How they see us

You may notice this week that I look a bit...different.

I often joke with my friends that someday I would get to a point that I have one of those professional sketch artists do a sketch of my face to run with my columns. There may or may not be some stuff in the works there... stay tuned.

But for now, whenever I have the chance to switch things up, I will. Sometimes, you'll see a different picture in my headshot box, or I might even add a photo to the column to add effect. In this case, the photo you see is a drawing of myself sketched out by my son last weekend.

Now, there are a couple things I have to point out here. First, the eyes. It might seem like I am sporting some fashionable eyeliner, but in fact, those are racing goggles to go with my sleek racing uniform (that's a number 5 on my chest there...).

Secondly, what may seem like a normal mustache is something much different, and a lot more hilarious. When he drew this picture during his Sunday School class last weekend, his teachers giggled when I arrived and he gave me the picture and saw my confused look.

"It's your nose hairs, Daddy," he said, smiling innocently, and causing an eruption of laughter in the room. I laughed hard, as did my wife ... as did everyone I've showed it to since.

It got me thinking about how our young kids see us parents. I often think that my son sees me as this big, Incredible-Hulk like figure that can lift cars up singlehandedly and throw them across a parking lot. He'll marvel (see what I did there?) as I lift him with one hand and let him hang on my arm like a jungle gym. Maybe it's that view from beneath that gives him a unique perspective of what is apparently a forest full of brush in my nose...

It's the imagination that maybe blows me away the most, not that I have no imagination. Quite the contrary...I think I have to have a healthy imagination to be in a creative field such as this one. It's just funny to see the results of his. Followers of this column will recall an entry in which I marveled at his thirst for stories and how we would often make them up on the spot. Recently, he has taken to making them up on his own and telling me the stories instead, complete with locations, names, descriptions and backgrounds. Simple stories often turn into minutes of character set-up, leading to a lot of "to be continued" moments just because it's time to go to bed. It's a fun to hear his storytelling skills develop.

Today, I'm a larger-than-life character that he looks up to. I know this phase of our relationship is destined to change as he grows older. Soon, he'll be a young man, and how he sees me will change. It's part of life, but for now, I'll enjoy being the Incredible Hulk race-car driver with unruly nose hair.

PUTNAM — Putnam voters are being called to the polls for a referendum this coming Tuesday, Sept. 13, to vote on increasing the appropriation meant to help install a new manganese and iron treatment facility in Putnam as part of extensive work on the water lines and system throughout the community.

The new facility would be added to the well field on Park Street and would cost quite a bit more than originally expected according to Putnam Town Administrator Doug Cutler, who said the referendum is required to increase the expenditure the town will use to cover the construction of the facility.

“The vote on Tuesday will decide whether or not to amend the previous appropriation that we had of $2 million to increase it by another $3 million because the project costs came in, when we did the bids, approximately $3 million over the original bid prices and estimates,” Cutler told the Villager. “The WPCA decided to go ahead and seek the additional appropriation because to resolve the iron and manganese problem in the water will greatly improve the quality of water for the users in the system. The total appropriation for the project will be $5 million and the good thing about it is even though it’s additional money, it’s already been factored in to the rate structure, so there will have to be no additional rate increase for the users.”

Cutler said the town has done well in terms of financing through the USDA, and between a combination of low interest loans and a significant portion of the project being paid for through grants Putnam can go forward with the project without increasing the rates should the voters approve the expenditure on Tuesday.

Putnam Water Pollution Control Authority Chairman James Shaw released an informational release on August detailing the project and the expenditure for the initiative saying that iron and manganese are a legitimate water quality concern that needs to be addressed and this new facility will do just that.

“Iron and manganese can affect the flavor and color of water and food,” Shaw said. They may react with tannins in coffee, tea and alcoholic beverages to produce a black sludge, which affects both taste and appearance. Iron will cause reddish-brown staining of laundry, porcelain, dishes, utensils and even glassware. Manganese acts in a similar way but causes a brownish-black stain. Soaps and detergents do not remove these stains and use of chlorine bleach may actually intensify the stains. Iron and manganese deposits will build up in pipelines, water heaters and toilets (the red-brown-black brown slime in the toilet tanks) and can clog water systems and increase energy costs when heating water coated with iron or manganese deposits.”

Shaw also stated that initially tap water may appear clear, but when exposed to air iron and manganese become oxidizes and change from colorless forms to a colored solid form, leading to the aforementioned effects on dishes and drinking products.

“Originally the projected cost for an iron and treatment facility was projected at $2,090,000 by our engineering firm and the Town approved that expenditure in 2013. After going out for bids, the most cost effective option came in at $5,040,000,” Shaw said. “When the WPCA developed its capital improvement plan in 2011 there were very few specifics known at the time. In order to jump start the program we based our financial projections on estimates with a goal of addressing the most severe situations first. The town approved a new rate structure for the customers based on those estimates and to-date we have been able to execute our plan within that rate structure. Through the USDA we were able to secure more grants than expected as well as locking in lower interest rates than budgeted for the bonding. In addition most of the overdue receivables have been collected resulting in a surplus in our capital funds reserves. Consequently, we will be able to make the proposed capital expenditure for the iron and manganese treatment facility without increasing the rates paid by our customers.”

The new facility is part of a much larger initiative currently underway throughout the town of Putnam. Cutler noted that residents and commuters may have come across many different piping and roadway projects throughout the town and all of this is part of a large multi-faceted initiative to fully update the water systems in Putnam including the drilling of several new wells in the well field and a $50 million relining and replacement project for the town’s water lines.

“Those projects are ongoing and those should be completed sometime in late spring or summer of 2017. The manganese and iron initiative is completely new. This is going to take place at the well field where we will be putting in a treatment facility there. The water that comes out of the well fields will be treated for both manganese and iron and then they will go into the water system through our new relined or replaced water lines. It’s one of the projects the WPCA had worked on to improve the water system facilities throughout the town,” said Cutler.

The referendum to decide whether or not to increase the appropriation for the treatment plant project will take place from noon until 8 p.m. on Tuesday, Sept. 13 at the regular polling places in Putnam. Those with questions about where and when to vote should contact the Town Clerk’s Office for more information.

Sept. 11, 2001: The Day That Changed America

BY RON CODERRE
SPECIAL TO THE VILLAGER

PUTNAM — “We’ve been hit by a plane. Get out of here.”

Those were the words of Commander Dave Radi to Dee Carnahan on Sept. 11, 2001 immediately following the impact of the plane that crashed into the Pentagon less than a football field’s distance from the Vice Chief of Naval Operations’ office where the pair was working on the day that changed America.

Dee Carnahan, who grew up in Putnam as Dolores Coderre, arrived at her Pentagon office on the morning of Sept. 11, 2001, at approximately 7 a.m. after a half hour pleasant trip from her home in Annandale, Va., on a day she describes as “a beautiful day, without a cloud in the sky.” After securing a “great parking spot” and purchasing a cup of coffee in the Starbucks Pentagon, she was prepared for a “business-as-usual day.”

On Jan. 19, 1970, shortly after graduating from Putnam High School, Carnahan said goodbye to her family and departed for Washington, D.C. and what would turn into a 32-year career with the United States Department of the Navy. During that time she worked her way into her position with the Vice Chief of Naval Operations.

On the morning of Sept. 11, 2001, Carnahan and Commander Radi were the two early birds in the office as the Vice Chief was in meetings in the Command Center preparing for a budget meeting. One of Carnahan’s closest friends and co-worker Peggy Boden was also in her office in the E-Ring of the Pentagon.

The television in the VCNO’s office was on CNN on mute, as it was every day according to Carnahan.

The atmosphere in the office that fateful day was light. That morning her assignment was to contact her counterparts in the Army, Air Force and Marine Corps checking on the dates for their department Christmas parties to avoid conflicts for the upcoming holiday season.

Suddenly, the CNN images on TV picked up the attacks on the World Trade Center in New York.

As Carnahan and Radi turned up the volume on the TV, Commander Radi exclaimed, “We’re being attacked.” At that moment, the budget meeting, the atmosphere in the Vice Chief’s office and the Pentagon changed its focus to the happenings in Washington, D.C. and to the Navy’s ships positioned around the world.

The United States Navy and the Pentagon suddenly was transformed into “complete war mode” according to Carnahan.

“Is the Pentagon in jeopardy of being hit by a plane?” Carnahan asked Radi. He assured her that would not occur. A short 10 minutes later at 9:38 a.m. the Pentagon and its new Navy Command Center was struck by the terrorist hijacked plane, and approximately 10 highly classified Navy personnel and civilians in the new wedge were dead.

The United States of America was under attack — and in turmoil.

GETTING OUT OF THE BUILDING

Shortly following the impact of the crash, Admiral Bill “Fox” Fallon commandeered two young sailors with instructions.

“Petty Officers ... I want you to get Dee out of here safely.”

They obediently saluted their superior officer, took Carnahan by the arms and began the journey to exit the massive structure.

Getting out of the Pentagon wasn’t as easy as following Admiral Fallon’s instructions. Having received news that another plane was headed to the Pentagon, many of the 20,000 people in the building were on the same mission, exiting the building.

Following more than 30 minutes of attempting to figure out the fastest and safest way to exit the building, Carnahan, with the assistance of her escorts, reached an area of the Pentagon known as the River entrance.

“Outside on a grassy area I looked around and all I could see was black smoke. The press was already on the scene. Someone stuck a mic in my face with a question. I was in such shock all I did was walk away,” said Carnahan.

Walking away as quickly as she could, Carnahan had two things in mind — finding her husband, Rick who worked in a building about a mile away, and wondering about her friend Peggy, who had been in the area where the plane struck the building.

Surprisingly, she found her friend Peggy. They were both in tears. As they hugged, they realized that each thought the other might have been killed by the impact of the plane. A few weeks later, Peggy related to Dee that as she was in her office, she looked out of the windows and saw the plane, about 3/4 of a mile from the Pentagon, heading directly in their direction. She shouted, “I’m out of here.”

A move that saved her life.

Despite phone lines that were jammed, Carnahan’s husband had gotten through to her office and was assured that she was out of the building. He was immediately on a mission to locate her. As she walked in a dazed condition she met a person moving in her direction and it was Rick. She was in such shock that she didn’t recognize him at first glance.

“I was crying uncontrollably. We hugged and he assured me I was safe. We walked to his office, where I called my elderly mother in Putnam to let her know I was safe,” explained Carnahan. “Mom began crying the moment she heard my voice and I was crying also.”

Within a week, Carnahan was back at work in temporary headquarters at the Navy Annex. A month later, she and other survivors were back in the Pentagon carrying on, although life in the Pentagon and for Carnahan would never be the same.

“The first plane that flew over our building scared everyone as memories of 9/11 ran through everyone’s minds. Returning to the Pentagon I never felt comfortable as the odor of jet fuel permeated our offices,” said Carnahan.

C a r n a h a n remained in her position for seven months, following the attack on the Pentagon.

LIFE AFTER 9/11

Since her retirement on April 26, 2002, Carnahan has not returned to the Pentagon. She has visited the 9/11 Memorial in Washington. Looking over the names on the Memorial, Carnahan is astonished at how many of those who lost their lives she knew.

A few years after her retirement, she and her husband built a home in Woodstock, which they still occupy today. She’s involved with her church and assists other organizations, especially those involving veterans, as a volunteer when they call for help.

In reflecting on life in the Pentagon and in general prior to the 9/11 attacks Carnahan said, “It was a simpler time. I always felt safe in the Pentagon but the world has changed since that morning in September 2001.”

Although she doesn’t dwell on the morning of September 11, she admits that when she hears or reads about terrorist attacks she thinks back to her experience in the Pentagon.

“When you were part of it (the attack) there are always reminders. I realize how fortunate I was. But for the grace of God I and many others could have died,” she said reflecting on her experience.

As the 15th anniversary of the Sept. 11, 2001 attacks approach, Carnahan will gather with others in a special remembrance ceremony schedule for 2 p.m. at the Putnam Middle School auditorium. During the ceremony, as she shares her story with those in attendance, it will be an occasion for her and others, as they reflect, that as Americans we can’t forget that day.

Woodstock Fair brings out all New England has to offer

WOODSTOCK — The 156th Woodstock Fair packed in weeks worth of entertainment and attractions into Labor Day weekend, with a full slate of music, food, rides, agricultural exhibits and much more Friday, Sept. 2 to Monday, Sept. 5. Although threats of Hurricane Hermine loomed large all weekend, the weather remained perfect all four days for another successful year at the fair.

Woodstock Fair highlights Labor Day festivities in Quiet Corner

Almost as if previewing the upcoming fall season, the Woodstock Fair featured its fair share of pumpkin-themed displays, including a competition for largest pumpkin with many impressive entries.

What proved to be a rather popular ride for the young and young at heart, the Crazy Bus ride took visitors high into the sky, giving a birds eye view of the Woodstock Fair.

One of the South Stage's more family-friendly events, the wheelbarrow race contest challenged parents and children to put their teamwork to the test in hopes of taking home the blue ribbon.

WOODSTOCK — The 156th Annual Woodstock Fair was the highlight of Labor Day weekend once again in north eastern Connecticut, bringing visitors from across New England and beyond to the Quiet Corner for one of the biggest fairs in New England. Vendors, great musical acts, go kart racing, animal and agricultural displays, games, rides, and so much more, made for a busy weekend as the fair was also accompanied by great weather, despite threats from Hurricane Hermine, which held off long enough for the fair to enjoy a perfect weekend of fun and excitement, as a New England tradition added to its already extensive and storied history.

A young visitor to the Sphinx False Alarmers display plays on a fire truck while also learning the importance of taking emergency responders and the consequences of false alarms seriously.

Visitors to the Woodstock Fair partake in an educational activity challenging them to guess the age of a tree using the rings presented on its cross-section.

Contestants of all ages took part in many different games at the Woodstock Fair, including the popular water gun game challenging participants to hit a target and pop a balloon before everyone else to win a prize.

Tractors, tractors everywhere! A common site at the Woodstock Fair countless modern and antique tractors showed the history of America's most well known farming vehicle.

With the Woodstock Fair having the second largest sheep show in New England, surpassed only by the Big E, many local youngsters turned out to show their prized sheep. During the Lead Line show on Saturday, Sept. 3, the young sheep showers were also challenged to wear woolen clothing as well.

Always a popular feature at the Woodstock Fair, the birthing center cave spectators a front seat view of the birthing process for a few local cows who later showed their motherly tendencies by cleaning and caring for the newborn calves.

A unique feature at the Woodstock Fair, go-kart racing is always a staple of the event, with the fairgrounds having a paved track on site for the future stars of motor sports to put their skills to the ultimate test.

Ricky Nelson Remembered, a show featuring the Nelson Brothers, was just one of many events on the Main Stage over the course of the Labor Day weekend at the Woodstock Fair. This particular showed paid tribute to the former heartthrob who passed away in 1985.

September transitions

September is a bit like January. We have a fresh slate to begin again, a new page on which to write our “to-do” lists and resolutions. The rituals commence with the purchase of a pumpkin or two for the doorstep and a half-peck of local apples. I’m glad that some items are sold in specific numerical units – apples in bushels and pecks, corn by the dozen or half-dozen. The amounts give the products a special heft. They are purchased in quantities that emphasize the tradition of harvesting abundance.

The anxiety and excitement we felt for years as we and later our children began another school year mounts slowly through August only to crescendo after Labor Day when the reality of the long months ahead hits home. Although we are not going to step onto the school bus or move into a dorm room, we are as programmed as the monarch butterflies to begin our own migration every September and to share the excitement, if only vicariously, with those eager students. I start by packing away my white clothes. I put away white shoes, in particular, until Memorial Day next year. I looked into why I follow this ritual and with a little reading found that the tradition goes back, to the classism of the late 1800’s and early 1900’s when wearing white indicated that one was wealthy enough to have a summer place. I don’t have a vacation home, but I like changing garments. It feels good to haul out different clothes that are a bit like human camouflage for fall.

At the orchard where I pick up a beautiful box of vegetables every Saturday, the branches of the trees are bending down with apples. It has been a long, dry summer, but, their crop is abundant. Fall brings out crowds of people for hayrides and apple picking. They haul away pumpkins and fruit as part of their harvest rituals.

Cider is a component in seasonal recipes, including cider donuts. Only the much promoted flavor of pumpkin, now a staple of drive through coffee spots, exceeds the emphasis on cider. As a child, I knew people who made hard cider and drank it all winter. Now it is sold in bottles and cans, becoming fashionable, instead of slightly illegal. Whether it is fermented or not, the smell of fresh cider draws us and the last bees of summer with to its distinctive scent.

September brings the renewal of book clubs, organizations, fund raisers, and fitness routines. It’s time to consider taking a course, learning a new skill or cleaning the gutters. From the sublime to the practical, the fall is so invigorating that it seems nothing is impossible. Two years ago I hiked the Grand Canyon with friends. We went down the, North Kaibab Trail and up the Bright Angel Trail.

In a notebook I kept advice from a guide. She told us when we came to the Eye of the Needle, seven miles down, that as we rounded a corner, we were to hug the rock and keep our eyes on the ground, where the rock met the trail. People fall when the look out and are moving. Stillness was the key. The day of the hike was the hottest September day I have ever experienced. My heart was pounding from exertion and exhilaration, but I focused on being calm and still. When I stopped moving, I felt the heat from the canyon walls and the loose gravel beneath my feet. I looked up and resolved to make a ritual every September of breathing in a new experience and revealing in the beauty of traditions.

Election Letters Policy

Editor’s Note: With an election season upon us, the Villager will occasionally publish its guidelines for submitting election-related letters. Should you have any questions, do not hesitate to call us at (860) 928-1818.

Believe it or not, we’re coming up on that time of year — election season.

Candidates in our communities are gearing up for Nov. 8, and just as they are hoping for a good voter turnout, Villager Newspapers wants to hear from you. Who do you support in your town’s upcoming election? Why? What issue is most important to you?

Our Election Letters Policy is as follows: Absolutely no anonymous Sound Offs may be submitted in endorsement of any candidate for political office. Any mention of a political candidate and/or issues he or she has addressed, and any election-related matter, must be done in a signed Letter to the Editor.

All endorsement/election-related letters must be received in a timely enough fashion to allow for publication up until one week before your town’s election. While space dictates how many letters are published in each issue, prompt submission will increase the likelihood of inclusion. In other words, writers are advised not to wait until two weeks before an election to submit a letter.

The last edition including political letters will be the Friday, Nov. 4 Villager. Letters must be received by the editor no later than 12 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 1.

All letters must be signed, with a place of residence and phone number supplied for verification if needed. Failure to include any of that information could result in your letter not being published.

All letters must be free of personal attacks and libelous remarks. Letter writers are encouraged to remain focused on endorsing a candidate, and to refrain from commenting negatively about opponents. Failure to follow that guideline could result in rejection of a letter to the editor.

Letters should not be written as though to a particular individual (for example: “Your decision was wrong. You should not act in that way.”). Refer to individuals by name, and then by “he” or “she” or “they” in subsequent references.

For election-related letters only, there is a 500-word limit, and all submissions will be published as space is available.

Any candidates for office will be allowed one letter to introduce themselves and their candidacy. Candidates will not be allowed to submit any other election-related letters.

The editor reserves the right to edit any and all submissions at his discretion. When possible, attempts will be made to allow the letter writer to rewrite, but the final decision rests with the editor.

No “Your Turn” columns will be accepted as candidate endorsements.

The editor reserves the right to refuse a submission if it does not meet any of the aforementioned guidelines for publication. The editor may otherwise edit or reject a letter at his discretion.

There are a lot of important issues facing every town this year and you deserve a say in them. You’ll get one chance at the polls on Election Day. You have another chance on our Op/Ed pages.

So what are you waiting for?

E-mail Editor Adam Minor at adam@villagernewspapers.com, fax us at (860) 928-5946, snail mail us at P.O. Box 196, Woodstock, CT 06281, or come drop it off in person at 283 Route 169, Unit #2, Woodstock, CT 06281. Letters will not be accepted by phone or by voicemail. E-mail is preferred.

What worries me about power plant proposal

To the Editor:

With regard to the McCommas (from Willimantic) letter of Sept. 2 regarding power plant opponents, I too appreciate the gas in my car, gas for heating and the electricity to light my darkest hours, but what worries me about the proposed NTE plant, among many things is:

- That Connecticut is a net exporter of power. Our state has sufficient power for the next decade and more. The NTE capacity will all be exported to other states.
- That this 3-year-old company from Florida which has never completed construction of a power plant, never operated a power plant and is proposing to build a 60 percent efficient plant, will spew out upwards of 2 million tons of pollution per year, then obtain pollution credits from other states, to offset this. With eight existing plants in a 31-mile area and potentially two more clustered in our region, the cumulative effect on the health of our citizens, six schools, Day Kimball Hospital and senior citizens housing within a ten mile radius, will only increase diseases such as asthma, where Windham County is already 18 percent above the remainder of the state.
- That there will be minimal economic benefits for Killingly – Their report (which their own consultant, while denying responsibility for content, says is based on NTE input) states “induced” benefits come to you and I by spending money given to us through hypothetical electricity cost reductions, or presumably buy new cars and houses, or more likely a McDonalds meal and jobs?

• That it is unknown how many Killingly residents will actually be employed here. The 25 to 28 projected full time positions by NTE may live in town, but possibly in surrounding towns (including Willimantic) and states. Even their vice president said: “Wouldn’t it be nice if Killingly got three or four jobs?” Construction jobs? Their own report cannot guarantee any will be Killingly residents! Yet NTE wants huge tax reductions to boost their profits.

That the CT Water Co. executive stated to the Killingly Town Council that they cannot quantify the aquifer water and could not guarantee enough water for future local and industrial development.

• That nowhere in the town’s regulations is a power plant explicitly permitted, especially in the rural and residential area the plant will consume.

So, we get no electricity and minimal, if any, economic benefits, but we do get the pollution, health detriments and other issues.

If that makes me a hypocrite, I can live with that. And so will my grandchildren who live the affected areas.

I suggest that Mr. McCommas, who does not live in town, who would have the opportunity of breathing the polluted air if he did, attend a local meeting on the topic to get deeper information, rather than a quick observation.

Help us ‘squash hunger’

Sunday/Sabbath Challenge. Please consider a donation when you worship. Dr. Barks Chiropractic office in Putnam is supporting “Squash Hunger” by collecting soup and jelly.

On Sunday, Sept. 11, at 1 p.m., join us for Kids Hiking for Hunger. We’ll meet at the Riverview Marketplace Pavilion on Kennedy Drive in Putnam. There will be refreshments and fun activities for the kids. Then get ready for Marcy’s “Big Adventure” Nature Hike and Scavenger Hunt along the new river trail. This is a free event but donations of peanut butter and jelly are welcome. On Tuesday, Sept. 20, we teamed up with TEEG and the Putnam Lodge of Elks to invite you to a free showing of “Just Eat It: A Food Waste Story” at 6 p.m. at the Elks Lodge on Edmond Street in Putnam. This powerful documentary is entertaining and thought provoking. Please join us and learn more about food waste and how we think about and value food.

Thank you for taking the time to read this letter. By doing so, you have already taken a step towards helping us “Squash Hunger.” For more information about Squash Hunger, please visit our website www.ihspputnam.

Pomfret, “we” have a problem

To the Editor:

Dear Mr. Mann, in response to your letter of Aug. 12, I am glad that the Pomfret Republican Town Committee has realized the seriousness of the Longmeadow “situation.” And that they have faith in the Board of Selectmen believing they will “do the right thing.”

The time to do the right thing was prior to the start of the project. That time has passed.

But, this has little to do with the Republican Town Committee, other than it nominated two members of the Board of Selectmen. This goes beyond politics. This is not only a “Longmeadow” issue, but a “community” issue. “We” have a problem. “We” need to arrive at a solution that goes beyond party lines. Let’s focus on getting to the best solution, not on supporting those who got us into this “situation.”

First, we need to insure this product will not be used on any other roads in Pomfret, ever again. Next, we need open discussion, sharing of information, regular meetings, transparency, and an ongoing dialogue to come to a resolution.

Let us all work together to insure the health and safety of everyone in our town.

The words of the wind

We’ve certainly had our taste of wind over the last several days thanks to Hurricane Hermine.

The storm has been marching up the East Coast over the Labor Day holiday, bringing with it some much needed rain. The storm’s winds have been quite impressive!

My daughter and I spent some time watching the wind, feeling the air brush across our faces. We watched how the trees bent and bowed. We liked the breezes through the open windows, and how the wind tossed our hair. I enjoyed the refreshing exhilaration, which reminds me of the “wind adventures” that I used to play as a child. My daughter and I talked about the swirling leaves and falling pinecones, and the way in which the trees looked as if they were dancing. You might say that the taller trees could be dancing the mambo.

My daughter is especially invigorated and bursting with excitement about the wind. As a four-year-old, she’s learning about her five senses, and, one of the five is touch/feel. She did try to “taste” the wind, but was frustrated because it didn’t have the same “taste” as her favorite foods. We did talk about how we could hear it, too.

When I was little, just before we’d drift off to sleep, my mom used to recite this poem, “Who Has Seen the Wind” by Christina Rossetti. These are the lines I have memorized: “Who has seen the wind? / Neither you nor I: / But when the trees bow down their heads,/ The wind is passing by.” I liked the idea of knowing when the wind was near us, but not being able to exactly “see” it. I guess I kind of considered the wind to be hiding in secret from us. It’s a special childhood memory, which I shared with my daughter this week.

After recalling this generational moment I thought I’d see what other poems there are about wind. These are some of the ones I enjoyed the most.

There is an excellent poem by Robert Frost, which calls to the wind to bring an end to our least favorite season, the cold winter, and to push in the warmth of the sun, the vibrant colors of the flowers, and the new beginnings of spring. The poem is entitled “To the Thawing Wind.” A few of the lines highlight the “digging out from the cold:” “Bring the singer, bring the nester; / Give the buried flower a dream;/ Make the settled snow bank steam” Frost “asks” the wind to welcome the nesting birds back, to encourage the spring flora, and to do away with the packed, hard snow.

Robert Louis Stevenson also wrote about the wind in his poem called “The Wind.” One verse discusses our childhood love of flying a kite in the swirling wind: “I saw you toss the kites on high / And blow the birds about the sky; /And all around I heard you pass” Most people have observed a kite’s tails whipping in the wind, or have watched a hawk going up and down with the wind, soaring on its hunt for food.

Another poem I enjoyed about the wind is Dee McDonald’s poem which highlights the fact: “Wind is Anywhere.” This is a very appropriate title! “The wind it moves in wondrous ways / Through the tree branches it blows and its sways / It takes all the leaves and flies them so high / Then briefly it lets go and they fall from the sky.” Breezes can be felt all over the globe, either with fierceness or with softness. All kinds of natural things, flora and fauna, ride on the wind.

Wind is a powerful force! What are your favorite poems or stories about the wind?

Five things to know about inherited IRAs

When an IRA owner dies, the IRA proceeds are payable to the named beneficiary — or to the owner’s estate if no beneficiary is named. If you’ve been designated as the beneficiary of a traditional or Roth IRA, it’s important that you understand the special rules that apply to “inherited IRAs.”

IT’S NOT REALLY ‘YOUR’ IRA

As an initial matter, while you do have certain rights, you are generally not the “owner” of an inherited IRA. The practical result of this fact is that you can’t mix inherited IRA funds with your own IRA funds, and you can’t make 60-day rollovers to and from the inherited IRA. You also need to calculate the taxable portion of any payment from the inherited IRA separately from your own IRAs, and you need to determine the amount of any required minimum distributions (RMDs) from the inherited IRA separately from your own IRAs.

But if you inherited the IRA from your spouse, you have special options. You can take ownership of the IRA funds by rolling them into your own IRA or into an eligible retirement plan account. If you’re the sole beneficiary, you can also leave the funds in the inherited IRA and treat it as your own IRA. In either case, the IRA will be yours and no longer treated as an inherited IRA. As the new IRA owner (as opposed to beneficiary), you won’t need to begin taking RMDs from a traditional IRA until you reach age 70 1/2, and you won’t need to take RMDs from a Roth IRA during your lifetime at all. And as IRA owner, you can also name new beneficiaries of your choice.

REQUIRED MINIMUM DISTRIBUTIONS

As beneficiary of an inherited IRA — traditional or Roth — you must begin taking RMDs after the owner’s death. In general, you must take payments from the IRA annually, over your life expectancy, starting no later than Dec. 31 of the year following the year the IRA owner died. But if you’re a spousal beneficiary, you may be able to delay payments until the year the IRA owner would have reached age 70 1/2.

In some cases you may be able to satisfy the RMD rules by withdrawing the entire balance of the inherited IRA (in one or more payments) by the fifth anniversary of the owner’s death. In almost every situation, though, it makes sense to use the life expectancy method instead — to stretch payments out as long as possible and take maximum advantage of the IRA’s tax-deferral benefit.

You can always elect to receive more than the required amount in any given year, but if you receive less than the required amount you’ll be subject to a federal penalty tax equal to 50 percent of the difference between the required distribution and the amount actually distributed.

MORE STRETCHING...

What happens if you elect to take distributions over your life expectancy but you die with funds still in the inherited IRA? This is where your IRA custodial/trustee agreement becomes crucial. If, as is sometimes the case, your IRA language doesn’t address what happens when you die, then the IRA balance is typically paid to your estate — ending the IRA tax deferral.

Many IRA providers, though, allow you to name a successor beneficiary. In this case, when you die, your successor beneficiary “steps into your shoes” and can continue to take RMDs over your remaining distribution schedule.

FEDERAL INCOME TAXES

Distributions from inherited IRAs are subject to federal income taxes, except for any Roth or nondeductible contributions the owner made. But distributions are never subject to the 10 percent early distribution penalty, even if you haven’t yet reached age 59 1/2 (this is one reason why a surviving spouse may decide to remain as beneficiary rather than taking ownership of an inherited IRA).

When you take a distribution from an inherited Roth IRA, the owner’s nontaxable Roth contributions are deemed to come out first, followed by any earnings. Earnings are also tax-free if made after a five-calendar-year holding period, starting with the year the IRA owner first contributed to any Roth IRA. For example, if the IRA owner first contributed to a Roth IRA in 2014 and died in 2016, any earnings distributed from the IRA after 2018 will be tax-free.

CREDITOR PROTECTION

Traditional and Roth IRAs are protected under federal law if you declare bankruptcy. The IRA bankruptcy exemption was originally an inflation-adjusted $1 million, which has since grown to $1,283,025. Unfortunately, the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that inherited IRAs are not covered by this exemption. (If you inherit an IRA from your spouse and treat that IRA as your own, it’s possible that the IRA won’t be considered an inherited IRA for bankruptcy purposes, but this was not specifically addressed by the Court.) This means that your inherited IRA won’t receive any protection under federal law if you declare bankruptcy. However, the laws of your particular state may still protect those assets, in full or in part, and may provide protection from creditors outside of bankruptcy as well.

This hollowed ground: America in decline

Twelve score year ago, our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation founded on Judeo-Christian moral values and enlightenment fostered concepts of self determination. A Republic was formed that for a time was the envy of the world, truly “a city on a hill.” Today, but a hollow shell remains.

The reasons for the decline are sadly typical of the historical fate of all republics, which require a very unique citizenry to sustain themselves. A few all to characteristic examples.

1) Moral Terptitude. No Republic sustains itself by regulation. To provide for a safe and orderly society, as individual moral constraints wane, “through necessity” more regulations are passed to attempt to fill the void. The decline of society and increase in regulation progress in a linear fashion until a once healthy and vibrant society evaporates. When liberty becomes understood as license the “center can not hold.”

When anything goes-everything goes.

2) Freedom of expression curtailed. Independent views require independent thinking. In our current PC society freedom of expression has been curtailed as effectively as if restrictive regulation were passed. A society afraid to express itself is as enslaved as one prohibited from doing so.

3) Functional Illiteracy. With the exception of early childhood education, where great achievements have been made, the U.S. has become the most over schooled-under educated nation on Earth. “Feeling” has supplanted thinking. Since the invasion of Kuwait in 1990 the U.S. has been in continual military confrontation in the Middle East. There is a whole generation today, flush with Liberal Arts degrees, who have never lived a day of their lives under actual conditions of true peace. Many, as with most Americans, and I fear some Congressmen, would not be able to identify the combatants on an unmarked world map. Further, catch-up is obsolete. If World War III should occur the duration will be likely counted, assuming someone is left to count, in hours as opposed to years. Intellectual ignorance or lassitude is no longer a viable survival option. It induces a certain brain-freeze to consider but I believe most Americans, voting or not, have not even the most rudimentary idea on how a Democratic Republic should properly function.

4) Entitlement philosophy. When the “government” is perceived as separate form the individual and a “provider” the citizen has lost his sense of responsibility for personal and societal outcome. When at election time are “you” better off than you were four years ago is deemed a valid question the Rubicon has been crossed. To secure my views to many as heretical let me submit that all space, time, matter and existence, in addition to the workings of a healthy Republic may not be entirely about the “I,” or the “you.”

5) Simple Cowardice. An aging and affluent people will relinquish freedom for promise of security. For every security, real or not, thus attained there is a corresponding loss of independence and self-respect. Imagine for a moment the farmer with nine children snatching the flintlock form the mantle and racing to face the British empire at North Bridge. We have come a long way baby. Today that farmer, if a survivor, would be suing the government for failing to advise him of the danger of lead poisoning from musket-shot.

Persons of esteemable personal character are often reluctant to recognize less laudable characteristics in others. Great minds enacted a Bill of Rights to attempt to provide citizens protection from a over reaching Federal Government. They failed however in their innate optimism to enact a balancing Bill of Responsibly protecting the government from the dissipation of society. The constitutional strength of a Republic relies on the constitution of the individual citizen.

Perusing my preceding remarks the thought occurred that a few might find them a tad pessimistic. Not so! One of the few advantages of advancing years is that negative trends or events have less time to affect you. I believe some future “History of Man” will include a chapter on the noble experiment that was the United States of America, and both it’s positive contributions and failures to future humanity. To have lived to bear witness to such a historical period must be considered a blessing. Future historians may attempt, as they are apt to do, and to no consensus, to date the high water mark and also onset of the great short-lived Republics decline. Impossible of course; but I would favor for the former, Jan. 1, 1863, and the latter, Jan. 22, 1973.

I have not missed voting in a Presidential election since being first eligible in 1972. I have also served in preceding decades in various positions of civic responsibility. No more. No anger, simple acceptance, and resignation. To my grandchildren and yours, I am sorry. Chief Joseph of the Nez Perce said it best; “I am tired. My heart is sick and sad, from where the sun now stands I shall fight no more forever.”

SOUND OFF

Killingly needs a mayor

SOUND OFF:

A favorite campaign slogan is “time for a change” — and if there was ever a change to be had, it is the way Killingly is governed. It doesn’t take much to see that the town manager system with a part time town council has been failing us for decades. Killingly needs a mayor.

Let’s face it. As it stands, the town manager is hired by the Town Council and his job is basically to keep the town running nicely, therefore keeping his bosses (Town Council) happy. His job is not how to revitalize the town. His job does not depend on if the town thrives or falls on its face. His job involves dollars and cents.

I remember when Putnam was in a slump, pretty much like Killingly is. Then I look at how they progressed to where they are now and the mayors that helped it along ... mayors that are at the Town Hall every day.

Wouldn’t it be nice if we had that in Killingly? The ability to contact someone during the day-time. Knowing that someone has their finger on the pulse of the town offices. Someone whose job depends on us.

Or are we happy with what we have — a part-time Town Council where we have a once a month nighttime chance to voice our pros and cons to the “management”; a town hall full of personal agenda; a town that has a hard time looking outside the box; a town that is basically an embarrassment.

A case in point: Constables. Danielson needs a police department and constables are a step in that direction. Studies have been made, meeting with other towns (Plainfield, Montville, etc.) police departments have been held, some money is in place. So where are we now? The Town Council Chairman wants to start all over! Why? So those on the council who weren’t there should not have to rely on reports to make their judgment. Does the chairman think that these councilmen are illiterate? Or is it a self-serving decision? Or just plain old gasbag politics from the part-time Council?

I could list more foot dragging but it would take up a good portion of this newspaper.

Was the chairman elected by the people? No. Scary part is if he’s re-elected to the Town Council, he might again end up as chairman using their convoluted method of determining who rules the roost.

It may be a very cumbersome task, but the only way Killingly is going to change is to change the way it’s being governed.

The next time you go to a Putnam First Friday, River Fire, car show, restaurant, Christmas Parade or just wander in and out of the Main Street shops, think about it. Are you happy with the way Killingly is being run?

Hydrangea arborescens, “Eco Pink Puff.”

There are many overly hyped plants, not garden tested but sold with glowing reviews by those on the take for this author to explore in the context of this limited article. We looked at Betula ‘Renaissance Reflection’ last month.

Too many of the new herbaceous offerings glut the market with promises of performance and mesmerizing radical colors. There have been a bevy of new Purple Cone Flower hybrids (Echinacea), all remarkably beautiful in picture with far too many proving to be poor garden performers even in excellent culture. These named selections are almost invariably patented which garner extra money for the breeder with every plant sold. Marketers, too, are also well-paid for their purple prose and in too many cases disservice to the consumer. As in the case of the Purple Cone Flowers many simply melt down after a year or two. Even when planted in perfect conditions of full sun and modestly fertile draining soils they fail. Gardeners sometimes blame themselves. Consumers sometimes blame the nurseries from whom they have purchased their expensive treasure. But it is the genetics of the hybrid, which are problematic. Sometimes a hybrid will pick up the best of both parents. These offspring exhibit a trait known as “hybrid vigor.” The resulting plant from the marriage is exceptionally vibrant and strong. But too often this is not the result and weaklings emerge from the coupling. When these plants are not garden tested under various conditions by the plant breeder then it is everyone else who unknowingly takes the risk and responsibility that is thwarted by the creator of the new plant.

The Coral Bells (Heuchera) with glowing eye candy in picture tag and in leaf startle potential buyers with the extraordinary and amazing array of color choices. ‘Amber Waves’ was touted as the first ginger ale-colored form. We sold many pots of ‘Amber Waves’ to gardeners who were drawn to its new and amazing color. We planted several in perfect garden conditions with great hope. Each successive year the plants dwindled in size and strength. By the fourth year they never emerged. The gorgeous mounds disintegrated into an earthy grave in three years time. The fact is that ‘Amber Waves’ had never been garden-tested. We, the vulnerable, garden-tested without knowing we were doing so having paid big money for it. The breeder of this and many other new Heuchera introductions was and is irresponsible in releasing many Coral Bells to the public with catchy marketing strategy and astounding new colors without having tested any of these introductions. Many new color forms with catchy names have been released to the public with glowing verbiage and tasty photos which make them impossible to resist. While the breeder whistles and skips all the way to the bank the reputations and cash flow of small nurseries all over the country suffer from his malfeasance. What had been promise of treasure resulted in costly loss. Customers wanted them. Small nurseries supply them. And it is we, the small nurseries, who at the cutting edge of supplying astute gardeners with purported horticultural gems were once again blamed for the disgust in which we all shared.

The Smooth Hydrangea ‘White Dome’ is a white dog... no insult intended towards fine, upstanding canines of any breed or mix. Hydrangea arborescens ‘White Dome’ is a selected plant with smallish white summer flowers. Michael Dirr slammed the plant telling readers that when walking the woods in the south he has stumbled upon better and more worthy shrubs growing in the wild.

Hydrangea ‘Invincibelle Spirit’, is a recent pink-flowered hybrid with H. arborescens ‘Eco Pink Puff’ as one of the parents. Despite all of the fanfare and the gorgeous photos reports are that it is weak growing, not worth the expense and a lousy garden plant. The one parent providing the pink genes, H. arborescens ‘Eco Pink Puff’, was introduced by Don Jacobs of Eco Gardens in Decatur, Georgia. ‘Eco Pink Puff’ is relatively unknown but is a remarkable shrub. We’ve grown it. We sell it. It is exceptional in strength, visage and worth. I will be discussing ‘Eco Pink Puff’ and other worthy plants in occasional plant portraits under the banner Buyer Delight.

My humble advice to gardeners and small nursery owners everywhere for whatever it may be worth is this — buyer beware. Control your impulses. A little cynicism is in order. Sit back. Slow pedal. Wait a couple of years for plant performance reports. Save yourself pointless work and heartache. Stash that modest money away for a safer and wiser purchase in the not-too-distant future. Your restraint may prove a sage decision. In the meantime there are many tasks awaiting you in your little piece of paradise away from the cynicism that erodes innocence. Turn your back on it. Now get to the garden. Escape. Dig in. Have fun.

Perry running for state rep on Libertarian ticket

Perry, a third party candidate who last ran for the seat in 2010, receiving only a single vote, his own, after testing the waters to get a better feel for the election process at the time.

An Army veteran, businessman, attorney, former member of Woodstock's Economic Development Committee and active participant in local sports programs, Perry is hoping to change the status quo with a victory in the 50th District election in November.

Closing out our pre-debate interviews, Villager Staff Writer Jason Bleau sat down with Perry during the Woodstock Fair to discuss his decision to run for the open seat and why he feels it's time for a third party candidate to take the reins.

I'm sure one of the first things that comes to mind for a lot of people knowing there is a third party candidate coming into a local race is, why jump into the race under that third party? It's no secret, for better or for worse, that the Democrat and Republican parties seem to dominate on a national scale when it comes to any elections. What's your drive for jumping into a race like this under a third party banner?

"I'd flip that question around, and say, why wouldn't you want another opportunity or someone else to vote for with other ideas? If you look at your lives can you honestly say that you're better off now than you were two years ago, five years ago or 10 years ago? We have the same thing over and over again, and expect a different result, so why not jump into the race now? I had toyed with the idea years ago and I went to the Libertarians and we did our thing and they nominated me (in 2010). The Democratic candidate finally emerged in Bill Loftus, who is a great guy, and so is Mike Alberts. I thought if I had jumped in at that time, traditionally speaking, people think Libertarians or third party candidates steal third party votes, and while I didn't particularly care for either parties' ideas, I didn't want to see this area fall to the Democrats because we're already surrounded by Democrats who control a lot of the state. The lone vote I got then was from me and I was just testing the political process then."

So this is something you've considered for a while then?

"Yes. I'm also looking around and talking to people in the community, and for the first time in a long time, as I talk to my friends and coworkers, we're anxious in that we're not going to be able to pass down or do better for our kids than our parents did for us. I think that's directly related to government involvement and intrusion. So if not now, then I'd ask people when would the right time be? Now is the time."

You made an interesting statement earlier in this interview about not wanting to help the Democratic party by running in 2010 because they already had so much power in the state, but is it safe to say in any way that you may align yourself with the Republicans if you are elected? Or is there more to it than that?

"It's not unfair, but it's not accurate. Libertarians don't align themselves with either party. The fact is that some of the best ideas that both parties have are our core ideas. If you look at the Republicans they're all about small government and fiscal responsibility. They talk that talk, but they don't necessarily walk the walk when they get in. Libertarians have that in our philosophy and we believe in it. Looking at the Democratic Party, they're about equal rights and equality for marriage and other things. They don't necessarily walk the walk either, but they talk the talk and that's part of our core platform also. So it's not necessarily that we as a party align ourselves with one of the other parties, but some of their core ideas fit into our principles."

Let's talk a bit about your platform. What does Ty Perry the Libertarian stand for?

"I wanted to do this because I wanted people to be able to say, 'Hey listen, you didn't keep your promises.' As we sit here today, and as people run through their campaigns, they'll make all sorts of promises. You won't find any of them put them in writing, but I put mine in writing and I've sent it to you're paper, The Villager, a few weeks ago. My philosophy is simple. If there's a law that's going to be unconstitutional then it will be a no vote. If it's a law that may be slightly constitutional — because politicians get very good at being able to pass laws that have some constitutional credibility but still infringe on our rights — that will be a no vote too. If it's something the government shouldn't be involved in then it will be a no for me. There's not another candidate you're going to talk to that will put that in writing or make their platform that simple. I stand for you. What were you born with and what were the rights that you were given? That's what I'm going to go to Hartford and fight for."

Now, you've done this before on a very small scale in 2010, but now it's real. You're not testing the waters anymore, you have to get out there and do this. How do you prepare to make that jump from testing the waters to a legitimate campaign?

"It's a good question. Even now, as I stumble through this, I'm bumping up against rules and laws that I had no idea even existed. It's all a learning process. I'm trying to do a lot of things through social media, which I think I'm probably more adept at than my fellow candidates. I'm trying to do it without taking any money from people too. I'm trying to get the word out more organically. Because I'm more involved in the community I don't necessarily have to go out and force interactions with them. People know me from standing on the side of the soccer field for years and being at the basketball games for several seasons keeping score. I would love to go out and speak to people and I invite people to reach out to me if they want to speak to me. I'd be happy to. As the other candidates probably have a good party system behind them explaining to them what to do, I'm just trying to do it all on my own. It's not insurmountable. The biggest part is bumping up against all these rules to keep people like me out."

You told me you were a member of the Economic Development Committee in Woodstock for a time. What was that experience like?

"This is kind of where I was a registered Republican and the thing that struck me was the committee wanted to do whatever it took to get businesses to Woodstock, and I'm OK with that. However, they were looking at it just to bring in the tax revenue. Doesn't that defeat the purpose? Why would someone come here and open a business when they know down the road you're bringing them in to tax them? They were also alright with changing the character of the town as long as the taxes were coming in and that's not what I was for, so I never ran again."

Getting back to you're campaign and platform — and we will get into the more nitty-gritty questions that I'm sure our readers are waiting for in the next month or so with our debate series — but what would a summarized list of the issues you want to focus on be if someone asked you to tell them your platform?

"It's a tough sell because I essentially have to say that Libertarians believe in individual freedoms and rights, and it's a tough sell when people are so dependent upon the government giving them things. It would kind of be like the voters voting against they're own self-interest in many cases because while they're rights are being trampled upon slightly it's not enough for them to be uncomfortable. You have people losing their rights to own arms and people who can't choose their own health provider that they want to anymore and it's tough to say that as a Libertarian I'll fight for your own individual rights to make your own choices because that's what we stand for. You know what's right for you, but you need someone to go to Hartford to protect those interests. We are a party of individual rights and try to protect them from government intrusion wherever it comes in and it's hard to sell, especially to young people."

Why do you say that about young people?

"It's hard to sell to young people when all they hear is 'free college' and 'free stuff,' and that's all great when you don't have a home or you realize that when you start owning things and making an income on the back end of your paycheck there's money coming out of it to pay for those free things. We just want to protect you and you're ability to earn your own income and spend it the way you'd like."

Well, Mr. Perry, that pretty much answers the questions I have for this introductory interview. I look forward to working with you through this process and I will be in touch for our debate interview over the next few weeks.

"Thanks, Jason. I look forward to it."

Jason Bleau may be reached at 508-909-4129, or by e-mail at jason@stonebridgepress.com.

Lapsley hosts another successful 'Sunflowers for Kids' event

BENEFIT

Pomfret with wagon rides, photo opportunities, games, apple picking and more along with the opportunity for families to join in picking sunflowers from the orchard's flower patches on the side of the road all to benefit the programs of United Services.

Lydia Gullifer, the executive assistant to the President and CEO of United Services Diane Manning, spoke with The Villager early on in the event, saying that the fundraiser has become a time-honored tradition for the organization that offers a little bit of everything for all to enjoy.

"It all goes towards our children's programs. It's an awesome event. A lot of people like to either pick their own sunflowers or some get the ones that are already picked. It's a great fundraiser. It's really a lot of fun," Gullifer said. "The staff members have a lot of fun here too. Even the kids of staff members have a lot of fun helping out with face painting. We have some people from some of our programs helping out as well so we take all the volunteers we can get and as people can see we have a lot of people involved here."

The fundraiser brings in around $1,200 to $1,500 each year in sunflower sales alone, with visitors able to buy one, six or 12 flowers at a time, and even pick their own or Sunflowers line the roadway adjacent to Lapsley Orchard in Pomfret for the orchard's annual Sunflower for Kids program to benefit United Services. use the flowers pre-picked by volunteers throughout the day. Visitors could top off their purchase with other beautiful floral features from the sunflower gardens to add some unique colors to their arrangements.

John Goodman, director of Communications and Development for United Services, was one of many volunteers at the event and helped pick the pre-picked flowers for arrangements at the orchard. Goodman has been a part of the event for 10 years and each year and sees it as a highlight event for the organization with 201 continuing a great local tradition.

"We think of this as more of a fun-raiser than a fundraiser," Goodman said. "We have volunteers and members of our Board of Directors and others who come out and can channel their inner flower arranger. It's really about raising awareness in the community of all the different programs that we have to help children and families. It's an opportunity for everyone to come out for a nice free afternoon of fun and if they want to buy any sunflowers those sales go towards helping our United Services Children and Family Programs."

Lapsley Orchard has hosted the event throughout its run and every year, owner John Wolcheski and his wife Patty work hard to provide the best product for the event. With the Sunflower for Kids fundraiser still going strong after so many years, Wolcheski said it's a pleasure to continue to be a part of such an amazing program.

"United Services approached me years ago about this idea, selling flowers for kids, and what better way of doing a fundraiser. It's pretty rewarding to see the families come by and to see how this event has grown over the years," said Wolcheski. "We started out kind of modest and it's only grown. One thing that really appeals to me is that it is an alternative to all the other events going on this time of year. It's a calm and enjoyable day for all."

The dedication of Lapsley Orchard to the Sunflowers for Kids event has not gone unnoticed or unappreciated by Untied Services. John Goodman said the organization is happy to have a long-standing partnership with the orchard and that they look forward to many great years still to come.

"John and Patty Wolcheski kind of represent the entire area up here in the Quiet Corner in that they are just two of so many people who are doing so many things for all the people in the community just out of the goodness of their heart," Goodman said. "A lot of people don't get appreciation for that and they're certainly not doing it for any reason other than just to be good neighbors, but it really makes a difference for all the families."

AARP honors Flexer with 'Capitol Caregiver' Award

MANSFIELD — State Sen. Mae Flexer (D-Danielson) was recently presented with the 2016 AARP Capitol Caregiver Award, during a luncheon at the Mansfield Senior Center.

AARP State President Laura Green presented Flexer with the award in recognition of her legislative work on behalf of seniors and family caregivers.

"I am so grateful for this recognition, and thankful that AARP of Connecticut has been such a good advocate for legislation like the CARE Act, and other issues of importance to our state's seniors," said Flexer, who is the Senate Chair of the legislature's Aging Committee. "I was so passionate about passing this law because my mother, sister and I each know very well what it's like to be a caregiver and how critical home-care information is. When my father suffered a very serious injury, he was hospitalized frequently and sometimes we got good instructions for care — and other times we didn't. It's essential that caregivers know exactly what to do and what to look out for; that will help speed the recovery process and prevent re-hospitalizations."

Flexer led passage of the state's Caregiver, Advise, Record, and Enable (CARE) Act, which ensures that caregivers are given follow-up care instructions when a patient is discharged from the hospital, thereby helping to reduce costly hospital readmissions. As a result of Senator Flexer's leadership, Connecticut's law is one of the strongest in the country.

Before presenting Flexer with the award, Green noted that she was speaking on behalf of the organization's thousands of Connecticut members and their families.

"We are thankful for Senator Flexer's integral leadership to pass the CARE Act in Connecticut," said Green. "This law makes caring for our loved ones a little bit easier. Our family-caregivers are the backbone of health care in Connecticut and they need our support. We are honored to celebrate Senator Flexer with this award today."

Veterans Coffeehouse set to reopen for fall

KILLINGLY — TVCCA's RSVP Veterans Coffeehouse will reopen for the fall on Tuesday, Sept. 13, at 9 a.m. in Room 215 of the Killingly Community Center, 185 Broad St., Danielson. The program returns for its weekly Tuesday morning gatherings after being on hiatus for the summer.

This very popular program, primarily funded by the Corporation for National and Community Service, served 260+ individual Windham County veterans over its first year. The Coffeehouse offers a mix of speakers on issues of importance to veterans and their families such as healthcare, medical benefits, and estate planning, along with the opportunity to develop camaraderie with others who also answered the call to serve a grateful nation.

On Sept. 16 the Veterans Coffeehouse will launch a special once-a-month series of gatherings featuring entertainment on Friday evenings. The Navy Band Northeast's Top Brass Quintet will kick off the series on Friday, Sept.

16, at 7:30 p.m. at Killingly Community Center, 185 Broad St., Danielson.

The Top Brass Quintet specializes in popular standards, patriotic marches and jazz among its traditional and modern repertoire. The free program on Sept. 16th will be family-friendly and designed to entertain veterans and their families and community members alike.

Navy veteran Fred Ruhlemann of Killingly, volunteer leader of the evening Veterans Coffeehouse program, said, "We are looking forward to our new monthly series of entertainment events on Friday evenings with a goal of attracting a wide audience of veterans and their families."

Capacity of the air-conditioned, handicapped-accessible KCC auditorium is 225 people. Guests will be seated on a first-come, first served basis. Contact RSVP Coordinator Greg Kline (860-774-9286) with questions about TVCCA's RSVP Veterans Coffeehouse.

Putnam goes country for First Friday

PUTNAM — Continuing the 2016 theme for First Friday in Putnam paying tribute to some of the biggest and best cities in the United States, the Main Street area became country music central on Sept. 2, celebrating the sounds of the Music City, Nashville, Tenn. Square dancing, country-themed art projects and, of course, some good old country music from today and yesterday made for a fun evening on Main Street as visitors fully embraced the theme with fake twangs, cowboy boots and hats and a lot of energy making for one of the most active First Fridays of the year.

A woodcarving artist begins to put the finishing touches on a project he created live in front of a viewing audience outside of the Silver Circle Gallery.

Guests to Putnam's First Friday on Sept. 2 celebrated the culture and history of the Music City, Nashville, Tenn.

Tequila Bonfire, a popular New England country music cover band, brought some of the biggest hits of today and yesterday in country to Putnam for First Friday. They were a perfect fit for the Nashville theme of the evening.

Laura Logsdon, of Thompson, shows off a record-themed art project she completed at First Friday as well as her very stylish country-themed attire.

Irene Roy and Val Cooke, of Dayville, looked the part as they stopped by First Friday in Putnam to enjoy the sounds of Nashville.

An artist from Artique continues the company's 2016 tradition of painting a fitting picture for the theme of First Friday. For September the theme was the city of Nashville, so fittingly music and guitars were part of Artique's newest project.

Jack and Drew Seiffert, of Putnam, shows off their balloon creations, meant to represent traditional Stetson cowboy hats.

What good is country music without a bit of square dancing, which served as the main theme of the monthly community arts project at September's First Friday event in Putnam.

The Junkyard Heartstrings brought a fine mix of country and bluegrass sounds to The Crossing, previewing their show at the venue later this month on Sept. 18, while also drawing local visitors farther down Main Street to experience the best First Friday and Putnam have to offer.

Artist Donna O'Scolaigh Lange was on hand to present her oil and canvas paintings at Arts & Framing in Putnam for First Friday. Here she stands with two of her works, "Simmer's End" and "Spring Wash III."

PUTNAM POLICE DEPARTMENT

Police searching for robbery suspect

PUTNAM — On Tuesday, Aug. 30, at about 7:30 p.m., a lone suspect entered Sunny’s Discount Liquors located at 15 Mechanics Street, Putnam. The suspect took an undisclosed amount of cash and fled north in a vehicle on Mechanics Street (Route 12) heading toward the town of Thompson.

The suspect was observed driving a white 1990’s Dodge or Plymouth Caravan with a “donut” style spare tire on the front passenger side of the vehicle.

The suspect is described as a thin white male, late 40’s or 50’s, dressed in black, with a blue beanie style cap, and was wearing a pair of black gloves. The male additionally brandished a knife during this incident.

Anyone with information is asked to call the Putnam Police Department at 860-928-6565. Officer Maheu is the investigating officer of this incident.

“Most liquidators have no formal training. Anyone can set up shop as an estate seller, and plenty of folks who lost their jobs in the recession did just that.”

A “Market Watch” report by Julie Hall of the “American Society of Estate Liquidators” offered this warning to consumers. As when hiring any other professional, you should research an estate sale company thoroughly prior to signing a contract.

At some point in your life your help may be asked to help sell personal property from an estate in another part of the country. There are a number of things that you should look for when hiring an estate sale company. They should have two important skill sets. Check to see that they have good business skills along with knowledge of what they are selling.

An estate sale company can be called upon to sell a wide array of items from blenders or lawn mowers to antique paintings or vintage automobiles. The company should have people on their staff who can properly price such diverse items. Research can provide some of the prices but experience is a huge factor. If the company has sold 80 similar bookcases they will know how to price yours for the local market. To test their knowledge, select a couple of unique items and ask the estate sale company representative to tell you more about the items’ age, the materials they are made of and ask for any other details they can provide.

There are many business skills involved in running estate sales. Items should be well organized and the sale should be well promoted. Their advertisements should include good item descriptions and quality photos. Ask how many people are on their email list and what else they do to market your items. The sale should be well staffed with an adequate number of people there to oversee it and answer questions. Most importantly, they should have accurate clerking.

I shared a quote from Julie Hall of the American Society of Estate Liquidators earlier in this article. The organization was created to form standards for estate sale companies. Affiliated companies must agree to abide by a code of ethics. Estate sale companies must submit references. They have to provide the American Society of Liquidators with information on their recent past estate sales. Estate sale companies must also provide information on their corporate structure. Lastly, a thesis is required on a topic related to estate liquidation trends, improvements, regulations or the future industry. When a client searches the American Society of Estate Liquidators website (www.aselonline.com) they will know that the company they are hiring has been vetted and agrees to abide by a code of ethics.

Along with checking references and doing their other due diligence a recent client of ours attended sales by all of the companies they interviewed before making their decision. Seeing how a company runs their sales in person can be very helpful in choosing which one to hire.

We have a number of sales taking place soon. An antique radio auction will be onsite at the collector’s home in Carlisle on Sept. 18. An estate sale will take place on Sept. 24, in Plainville. Oct. 1 and 2 will be the preview for the Harvard online estate auction with a 1969 Volkswagen Beetle. Follow us at www.centralmassauctions.com to keep updated.

Eastford, Willington announces solar workshops

EASTFORD/WILLINGTON — The Towns of Eastford and Willington have been selected to participate in an award-winning residential solar program that makes going solar easy and affordable. Solarize Eastford/Willington is part of Solarize Connecticut – the ground breaking residential solar program sparked by Connecticut’s Green Bank through a partnership with the non-profit organization, SmartPower. Solarize Connecticut has helped thousands of Connecticut residents save money on energy bills by going solar.

Solarize Eastford/Willington is a coalition effort between the Towns of Eastford and Willington to increase residential solar in their communities. Through a competitive selection process, the towns have selected Earthlight Technologies of Ellington as their solar installer. Earthlight will provide all the solar installations in Eastford and Willington in exchange for special discount pricing.

Solarize Eastford/Willington also offers residents access to special financing options that make going solar affordable with no upfront costs. SmartPower has partnered with Dividend Solar, a national solar financing company, to help qualified residents save money with the $0 down financing option. Other financing resources are available through the solar installer.

The Solarize Eastford/Willington program will kick off with a workshop on Thursday, Sept. 15, from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at the Eastford Town Hall, 16 Westford Road, Eastford.

Another workshop will take place in Willington on Wednesday, Oct. 5, from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at the Willington Library at 7 Ruby Road, Willington.

At these workshops, residents can learn about the program, be introduced to their solar installer, hear about financing options, and have a chance to learn if their house is good for solar.

Solarize is an increasingly popular program that increases residential solar through a proven formula. It relies on an on-the-ground outreach campaign provided through the Town that helps educate consumers. The pre-selected solar installer means residents are getting the best possible price and equipment, specifically chose for Eastford/Willington residents. And special financing makes going solar affordable.

Eastford First Selectman Arthur W. Brodeur supports the program.

“The Town of Eastford, in keeping with its commitment to sustainable energy and consistent with its designation as a ‘Rising Energy Star’ in Connecticut, is pleased to partner with its neighbor, the Town of Willington, and some 60 other Connecticut municipalities, in participating in the Solarize Connecticut program,” Brodeur said. “Such participation is just one of several efforts being undertaken by the town to assure opportunities for, and implementation of, sustainable energy efforts and programs by Eastford residents. With the addition of Solarize Connecticut to the Town’s energy agenda and potentialities, the people of Eastford are afforded opportunities to have solar installation at more affordable rates and with larger savings.”

“We are thrilled to join other Connecticut municipalities to offer solar options to Willington home owners and businesses through the Solarize Connecticut program. Through our chosen vendor, Earthlight, our residents who participate can expect to save money on their electricity usage while making a difference for the environment,” said Willington First Selectman Christina Beebe Mailhos.

“Connecticut is truly becoming a national leader in solar through the Solarize Connecticut program,” stated Brian F. Keane, President of SmartPower. Working in partnership with the CT Green Bank and communities throughout Connecticut, we have been able to add more than 18MWs of residential solar across the state, with over 2,300 households participating. We continue to see financing and the Solarize model bringing down the cost of solar and making it affordable for more and more homeowners throughout Connecticut.”

Homeowners who want to get started finding out if their home is good for solar can go directly to Solarizect.com/ Eastford to “Get Started.”

Residents who live in surrounding communities can also participate in Solarize by going to SolarizeCT.com.

More information about Solarize Eastford/Willington can be found by visiting ww.solarizect.com/Eastford or by contacting Kate Donnelly at 860 604-4846.

Readers share favorite tips and tricks

Summer might be winding down, but readers are gearing up with another round of tips and tricks to make life a little easier. Read on for the latest contributions from area readers.

This reader shares her family secret for light, airy cakes:

Helpful hint: do not attempt to bake a cake on a cloudy or rain day!

The cake will not rise properly! This I learned from my Polish grandmothers.

My many years of baking have proven them to be correct!

Patience is a virtue – especially when it comes to harvesting carrots!

This works better if you sow your carrots later - late June or early July. Instead of picking your carrots when they are ready, cover them with a heavy layer of hay - about 10” to 12” thick. This keeps the ground, and your carrots, from freezing and provides perfect storage for the carrots. I have picked fresh carrots on Jan 1st - when they ran out! (Not sure how long they would keep, I guess it would depend on how cold it got and for how long.) We think they actually taste a bit sweeter kept this way - perhaps due to increased sugar content.

This reader’s tip infuses new life into limp leftovers!

To reheat fried seafood or any fried food, put in a Teflon frying pan on medium heat, no butter or oil, occasionally flipping over until heated through, about 10 minutes, and it will stay crisp, unlike microwaving it where it becomes soggy.

This reader’s “handy” solution eliminates corn silk hassles!

It’s corn-shucking time and how many of us dislike the silk hairs that stay on the corn? I thought I had the answer last year, when I used the plastic jar opener pads, I just rubbed it up and down a couple times and all the silkies were gone. This year, I discovered that a wet cloth or hand, does the same trick. I keep a wet cloth whenever I am shucking corn, and after removing the husks, just dampen your cloth/hand, and move it along the ear of corn and voila - silk hairs are gone!

And, just as a follow-up to your lavender column: Friends from Canada shared their secret to avoid bug bites, especially mosquitos. Put a little lavender lotion (or make your own), on your exposed skin and the bugs feast on your neighbors.

A pickle a day ... keeps the cramps away?

I suffered every night with leg and foot cramps until I did some research and tried this following remedy; eat one dill pickle spear or drink 1-2 tablespoon of dill pickle juice right at bed time as a preventative measure or during the day at onset of muscle cramping. I haven’t had a single cramp since!

Saving money is a trademark of this clever contributor and once again she doesn’t disappoint!

Garden Tip: I recycled old yoga mats in the garden as moisture and vegetative control fabrics. I covered them with mulch. They cut easily and fit around odd-shaped areas.

Also, one can of large tomatoes and a package of ground turkey browned with onion equals three packed lunches of Tex-Mex, Pasta Sauce and Honey Barbecue. One quick cooking session yields three quick meals for office or home. Here’s how I do it:

Brown one package of ground turkey with diced onions;

separate into three equal parts. Add one third of a can diced tomatoes and seasoning for pasta sauce for a quick pasta lunch. Add honey, apple cider vinegar and tomato sauce to another third of the turkey mixture to make a sweet barbecue sandwich lunch. Lastly, add taco or other Tex-Mex seasoning and pan grill some tortillas and add your fixings.

Prize Winner — Congratulations to Bob Perreault of Brookfield, who won Dinner for Two at the Publick House in Sturbridge. He submitted the gardening tip above,

Win Dinner for Two — Your tips can win you a fabulous dinner for two at the historic Publick House Historic Inn in Sturbridge! Simply send in a hint to be entered into a random drawing. One winner per month will win a fabulous three-course dinner for two at the renowned restaurant, located on Route 131 across the town common in historic Sturbridge. Because I’m in the business of dispensing tips, not inventing them (although I can take credit for some), I’m counting on you readers out there to share your best helpful hints!

Do you have a helpful hint or handy tip that has worked for you? Do you have a question regarding household or garden matters? If so, why not share them with readers of Stonebridge Press publications? Send questions and/or hints to: Take the Hint!, c/o Stonebridge Press, P.O. Box 90, Southbridge, MA 01550. Or e-mail kdr@aol.com. Hints are entered into a drawing for a three-course dinner for two at the historic Publick House Inn!

DTC announces School Committee endorsement

KILLINGLY — The Killingly Democratic Town Committee met on Tuesday, Aug. 30, and endorsed Lydia Rivera-Abrams to fill the vacancy on the Killingly Board of Education.

Lydia has lived in Killingly for 12 years. She was born in Puerto Rico graduating from the University of Puerto Rico with a Bachelor’s Degree in Education. She earned a Master’s Degree in Education Administration from Bridgewater State College in Massachusetts and was certified as Program Director in addition to Bilingual Educator. She is the mother of three grown children.

Lydia is an independent Qualified Spanish language interpreter/translator for attorneys in Massachusetts through the Committee for Public Counsel Services.

The members of the Killingly DTC know Lydia to be high energy, high spirit person, always with a warm smile and a big heart, ready to get involved, roll up her sleeves and move any project forward.

Lydia’s resume clearly shows that she has the educational background and the direct work experience that would be an immediate asset to the Killingly Board of Education. Additionally, she brings a multicultural perspective to the educational goals of our current Board.

The Killingly Democratic Town Committee believes that Lydia Rivera-Abrams’ successful past experience in the Boston Public school system and her bi-cultural heritage will be an asset for the Town of Killingly and the Killingly Board of Education. We recommend that she be appointed to fill the current vacancy on the Killingly Board of Education.

Killingly Redmen ready for another run

BY CHARLIE LENTZ
VILLAGER SPORTS EDITOR

DAYVILLE — Killingly High lost several key players from the unit that finished 10-2 last season and reached the semi-finals of the Class M football playoffs. The Redmen bring back many weapons — coach Chad Neal wondered if they bring back the same appetite for victory.

“We do return quite a bit from last year,” said Neal, in his 13th season. “The question is — how hungry are these kids going to be to go out there and earn it?”

Primary among the returnees is senior quarterback Kyle Derosier. A starter since his freshmen season, Derosier brings back a deft passing touch along with leadership to the huddle.

“He’s been a very good leader actually the last few years for us,” Neal said. “But this year he knows he’s got to step up even more and the pressure’s on. We expect big things from him this season and we believe he’s going to produce for us out there.”

Derosier’s aerial prowess should be complemented by Killingly’s running game, led by junior Spencer Lockwood. Lockwood is a speedy and powerful ball carrier who has bulked up from last season.

“(Lockwood) has had an absolutely awesome preseason running the football. He’s put on about 20 pounds of muscle,” Neal said. “He’s faster than he was last year. He’s our go-to guy when we need to run the ball.”

Lockwood has been a beneficiary of Killingly’s strength-training program, run by assistant coach Chad Caffrey and speed training with coach Josh Fortin. Neal said the off-season programs have been integral to Killingly’s success.

“Ever since the season ended last year the kids have been in the weight room,” Neal said. “They’re lifting with coach Caffrey three, four nights a week from when the season ends, just getting bigger and bigger.”

Killingly will need production from other running backs so opposing defenses can’t key on Lockwood. Senior Kelsey Rhines, junior Zach Caffrey, and sophomore Tyler Cournoyer are all projected to get some carries.

Neal said the short passing game will also be key to bringing versatility to the Redmen’s offense. Junior tight end Jake Gauthier and senior receiver Bret Long will be among the targets for Derosier.

“(Gauthier’s) bigger. He’s a year older. He’s definitely stronger if not the strongest kid we have on the team,” Neal said. Bret (Long) made some big catches for us last year. We expect him to be in the mix — he has a bigger role on the defense but he’ll definitely be a guy that’s going to make big plays for us.”

Senior Jeff Ward, junior Zach Burgess, and sophomore Luke Desaulnier are also expected to be contributors to the receiving corps.

Spencer Lockwood will lead Killingly’s ground game.

“Overall I think we’re more diverse on offense and we do have a lot of weapons,” Neal said.

Most of the offensive linemen will also shift over to the defensive side. Neal said Canova, Fontaine, senior Aboy Rone, along with senior Jake Gibson will all “be in the mix” at defensive tackle. Gauthier and Byrnes will be at defensive end, with Ward also “getting some looks” at defensive end.

Killingly brings back experience at linebacker — Zach Caffrey, Rhines and Lockwood all started at linebacker last season and return.

“We’re still trying to build some depth there but with three starters back at linebacker that’s pretty good,” Neal said.

In the secondary, junior Zack Burgess returns at cornerback. Long will be at safety. Neal said Desaulnier and junior Devin Turchetta will be “battling it out for that other corner position.”

Desaulnier reassumes his placekicking chores and gives Killingly a legitimate leg.

“We can kick field goals. He’s good from about 40 yards,” Neal said.

Three of Killingly’s first four games are scheduled on the road but Neal said that might work to their advantage.

“We were 5-0 on the road last year,” Neal said. “You get away from a lot of distractions when you’re on the road and you can just focus on the game. And I think that’s a good thing for our kids.”

Killingly opens at home against Bacon Academy on Friday, Sept. 9. Among the graduation losses from last year’s 10-2 team were a pair of All-State players — running back Austin Caffrey and lineman Josh Angel. The Redmen return talent — Neal will find out if they return with an appetite for victory.

“It’s not just going to happen. They can’t expect it. They’ve got to go earn it,” Neal said. “Kind of just what we did last year — go out and earn it and be hungry. If we do that, we definitely have the talent to — if not be 10-2 — have a successful year.”

Charlie Lentz may be reached at (860) 928-1818, ext. 110, or by e-mail at charlie@villagernewspapers.com.

Friday's Child

Michael is an engaging, energetic and active 10-year-old African American boy who likes playing video games and Pokemon cards. He also likes arts and crafts, board games and action figures. Michael is well-coordinated and athletic, and he shows confidence in his abilities. He has played flag football and has also taken karate lessons. Michael does well playing with his peers and in groups. He is currently placed in a group home where he has developed some positive relationships with the staff.

Michael has responded well to the structure of his therapeutic classroom and he has formed some positive, trusting bonds with teachers and staff. He is a creative writer who enjoys writing his own stories and making books.

Michael would do best in a two-parent home, or with a resilient and vigilant single parent, that could provide him with structure and calm limits while also being able to offer him warmth and affection. Michael would like a family with whom he could "share a lot of laughs" with and who would also protect him. He also needs to remain in contact with his younger sister.

Who are the Children Waiting for Adoption?

There are approximately 2,400 children in Massachusetts foster care with the goal of adoption. Through no fault of their own, they cannot be raised by their birth parents. Many will be adopted by a relative or foster parent, but more than 600 have no one to adopt them yet. These waiting children are usually between the ages of 1-18. Many are sibling groups who belong together, children of color of all ages, and children with intellectual, physical or emotional difficulties or disabilities. These children have experienced many losses and changes in their lives, and need patient and dependable adoptive parents who can help them grow and thrive in their new family. Free post-adoption support services are available to help.

To learn more about Michael, and about adoption from foster care, call the Massachusetts Adoption Resource Exchange (MARE) at 617-54-ADOPT (617-542-3678) or visit www.mareinc.org. The sooner you call, the sooner a waiting child will have "a permanent place to call HOME."

Retooled roster for Quinebaug Valley Pride

BY CHARLIE LENTZ
VILLAGER SPORTS EDITOR

PUTNAM — Quinebaug Valley coach Joe Asermelly must replace starters at 18 of 22 positions from last year’s foot- ball team — the closest thing to a blank slate in Asermelly’s five seasons at the helm — the Pride might have to learn on the job this season.

“We have a lot of good young talent. This year’s sophomore class is really good. The junior class is really good. It’s a small senior group,” Asermelly said. “It’s just a matter of how long does it take us to really figure it out?”

The inexperienced roster presents a challenge and an opportunity.

“The goal of preseason was just to fig- ure out who’s going to start. As a coach- ing staff we’re thrilled because we feel like we’re getting to build something and that’s always exciting,” Asermelly said. “Almost by the week you can see the improvement, you can see the growth.”

And yet Asermelly is a realist and sees a challenging road ahead.

“We’ve got a 10-game schedule that’s very competitive,” Asermelly said. “These kids are going to learn grace under pressure very quickly.”

Quinebaug Valley finished 6-4 last season. Sophomore Josh Dodd will start at quarterback after running the show on the junior varsity team last season.

“A big reason he’s taken on that job is his composure. He’s got a very quick release, a strong arm — he definitely has the mentality of a quarterback,” Asermelly said. “He’s good at repping out his mistakes and repeating things until he figures it out.”

At receiver the Pride have sopho- mores Jeff Reed and Adrian Casiano along with juniors Sam Getchell and Cory Golden. At running back Quinebaug Valley brings in juniors Connor Monahan and Will McGlynn — and the duo will likely share the totes.

“They’re a nice combination of strength and speed,” Asermelly said. “We’ve basically got two fullbacks. They’re going to be splitting carries.”

“I take great pride in the line. We’re Coach Joe Asermelly will guide an inexperienced Pride squad this season.

coming along. I think we’ve got good depth,” Asermelly said. “We go seven deep right now, seven guys that can play — with the new offense, a little more balanced, a lit- tle more throwing.”

Asermelly said the Pride will employ a “West- Coast style offense” that requires versa- tile linemen.

“Still very much a run-first, play-action offense, but more passing, more open sets. And so with that these guys have had to adjust, learn to how to have a proper pass set, proper pass protection, little bit more emphasis on that this preseason,” Asermelly said. “Understanding blitzes, understanding six-, seven-, eight- man box — what we see, how to break it down, what’s our responsibility? It’s a huge learning curve. There’s been a lot more teaching and conditioning and a lot less banging in preseason thus far.”

Most of his line- men will do double duty and also play on the defensive line. Leveille and Thuotte will be on the ends. Laprise and sophomore Logan Owen line up at defensive tackle. Quinebaug Valley’s lineback- ers are all inexperi- enced at the varsity level. Monahan and McGlynn will be on the inside.

Juniors Tommy Ellis and Colin Tatsey will be at outside linebacker. Asermelly expects his line to be the defense’s strength.

“(The line) is the most experienced group. We’re not very experienced any- where truthfully — only two out of four on the line,” Asermelly said. “These guys are talented. It’s just a matter of how long does it take them to learn from what they see to actually translat- ing that into play.”

In the secondary, Getchell will be at cornerback but the rest of the defensive backfield has new faces. Golden will be a corner and junior Jacob Talbot will be at safety.

Although the bulk of the team has sparse varsity experience, most of the players teamed together on a junior var- sity squad that went 4-3 last season and Asermelly said they’ve bonded during preseason camp. It will take more than camaraderie to produce victories.

“These guys like each other. They know each other. It’s a matter of learn- ing varsity speed and the levels of adjust- ments. Things aren’t really vanilla any- more. You don’t play just one defense. You play three, four, five defenses — plus,” Asermelly said. “With so many guys starting new, starting both ways, how much install can you do every day before somebody forgets something? It’s been a big teaching preseason.”

Quinebaug Valley opens the season at home against Woodstock Academy at 7 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 9. Woodstock is a new backyard rival — the series was inaugurated last year with Quinebaug Valley winning 30-15. Asermelly said the burgeoning rivalry is great for foot- ball in the Quiet Corner — but it proba- bly won’t be very quiet at Putnam’s St. Marie Greenhalgh Complex on Friday night.

“I’m totally thrilled. We definitely made sure we kept a spot open that we’d be able to schedule them. We adjusted to make sure that game happened, that they could be part of our schedule,” Asermelly said. “It’s a good healthy thing for football in the area — neigh- bors competing — it’s just good. It gen- erates interest. It gets butts in the seats. I think it’s a game that our kids look forward to.”

The youthful Pride begin their on-the- job training against the Centaurs on Friday night.

“The result of the game, in terms of win-loss, is obviously significant. But I think we’re going in there with a certain number of things that we feel we want to execute,” Asermelly said. “If we can execute those things well, if that’s good enough to win, then great. If it’s not, but we execute the things we’ve given these kids to rise up to at this point, then we’re trending the right way. And we’re heading in the right direction.”

New era for Woodstock Academy football

Kameron Janice returns at running back for Woodstock.

BY CHARLIE LENTZ
VILLAGER SPORTS EDITOR

WOODSTOCK — Woodstock Academy takes to the road and hopes to turn a corner against Quinebaug Valley on Friday night. First-year coach Daryl Daleen knows the sea- son’s fortunes don’t rest on the Centaurs’ open- ing-night performance at Putnam’s St. Marie Greenhalgh Complex on Sept. 9 — but he’s trying to raise the curtain on a new era.

“I think it’s import- ant. This (opening) game has nothing to do with the stereotypical ‘How important is it to start off on the right foot?’ — it’s just getting these kids to move forward,” Daleen said. “So they’re not par- ticipating like they’re going to lose every game, to change the culture around here. So win lose or draw, we’ve got to show things that game — and that will propel us, I think, for the rest of the season.”

Daleen has been tasked with reviving a program that finished with one win and nine losses last season, 2-30 over the last three seasons, and 5-57 over the last six years. He looked forward to the challenge.

Senior quarterback Jared Bouten returns with a year of starting experience under his belt.

“He’s competing a lot better now and he’s throwing the ball pretty well,” Daleen said. “A new quarterback coach is definitely helping that out so I’m excited to see him throw for some yards this year. He’s been around. He’s taken his beatings and I think he’s ready to start giving them out now.”

Woodstock’s quar- terback coach is Greg Alexander, a former quar- terback at the University of Hawaii. Bouten’s targets at receiver will include seniors Nick Short and Caleb Bowen.

Junior running back Kameron Janice led the team in rushing yards last season and returns. Senior Kyle Strandson will also be in the back- field.

“(Janice) has worked really hard this summer to get better conditioned,” Daleen said. “So he’s about 218 (pounds) right now. We had a scrimmage over the weekend and (Janice) broke an 80-yard so we’re pretty excited to see him go.”

Senior Conor Quinn returns to the offensive line and will likely be at center.

“(Quinn) has bulked up some. He’s had a pretty good camp so far,” Daleen said.

Junior Tyler Stuba returns to the offen- sive line and will be at tackle or guard. Senior Tyler Lajoie and sopho- more Blake Kollbeck also return to the offensive line.

Many of the offensive linemen will do double duty on the defensive line. Sophomore Cam Large will be at defensive end or tackle.

The linebacking corps will include Short and Eric Preston. In the sec- ondary, sophomore Ben Holden will be at safety, sophomore Caleb Feen and senior Devin LeRoy will be at cornerback.

Daleen has an impres- sive collegiate coach- ing resume including assistant coaching stops at Newberry College in South Carolina, the University of Pikeville in Kentucky in 2007, the University of New Haven, and at Central Connecticut State University from 2014 until last season — where Daleen was special teams coordinator, linebacker coach, and recruiter.

Daleen said the Centaurs have been absorbing the X’s and O’s thus far.

“These are really smart kids so that’s not an issue,” Daleen said. “We’ve just got to clean up a lot of small stuff — get that straightened up — I mean they all know where to go, just doing what they’re supposed to do when they get there is what we’ve really got to work on the next couple weeks. The pro- gram’s not been here so there’s not really a lot of strength. And so we’ve got to put the focus on that and then polishing up what these kids can do. They know every- thing so it’s just getting them to do what we need them to do.”

Daleen said the Centaurs will employ a spread offense.

“I think we’ve got the personnel to run spread so we’re going to run spread,” Daleen said.

Woodstock has five new opponents on its indepen- dent schedule including Turners Falls, Mass., Pittsfield, Mass., CREC Co-op, Woonsocket, R.I., and Wolcott Tech/ Housatonic Regional/ Wamago Co-op. Daleen was not concerned with the lack of familiarity with much of the oppo- sition.

“It’s the digital age. We’ll have film on every- body. So that’s not going to be an issue,” Daleen said.

Daleen convened his first practices last spring and strength training went well over the off-sea- son in the weight room.

“We had about 30 kids a day during the summer so we’ve had a good sum- mer,” Daleen said.

It might be a heavy lift to change the culture at Woodstock Academy — the Centaurs begin the push on Friday night — trying to turn the corner against the Quinebaug Valley Pride.

“The kids are bet- ter now than I thought they were going to be. Every job has challeng- es,” Daleen said. “I think we’ve got a good shot to win — as long as they compete and do better. The kids have been fan- tastic. I’m still pretty excited about all of this.”

Mark D. Brennan, 48

DANIELSON -- Mark D. Brennan, 48, went to be with his Lord, August 20. Born July 30, 1968, son of Jean (Osterhoudt) Brennan and the late Ralph "Bill" Brennan. Mark leaves his mother Jean, daughter Hannah Brennan, best friend and brother, Dave Brennan, niece Nora, brother Sean Brennan, niece Madison, nephew Kyle, Uncle Lee and Aunt Bev,

Uncle Elmer and Aunt Margaret, Aunt Sylvia, tons of cousins and friends. Mark graduated from KHS. He was employed for many years as a mason for Ken Larrow, Concrete Floors. Mark enjoyed all kinds of sports throughout his life and was the life of the party, made us laugh and had a heart of gold. Calling hours were held on August 25 at the Gagnon and Costello Funeral Home. Share a memory at www.gagnonandcostellofh.com. Arrangements by Gagnon and Costello Funeral Home, 33 Reynolds Street, Danielson, CT

OBITUARIES are published at no charge.

Dr. Marc Cerrone at Norwich Magazine's Best of Northeastern Connecticut awards dinner at Grill 37 in Pomfret Center, Aug. 31. Dr. Cerrone, who is Director of Pediatrics for Day Kimball Medical Group's Pediatric Centers and Medical Director of Day Kimball Hospital's Neonatal Nurse Practitioner Program, won for Best Pediatrician.

Cerrone voted magazine's 'Best Pediatrician'

PUTNAM — Dr. Marc Cerrone, Director of Pediatrics for Day Kimball Medical Group's Pediatric Centers and Medical Director of Day Kimball Hospital's Neonatal Nurse Practitioner Program, has been voted Best Pediatrician in Norwich Magazine's Best of Northeastern Connecticut contest for 2016. Thousands of votes were cast in numerous categories in the magazine's reader's choice poll. Winners, including Dr. Cerrone were honored by the magazine at an awards dinner on Wednesday, Aug. 31, at Grill 37 in Pomfret Center.

Dr. Cerrone has cared for children across Northeast Connecticut for 17 years, having joined the staff of Day Kimball in 1999 after completing his residency at Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York. Dr. Cerrone is Board Certified by the American Board of Pediatrics, is a Fellow of the American Academy of Pediatrics, and is an Assistant Professor of Pediatrics at UMass School of Medicine.

"This award truly means a great deal to me. I am honored that the parents in Northeastern CT have developed such trust in me to care for their children. I have loved watching families grow through the years, and this year I am seeing the babies I first cared for when I started here become seniors in high school! This type of recognition fuels my work and further strengthens my commitment to this community," said Cerrone.

Dr. John Graham, Chief Medical Officer and VP, Medical Affairs and Quality, also praised Dr. Cerrone's contributions to Day Kimball and the community.

"I take great pleasure in congratulating Dr. Cerrone on his recent selection as 'Best Pediatrician.' Dr. Cerrone has been with Day Kimball Hospital for 17 years and is always a pleasure to work with. He is congenial, collegial and is always willing to go the extra mile to improve patient care and assist his coworkers. Day Kimball Hospital and the community are both extremely fortunate to have this talented and caring physician taking care of our pediatric population," Graham said.

In addition to his roles at Day Kimball, Dr. Cerrone is also a co-host of "The New Day" Show on WINY 1350 AM radio alongside Dr. Erica Kesselman. The Show serves to build awareness about health care topics that are important and relevant to the local community. Both physicians are also child abuse examiners for the Windham County Multidisciplinary Team.

An avid runner and triathlete, he is a supporter of Day Kimball's Give it a TRI Triathlon, both behind the scenes as race organizer this year and on race day as a participant. Having just completed its 6th annual event on Aug. 20, the race encourages local athletes of all skill levels to participate and be an example of health and fitness in the community. Dr. Cerrone was chosen last year by the Hartford Marathon Foundation to be a fitness ambassador as a member of Team HMF, and continues on the team this year as he prepares for his fourth marathon this fall in New York City.

His interest in promoting fitness in the community led to his involvement with the Hale Family YMCA, first as co-chairman of the Community Fund Raising Division with his wife Kate, and currently as a Board of Advisors Member. Dr. Cerrone is a founding member of HealthQuest, a community organization designed to promote health and wellness in Northeastern CT.

Previously, Dr. Cerrone was awarded Humanitarian of the Year in 2009 by the Putnam Lions Club following two medical mission trips that he led to Mongolia and Haiti. Since then he has volunteered his services on two other mission trips sponsored by High Pointe Church to Venezuela and Tanzania. Dr. Cerrone can be seen frequently in the community volunteering at fundraising events for local organizations like TEEG, QVCC, Komen's Ride for the Cure and the Interfaith Services Food Bank as well as on stage at the Bradley Playhouse and Complex Performing Arts Center.

Cerrone is known by his patients and colleagues to bring fun to the workplace by dressing up in costume every Halloween at the Pediatric Center in Putnam, and stays up-to-date with what his young patients are interested in by staying tuned in to pop culture. Cerrone says he hopes his positive energy helps sick patients leave the office with a smile.

Celebrity Scoops Night raises $500 to benefit NECT Cancer Fund

PUTNAM — Members of Day Kimball Healthcare's Development department partnered with volunteers from Putnam Bank to host a Celebrity Scoops Night on Aug. 18 at Deary Brothers Mike's Stand in Putnam. Many families came out to support the fundraising event, which raised $500 to benefit the Northeast Connecticut Cancer Fund of DKH.

Members of the Putnam Lions and LEO Clubs, QVCC Rotoract Club and the Putnam Rotary Club served as the Celebrity Scoopers, whose tips were donated to the cause.

Mike Deary, owner of Deary Brothers Mike's Stand, generously donated the venue and raffle prizes and the restaurant's staff assisted the lineup of Celebrity Scoopers by helping to scoop ice cream donated by Gifford's Famous Ice Cream of Maine.

D.J. Sergio of Surround Sound Entertainment generously donated his time for the event and kept the crowd engaged throughout the night, entertaining guests and getting the kids involved in karaoke.

The following Putnam Bank staff members volunteered their time to help organize the event: Barbara Elliott, Eileen Piotroski, Jessica Reed, Lynn Bourque, Jacquie Williams, Paisley Gothreau and Melissa Steadman.

The Northeast Connecticut Cancer Fund of DKH provides financial assistance for the screening and treatment of cancer to Northeast Connecticut residents in need. To learn more about the fund visit daykimball.org/nectcancerfund.

Bank earns '5-Star' rating

PUTNAM — Putnam Bank has earned a 5-star "Superior" rating, the highest given, from Bauer Financial, a national independent bank rating firm. The 5-star rating is based on an evaluation of financial data as of June 30, filed with federal regulators and analyzed by Bauer Financial.

"Putnam Bank is honored to be recognized with a 5-star rating from Bauer Financial," said Thomas Borner, chairman and CEO of the bank. "This rating takes many factors into account, including our financial strength and performance. Putnam Bank's mission is to be the leader among independent, community-based banks in Eastern Connecticut, dedicated to providing exceptional customer service and high-quality, innovative products. We are proud of our bank and the communities we serve."

Putnam Bank, chartered in 1862, is a $515 million state chartered and insured stock bank, with branch offices in Putnam, Pomfret Center, Danielson, Plainfield, Griswold, Norwich, and Gales Ferry. It also operates a Loan Center in Putnam.

Bauer Financial, Inc. located in Coral Gables, Florida has been reporting on and analyzing the performance of U.S. banks and credit unions since 1983. No institution can pay for or opt out of a Bauer Financial rating.
