for retirees to use their talents and knowledge for the benefit of their communities and society at large. Retirees want to spend their time in useful, rewarding ways - and they're well capable of doing so, given their decades of life experience. Retirees with a strong sense of purpose have happier, healthier lives and report a higher quality of life.

Finances - Retirees are less interested in accumulating more wealth than they are in having sufficient resources to achieve the freedom to live their lives as they choose. Yet, retirees frequently find that managing money in retirement can be even more challenging than saving for it. And the "unknowns" can be scary: Almost 70 percent of those who plan to retire in the next 10 years say they have no idea what their healthcare and long-term care costs will be in retirement.

So, if you're getting close to retirement, and you're considering these factors, how can you best integrate them into a fulfilling, meaningful way of life? You'll want to take a "holistic" approach by asking yourself some key questions: What do you want to be able to do with your time and money? Are you building the resources necessary to enjoy the lifestyle you've envisioned? Are you prepared for the increasing costs of health care as you age? Have you taken the steps to maintain your financial independence, and avoid burdening your family, in case you need some type of long-term care? Have you created the estate plans necessary to leave the type of legacy you desire?

By addressing these and other issues, possibly with the help of a financial professional, you can set yourself on the path toward the type of retirement that's not really a retirement at all - but rather a new, invigorating chapter of your life.

but still there was something good within them. In fact, I discovered and witnessed true beauty.

Metropolitan Anthony Bloom described it this way, "Every one of us is in the image of God, and every one of us is like a damaged icon. But if we were given an icon damaged by time, damaged by circumstances, or desecrated by human hatred, we would treat the icon with reverence, with tenderness, with broken-heartedness. We would not pay attention primarily to the fact that it is damaged, but to the tragedy of its being damaged. We would concentrate on what is left of its beauty, and not on what is lost of its beauty. And this is what we must learn to do with regard to each person as an individual, and this is not always easy. We must learn to look and look until we have seen the underlying beauty in others. Only then can we call out all the beauty that is there."

We have a God of unconditional love. We have a God of boundless mercy. And with God's love and mercy, there is always hope for everyone, hope to restore a damaged, distorted icon back to its original beauty, hope even for the most hardened criminal.

Never forget who the first person was who entered paradise. He was a criminal, being punished by death for the crimes he admitted. And yet, Jesus saw his inner beauty, and when the man asked, "Lord, remember me in your kingdom," Christ gladly responded, "Today, you will be with me in paradise."

Bay Path to embrace hybrid model for fall

BY JASON BLEAU
CORRESPONDENT

CHARLTON - Like countless school across the country, Bay Path Regional Vocational Technical High School has been working hard to establish a plan for students' return this fall that takes into consideration the safety and health of students and staff while also working to maintain an effective educational experience.

Superintendent-Director Kyle Brenner released details about the reopening plan on Aug. 14 along with a nearly 90-page document detailing the plan in full. Like many school Brenner said that Bay Path had considered several different options including a full return to classrooms, an online only option and a hybrid model combining the two. The school has decided the hybrid model will be their approach keeping in line with many educational institutions throughout the state.

"The administration recommended and the committee unanimously agreed that this plan provides us with the opportunity to provide students with a safe environment while traveling on our busses and while here at school due to the decreased numbers and the resulting ability for the implementation of plans and procedures that accommodate critical social distancing requirements. This plan will also increase the productivity of students as regular attendance at classes here at school will better hold them accountable for their work and better accommodate the needed application of theory and practice or 'hands-on' instruction in the vocational area," Brenner said in a press release.

The hybrid plan will have half of the student body learning remotely during parts of the week while the other half learn in the classroom on any given day. The plan also includes a remote learning option with no in-person component in order to accommodate students not yet ready to return to in-person learning. This format will also be embraced for all students in the event of a surge in COVID-19 cases.

Bay Path's new school year will start later than normal on Sept. 14. Teachers will report at the end of August to begin preparations to accept students. Full details of Bay Path's hybrid model reopening plan can be found on the school's Web site, www.baypath.net.

Josephine M. “Jo Jo” Davis, 87

THOMPSON – Josephine M. “Jo Jo” (DeNardis) Davis, 87, passed away peacefully on Friday, August 7, 2020 in Day Kimball Hospital, Putnam, after a period of declining health. Her husband of 60 years, Harold F. Davis, Sr., died in 2013.

She leaves 5 children, Harold F. “Buster” Davis, Jr. and his companion Laurie Bowman of Webster, MA, Josephine M. LaFlamme and her companion Bob Banks of Willington, CT, Thomas B. Davis and his companion Andrea Bach of Thompson, Elizabeth A. Beaudry and her husband Richard of Albuquerque, NM, and Kathleen G. Mayotte and her husband Jeffrey of Thompson; a sister, Mary Aldrich of Webster, MA; 10 grandchildren, 18 great-grandchildren; nieces, nephews, cousins, and many dear friends. She was preceded in death by her daughter Norma J. Defilippo, her granddaughter, Jennifer A. Lehrer, her sisters Anna Tracey, Christina DeNardis, and Santina “Bella” Siekierski, and by her brother Thomas DeNardis.

She was born in Webster on July 7, 1933, daughter of Thomas and Angela (Esposito) DeNardis and was raised on High Street in Webster and Brandon Road in Dudley.

She graduated from Bartlett High School in Webster in 1951, where she played on the girls’ basketball team. She moved to Thompson in 1954, shortly after marrying Harold.

Mrs. Davis first worked as a clerk at the former Godzik’s Market in Thompson and then at Bates Shoe Company in Webster. Jo Jo helped establish the Ladies Auxiliary for the East Thompson Volunteer Fire Department and worked with other members to raise funds for the department and to ensure the firefighters were taken care of when responding to alarms. For many years, she was a salesperson for Stanley Home Products and after that she worked in the children’s department at Walmart in Putnam for several years, retiring in 2012. She enjoyed watching the children grow over the years as many of them came back to the store to say hi to the lady who hugged them and gave them coins for the vending machines when they were little.

Jo Jo had such a beautiful and outgoing personality evidenced by the life-long friends she made over the years. She enjoyed playing the organ (and played it well – the accordion too!), crocheting doilies for family and friends, playing cards, bingo and visiting the casino. She also enjoyed watching the wildlife in her yard, especially the deer, birds, and her cats. Most of all, she enjoyed cooking and feeding her family. She was the epitome of the Italian mother/grandmother – you couldn’t visit without being fed, and fed well. Ask any family member or friend, and they’ll tell you she was a great cook and made THE best gravy and meatballs in the world! She was loved and will be missed by so many.

A graveside service will be held in Westfield Cemetery, Danielson, at the convenience of the family. To respect Jo Jo’s wishes, there are no calling hours. Donations in her name may be made to The East Thompson Fire Department, East Thompson Road, Thompson, CT 06277 or a Veterans charity of your choice. Arrangements are under the direction of Scanlon Funeral Service, 38 East Main St., Webster, MA.

In Loving Remembrance

Philip Petrello

3/9/1973 – 7/7/2020

I would like to mention some very important parts of Phil’s life, left out of his recent obituary.

He was predeceased by his Aunt Dar from Hyannis who died of cancer on 10-24-2014, whom Phil loved so much. He would go to the Cape when she was sick and take her to places she wanted to go. He leaves his Uncle Jeff Cramer and his wife Maria of E. Hartford. Jeff taught Phil a lot when he was young including fishing. He leaves Aunt Jackie from West Springfield whom he loved so much. Phil also leaves Uncle Bob who taught him that it isn’t polite to eat with your fingers or with a knife over the knuckles. He loved going there when he was young. He also leaves his cousins Debby, Barbara, and Nikki. They loved to come to my house on the weekend. I think they had a lot of fun getting into mischief.

We have such great friends and neighbors... Sandy, Patti, Kim, and Bob... they were there for anything that was needed. I thank you guys! Luanne, the beautiful angel you made for him is something I will always cherish. Renee, just to see that smile and the beautiful light which will help me through the darkest days.

Those who knew Phil will always smile when they think of him. It meant a lot for me to see how many people’s lives he touched. You now have touched mine. My husband Doug, mother-in-law Joan, sister-in-law Kelli, and I thank you for being there when we needed you the most.

RIP Phil.
Always in my heart.
Love Mom

Tips to Preserve Harvest's Bounty the Old Fashioned Way

The pleasures of the New England harvest season are truly bountiful. Whether plucked from your own backyard or purchased fresh from local gardens or farmers markets, preserving the "just picked" flavor of the New England harvest is a seasonal quest.

TAKE THE HINT
KAREN TRAINOR

While freezing has long been a favorite form of "keeping" crops and traditional canning is enjoying a comeback, the old fashioned method of drying garden vegetables often gets overlooked by home gardeners. A modern dehydrator isn't necessary, as all it takes is an oven, some trays and a bit of time to maintain all the flavor, integrity and wholesomeness of the season's harvest.

Dry to Preserve Garden's Bounty
Drying is one of the oldest forms of food preservation, and a reliable technique that can be easily employed to stretch the goodness of home grown vegetables. Dehydrating removes moisture and therefore halts the growth of bacteria and molds, extending the life of precious garden crops.

Proper preparation of vegetables to dry is very important. Pick produce at peak of ripeness and rinse in cool water to remove dirt and debris. Dry thoroughly and cut into uniform thicknesses to ensure even drying time. Some vegetables, such as tomatoes, corn, carrots and potatoes should be blanched before drying to kill potential bacteria and enzymes that can decrease flavor and color during storage. Common foods that do not require pre blanching include mushrooms, peppers, onions, garlic and herbs. Blanch vegetables by boiling or steaming. Immediately drop into cold water briefly to stop cooking and drain and dry vegetables while still warm. (The warmth will aid the drying process.)

Place vegetables in a food dehydrator, or if drying in oven, arrange in a single layer on a wire cake cooling rack set on top of a sheet tray to allow air circulation. The optimum temperature for successful drying is 140 degrees. This low temperature ensures moisture has completely evaporated, therefore lowering the risk of mold from any trapped moisture. If your oven doesn't have as low a setting, try the "warm" setting checking the temperature with a thermometer to avoid cooking the vegetables. Check temperature periodically to ensure oven maintains an even 140 degrees.

It can take several hours for garden produce to be properly dried. Sufficiently dehydrated vegetables and herbs will be crisp and brittle. Vegetables cut in thicker slices such as tomatoes should be dry but not hard (a bit pliable). Dried goods must be cooled completely before storing. Air tight containers such as zipper lock bags, glass mason jars and plastic freezer tubs are all good candidates for storage of dehydrated vegetables. Dried produce should be stored in a cool, dark place and can last from a few months up to a year, depending upon the vegetable. Refrigeration can extend the life of some dried vegetables, just be sure they are stored in an air tight container and always use within one year of packing. To ensure the product remains dehydrated, it is very important to check the contents periodically and discard any food that has become rehydrated, smells "off", or is moldy or tainted in any way.

From Décor to Diet: Garlic Braids and Pepper Wreaths

Garlic braids dangling from kitchen rafters and colorful hot pepper wreaths hung near the chopping block offer not only homegrown décor, but a handy "pick as you use" year round supply of garden produce. Storing garden garlic and dried peppers in a creative way is not only satisfying for the home gardener, but the finished products serve as ideal "garden gifts" throughout the seasons.

Garlic Braid: Give Bountiful Bulbs a "Twist." Garlic is easy to grow, and even a novice gardener can produce enough garlic bulbs to store for use all year round via a well constructed garlic braid.

To do: Gather up about a dozen of fresh garlic bulbs with greens attached. Begin braiding greens of three garlic bulbs, and then begin adding more bulbs as you continue up the braid. Add a new bulb on the right and work it into the braid, then a new one in the middle and do the same, then add a bulb on the left, layering the bulbs in an attractive braid as you move up the length. At this point the braid technique resembles "French braiding" of hair. For larger bulbs bring greens in from the outer edges (forming an x with the other greens) for an attractive French braiding rope. Continue braiding until all bulbs are used.

To finish off your garlic rope, wind a length of twine or raffia around the greens close to the top bulb. Tie off and tie ends together to form a loop to hang the rope. Hang in a well ventilated, warm area to dry for two to three weeks. When dry, simply snip off desired bulbs. For long term storage, hang braid in a cool storage area or root cellar.

Pepper Wreath: Pick Perfect Peppers
Note: Before stringing hot peppers be sure to wear gloves to ensure safety while handling. Texas A & M University advises using waxed dental floss to string and dry hot peppers like jalapenos, as the strength of their oils can dissolve normal thread.

Wreath: To make a pepper wreath with slim peppers, you'll need to wash and dry a generous amount of fresh peppers. With a sharp knife, make two slits at the top of each pepper, under the cap. Using 12 gauge wires form a sturdy round circle (for larger wreaths double the wire or use a heavier gauge. To form circle, stretch wire over a bucket or clay flower pot. Make a loop at one end. Thread peppers onto the wire through the slits, pushing them together at different angles until the wreath is full and looks attractive. Make a hook at the end of the wire and hook onto the loop. Hang up to dry for about two weeks.

Swag: To string a swag of peppers, wash and dry thoroughly. Thread a heavy duty needle with fishing line or unflavored wax dental floss. Tie a knot at the end of the line and thread through the stem of the pepper, pushing peppers close together and off to each side as you form the swag. For decorative effect, alternate red and green peppers. Continue stringing until swag is desired size. Tie off and loop top and hang to dry.

Mock "Sun" Dried Tomatoes
What could be better than freshly picked tomatoes? How about enjoying the rich flavor of garden grown tomatoes throughout the year? Sun dried tomatoes offer a delicious way to preserve the unique tastes of the season.

The heat of an ordinary oven is a safe and reliable alternative to drying tomatoes in the sun. To make approximately one pint of sun dried tomatoes, you'll need about five pounds garden ripe tomaatoes, a sprinkling of herbs, salt, black pepper, sugar, and good quality olive oil for packing.

To do: Preheat oven to 200 degrees. Slice tomatoes about a half inch thick. If you slice them thinner, they will dry sooner, but for best results cut at least 1/3" thick to prevent hard, tough tomatoes. Lay tomatoes out in a single layer on a baking sheet lined with paper towels, sprinkle with salt and allow to set for up to an hour to draw out the natural juices. Drain moisture, discard paper towels and place tomatoes on a tinfoil lined baking sheet. Bake for several hours, turning over at least twice until tomatoes have shrunk and dried but are pliable (think raisins). Allow to cool on wire cake racks.

To pack sun dried tomatoes, mix together a good quality olive oil, black pepper, salt, a dash of sugar (optional), and add herbs of choice and garlic cloves to taste. Pack tomatoes in sterilized jars and cover with olive oil mixture. Store in the refrigerator or tomatoes can be frozen for longer storage.

Tips for effective remote learning

An increased reliance on virtual home instruction has many students rethinking their organizational strategies and daily school schedules. Learning at home is different from being in a traditional classroom environment, but with some effective strategies, students can persevere without missing a beat.

Stick to a schedule. Many students are successful because they follow a schedule. The Center for Social and Emotional Foundations of Early Learning says that routines and schedules are important because they influence a child's emotional and cognitive development. Children feel secure with schedules, which may help them recognize what's expected of them.

When learning at home, students should strive to maintain as consistent a schedule as possible, including bedtimes, wake times, hours devoted to learning, and time to get outside or engage in downtime activities.

Connect live if possible. There are many free tools and resources available that enable teachers to provide live video lessons or to record them so students can watch them later. Similarly, social networking apps and virtual meeting programs enable students to connect digitally. This can be helpful for collaborative learning assignments or just to see a familiar face.

Stick to tools that work. Once students find apps or systems that work, they should stick with them, offers Khan Academy, an educational tutoring resource. There are many factors outside of one's control during virtual instruction, but maintaining consistency with tools and schedules is one way to feel more confident and secure.

Check student accounts frequently. Just like students, teachers may be learning as they go in regard to remote learning strategies. Students should be sure to check school email accounts or other places where teachers post assignments a few times per day so that they stay on top of all assignments and are aware of due dates.

Reach out to instructors

Allegheny College suggests students contact their teachers if they are unsure of how to participate in remote learning environments. Ask questions about assignments, get clarification on key topics and be sure to tune into any remote chats or virtual "office hours."

Stay in touch with guidance, if needed

Remote learning is a new experience for many students, and there may be certain struggles or road blocks. It can be easy to grow frustrated with equipment failures or lack of in-person interaction. Schools employ qualified therapists and guidance counselors who are just a click, call or email away if issues need to be talked through. Students should utilize all resources made available to them.

Virtual home instruction can be made even easier with some extra assistance and guidance.
