DANIELSON – It’s been a long but rewarding 36 years for Father Nick Milas at the Holy Trinity Greek Orthodox Church in Danielson, but in 2021, the longtime minister will officially retire from his duties, ending a nearly 50-year career as a faith leader.

Father Nick, as the members of the church

call him, has been a practicing minister for over 49 years, 36 of which have been with the Holy Trinity Greek Orthodox Church, where he took lessons from his time as an educator and adapted them to relate to his church family despite not being very fluent in Greek himself.

Father Nick was once a teacher in Summerville, Mass., and it’s there that he learned the power of believing in what you’re teaching as he felt he would have difficulty relating to the Greek-speaking students, but the parents revealed that it’s not about the language, it’s about the passion.

“I said to the mothers, I’m not really Greek speaking, and they said that it doesn’t matter,” he said of his time as a teacher. “They told me ‘They know you love it and they learned from you.’ So that was my first lesson about teaching. It’s about the enthusiasm.”

That enthusiasm is what has helped make him a strong leader of his faith and a big part of why he is looked upon with respect and love by the members of the 105-year-old church. Even in pandemic times, Milas said his passion for his religion only grew stronger watching others preach through online services and being a part of his faith in a whole new way. However, he knew he couldn’t continue to preach due to his declining physical condition and made the decision to step down and retire. But he will not be leaving his church family, and will join them as a parishioner as a new face takes the altar.

“I’m very emotional about it, and it’s strange to me that it should be over, but it’s not really over,” Milas said.

While the emotions were mainly concerning his final year as minister during the church’s annual Greek Food Festival in June, it also reflected his feelings about leaving behind his post after over three and a half decades.

“I’m not really going anywhere. I’m just retiring from the act of ministering because I just can’t do it anymore,” he said. “I really can’t. This is my parish – I’ve been part of this for 36 years. This is my family.”

While Father Nick may not be front and center preaching the Word, he will no doubt remain a beloved figure in his church family. Whatever the future holds, Father Nick will always be a part of the Holy Trinity Greek Orthodox Church’s history as a prominent part of the last half-century of a landmark house of faith just off of Main Street in downtown Danielson.

Danielson Airport receives federal grant

KILLINGLY – The Danielson Airport in Killingly has been named a recipient of a federal Airport Rescue Grant, one of several funding programs through the American Rescue Plan Act, a $1.9 trillion coronavirus rescue package approved earlier in 2021.

Congressman Joe Courtney announced the funding on July 2 with a grant award of $536,561 going to the Danielson Airport at 70 Airport Rd. in Killingly. The state-owned public-use airport hosts a single runway and taxiway with a flight school, skydiving operations, and aircraft maintenance shop on site. The airport also allows for the students at H.H. Ellis Regional Vocational Technical School practice in airplane maintenance. The airport is overseen by the Connecticut Airport Authority and is the smallest of six state owned airports in Connecticut. It is mainly used for recreational pilots as well as general aviation activities in the Quiet Corner.

“The Danielson Airport is a major economic driver for the Town of Killingly, the Quiet Corner and our entire region, and this American Rescue Plan relief funding is going to help it stay that way,” said Courtney in a statement. “There was a lot of talk a few months back about where American Rescue Plan funding was going—a lot of that talk has faded lately as folks keep seeing relief being delivered in a variety of ways directly to our local communities. American Rescue Plan funding is helping our schools stay open, it’s supporting our local police stations and firehouses, and now it’s helping local airports like Danielson get the funding they need to make repairs and keep commerce moving despite the budget issues brought on by COVID-19.”

According to Courtney, the Danielson Airport generals over $9.5 million in annual economic output. The funding provided through the Airport Rescue Grant will allow the airport to perform maintenance and rehabilitation on over 89,000 square yards of the aviation apron and tarmac.

Marianapolis’ Sydney Masciarelli named Gatorade Track & Field Player of the Year

THOMPSON — Recent Marianapolis graduate Sydney Masciarelli has been named this year’s Gatorade Connecticut Track & Field Player of the Year.

Masciarelli was also named Connecticut Track & Field Player of the Year for 2018-19. She’s been named Gatorade Connecticut Cross Country Player of the Year twice, for 2018-19 and 2020-21.

“I’m thankful and honored each time I receive a prestigious award like this. It means a lot to end my high school career with a reward that represents all of the hard work I have put in over the last four years,” Masciarelli said.

During her time at Marianapolis, Masciarelli broke several records and won multiple titles. She won the 2018 Foot Locker Northeast Regional Championship (17:12), 2018 Foot Locker National Championship (17:00), and 2019 New Balance Outdoor Track & Field National Championships, as well as being a NEPSTA D III Track & Field Champion and a NEPSTA D IV Cross Country Champion. Her records include beating Olympian Shalane Flanagan’s under-18 record at the Mayor’s Cup in Boston with a time of 17:04, the female world record for the fastest mile while dribbling a basketball with a time of 5:08.57, and multiple school records.

Masciarelli’s most recent accomplishment was breaking the national high school 2000-meter steeplechase record with a time of 6:25.35 this past June.

“We are so proud of Sydney’s setting a national record!” Marianapolis Track & Field Head Coach David DiCicco said. “Her record-breaking performance is a testament not only to her talent but the incredible effort and focus she brings to her training and indeed everything she does. We are excited to cheer Sydney on as she continues her running career next year at UNC.”

Next season, Masciarelli joins DI University of North Carolina cross country and track & field teams to compete in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The Gatorade Player of the Year program recognizes the nation’s most outstanding high school student-athletes for their athletic excellence, academic achievement and exemplary character. Gatorade will also donate $1,000 to a sports-based organization of Masciarelli’s choice through their Play It Forward Initiative.

Day Kimball names Nicole Cadro Employee of the Month for June

PUTNAM — Nicole Cadro, registered nurse in the intensive care unit (ICU) at Day Kimball Hospital in Putnam, has been named employee of the month for June by Day Kimball Healthcare (DKH).

Cadro began her career at Day Kimball Hospital in 2018 as a UR/PCT on the intensive care unit while attending nursing school. She was offered a position as a graduate nurse at DKH before passing the National Council Licensure Examination. Upon graduating with her bachelors of science in nursing, she was offered a position as a registered nurse on the intensive care unit in December 2020.

In her current role as a registered nurse on the intensive care unit, Cadro is responsible for helping to coordinate and monitor patient care, administering medications, advocating for patients, and providing comfort and support to their families.

According to Cadro’s supervisor, Daniel Durand, BS, RN, nurse manager, intensive care unit, Day Kimball Hospital “Nicole is the epitome of a ‘homegrown’ DKH employee. She began her career working as a UR/PCT while putting herself through nursing school. Nicole’s transition to a registered nurse seems to have come naturally to her, which makes her a valuable member of the ICU team. Her work ethic and dedication to patient care is exceptional, and she has proven her skills in the critical care setting. Nicole is highly regarded by her peers and has a very bright future ahead of her here at DKH.”

In response to being named employee of the month, Cadro said, “Being named employee of the month at Day Kimball is such an honor. It came very unexpectedly, but I could not be more grateful. I started as a UR/PCT in the ICU right when I was first considering nursing. Everything I have learned I owe to my incredible coworkers, support staff, and Day Kimball itself. I am so grateful for my DKH ICU family.”

When asked what she likes most about her job, she shared, “I know firsthand what it’s like to have a loved one who is critically ill. It was the nursing staff who really helped to ease our family’s minds. They not only cared for my ill loved one, but my entire family. That was something that stuck with me for a long time and motivated me to become a nurse. Being a part of someone’s worst days and doing everything we can to help them and their family is truly a privilege and one I will never take lightly. Leaving an impact on the lives of patients and their families is by far my number one reason for becoming a nurse and my favorite part of being a nurse.”

Cadro earned a Bachelor of arts in biology from the University of Connecticut, Storrs, Connecticut, in 2019. In 2020, she graduated from the accelerated certificate entry into nursing program at the University of Connecticut with a bachelor’s of science in nursing.

Enhancements coming to site of Great East Thompson Train Wreck this Fall

THOMPSON — The Town of Thompson has been awarded grant funds from CT Humanities to install permanent interpretive signs to share the story of the Great East Thompson Train Wreck, at the wreck site on the Air Line State Park Trail. This project will be the first element in a master plan to improve the site with upgrades to the parking area, pedestrian safety measures and additional features illustrating the history of the event.

Development of the concepts and designs for the future park at the site has been ongoing since January of 2020, under a community assistance award from the National Park Service Rivers, Trails and Conservation Assistance Program. A project team made up of members of Thompson Trails Committee, Thompson Historical Society, Economic Development Commission and the Last Green Valley has been working in partnership with NPS to establish priorities and brainstorm design concepts.

A team of senior engineering students from the UConn School of Engineering class of 2021 also contributed to the project by generating preliminary design concepts for improvements to the parking area, including “green infrastructure” drainage suggestions and cross-walk designs. Additional engagements around the site and history of the 1894 wreck came in the form of two well-attended public design webinars in November 2020 and May 2021; and four new, original folk-songs composed to honor the event as part of a songwriting competition in spring of 2020.

Local students were also part of the planning process through the Putnam Rotary Interact Club. Students were able to visit the site of the historic train wreck and hike to the Tri-State Marker, after which they shared their ideas for improvement at the community presentation this past

May. Feedback from technical advisors from CT DEEP, CT DOT and others also helped guide design decisions. The projects all tie in to larger regional efforts spear-headed by non-profit Connecticut Rural Conservation & Development, to promote the Air Line State Park Trail as a tourism asset.

The grant from CT Humanities will enable the installation of seven permanent panels on site, telling the story of the wreck and linking to the full history on the Thompson Historical Society Web site. Included in the signs will be a number of “windows to the past,” photos taken on site during the era of the wreck, enlarged and screened onto a clear panel that will allow visitors to better envision the former station, in contrast with the wooded setting of the trail today.

Stay tuned for more news about a special ribbon-cutting and dedication event, coming this October!

So, why is your ad?

It's easy to recognize outstanding care. We were recognized twice.

Earning top recognition from a national healthcare organization is pretty special. Earning it from two organizations puts you in a class by yourself. In fact, Day Kimball is one of a few hospitals in Connecticut to gain a 5-star rating from CMS and an A grade from Leapfrog for patient safety and quality of care. Coming at a time of unprecedented health challenges makes this achievement even better. And of course, none of it would be possible without the tremendous efforts of a team whose dedication to care and safety make us prouder than any award can.

The hidden history behind the Fourth

One of our favorite holidays to write about is Independence Day. We all know the stories of our forefathers, John Adams, Sam Adams, George Washington, Paul Revere, James Madison, Benjamin Franklin and Alexander Hamilton, to name a few. However, the history is endless. We thought we would shine a light on aspects surrounding Independence Day that are not commonly known.

The famous painting that depicts the signing of the Declaration of Independence isn't exactly an accurate portrayal. All of the delegates were never together at the same time in Philadelphia. The final signing took place roughly a month later, on Aug. 2. The Declaration was formally dated and adopted by Congress on July 4; however, Congress voted for independence on July 2.

Celebrating their new independence, soldiers along with civilians tore down a statue of King George III and melted it into bullets. In Georgia, people burnt the King in effigy and even held a faux funeral service. In Philadelphia, the King's coat of arms was burned in a bonfire. Massachusetts was the first state to recognize July 4th as a holiday in 1781.

In 1777, fireworks could be seen in the sky and the ringing of bells rang through the night in Philadelphia. Ships were decorated and lined the coast and streamers could be seen flying in celebration everywhere. The oldest annual parade takes place in Bristol, R.I. 2020 will be the town's 235th consecutive celebration, it's start in 1785.

In New England, dining on salmon became tradition. The story behind the popular cuisine, is due to the influx of salmon that summer. Along with the salmon, people had peas and turtle soup.

One curious fact is that Thomas Jefferson and John Adams both died on July 4, 1826. James Monroe also died on the fourth of July in 1831. President Calvin Coolidge was born July 4, 1872.

Left out of mainstream history was the story of Crispus Attucks, the first to die in the patriot cause. Attucks was a black/native American patriot who was shot, and the first to fall during the 1770 Boston Massacre. Attucks was a runaway slave who was a rope maker and sailor. History says he was shot by two musket balls to the chest. In 1778, it became legal in Rhode Island for free and enslaved blacks to serve the cause, with freedom as part of their payment. Educated by her owners, Phillis Wheatley was a well known poet during those times. Wheatley was kidnapped in West Africa and brought to America. At the age of 20, in 1773, she became the first African American and third female to publish a book of poetry. She eventually became free. She also advocated for independence, writing in support for George Washington's Revolutionary War in her poem, "To His Excellency, General Washington." Washington, impressed by her talent invited her to a meeting.

In 1958, when Alaska and Hawaii were on deck to become states, a history teacher assigned his class to design a flag, depicting the two new states. 16 year old Robert Heft, received a B- on the project. Unhappy with the mark, Heft sent the flag to Dwight D. Eisenhower. After the flag was chosen, Heft had his grade changed to an A.

Another fun fact is that Thomas Jefferson wrote the Declaration on what was referred to as a laptop. A writing desk that could fit over a person's lap.

In 1778, Washington ordered a double ration of rum for soldiers to celebrate with.

In 1776, there were roughly 2.5 million people living in America. The current population is now 325.7 million.

Wearing an American flag, whether it be on a tee-shirt, headband, towel or shorts is in violation of the Flag Code. The code says that you are in violation if you sell, display any "article of merchandise, upon which shall have been printed, painted, attached, or otherwise placed a representation of [the flag... in order to] advertise, call attention to, decorate, mark, or distinguish the article or substance on which so placed." The code, however, is not enforceable.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Mask misconceptions

To the Editor:

In her letter to the Editor July 2, Anni Lee makes an emotional case for "de-masking" schoolchildren, arguing that "it is "time to let them breathe again."

But she makes a number of inaccurate and misleading statements.

First, face masks, while mildly uncomfortable and certainly annoying, do not interfere with breathing. In a study published Nov. 3, 2020 in the International Journal of Environmental Research and Public Health, researchers showed there was no difference in blood carbon dioxide and oxygen levels, heart rate, or threshold of fatigue in treadmill runners, regardless of whether or not they had on a surgical mask, cloth mask, or no mask.

Second, she states that the WHO is not recommending Covid vaccines for children under 18. This is not true. Apparently, the source of this rumor is social media and a Tweet by Rep. Marjorie Taylor Greene (R-GA) stating, "The WHO says 'children should not be vaccinated.'" Up until June 22, the WHO website said that children should not be vaccinated "for the moment" because, as they have emphasized, the WHO represents the entire world and the world has a shortage of vaccine and they felt that it should go first to those with the highest risk. (Readers interested in more details may consult FactCheck.org) As of June 25, the WHO website states that its advisory group "has concluded that the Pfizer/BioNTech vaccine is suitable for use by people aged 12 years and above." Of note, both the CDC and the American Academy of Pediatrics, concerned only with the U.S., recommend vaccination of children over 12.

Third, Ms. Lee says that children "rarely catch" Covid, and if they do, they "don't really spread it." In fact, for the last week in April 2021, children represented 22.4 percent of new cases, or 71,649 out of 319,601. And while numbers regarding exactly how contagious children are is scarce, most infectious disease experts feel that children easily spread the disease, particularly since it is known that they carry dramatically higher loads of the virus than adults. Ms. Lee also points to a "99.9 percent" recovery rate in children which presumably comes as scant comfort to the families of the 477 children in the US who have died from Covid.

Fourth, Ms. Lee says that the Covid vaccines are "experimental." They are not.

They do carry an emergency use authorization designation but have all undergone Phase 1,2, and three trials with hundreds of thousands of people. Over 331 million vaccine doses have been given in the US, with 157 million people being fully vaccinated with only a handful of serious complications reported. The FDA is simply being extraordinarily cautious in collecting as much data as possible before issuing full approval.

So, if Ms. Lee wishes to see the masks come safely off (not just off) she should do everything possible to encourage people to be vaccinated. As any ICU physician or nurse can tell her, the only people in ICUs and dying with Covid now are the unvaccinated. Said one ICU physician: the highly transmissible Delta variant "is going to cut through the unvaccinated like a lawnmower through grass." Of course, the greater the percentage of people vaccinated in a community, the safer it will be for schoolchildren to stop wearing their masks.

After all, it is worth remembering that it is only due to the 49 percent of those in Windham County (and the 61 percent in all of Connecticut) who have made the effort to be vaccinated that we have been able to enjoy the recent "opening up" of our community, including a "nearly normal" July 4. Surely, we can increase that number to make it safer for our schoolchildren to remove their masks.

History is our teacher

To the Editor:

Critical Race Theory is the latest conservative boogeyman to blast the airwaves. Along with its sister concept, the 1619 Project, Republican state legislatures and alt-right media have used it as a rallying cry, bemoaning liberal elites and passing laws to prevent students from being "indoctrinated" into what they consider taboo subjects. This means banning discussions that involve racism. The thought of teaching anything that could fly in the face of just how great America is, and how perfect the Founding Fathers were, is somehow a malevolent notion. They believe that a feel-good myth outweighs an uncomfortable truth. And of course, if one is a racist, this feeds off children from questioning a parent's ethical principles. These laws also serve to weaponize racial anxiety, a strategy that the last administration used in its rise to power.

That Critical Race Theory is a theory is true. But it is a damn good one. Created more than 40 years ago by legal scholars, it posits that racism is not simply a personal belief but one that pervades American institutions, both governmental and private, and influences legal and structural policies. Therefore, it's possible for one to enforce a racist rule but not be a racist.

Nor is it a single belief. It has grown to include the opinion that race is not a biological, but a social construct and has also begot the idea of a White advantage. It can include gender bias. The George Floyd murder along with the Black Lives Matter movement reopened the debate. Namely how does racism function in society and behooves the questions does it still exist and if so why.

The 1619 Project answers the why. That is the year that African slaves were first brought here to labor as property for white farmers. Since then, Blacks were, and it can be argued are still, considered by many to be inferior to their white neighbors. The founding of America included the stipulation that a black man was merely three fifths of a person, and deserved no basic rights. That families were torn apart, that men and women were killed or mutilated, and that breeding "farms" were created (after 1808, the import of slaves from outside the country was banned, but the necessitude for slaves only grew larger) as part of a government mandated policy cannot be argued.

Slavery, of course, led to the Civil War, which led to the Reconstruction, which led to the Jim Crow era. Thus did a legal system which many times ignored the facts in lieu of the color of one's skin also develop. Schools were segregated and second class. Doors to business loans, mortgages, and choice housing remain to this day hard to open. Prisons remain filled with young Black men who are jailed with offenses for which a White man might be given just a slap on the wrist. And the question of a racist undertone in some police departments seems to be backed up by the sheer number of unarmed black killings.

All of this and more is less likely to be the experience of whites and especially white men and explains the concept of White privilege. Which is not to say that being White equates in any way to being a bad person or should foster a sense of guilt. It simply bolsters the need to appreciate that the lives of some Americans have collectively had fewer obstacles to navigate

Even more telling is that science, with is research into DNA and the evolution of our species has shown that race truly is an artificial formulation.. All people carry the same genes. The purest human genes are found in Africa (European and Asians carry Neanderthal and Denisovan non Homo sapien genes). And no, Neanderthals with larger skulls were not smarter as some alt-right talking heads would have their listeners believe. In fact most of us contain a montage of genes from many sources. The concept of five races is a 18th century sentiment based on physical appearance. It does not define the concept of what a human being is. Our first Black President has a White mother, but dark skin. The future King of England's daughter in law, Meaghan Markle, has a black mother but white skin. Society picks race based merely on looks. Genetics argues for something much more complex.

Prejudice in our country, of course, is not confined to African Americans. The Declaration of Independence sheds more light on our radical beginnings in calling indigenous Native Americans "merciless Indian savages." And even today, we have seen a spate of attacks, both verbal and physical, on Asians, Latinos, and Jews. Choosing to ignore this is not a solution; it is part of the problem.

Which is why it would be easy to conclude that a movement to abolish the teaching of Critical Race Theory and the societal concepts that surround it, must mean that racism is still be very much alive and well and hoping to grow strong again. Looking back objectively on our past should not be feared or suppressed. History is our teacher. It's the way we can prevent the same mistakes from happening again. And learning should never be discouraged. It is how we heal, and we grow. It also allows for balance. There are extreme and dangerous views on both ends of the political spectrum, and forums for sharing ideas should never be shuttered.

And in the end, it is how we can, and how we have throughout our complex history, strived to create a better, more inclusive, and stronger America. Progress has been made. But it has come with blood and with tears. We cannot allow censorship to turn us back. We must resist any effort to deny our sins and confront the flaws and realities of our past.

Living free

BEYOND THE PEWS

BISHOP JOHN W. HANSON

At first, he was disappointed, then angry. His trainer told him he would lose ten pounds and feel better in days. The gym had parted him from his hard-earned cash with the promise that their exercise/diet program, if properly followed, would set him free from sluggishness and obesity. He was now enduring his third day of health-food and exercise. So far, he was only feeling grouchy and sore. As he and his buddy wheezed and sweated on side-by-side treadmills, he complained to his trainer, "This doesn't feel like freedom to me!"

Two weeks later, however, he was fifteen pounds lighter, feeling better than he had in years, and he wasn't even all that sore. He could honestly say he was living free. His buddy had quit on the fourth day, and was still complaining about being over-weight and chronically tired.

Freedom isn't free; it takes discipline. It is often achieved counter-intuitively through self-restraint or by choosing to take the steeper path. Jesus invites people to follow Him to a place where they can live free. Jay E. Adams described that freedom like this:

The Christian is free from all other human beings. He does not have to live over against others, controlled by their actions and responses. Rather, he lives according to Christ's commands. This is Christian freedom. It is a freedom unknown by others. It is not just when others do the things that we like that we act properly toward them; we are free to do good even when they don't because our actions are not dependent on their responses. It is the Lord Christ when we serve!

It is easy to associate freedom with the ability to do whatever we want, but ultimate freedom is the ability to do the right things and to not do the things that hinder us from living free. With God's empowerment living free can be a reality. The Bible says it like this:

"And because you belong to him, the power of the life-giving Spirit has freed you from the power of sin that leads to death... Therefore, dear brothers and sisters, you have no obligation to do what your sinful nature urges you to do." (Romans 8:2)

Living morally and responsibly is not heavy and restricting; it is liberating. Living free can be described as living in the light. With God as coach and empowerer, obedient believers are blessed to live a better life. St. Paul explained, "He has enabled you to share in the inheritance that belongs to his people, who live in the light. For he has rescued us from the kingdom of darkness and transferred us into the Kingdom of his dear Son,"(Colossians 1:12)

Those who want to rise above addictions, depression, vengefulness, and purposelessness, can simply accept God's help and do the work of applying biblical principles in their lives. At first it may not seem to work, but eventually they will find themselves living free.

Bishop John W. Hanson has been overseeing Acts II Ministries in Thompson CT for 25 years. He has personally witnessed God setting many people free. For more information, please visit www.ActsII.org

When things go wrong...

You can tell a lot about a person by the way they react when things go wrong. Over the long holiday weekend, our basement took on water like a leaky rowboat. It wasn't a tidal wave, just a persistent drip, drip, drip that began to accumulate. I've never owned a basement before. I was brought up with cellars, and went on to own several more. My basement has been a delight to me, often forgotten for days until I descend the stairs (holding on to two railings!) and snatch a roll of paper towels from my pandemic stockpile. I was heartsick when I realized all was not well.

In a similar situation, my father would have started yelling. He would have yelled to anyone in earshot to witness the problem, and if by some stretch of the imagination he could blame them, he would. If that didn't work, he would cast doubt on the rationality of the universe, the stupidity of other people and the unfairness of God as applied to him and his possessions. Eventually when everyone was sufficiently traumatized, he would set about solving the problem. It's no wonder I felt anxious when the carpet squished beneath my sneaker.

I did what any rational person would do. I left my husband to consider the situation and drove to Aubuchon's to buy a wet/dry vacuum. I've always loved hardware stores and the Putnam store never fails to ease my worries and make me feel that control is only a product or two away. The staff took my tale of woe seriously with several chiming in on the best course of action. I left with a middle sized box and a glimmer of hope that my husband and I could vacuum up the water and keep things rolling until the professionals arrived when the weekend was over.

After reading a long article in The Atlantic by George Packer, entitled "The Four Americas," I wish our country could assemble in an imaginary hardware store and sort out our differences in similarly collegial way. Packer writes that we are divided into four "competing visions of the country's purpose and meaning." His assessment is grim in terms of how we will ever get out of our divisions, but we are stuck with each other and we will have to make it work. We need the hands-on, down-to-earth, rational view that I find in the hardware store.

For hours, we took turns pressing the plastic nozzle of the shop vac to the floor, slurping up water. We trotted up the bulkhead stairs, dumped the bucket and began again. It gave me time to think. I remembered all the people, mostly men, who helped us with similar problems. They often came on weekends or holidays, just like our electrician, Kevin, who arrived with a smile on Sunday morning. Our neighbors would help in an instant if I asked them. If it were really bad, I imagine the fire department would come.

All my father's yelling over disasters big and small didn't solve his long forgotten problems. Only action, skill, time and luck made any difference. The real shouting on television and the perceived yelling in Letters to the Editor, including in this paper, make me anxious just as he did, but they don't tackle the problems or buy the shop vac.

Our former neighbor, the late Murray Buttner, had multiple physical problems the result of botched operations. He walked with difficulty, but when asked how he was, he always exclaimed: "Never better." I'm looking forward to saying the same about my basement and my country,

So many of us were used to going out to eat prior to the pandemic. Perhaps you remember Al's II Restaurant, which was located on North Main Street, Danielson. A place mat that was donated to the Killingly Historical Center had the following breakfast prices. Coffee or tea 25 cents; hot chocolate and Sanka, 30 cents; cereal, hot or cold, 75 cents; 1 egg toast and coffee, 75 cents; 2 eggs, toast and coffee, 95 cents; pancakes or French toast, $1.15; home fries, 50 cents; bacon, ham, sausage, $1.25; hard roll or muffin 35 cents; donuts 25 cents; toast, 25 cents. A couple of the specials were #1: Choice of juice, farm fresh eggs, choice of ham, bacon, sausage, home fries, toast, coffee, $2.25. #2: Choice of juice, 1 farm fresh egg, choice of ham, bacon, sausage, home fries, toast, coffee, $1.95; #3: Choice of juice, French toast, choice of ham, bacon, sausage, coffee, $1.95. Al's II Restaurant and Lounge appears in the Killingly Business Encyclopedia by Natalie L. Coolidge at 280 North Main Street from 1978 through January 12, 1981. When I asked my son Michael if he thought he might like to see the military encampment and demonstration by the Second Continental Light Dragoons at the Elms on July 10, he asked what a Dragoon was. Since I could not give him a concise answer, I did a Google search. (Whatever happened to pulling out the dictionary)? According to Wikipedia, "Dragoons originally were a class of mounted infantry who used horses for mobility, but dismounted to fight on foot. From the early 17th century onward, dragoons were increasingly also employed as conventional cavalry and trained for combat with swords and firearms from horseback." "The 2nd Continental Light Dragoons, also known as Sheldon's Horse after Colonel Elisha Sheldon, was commissioned by the Continental Congress on December 12, 1776, and was first mustered at Wethersfield, CT in March 1777 for service with the Continental Army." They saw action at the Battles of Brandywine, Germantown, and Yorktown.

A later leader, Benjamin Tallmadge (1754-1835), was an American military officer, spymaster, and politician. He is best known for his service as an officer in the American Revolutionary War. He acted as leader of the Culper Ring during the war, a celebrated network of spies in New York where major British forces were based. I came across him in Nathaniel Philbrick's "Valiant Ambition" in connection with the capture of Benedict Arnold (pp 302-3).

Did you realize that when France entered the Revolutionary War on the side of the Americans, that it had a global impact? Philbrick, in "Valiant Ambition," had this to say about the situation: "Now that France had recognized the United States, what had previously been a colonial rebellion had become a world war. In the months ahead Britain would find itself besieged on fronts as far away as India and as close to home as the English Channel as the focus of the conflict shifted from North America to the sugar-rich islands of the West Indies. As difficult as it may be to believe today, Britain's islands in the Caribbean were of considerably more economic importance in the eighteenth century than all thirteen American colonies combined." It was all because of sugar! (p. 201).

Sugar! How much do you consume in a day? I'm sure we take the sweetener very much for granted. Such was not the case in the 1700's, when it was a very valuable commodity. According to the Sugar Association (www.sugar.org), "The first indications of the domestication of sugar cane were around 8000 BCE by the indigenous people of New Guinea, who chewed it raw." The cultivation then spread to Southeast Asia, China, and India. Sugar continued to spread from east to west. Between 1096-1099 Crusaders returned to Europe from the Holy Land with prizes of sugar, called 'sweet salt.' By the end of the 15th century the Portuguese had brought it to the Americas (Brazil). In 1501, Hispaniola (now Haiti and the Dominican Republic) had its first sugar harvest. By 1550, approximately 3,000 sugar mills had been constructed throughout the Caribbean. "Towards the end of the (18th) century, the British and French colonies in the West Indies produced 80 [percent] of the sugar."

According to Wikipedia, "There are records of knowledge of sugar among the ancient Greeks and Romans, but only as an imported medicine, and not as a food. For example, the Greek physician Dioscorides in the 1st century (AD) wrote: 'There is a kind of coalesced honey called sakcharon [i.e. sugar] found in reeds in India and Eudaimon Arabia [i.e. Yemen] similar in consistency to salt and brittle enough to be broken between the teeth like salt. It is good dissolved in water for the intestines and stomach, and [can be] taken as a drink to help [relieve] a painful bladder and kidneys.' Pliny the Elder, a 1st-century (AD) Roman, also described sugar as medicinal: "Sugar is made in Arabia as well, but Indian sugar is better. It is a kind of honey found in cane, white as gum, and it crunches between the teeth. It comes in lumps the size of a hazelnut. Sugar is used only for medical purposes."

During the 18th century, sugar became enormously popular. Great Britain, for example, consumed five times as much sugar in 1770 as in 1710. By 1750, sugar surpassed grain as 'the most valuable commodity in European trade — it made up a fifth of all European imports and in the last decades of the century four-fifths of the sugar came from the British and French colonies in the West Indies.' From the 1740s until the 1820s, sugar was Britain's most valuable import." (en.wikipedia).

A sugarloaf was the traditional shape of sugar in the eighteenth century: a semi-hard sugar cone that required a sugar axe or hammer to break up and sugar nips to reduce it to usable pieces. (https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/History_of_sugar). "Refined sugar was sold by 18th century merchants in the form of cones, usually called loaves, which were wrapped in bright blue paper and sealed with red wax. Some southern plantations had special sugar chests which locked so valuable was the commodity. (livesandlegaciesblog.org/2018/12/13/all-about-sugar-cones/amp/)

Do these things now to avoid a steep tax bill next year

In last week's column, we reviewed some important steps to take at the mid-year point to ensure you can end 2021 in the strongest financial position possible. The item on that list that probably strikes one of the biggest pangs of financial fear into the hearts of many people is, you guessed it – taxes.

As I explained last week, doing a dry-run of your taxes now is important because you'll have a much better sense of your tax bill for 2021. One way you can do this is to use the 1040 Tax Calculator on our Web site at whzwealth.com/financial-calculators to estimate your expected tax bill. If you're on track to owe more than you're currently withholding from your paycheck or paying in estimates, or if you're withholding enough or too much and you'd prefer to put more of your money to work for you instead of paying it in taxes) there are adjustments you can make right now. There are some strategies to consider that I will discuss to help lower your tax bill come next April – and keep you from having to write a big check to the IRS or getting a big refund.

Tax Savings Strategies to Consider

Although your tax picture is unique to you, there are strategies to consider and discuss with your financial and tax advisors that can help to lower your tax liability, and even help you to save and invest more along the way. Here are some of the most common:

Minimize taxable income while saving for retirement: If you are an employee and your company offers a retirement plan like a 401(k), you can make contributions to your retirement plan with pretax dollars, thus reducing your current taxable income and, likely, your current-year taxes. If you do not work for a company that offers a retirement plan, you can still reduce current-year taxes by making a tax-deductible contribution to an IRA, if you qualify. If you are self-employed, you can use a Keogh, SEP (Simplified Employee Pension), or SIMPLE (Savings Incentive Match Plan for Employees) plan to shelter income.

Maximize deductions: There are everyday expenses that can be deducted on your tax return. Some examples include medical and dental expenses, mortgage interest up to certain thresholds, charitable donations, casualty, disaster, or theft losses. Today's standard deduction is typically more than the average taxpayer's itemized deductions, however if there are years where you can bundle deductions, for example If you have a big medical expense and make a charitable donation, it may save on taxes. Consider charitable donations: Depending on your specific tax picture, charitable donations could provide a good source of income tax deductions. One tax-saving strategy is to donate appreciated property or property that increased in value. You can take a deduction for the fair market value and avoid capital gains tax on the sale.

Review interest expenses: If you pay interest that is not tax-deductible (e.g., interest on auto loans or credit cards), consider paying off the debt.

Review social security benefits. If you collect social security, you may benefit from strategies to reduce or defer taxable income. If your non-social security income exceeds certain levels, it triggers taxation of a higher percentage of your social security benefits.

Pay attention to recordkeeping: Keeping complete records may help you save on taxes, especially if it prevents having to locate or recreate information.

Review Form 1040 for missed tax opportunities: Reviewing your 1040 could help you spot opportunities for making investments that provide greater after-tax savings. Pay special attention to the Taxable Interest, Tax-Exempt Income, and Dividend Income sections of the form.

Municipal bonds: Tax-exempt municipal bonds are an excellent tax-advantaged investment, especially if you are in a high income tax bracket or have moved into a higher tax bracket after a promotion or career change. Interest earned on municipal bonds is exempt from federal income taxes and, in most states, from state and local taxes for residents of the issuing states (although income on certain bonds for particular investors may be subject to the Alternative Minimum Tax).

Plan capital gains and/or losses: Determining when to recognize capital gains or losses depends on whether you want to postpone paying taxes (by postponing recognition of gains) or recognize capital gains or losses during the current year. If the gains will be subject to a higher rate of tax next year (because of a change in tax bracket), or if you cannot use capital losses to offset capital gains, you may want to recognize capital gains this year.

Review IRA opportunities: If you want to maximize the timing and amount of IRA distributions as long as possible for your heirs, understanding IRA rules is critical. If you are retiring or changing jobs, consider rolling over the assets in your company's pension and 401(k) plan to an IRA. If you have a traditional IRA, evaluate whether it would be beneficial to convert it to a Roth IRA.

Estate planning strategies: Review and update your estate plan to minimize potential estate and gift taxes.

Life insurance: Life insurance may provide liquidity to pay estate taxes and could be an attractive solution to other liquidity problems, such as family-owned businesses, large real estate holdings, and collectibles. Life insurance proceeds can pass free of income and estate taxes when structured properly.

These are just some of the most common tax planning strategies to consider, and each should also be considered within the context of your overall financial picture and goals, not just with regard to next year's taxes. We can work with you and your tax professional to review your current situation and determine which tax-saving strategies may be beneficial to you, while also devising a long-term strategy to meet all your financial life goals through our Plan Well, Invest Well, Live Well process. How to get kids into golf

When a global pandemic was declared by the World Health Organization in March 2020, parents were left scrambling for fun and healthy ways to keep their kids occupied. Virtual learning sessions replaced days spent in the classroom, and many extracurricular activities were canceled in an attempt to prevent the spread of the COVID-19 virus. Parents tried to find activities that kids could enjoy while still adhering to social distancing guidelines, and that led many moms and dads to consider golf.

Golf is an outdoor activity that does not require a large group of people, making it an ideal recreational activity during the era of social distancing. In fact, the number of youth golfers skyrocketed during the first six months of pandemic. According to Youth on Course, a nationwide program for children between the ages of six and 18 that offers access to more than 1,000 golf courses for a nominal fee, the number of rounds played by program members between January 2020 and July 2020 increased by 76 percent over the same period a year earlier.

Golf isn't just beneficial during the age of social distancing. It's also a great way for parents to get kids to exercise and keep them off of their devices as they enjoy the great outdoors. Golf is a difficult game, and that difficulty may discourage some youngsters from playing. However, parents can overcome that hurdle and others as they try get their kids excited about playing golf.

- Enroll kids in a youth organization. An organization like Youth on Course excites many youngsters because they see children their own age playing golf. That means they can go golfing with friends and talk about the game when they're not on the course. Parents concerned about COVID-19 can let their youngsters play with friends while wearing a mask without risking kids' health. Public health agencies like the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention have noted that outdoor activities are significantly safer than indoor gatherings. When wearing a mask outdoors, kids' risk of getting COVID-19 is even lower.

- Get the right gear. PGA of America recommends getting kids a putter and a wedge that are made for kids their height, noting the availability of clubs specifically made for juniors. An age-appropriate wedge is short and easy to get in the air. That should make it easier for kids to play, increasing the chances they'll enjoy themselves.

- Keep it light and fun. Golf can frustrate even the most skilled professionals. It's important to downplay any frustration kids feel. Parents playing alongside their children must avoid growing frustrated if their own rounds aren't going well. PGA of America advises parents to not put any expectations on youngsters as they learn the game, focusing instead on how much fun it is to play a round at a beautiful course.

Golf is a great game for people of all ages, including youngsters.

Bite into these facts about hot dogs

Hot dogs are the yin to the hamburger's yang. Franks and burgers are a common pair at barbecues and ballparks, and rightfully so. Handheld, portable meals, they pack a convenient and flavorful punchy.

Few foods may seem as American as hot dogs. However, hot dogs are derivative of European sausages. This fact and more can shed light on the humble hot dog, which is sure to find its way to a grill near you this summer.

- Mental Floss says it's pretentious to consume a hot dog with utensils. Hot dog etiquette experts also insist adults should not top their hot dogs with ketchup, which they suggest is a topping strictly reserved for children.

- Hot dogs are often associated with New York City. However, hot dogs gained popularity across the country in the 20th century.

- Hot dogs are often called frankfurters. This refers to Frankfurt, Germany, where pork sausages similar to hot dogs are believed to have originated.

- Hot dogs were given their name by cartoonist Tad Dorgan. He observed a vendor selling "hot dachshund sausage dogs" during a baseball game at New York City's Polo Grounds. As legend has it, Dorgan couldn't spell the name of the dog, instead writing only "hot dogs." The name eventually caught on.

- Despite several jokes as well as speculation regarding what hot dogs contain, hot dogs are cured and cooked sausages that contain mainly pork, beef, chicken, and turkey. The meats come from the muscle of the animals. If a product contains organ meats, it must be declared on the packaging.

- In 1867, Charles Feltman made a cart with a stove on it, which he used to boil sausages. The cart also had compartments to keep buns fresh. Carts that sell hot dogs on the street are now seen in cities across the country.

- Hot dogs are a NASA-approved food for astronauts.
- While hot dogs are sold at many venues, data indicates that the popular convenience store chain 7-Eleven sells the most grilled hot dogs in North America, with 100 million sold annually.

- Relish, sauerkraut and even ketchup are popular hot dog toppings. But mustard is by far the most popular.

- Why are there typically 10 hot dogs per pack and only eight buns per bag? When hot dogs were first introduced, they were sold at varying quantities at the butcher shop. Hot dogs were eventually standardized to packages of 10, but buns are baked in clusters of four in popular pans designed to hold eight rolls.

Hot dogs are a summertime staple that have an interesting and extensive history.

Combatting more than just summer learning loss

Lazy summer days are great for lounging around the pool. Though such afternoons are synonymous with summer, failure to flex cognitive muscles along with physical ones may lead to struggles when children return to classrooms.

Summer learning loss, also dubbed “summer slide,” is a term used in reference to the loss of academic skills and knowledge during summer vacations. However, in addition to the potential for lost skills from being away from school during summer breaks, students also may be affected by deficits that developed due to virtual learning. This summer may be one best spent catching up on studies.

Researchers have been looking at summer slide since at least 1996, when one of the first comprehensive studies on the phenomenon was published. That study indicated children lose significant knowledge in reading and math over summer break. More recently, a 2020 NWEA® MAP Growth assessment found children in third to fifth grades lose, on average, 20 percent of their school-year gains in reading and 27 percent in math during summer break. NWEA is a research-based, not-for-profit organization that creates assessment solutions that premeasure growth and proficiency.

While summer learning loss has been widely recognized for years, a new issue has developed due to the global pandemic. A shift to hybrid or all virtual learning for significant portions of the last two school years could have long-term consequences for students. A recent study from the Fairfax County Public Schools Office of Research and Strategic Improvement in Virginia found that middle and high school students have had less academic success as a result of online learning. The percentage of students with two or more failing marks increased by 83 percent in the first quarter of the 2020-21 school year. Certain demographics of students struggled even more, including students with disabilities, Hispanic students and English learner students, according to the report. When separating middle school students from high school students, the former had higher incidences of two or more failing grades, a 300 percent increase versus 50 percent increase among high school students.

There are physical consequences to consider as well. A recent study from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention that included 1,290 parents whose children were engaged in online instruction found that students receiving virtual instruction were more likely than those who received in-person instruction to report decreased physical activity, fewer opportunities to socialize with friends and worsened mental or emotional health overall.

Parents who are concerned about their children's educational opportunities over the last year-plus may want to emphasize more smart play this summer. Encourage children to read more, even if it's books of their own choosing, which they are more likely to complete than books selected for them. Families also may want to work with tutors to bring their children back up to level in math and reading proficiency so students are ready for the new school year when it begins in August and September.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

TIFFANY GOT ANSWERS. TIFFANY GOT VACCINATED.

I was ANXIOUS.

I'm Tiffany Hicks from Danielson. I'm 20 and was nervous about getting the COVID-19 vaccine.

It was new and I was hearing and seeing a lot of things on social media that were confusing.

I became AWARE.

I started thinking more about it. Some of my friends and co-workers were unsure about getting it, too.

I had questions and needed answers.

I ASKED...

So I talked to my aunt. She's a public health nurse and was able to explain things in a way that made sense and answered all of my questions. She told me that I could be vaccinated safely. She's someone I trust to tell the truth.

I'M ALL IN.

I got the facts and got vaxed. My friends trust me, so they got vaxed, too. Now we can get together again AND we get to ditch the mask in most places!

Vaccination is the answer to ending the COVID-19 pandemic. Ask us. We're trusted for the truth.
