Local dancers garner national championship

WINCHENDON — The Dance Center came home this July as National Champions from the Beyond the Stars Nationals in Atlantic City, NJ. 37 members of Team TDC traveled down for this event and it was a great success.

The dancers received high gold, platinum, and diamond awards along with many special awards created by the judges, including the Ultimate Technique award. The team performed pieces choreographed by TDC staff and guest choreographers including, Brittany Ashlaw, Joyce Baldwin, Amanda Couturier-Cormier, Debbie Falconer, Jessica Falconer, Jennie Membrino-Nano, and Dede Recko.

Many of the pieces placed in the Top 10 of their age divisions and categories. Some dances were also asked to dance again in the company's Ultimate Challenge, which was a dance-off that ended the week. The pieces chosen included Stray Cat Strut, Celebrate, Numb, Conductor, The In Between, Lessons of Antoine, and The Tree of Souls.

Lessons of Antoine, choreographed by Amanda Couturier-Cormier, and Conductor, choreographed by Jessica Falconer, won their age divisions in the Ultimate Challenge and the biggest award, the Stellar Award/National Championship Title for ages 13 and up, was given to the full team production, The Tree of Souls, choreographed by Jennie

Students with disabilities receive sports opportunities in Unified Sports Program.

BY KEITH KENT
COURIER CORRESPONDENT

WINCHENDON — Students with disabilities who attend the public school system and their families are about to realize a previously unobtainable dream, as those students ages 4 and up will now be able to take part in their very own real life sports programs thanks to the Winchendon School and volunteers in a Unified Sports Program.

The local college preparatory school with its facilities will provide and host a progressively innovative and unique opportunity for disabled students from Winchendon, the Narragansett Regional school district, and Gardner public schools to play sports on teams just like all other students.

Presenting a scenario at the Aug. 3 School Committee meeting, Suzanne Michel, assistant director of pupil services asked members, "Imagine being a parent of a child with special needs, feeling so optimistic of the prospect of your child engaging in recreational activities just like any other child only to find that zero or very few programs even exist. Then if a program did exist, most

A crowded house: the day care yard is reminiscent of any playground

A day care for doggies

BY JERRY CARTON
COURIER CORRESPONDENT

GARDNER — With plenty of Winchendon clients on the rolls, the Gardner Animal Care Center continues to grow but in at least one way which has surprised owner Dr. Mike McTigue.

"Day care," he marveled. "Doggie day care didn't exist when I bought the practice in 1988, at least not around this region. Maybe in some big cities," said Dr. McTigue.

But every day some 30 or so dogs arrive, ready to play with fellow canines. Maybe that's not the single most important thing that happens at the facility, but it sure matters to 'parents' and pets alike. And to be sure, day care is a growth industry all by itself.

Before anyone had even thought about doggie day care, McTigue knew what he wanted to do, and by 1999, he'd bought nine acres on Eaton Road near Mount Wachusett Community College and across the street from the golf course. On June 15, 2000 the new center opened and there's a memory from that day which McTigue won't ever forget. We'll get to that. First things first.

"We're a community-wide care center. We cover every aspect of a pet's life and health.

It's a bigger umbrella than just routine veterinary medicine. In addition to the daycare, we have boarding, grooming, laser therapy, obedience training, and surgical suites," noted McTigue.

All these services enable McTigue and his staff of vets, nurses, techs and front desk personnel, to build connections with human as well as animal families.

"That's what you want to do - provide the kind of quality service they can trust. We want our families to know their pets are not just safe with us, but be able to know they'll flourish

Connor lands scholarship from MassALA.

By Greg Vine
Courier Correspondent

Winchendon resident Lindsey Connor will now be able to concentrate on earning her master's degree rather than how she is going to pay for it. Last Friday, Connor, the director of business and marketing at Broadview Assisted Living, received a $14,000 scholarship from the Massachusetts Assisted Living Association Foundation to pursue her degree from UMass Boston.

According to Connor, the funds will pay for her next two years of schooling.

A 2009 graduate of Murdock High School, Connor received her bachelor's in health sciences from the University of Southern Maine in 2014. She has worked at Broadview since September 2015. She is completing her master's in aging services management via an online program offered by UMass Boston.

"When we started the foundation," said Richard Moore, president ex-officio of the Massachusetts Assisted Living Association and a former state senator, "we decided to start helping people who work in assisted living, particularly in Massachusetts. To help them advance their careers, and get additional education or training. We work with UMass Boston to try to identify people who are working in assisted living, but would like to get a bit more education. We want to help all people who work in assisted living advance their professional standing."

A career in assisted living was not always in Connor's future.

WHCC plans antique car show

BY GREG VINE
COURIER CORRESPONDENT

The Winchendon History and Cultural Center will present its first Antique Car Show tomorrow, Saturday, August 19, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Admission is $5. Children 12 and under, and those with a car in the show, will be admitted free of charge.

The cost of admission includes tours of both the Murdock-Whitney Mansion, home of WHCC, and the Isaac Morse House. The first tour steps off at 10:30 a.m., with the second walk-through starting at 1:30 p.m.

Mary Bulger, museum curator, has been organizing the event.

"It's been an interesting process," she says. "I've had several drivers notify me that they intend to be there, and I expect there are others who will be coming, so we really don't have a firm number, yet, as to how many cars will be shown."

"If a car is 50 years old,"

said Bulger, "it's considered an antique."

Bulger said this will be the center's first car show, although such an event has been discussed in the past.

"We try to keep things interesting for people," she said. "We're really only open on a weekend from basically June 1 to October 31. So, we try to have something interesting every month. We try to change some things up, and some are traditional. The traditional, for example, is Casino Night, and the Christmas tours alternating with the Christmas tea. But then you like to have something a little different in between. And we've never done an antique car show before."

Bulger said her husband will be bringing his 1924 Ford Model T to Saturday's event, and her brother-in-law will bring a 1920s vintage Chevrolet.

In addition to house tours,

Nearest pot shop? Maybe Westminster

BY JERRY CARTON
COURIER CORRESPONDENT

With Winchendon out of the running, it appears the closest medical marijuana dispensary might turn out to be in Westminster.

No decisions are yet etched in stone, but Trichome Health is asking that town's Board of Selectmen to green light, or at least not oppose, opening a facility on Theodore Drive.

Trichome has not ruled out seeking distribution facilities in other locales but didn't specify where aside from applying for a cultivation center in Auburn.

Company CEO Alexander Mazin said, "As the medical marijuana industry continues to grow and validates itself and helps with many different side effects and symptoms, what better state to be involved in than Massachusetts to help promote all of this? I am looking for a letter of support or non-opposition to do cultivating, processing and dispensing. This is only for medical purposes. I know there are concerns on the recreational side of things, but everything my company is trying to do is for medical use."

Massachusetts voters approved a ballot question legalizing medical marijuana in 2012 and last year okayed recreational use under guidelines recently established by the state.

Individual towns whose voters cast a majority in favor of pot cannot ban dispensaries without another town-wide ballot referendum but do have the authority to determine where such sites can be located.

There had been some speculation earlier in the process that Winchendon might be a potential site for a cultivation center, dispensary or both, but that never materialized when contenders for those operations chose to look elsewhere in the north central Worcester county region.

If Westminster winds up getting a facility, the company estimates it will provide as many as 25-30 jobs with pay ranging between $15- $22 per hour.

Citizens Legislative Seminar scheduled in October

BOSTON – Senator Anne Gobi (D-Spencer) announced she is seeking nominees to participate in the 79th Citizens' Legislative Seminar (CLS) to be held Oct. 24th and Oct. 25th at the State House in Boston. CLS is a semi-annual educational seminar geared towards adults of all ages interested in learning more about state government and the legislative process.

Established in 1976 through a collaborative effort of the Massachusetts Senate and the University of Massachusetts, the two-day seminar features engaging presentations by Senators and staff on aspects of the day-to-day experience of legislators in the Commonwealth. Topics will include the history and process of the Legislature, the parliamentary role of the Clerk of the Senate and the future of the Legislature. The Seminar will walk participants through the legislative process including how bills are introduced, debated, and passed.

The CLS culminates with a simulated legislative hearing and Senate session where participants are invited to use what they have learned and participate as "Senators" in the Senate Chamber in order to have a first-hand experience of the legislative process.

Interested residents in the Worcester, Hampden, Hampshire, Middlesex District are invited to contact Brian Ferrarese at 617-722-1540 by Friday, September 1st in order to be nominated by Senator Gobi. Seats are limited and nominations are taken on a first come, first serve basis.

Senior passes to parks available online

All Corps of Engineers projects and parks in New England are sold out of the $10 Senior America the Beautiful passes, but they are still available for purchase online.

The new annual and lifetime senior passes are available now and people are rushing to buy the current ones. The Corps parks are getting numerous calls, but rangers are directing callers to the website <http://store.usgs.gov/pass/annual.html>.

The cost of the senior pass for national parks and federal recreational lands will increase from $10 to $80 as of Aug. 28. Pass holders are given lifetime access to more than 2,000 sites and parks. The fee increase will support critical investments in maintenance projects at national parks and federal recreational lands nationwide.

Until that date, US citizens and permanent residents age 62 and older are eligible for the $10 price. Previously purchased Golden Age or Senior passes will continue to be honored.

Included among the properties are Buffumville Lake in Charlton, West Hill Dam in Uxbridge, West Thompson Lake in North Grosvenordale and all sites managed by the National Park Service, US Fish and Wildlife Service and the Bureau of Land Management, Bureau of Reclamation and the US Army Corps of Engineers.

attendees will be able to grab a scoop or two of refreshment at "Seppi's" Ice Cream Shop, located in the rear of the Isaac Morse House. Hot dogs, hamburgers, and cold drinks will also be available. While the food is not being sold, WHCC is asking for donations.

The ice cream shop features the bar that once occupied Joseph's Variety, which once occupied the site of the soon-to-open Cumberland Farms store on Central Street. The shop will be manned by Don O'Neil and Peg Corbosiero, and will feature Murdock Farm ice cream. The name "Seppi's" comes from the nickname for Cecile Joseph. She and her sister, Catherine Joseph Drudi, operated the store until it closed a number of years ago.

Proceeds from Saturday's event will benefit further development of the WHCC museum. The goes on, according to Bulger, "rain or shine."

As a side note, the Winchendon Firemen's Muster is also scheduled Saturday, at the American Legion Post 193, 295 School St. The muster begins at noon. A chicken barbecue is planned by the American Legion itself, entrance to the muster is free.

Gardner Mayor Mark Hawke, MWCC President James Vander Hooven and members of the Gardner Women's Circle of Giving visited the Summer UP Jackson Park site last week.

GARDNER — Gardner Mayor Mark Hawke and members of the Gardner Women's Circle of Giving visited the Summer UP Jackson Park site last week along with Mount Wachusett Community College President James Vander Hooven.

Both the city of Gardner and the Women's Circle were instrumental in helping to fund Summer UP. The program, coordinated by Mount Wachusett Community College, operates five sites where meals and activities were provided to elementary and middle school students throughout the summer. At the Jackson Park site in Gardner, approximately 75 students made use of the program daily.

The Women's Circle contributed to Summer UP this year with a donation of $6,100. At Jackson Park on Wednesday, Women's Circle members Deb Hubbard, Tina Sbrega, and Darlene Morrilly presented MWCC President James Vander Hooven with the donation.

The Summer UP locations are safe spaces for elementary and middle school students from Leominster, Fitchburg and Gardner to spend their summer hours. With five different locations, many of the participants can even walk to the locations that provide activities and meals for free. Summer UP has locations in Fitchburg at Park Hill Park and Lowe Park, in Gardner at Jackson Park and Olde English Village, and in Leominster at Allencrest Apartments.

Clean your closet and help out

WPS Extended Day Program is conducting a shoe collection drive starting on Sept. 1, until Nov. 30 to raise funds for afterschool programs.

The Extended Day Program organization will earn funds based on the number of pairs collected as Funds2Orgs will purchase all of the donated goods. Those dollars will benefit afterschool programming. Anyone can help by donating gently worn, used or new shoes at Toy Town Elementary School, The Crafty Cauldron at 91 Central St., Winchendon, and more locations to be announced.

All donated shoes will then be redistributed throughout the Funds2Orgs network of micro-enterprise partners in developing nations. Funds2Orgs helps impoverished people start, maintain and grow businesses in countries such as Haiti, Honduras and other nations in Central America and Africa. Proceeds from the shoe sales are used to feed, clothe and house their families. One budding entrepreneur in Haiti even earned enough to send to her son to law school.

"We are excited about our shoe drive," said Jennifer Haddad, EDP coordinator. "We know that most people have extra shoes in their closets they would like donate to us and help those less fortunate become self-sufficient."

"It's a win-win for everyone," added Haddad.

By donating shoes to the WPS Extended Day Program fundraiser, the shoes will be given a second chance and make a difference in people's lives.

VIEWS

Opinion and commentary from Winchendon and beyond

EDITORIAL

Hate is a learned behavior

Put a group of five or six children of different backgrounds in a playroom at age two, and they will have the time of their lives. The squabbles that erupt will be over sharing or taking turns; but not based on skin color or religion.

By the time those same kids are four, it's a different story.

Hate and fear have taken root.

People aren't born hating.

They are born with fear.

Fear of the unknown. And if that fear is reinforced in anyway by the adults around them, then that fear becomes something else entirely.

And of course children do what they see. So if their parents or even their favorite uncle is espousing critical words and mannerisms; then it must be the right way to think and feel and do things.

The fear and the hate are not usually based on an individual's actual experiences. They are based on perception. What they think they know. What they've been told is so.

And it is based on a sort of wish to be accepted by others. IF everyone around you seems to feel this way, perhaps it is so and you'd better believe it too.

When reality walks by and smacks you the face...people aren't this way or that way they are just the same as you are...it can be even more frightening.

Because it means everything you thought you knew is now in question. You most likely need to dig in your heels and shout, because if this thing isn't true, what about everything else you believe?

That's why it's so very, very hard to convince someone they are wrong about a prejudice.

They may understand at some level that they do indeed have the information incorrect, but that means throwing a lot of other stuff out of whack too. That's pretty scary.

And the way to make yourself better or at least safer when you are scared or feeling like the outsider? Make someone else hurt before they can hurt you.

Then there's the blame game. It's a terrible thing when there aren't enough good paying jobs, or schools, or political problems. And taking responsibility is a tough thing, so it's easier to find a reason outside of yourself for problems. Usually singling a group of "others". Like the Irish in Boston as an example. It's always someone else's fault. Blame them. For taking jobs, running down the neighborhood, bad schools.... And blame keeps you from having to actually do anything about the problems yourself; it isn't your fault after all.

The usual deadly sins all play in, jealousy plays a part; envy. How dare someone want to make something more of themselves and their families? Well, yes they have to work for it but still.

And so then it comes to this, the riots, the hate speech, the inability to even listen to an opinion from someone with a different view, and again, the fear.

We don't know what the answer is; because humans have feared and hated since two tribes discovered one another and fought over territory and mates. But we do know this, it can't continue as it is now, or we will back in the same scenario, living in tribes in a post-apocalyptic world.

Operation Winchendon Cares held its Summer Drive on Saturday and sent out packages to 20 stateside service members and 2 packages each to 5 service members stationed overseas or on ships.

Can you save for college and retirement?

Few of us have unlimited financial resources — which means that almost all of us need to prioritize our financial goals. Consequently, you'll have some decisions to make if you'd like to help pay for your children's college educations someday while, at the same time, saving for your own retirement.

Your first step in addressing these objectives is to maintain realistic expectations. Consider the issue of paying for college. Right now, the average four-year cost (tuition, fees, room and board) is about $80,000 for in-state students at public universities and approximately $180,000 for private schools, according to the College Board. And these costs are likely to keep rising in the years ahead. Can you save this much for your kids' education?

Instead of committing yourself to putting away this type of money, take a holistic approach to saving for your children's higher education. After all, you probably won't be the only one to help pay for college. Depending on your income and assets, your family might be eligible for some needs-based financial aid awarded by the college. Also, you should encourage your children to apply for as many scholarships as possible — but keep in mind that most scholarships don't provide a "full ride." Here's the bottom line: Don't assume you will receive so much aid that you don't need to save for college at all, but don't burden yourself with the expectation that you need to pick up the full tab for your children's schooling.

On a practical level, you may want to commit to putting a certain amount per month into a college savings vehicle, such as a 529 plan. You can generally invest in the 529 plan offered by most states, but in some cases, you may be eligible for a state income tax incentive. Also, all withdrawals from 529 plans will be free from federal income taxes, as long as the money is used for a qualified college or graduate school expense of the beneficiary you've named. (Withdrawals for expenses other than qualified education expenditures may be subject to federal and state taxes and a 10% penalty on the earnings.)

By starting your 529 plan early, when your children are young, you'll give the investments within the plan more time to grow. Plus, you can make smaller contributions on a regular basis, rather than come up with big lump sums later on. And by following this approach, you may be in a better financial position for investing in your IRA and your 401(k) or other employer-sponsored retirement plan. Obviously, it's to your benefit to contribute as much as you can to these plans, which offer tax advan-

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Mateik: bidding farewell

To the Editor:

After serving this community for over 47 years, I now have to say goodbye to all those patients, colleagues, and friends who have supported, challenged, and cared about me over these many years. As I look forward to a new chapter, it is not without some regret and sadness.

I have been fortunate to have been a part of this community where I raised my family, served on several boards, played lots of sports, and treated as many as 5 generations of some Winchendon families. Throughout the years, I have worked with some of the very best people. Together with the great support of my office staff, I was able to become a part of this special business community and serve your eye care needs. Joanne Moreau, Lisa Murphy, and Tammy Ayers have collectively worked with me over 70 years.

They, along with all my past employees, have always been the back bone of my practice. I could not have done it without them.

Joanne, Lisa and Tammy will continue working at the office along with Dr. Glavine and Dr. Sweeney. As always, patients will be well served. I have full confidence that the employees and owners of Eye and Lasik Center, along with the office staff and doctors, will continue to address the eye care needs of this community with respect and professionalism.

Finally, I would like to thank all my patients for their loyalty over the years. I also appreciate all the kind wishes and thoughts you have expressed in the last few months. Thank you all for enriching my life while I served you all.

O'Neil: finally, it's open!

To the Editor:

The Winchendon History and Cultural Center is pleased to announce Seppi's, the ice cream parlor at the rear of the Isaac Morse House at 135 Front St., will be open this Saturday beginning at 10 a.m. right along with the antique car show.

We've worked very hard to prepare the space, with the original soda fountain from Joseph's Store showcased, and a bit of nostalgia thrown in.

Six flavors of ice cream to start, and we are now trying to plan just how we can keep it open on a regular basis. We have some ideas, and those will be announced soon and going forward, opportunities for families and groups to be part of it too.

But we are looking a bit further ahead in the calendar and realize the holidays are drawing near. This is the year for the Holiday House Tour, and we want more people involved.

Even if you can't open your own home, we have an offer: we will be decorating trees and table settings at both the Isaac Morse and Murdock Whitney houses for the tours and for the holidays; and you could be part of that.

Could you do a table setting?

Could you decorate a tree?

A great chance to stretch yourself artistically and creatively and help this historic event too.

The number of opportunities is limited, only so many tables and trees will be available; so if you are interested in doing one, or both, please contact me, President Don O'Neil at (978) 833-3025 before Oct. 7 to discuss it or for more information.

Rogstad: Converse funds continue

To the Editor:

On August 7, the leaders of the town announced the disposition of The Morton E. Converse 100 Year Fund which was established by my great grandfather, Morton E. Converse, in 1917 with a gift of $7000. Morton E. cared deeply about Winchendon. He felt it was his duty to, as we would say in 2017 lingo, "pay it forward," given his desire to keep the town he loved vibrant for future citizens so they could benefit from a rich civic community as he and his family had.

On this 100 year milestone, it is important to remember and reflect on what a town father of the last century wanted to preserve in Winchendon. Two thousand dollars established a fund to be used by the schools in the town, with the annual income from the fund intended to "add to the happiness and profit of the school children." Every class to have graduated from Winchendon schools since 1917 has benefited from this fund.

The other $5,000 was to be invested for 100 years which ends this year. The current value of his initial $5,000 investment is today worth $373,865. Mr. Converse stipulated that this Hundred Year Fund should be distributed by the town fathers in the following manner:

1. to each incorporated church the sum of $5000. There are seven churches now eligible.
2. to the trustees of the Murdock Fund, the sum of $20,000 to assist needy and worthy graduates to further their education.
3. to the Beals Memorial Library the sum of $20,000 for the purchase of books.
4. to the Town of Winchendon the sum of $43,000 for the maintenance of designated cemeteries.
5. to the Town of Winchendon, the sum of $50,000 to be reinvested in another One Hundred Year Fund, the proceeds being available to the town in 2118, free of restrictions.
6. the remainder of the fund should go to the Town of Winchendon to be used for "public park purposes". The amount now made available to your town for this purpose is $206,000.

Not only is the legacy of this fund important to the town from an historical and resource perspective, it also is a source of joy and pride for those of us who are the surviving members of his family. In that regard, I am writing this letter on behalf of all of the direct descendants of Morton E. as he is known in the family. His daughter Grace had two children, my mother Harriet Cross Rogstad and her brother Kent Cross, both life-long residents of Winchendon. There are four children of Kent Cross: Susan, Linda, Louis and Sally, deceased. My brother Ronald and I are the surviving children of Harriet; our sister Barbara died in January.

We have children and grandchildren for whom Mr. Converse serves as a role model of responsibility to community and his fellow citizens.

As many of you are aware, Mr. Converse founded the Converse Toy Factory, which in 1917, was the largest manufacturer of wooden toys in the United States. We believe he was a stellar representative of early business leaders throughout the nation who understood the civic responsibility they had to their country and community. Winchendon was particularly fortunate in this regard when one recognizes the legacies of business leaders such as Messrs. Whitney, Beals, Murdock and White, among others. The Historical Museum holds a rich display of their good works.

We are very proud of our heritage in Morton E. Converse as a Town Father and astute businessman and want to celebrate with the Town the significance of his contributions at the time of distribution of this One Hundred Year Fund. We believe it is a notable milestone in the town's history. But more importantly, we hope it will serve to remind us all of the importance of giving back to the community and the power of investing in the future.

Respectfully,

BARRY KENT ROGSTAD

County Jail to house Worcester PD equines

BY GREG VINE
STONEBRIDGE CORRESPONDENT

A large crowd – including state, city, and law enforcement officials, and members of the family of late Worcester County Sheriff John “Mike” Flynn – gathered at the Worcester County Jail and House of Correction last week to dedicate the new Sheriff John “Mike” Flynn Memorial Stables.

That facility will house the horses who are now a part of the Worcester Police Department’s equally new Worcester Mounted Police Unit. Due to financial and moral support from a number of sources, equine patrols will be back on the streets of the City of Seven Hills after a 70-year absence.

Worcester County Sheriff Lew Evangelidis said an old, unused horse barn on the grounds of the correctional facility had become overgrown with weeds and had fallen into disrepair. By using inmate labor, he said, his department was able – with minimal investment – to transform the building into a home worthy of the handsome horses which will now patrol Worcester streets. Worcester City Manager Edward Augustus Jr. said the cost of constructing a new horse barn and supplying it with tack and other equipment would have been beyond the city’s means. Evangelidis said it cost less than $20,000 to bring the existing facility up to snuff.

“The cost to the city of having to build out the barns and the facility was just cost-prohibitive,” said Augustus. “It would have been over a million dollars for us to do that. To have this facility right on the line with West Boylston and the city of Worcester, and the willingness of the sheriff and his team to work with us and to martial all the resources necessary to put this facility back into operation, has allowed us to bring back this mounted unit.”

John Flynn, known to most people as “Mike,” served as sheriff of Worcester County for 18 years, from 1987 to 2005. After serving in the department and was first elected sheriff in 1986. He remained in charge of the department until he was defeated in the Democratic primary by then-state Sen. Guy Glodis in 2004. A resident of Charlton, Flynn passed away in January 2016 at the age of 89. “I want to thank everybody for taking the time to honor somebody who served Worcester County, and his family, and his department with such pride,” said correctional facility Superintendent David Tuttle.

The silence and the weekend

The President of the United States (#notmypresident) is a Nazi sympathizer. As jaw-dropping, as other-worldly as it is to write and read that sentence, it’s also the truth. Donald Trump left no doubt on Monday. So my question is this: where are the patriotic Republicans who are finally willing to say enough is enough? Mitt Romney by the way did stand up and speak the truth. Good for him.

JOURNEY OF THE HEART

of the KKK. So where are those letter writers now? They’ve certainly been silent, haven’t they?

But what can we do? Like it or not, Trump was elected legitimately. Impeach him? You really want the seemingly unassuming but exceptionally radical Mike Pence in the White House? No. So, what can we do?

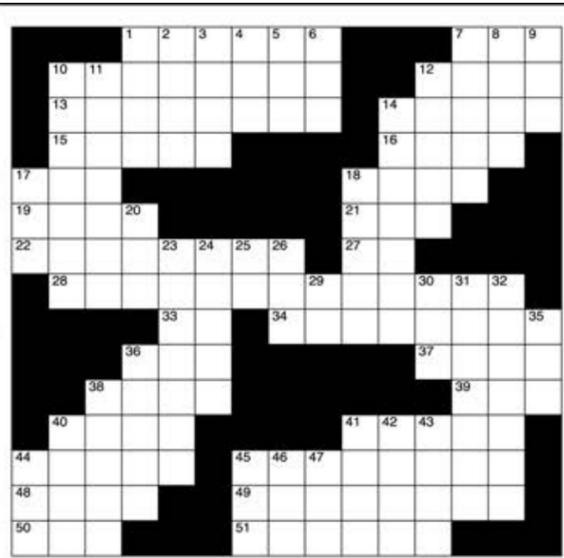

Here’s what – I say it all the time. We go to work in our own communities, we vote for starters, on local issues and local candidates. And then we get involved in this program or that project, and while we’re doing so, we do it with compassion and love. I know someone who somewhere would be urging us to do precisely that because that’s how she lived her life. We should all emulate her.

Today would have been Courtney’s graduation day. Today she would have been receiving her Masters in Social Work from Smith. Last week two of her friends (yes, that’s you Ameer and Rachel) led a drive to try and convince the school to award her degree posthumously. Among other steps, including meeting with college administrators, they circulated a petition which wound up garnering almost 500 signatures. But all of it was to no avail. Courtney’s thesis was disseminated and her field work was completed to rave reviews from field supervisors saying she demonstrated compassion and understanding towards her clients while maintaining an appropriate professionalism. This reflected well on Smith as well as her but bureaucratic politics being what it is, the powers-that-be made clear there was neither a mechanism nor a path to awarding that degree. But that’s not quite the end of the story.

Last spring Oprah Winfrey was the undergrad commencement speaker and Ameer, amazing, awesome Ameer showed up one day last week at the administration building with a sign which read, “Courtney has more credits than Oprah.” See what I mean about amazing and awesome? And for that, and for their efforts, I will be eternally grateful. Thank you so, so much.

A whole lot of those people who bought into the nonsensical “Make America Great Again” garbage share the ideology of these descendants

Technology forcing out senior citizens

As technology advances and old school devices which were once commonplace become less available, so do the services that came with them. As those older services slowly fade away into a discarded electronic darkness there is one associated problem which needs to be brought back into the light, both a virtual and real life technology forcing out our elderly citizens, who struggle to change and adapt.

like she has her cable television, you need that neat little thing called “The Internet.”

My mother, God bless her, has no desire or use for that “Internet Thing” as she has a cell flip phone, and a big flat screen television. They work great for her so I say, outstanding. However, for Life Alert at her price level, she needs a phone that plugs into the wall. If by the chance some teen is reading this “Doubt it” as this isn’t on their iPhone, the phone is not plugged in to a wall to charge like a cell phone, but one that plugs in to a wall to get both a connection and power. If your teen just happens to get cross eyed by reading that, my apologies.

So, I did a Google search for the number to call Verizon to find that new “Old” elusive hard line connection. I Googled and Googled. Clicked on this, clicked on that, and couldn’t find Jack.

tages and a wide range of investment options. If you’re investing in a 401(k) or similar employer-backed plan, try to boost your contributions every time your salary increases. At the very least, always put in enough to earn your employer’s matching contribution, if one is offered. And once your children are through with college, you can discontinue saving in your 529 plan (although you may want to open another one in the future for your grandchildren) and devote more money to your retirement accounts.

It can certainly be challenging to save for education and retirement – but with discipline and perseverance, it can be done. So, give it the “old college try.”

Looked on the left, and read to the right, checked out the fine print, nothing in sight. Everything I searched took me to "FIOS", FIOS packages, and one when I clicked on it which said phone connections even tried to get me to bundle HBO and others, all which involved "HAVING THE INTERNET." Do we see a pattern here?

Next I called the city of Gardner Housing Authority who represents where my mother lives. They gave me a number off the bill so I called it and what did I get but a Verizon tech rep who couldn't find who to connect me to because it didn't involve the internet.

Seriously?

Finally, after nagging enough people who were willing to sell me everything but an internet connection to top secret nuclear fallout shelters, I got a number. Now I know, I can hear many of you saying, "I have the number right here on my home phone bill," and I am sure you do. However, if you don't already have a home hard line connection, enjoy the experience of trying to get an appointment to set up installation or activation. It can be, shall we say, interesting.

It was then I discovered you can get two plans. One for unlimited local calling and one home phone plan which is a little cheaper for "pay as you go" with a flat rate and then additional charges of 1.6¢ per minute.

My mother already has a cell phone so we went with the pay as you go, as she will most likely only need it for Life Alert, which I hope she doesn't.

So here is the moral of the story. While it is no secret that the internet has become deeply rooted in the very fabric of nearly all communication, the once beautiful hardwood forest is becoming over run by pine. The trails many elderly once easily viewed and walked are now disappearing and cluttered under fallen branches of technobabble. Old forms of communication are increasingly tougher to get, forcing those who worked hard all their lives and finally exist on a limited income to either give in and pay for the internet, or give up and lose out.

If you have an elderly relative or friend who moved and desires a traditional Verizon hard line for phone service or even a Life Line, please call Verizon at 800-483-4000, and asked to be transferred to the Springfield, MA Verizon office for setting up a service call and credit check like the good old days. Unlimited local calling is $30/Month and Pay-as-you-go is $22/Month with taxes and fees included. You will need the person's social security number and date of birth where the service will be installed. Knowledge was always intended to be shared, so spread the good word and save both yourself and the senior you love some time and a lot of anguish.

JERRY CARTON

Not long ago, ESPN Films aired a show titled "Baltimore Boys", the story of four teammates at fabled Dunbar High, all of whom went on to college and NBA careers, and the second half of the film focused largely on Reggie Lewis, the Celtics captain who died at a 1993 practice.

I took issue with some of the characterizations of Baltimore in the early 1980s but that's a different story for a different venue. This is a sports column. There was one glaring factual error about another Dunbar player named Skip Wise. The movie implied Wise dropped out of college because of substance abuse issues when in fact he left early to sign a pro contract with his hometown Baltimore Claws whose tenure in the old ABA lasted less than one pre-season. Another different story.

Anyway, the film chronicled the lives of Lewis, Reggie Williams, David Wingate and Tyrone "Muggsy" Bogues. The quartet did in fact grow up in the roughest part of Baltimore city. They were in fact surrounded by drugs and violence and death. And they all emerged to be not just professional athletes but on balance to be what they remain today - productive adults.

The movie also included their high school coach Bob Wade, who would leave Dunbar to become the head coach at the University of Maryland after Len Bias died, but was eventually forced to resign for violating inane and bigoted NCAA rules because he had the temerity to try to help student-athletes get on with their lives. Wade might've well been in over his head in the ACC anyway but his decency and humanity can't be debated.

And now the what-if. What if Reggie Lewis, whose death was attributed officially to cardiac issues (there were lots of unsubstantiated rumors of drug use) had lived? How great an NBA career might he have had? Suppose he and Bias had actually been teammates in Boston? How great would the Celtics have been? Good enough to challenge the Jordan Bulls? Maybe so. That's the tantalizing sports question left unanswered when Lewis and before him Bias, passed? Perhaps Boston would have another dynasty, not like the one back in the Russell days, but it's reasonable to think the Celtics would have had another big run. What if indeed?

Lewis was the best of the four. Wingate and Williams played more than a decade in the NBA but were better at Georgetown than they were in the Association. Bogues, all 5-3 of him was solid both at Wake Forest and professionally. But Lewis, who might have been a bit behind in his hoops development in high school, turned out to be easily the most gifted pro. Being named Celtics captain was a rare honor, and Lewis' best days appeared to be still ahead of him.

Baltimore has long been a hotbed of high school hoops. Dunbar's not in the best section of town but back in the day, no one seemed to mind going if they could see the great players the Poets had. Dunbar's clashes with DC suburb DeMatha High became the stuff of legend and the Poets subsequently went national, winning a championship in 1982.

The ESPN film was riveting, pretty factual, and brought back a ton of memories for me. It was a nice trip into the glorious hoops past.

Basketball with the big guy

While one basketball camp for older students was happening at one high school, another was taking place for younger athletes just up the road...this one with Shaquille O'Neil as one of the mentors.

The first Rolle basketball camp, meant for middle school aged athletes, brought together a bevy of students from surrounding school systems for a series of drills on skills, and a chance to interact with coaches...and Shaq...in a friendly atmosphere.

Not my favorite, but where are they?

Where have all of the bluefish gone? Although they are not my favorite fish for eating, I still enjoy catching a few for a couple of my buddies that often smoke the fish, and it is great eating. Catching bluefish can provide a lot of action for anglers that use light rods and surface poppers. Catching an 8 lb. or 10 lb. bluefish on light tackle is awesome, and bringing a young angler along on the trip is sure to give him the ultimate fishing experience. I know that serious saltwater anglers fishing for stripers can lose a lot of eels to the savage eating habits of a bluefish, but I still miss their presence during some of my fishing trips. At this time of year I often encountered a school of bluefish during my fluke and seabass fishing trips, and they sure filled in the slow action on the water.

The Providence River held many large bluefish back a few years ago and fishing surface plugs had the reels drag screaming as the line left the spool during an encounter with a bluefish. They made numerous runs before being brought to the gaff or net. Many anglers will not use a net on bluefish as their sharp teeth often destroy the net. Some of the new rubberized nets do a much better job in handling bluefish and work great on most all other species of fish. Hooks rarely become lodged in the new nets.

Wire leaders are absolutely needed to avoid being cut off from the bluefish sharp teeth. Lures are very expensive these days, and losing a $ 20 plug to a bluefish can become very expensive and frustrating. Purchasing fishing lures and fishing plugs can save an angler a lot of money if they do a bit of shopping at a yard sale or flea market. Some may need a paint job or new hooks, but can save an angler lot of money.

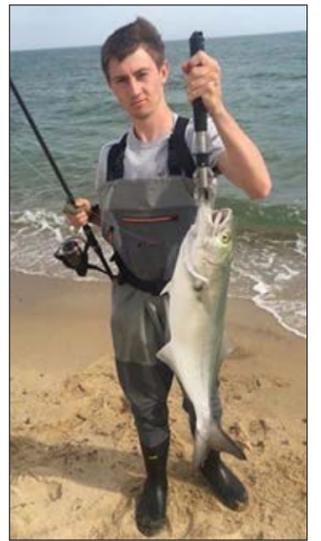

When planning a fishing trip for bluefish bringing along a large cooler with plenty of ice, is very important in keeping your catch fresh. Taking the time to fillet the fish on the boat and placing them on a bed of ice will ensure some great eating, but can make a bloody mess of the boat. Many boat captains do not allow any blood spots on their boat and would never think of cleaning fish on their water craft. Bluefish spoil very fast after they are caught. If you plan on smoking the fish, cooking them in a casserole or making a fish chowder, fresh bluefish can provide some great table fare.

Every year numerous anglers suffer the pain of a hook becoming imbedded in their hand or leg. Bluefish are notorious for thrashing about on the floor of a boat and need to be handled carefully. Some anglers carry along a small bat and club the fish to subdue them. Anglers fishing with umbrella rigs had the most accidents with hooks becoming imbedded in their hands or legs as numerous fish are caught at one time. Multiple bluefish thrashing on the floor of the boat need to be handled with extra care to avoid injury. If you do get a hook into your flesh a method of removing the hook is very easy if you follow a very simple method. Using a small piece of string carefully wrap it around the curve of the hook. Before pulling on the string make sure you are pulling the same way as the hook became imbedded. A quick jerk on the string should have the hook out in a matter of seconds. Be sure to apply some disinfectant to the area and keep it covered. I recommend watching the procedure on the internet, to ensure you are doing it correctly.

The Cape Cod Canal continued to give up some big stripers as this week's picture shows an unidentified angler with two 50 lb. fish he and his buddy caught. Most fish are being caught on bait and underwater plugs. This students are dismissed from even participating in those programs because of their disabilities and special needs. How would you feel as that parent, and what would you wish for?"

Michel explained, "This is something that I have had conversations with parents about time and time again. They want their children to be equal partners of their community, and they want their children to participate in recreational activities."

Expressing she was so excited Michel said, "I had received word from Miranda Jennings at the Winchendon School that the prospect of such programs was now in near reach, prompting a meeting with representation from the Winchendon, Gardner, Narragansett, and the Winchendon School."

Michel said, "Together we decided we wanted to bring forward to our communities, a unified sports program to provide a sports program for children with special needs ages 4 and up. It will start with a soccer season, and the Winchendon School has graciously offered us use of 'All of their facilities.' While we will start with soccer, we will be looking to grow this program with things like learning to skate, ice hockey, baseball, softball, and basketball. They have offered us full range of all of their facilities."

In addition, the Winchendon School has also offered to use students in leadership groups who are working on service projects, to also reach out for donations for sports equipment.

"I have talked with a few parents who are actively involved with their children, and they are absolutely excited that we as the WPS district are a part of this program. We will start on Sept. 17, with a buddies and volunteer meeting only. These will be Sunday afternoon events with all volunteers helping to make this happen. These kids will be getting T-shirts with their teams on them just like any other kid would when they participated in an activity. All the coaches will be volunteers so there will be no cost, it's all volunteerism. This is my passion, so I have no problem being the volunteer for this committee to make it happen. This will also be a great opportunity to make those cross-community collaborations and connections," explained Michel.

The program which will utilize "Buddies" who will volunteer to help the children with disabilities and are expected to be anything but in short supply, as participation in the program would look impressive on any college application for high school students. Each child in the program will be partnered with a Buddy.

A suggested donation of $20 per player is requested to help keep the program going strong, as the cost for the soccer season is over $30 per player, and will go toward helping defray the cost of items such as snacks and drinks at events which are anticipated to last up to 2 hours. Michel clarified, "It's no means a stop for a family who can't provide a $20 donation, as we are going to accept every child who wants to participate in the program."

Donations for players should be made out to the Winchendon School with "Unified Sports Program" written in the memo line. Donations should be mailed to Unified Sports Program, C/O Miranda Jennings, The Winchendon School, 172 Ash St., Winchendon, MA 01475

The program in its first session, will be limited to students with disabilities from only WPS, the NRSD, and Gardner public school, which were districts who chose to participate.

If you would like to register a child or apply to be a Buddy Volunteer go to www.unitedsportsprogram.weebly.com. For any questions please contact program director Miranda Jennings of the Winchendon School by at (978) 621-4524, or at mjennings@winchendon.org here too," he stressed.

When McTigue graduated from Cornell University, the Rochester, NY native was looking for a practice to buy. The Gardner facility had opened on Pearson Boulevard in 1984 on the site of the current Tender Hearts and four years later, McTigue purchased it, knowing from the outset he'd eventually be looking for more space.

So on that first day on Eaton Street, someone showed up with "an animal they didn't know. We put it in this very room," he recalled, gesturing around where he and the writer were sitting. It turns out the "animal they didn't know" was a skunk. Said skunk proceeded to spray.

"It was our first day. First. I'm thinking, 'on our first day?' I don't mind dealing with skunks, but outside," he laughed.

"What a way to start," added McTigue.

As for regional service, "I can't tell you exactly how many Winchendon clients we have specifically, but we have them for sure. I like to think that's because people respect how seriously we take what we're doing."

Vet tech supervisor Gina Cuzzi agrees. "We want the dogs and cats, we want every animal, and every family who comes in to know we'll take care of their pets."

Cuzzi conducted a tour on a rainy morning earlier this week.

"We have plenty of room for them to play outside," she said of the dogs who come to play for a day or stay for however long.

"This is a great place to work. I've always loved animals. I used to play vet with my stuffed animals," she laughed, "and when I saw this opportunity at a job fair at the Mount (where she's a student), I jumped at it," said the Jaffrey native.

"We have a great staff. Most of them have been here a long time," reflected McTigue. "That tells me the work they're doing is as fulfilling for them as it is for me."

Gardner Animal Care Center is located at 73 Eaton St. in Gardner. Their phone number is (978) 632-7110 and they can be found on Facebook as well.

Finding playmates for the day keeps the dogs busy and happy.

Murdock grad organizing blood drive

BY GREG VINE
COURIER CORRESPONDENT

A press release on the organization's website states: "The American Red Cross urges blood donors to give in the final weeks of summer to help overcome a chronic summer blood shortage."

In August, regular donors may delay giving as final summer vacations are planned and back-to-school activities ramp up. To fully meet the needs of hospital patients in the coming days and weeks, donations are urgently needed from new and current donors. Those who donated blood earlier this summer may be eligible to donate again. Blood can be safely donated every 56 days, and Power Red cells can be donated every 112 days."

One local teen is making sure people in the Winchendon area have the opportunity to donate blood, which is urgently needed throughout Massachusetts. Nick Coddington, a law enforcement major at Mt. Wachusett Community College, has organized a donation event for Wednesday, Aug. 23, at American Legion Eugene M. Connor Post 193 on School Street/Route 12. The Red Cross will be on hand to take donations from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m.

"If I get 25 pints," said Coddington, "I have a chance of earning a scholarship through the Red Cross. I also have a chance to earn some volunteer hours, some community service points."

The Red Cross website says, for the summer of 2017, there will be a drawing for six $1,000 scholarships for blood drives that collect 25 to 59 pints, two $1,500 scholarships will be awarded for drives collecting between 60 and 99 pints, and two $2,000 scholarships will be drawn for drives bringing in 100 or more pints of blood.

Coddington says he has been organizing his drive since mid-June.

When asked why he decided to take on the task of hosting the drive, the 2016 graduate of Murdock High School says, "I've always liked helping people. I wanted to do something that would contribute to my community. It seemed like the perfect idea to host my own blood drive. I could have done this at The Mount, but I wanted to do it my hometown."

The 19-year-old Coddington is set to graduate from MWCC next year. After that, he says, he plans to pursue his education at Fitchburg State University.

"I always wanted to be a state cop," says Coddington. "Most of my professors have been state cops and they always bragged about it. But I've got my eyes wide open. The waiting list for the state police academy is about two years. There are about 2,000 people on the list."

Coddington, who is carrying five courses this fall, says it's costing him about $5,100 per semester. Of that amount, some $1,700 pays for health insurance.

"I'm paying for this out-of-pocket," he says. "I'm trying to be debt free when I finish with school."

Anyone who would like to sign up ahead of time for the Aug. 23 blood drive can e-mail ncoddington@mwcc.edu or go to redcrossblood.org. Those who contribute blood will receive a $5 Target gift card, as well as a $5 gift card to Dunkin Donuts.

Signing up for autograph collecting

ANTIQUES, COLLECTIBLES
& ESTATES
.....
WAYNE TUISKULA

I wrote a column on autographs several years ago. When I was appraising items for the "Antiques Roadshow" many of the people who attended wanted to have their autographs appraised. I continue to get many questions about autographs and thought this would be a good time to expand upon my previous column.

According to the Raab Collection, autograph collecting can be traced back to ancient Athens. The Athenians displayed manuscripts in their temples. Aristotle's manuscripts were passed along to his successor Theophrastus when he died in 322 BC. Theophrastus willed them to Aristotle's disciple Nelius upon his death. Ptolemy began collecting works by the greatest Greek scholars of the time in 306 BC.

During the Renaissance, a thirst for knowledge sparked a search for documents from ancient times. Petrarch, the 14th century Italian scholar, poet, and humanist, initiated the recovery of knowledge from the writers of Rome and Greece.

The first autograph album or "book of friends" was signed by friends and acquaintances of the album owner in 1466. During the 1700s, many more wealthy people collected manuscripts of famous people. Autographs were sold privately, until around the 1830s when a public market for autographs was created. Auctioneers began to hold sales for books and autographs.

In 1815, William B. Sprague became the first major collector of autographs in the United States. He tutored members of the Washington family near Mount Vernon. He was allowed to take any letters he wanted from General Washington's correspondence as long as he created and left copies.

Autograph collecting remains popular. A 1997 New York Times article cites 1 million autographed document collectors nationwide. Other sources state that there may be 5 million collectors across the United States.

People collect autographs by political figures, sports stars, singers and musicians, movie and television stars and any other type of celebrity that appeals to them. Many feel there is a connection to that person by having something that they held and signed.

There are a number of things that factor into the value of an autograph. The object that was signed is important. Sports Collectors Digest reported that a baseball bat signed by Babe Ruth sold for $253,000 at auction in 2012. Along with being signed on a bat, this met one of the other criteria for a valuable autograph, it was signed by one of the best and most popular players of all time. Another factor is if there is additional writing besides the signature. We sold hand-written letters by Teddy Roosevelt that brought over $4,000. They provided insights into his life while he was a student at Harvard University. The most important factor though is that the autograph is legitimate. You can have an autograph authenticated before you put your signature on a check and purchase it.

We have updated our website with additional information on our August 31st auction which will contain many autographed pieces. Registration has begun for my "Evaluating Your Antiques" class at the Baypath Adult Evening School in Charlton. I will be doing appraisals for the public at the Sovittaja Park in Rutland on Saturday, September 30th. See www.centralmassauctions.com for more details of these and other upcoming events.
