Killingly budget proposal calls for $1.11 million increase

BY JASON BLEAU CONTRIBUTING WRITER

KILLINGLY - The town of Killingly is looking at a potential budget increase of $1,110,000 going into the next fiscal year, pending approval from the voters in May.

Over the course of several meetings, including a public hearing on April 8, Town Manager Mary Calorio, the Town Council and the Board of Education have presented their proposals which includes an $18.3 million general government spending plan and a $45 million education spending plan, increasing the budgets by $2.3 million and $882,524 respectively. That comes out to a near 15 percent increase in the general government budget and a 2 percent increase for education, culminating in a $1.11 million increase for taxpayers.

Breaking down the increases, the general government costs include increases in contractual salaries, the replacement of a truck for highway operations, the addition of a new constable including a new vehicle for the employee, investment in a speed enforcement trailer, and use of $600,000 from the town's fund balance for capital projects like road repairs among other expenses. On the education side, salary increases are the bulk of the new cost making up 1.77 percent of the 2 percent increase.

Killingly's spending plans received much discussion in March on route to the April 8 town meeting where details were made available for public input. Unlike in 2020 when the pandemic impacted public involvement in the budget process, voters are being invited to an in-person town meeting om May 3 where the final numbers will be discussed. That meeting will adjourn to a referendum on May 11. Details on both spending plans can be found on the Killingly town Web site.

Silk pounces late to win Thompson Icebreaker 125

Silk took advantage of a late caution flag to snag the $10,000 top prize in the Icebreaker 125 at Connecticut's Thompson Speedway Motorsports Park on Saturday, April 10. Silk took the lead from Berlin's Keith Rocco with 12 laps remaining and was the inaugural winner of the new Outlaw Open Modified Series at the Icebreaker

It was the first-ever Tour-type Modified victory for Haydt Yannone Racing and came at the end of a night where Silk went up and down the running order like a yo-yo. The former NASCAR Whelen Modified Tour Champion kept fighting, though, and triumphed at the Icebreaker for the first time since 2012.

Rocco started on the pole and lead the first seven laps before Enfield, CT's Ronnie Williams took over. Williams paced the field until a mandatory fuel stop at lap 30. During that stop, Silk's team was penalized for unauthorized use of equipment. Silk was sent to rear and pitted again for adjustments before the field went back to green.

'My car really wasn't too good at that point," Silk said of the penalty. "I was too free anyway, so it might have been a little bit of a blessing. I was kind of hanging onto third at that point, so it was good to come in and get a little bit of an adjustment and figure out that we still needed to go for more when we put (the new) tires on at the THOMPSON — Norwalk's Ron the lead back to Rocco on lap 42 before Chelmsford, MA's Jon McKennedy took the point 10 circuits later. When the sixth yellow flew at lap 55 for Artie Pedersen's spin, many of the leaders pitted for fresh tires and/or adjustments, leaving McKennedy and Rocco as the only drivers who hadn't made at least one non-fuel stop.

Riverhead, N.Y.'s Eric Goodale, the recent Martinsville Speedway winner, snatched the lead from McKennedy on lap 58 with Silk not far behind. Williams was flying through the field, though, and went to the front again with 67 laps in the books.

The next trio of cautions greatly changed the event's cousin. A debris caution on lap 73 led to McKennedy, Rocco, Goodale, and others heading to the pits. But one lap after the restart, the filed got stacked up entering turn one. McKennedy, Goodale, and Chris Pasteryak ended up piling into the wall to bring out the red flag. Williams and Sam Rameau then pulled away before the ninth yellow on lap 89 when Anthony Sesely and Andrew Krause tangled in turn two. Another en masse visit to the pits followed, with Rocco leading the herd onto the track in fourth. Meanwhile, Williams and Silk took the green in 10th and 11th, respectively.

Rocco made short work on the restart to take the lead from J.B. Fortin on lap 91. Craig Lutz and Williams navigated their way through the field, Drew Daley, Killingly High Class of 2016, has been named pitching coach at his alma mater. Daley, a 2020 graduate of New London's Mitchell College, finished his career with the Mariners with a 7-3 record. Daley made 16 career starts for Mitchell and appeared in a total of 23 games.

KILLINGLY — For Drew Daley, the silver lining to the global pandemic brought about by the COVID-19 virus — if there can be a silver lining to something that prematurely ended his senior season as a collegiate baseball player — is that it served as an opportunity for Daley to officially begin his coaching career.

When the Mitchell

College baseball season was cancelled after eight games, it marked the official end of Daley's playing career. Shortly thereafter Ben Desaulnier, Daley's best friend since childhood, reached out to his former teammate with an idea he thought might ease the transition into the category of former player.

"After our season at Mitchell was cancelled after just eight games, Ben came to me and asked me to be the pitching coach for his AAU Team [the Connecticut Huskies 17U team]," explained the 22-year-old Daley, a 6-foot-3, right-handed starting pitcher. "I thought about it for a couple of days and finally said, 'what the heck, let's do it.' I ended up falling in love with it. It was something I looked forward to all week because we

DAYVILLE will Westview soon be alive with the "The Elisabeth von Trapp, granddaughter of Maria and Baron von Trapp, is scheduled to bring her talents to Country Living at Westview Commons on Friday, May 7 for a special private concert among the residents of the brand new independent and assisted living facility located at 117 Ware Rd. in Dayville. Her arrival at this pivotal point in our lives is certain to inspire all who hear her stories and songs. Many will recognize her family name from the Broadway musical and Academy Awardwinning film "The Sound of Music," a melodic journey by her grandparents and their children away from war-torn Europe. As we all begin to emerge from the extraordinary challenge brought by a global pandemic, she has many encouraging melodies to impart. For over a year, the themes away from our loved ones have dominated our airwaves. Elisabeth's performances provide a much sweeter offering for the atmosphere; reminding her audiences about the power of music to bring us closer. The space for this private concert is the Great Room at the center of Country Living at Westview Commons. In addition to Elisabeth's live performance in front of Westview Commons residents, the concert will be simulcast to the nursing home residents at Westview Health Care Center. Killingly AT 300

> MARGARET WEAVER

Joan Pechie Franklin, granddaughter of Ivar Elfrgren, recently called the Killingly Historical Center to correct the location of her grandfather's nursery which I had written about in the April 2 Killingly at 300 column. She said that it was located on Bailey Hill Road in East Killingly, not Slater Hill Road. Her uncles Ernest and Arthur Elfgren ran Elfgren's Nursery for their father, an immigrant from Sweden.

Joan went on to relate that longtime residents might remember Ernest Elfgren, who with his wife and six children journeyed by covered wagon to Broken Bone, Nebraska in 1955. Yes, in this "modern era" they traveled through a number of large cities and even crossed the George Washington Bridge. It took them two summers to make the journey. Now the covered wagon is in the museum in Broken Bone. (Conversation, April 7).

I've just had my second Covid vaccine, so my curiosity was raised about the history of vaccinations, not only in the United States but also around the world. I learned that the practice is hundreds of years old. "Buddhist monks drank snake venom to confer immunity to snake bite and variolation (smearing of a skin tear with cowpox to confer immunity to smallpox) was practiced in 17th century China. Edward Jenner is considered the founder of vaccinology in the West in 1796, after he inoculated a 13 year-old-boy with vaccinia virus (cowpox), and demonstrated immunity to smallpox. In 1798, the first smallpox vaccine was developed." (www. "Louis immune.orgnz/vaccines...) Pasteur's 1885 rabies vaccine was the next to make an impact on human disease. (Other) developments rapidly followed. Antitoxins and vaccines against plague, typhoid, tuberculosis, and more were developed through the 1930's." (www.historyofvaccines.org/timeline/ all). Hopefully as more of us are vaccinated against Covid, we can return to a semblance of "normal."

During the past few months, I've had several emails from Darin Keech, who has kindly shared some of his research about the Keach and Keech families of Killingly. On April 7, Darin wrote, "I had always wondered if and how the Keech and Keach spellings of Danielson 1800's were related? I was also curious to know if the actors Stacy and James Keach had ancestral connections to Danielson? Here's the scoop. The 1800's Keech and Keach's of Danieslon were 2nd cousins. My line, brothers Chester and Major Ephraim Keech, Jr. were second cousins to John Henery Keach and Harriet Young of Brooklyn. The actors Stacy and James Keach descend from them. The Danielson Keech and Keach's had shared great grand parents and their grandfathers were brothers---Abraham Keech and Jesse Keach of Rhode Island. The brothers were in the Revolutionary War as very young men. Jesse went with the Keach spelling. Three generations of his colonial paternal ancestors went by the spelling Keech. (I am not saying all spelling origins of the name are from them. Just specific to this particular family). John Henery Keach was born in town and was a well known builder. He was the son of the first Keach to settle in Danielson / Brooklyn. were Ezekiel Keach and Mary L. Keach. As for the Keech and Keach spellings of the family.... The Rhode Island Keech's who settled in Smithfield 1700's went by Keech. The 1700's Gloucester, R.I. clan (where Jesse settled) spelled it Keach. Hence Keach Pond of Gloucester, R.I.

Back in February, Darin had sent a lengthy email about Civil War Major Ephraim Keech, Jr. "My initial interest in the Major stemmed from curiosity of how a blacksmith from Danielson was selected as Captain of Company K, of the 18th Regiment? I searched the another 2 years. state library, regional libraries, regional historical societies, museums and CT Civil War social media sites for information and a photo of him. After no success I decided to search Ancestry. com for living descendants of the 1800's Danielson Keech family to see if anyone had old family photos. I started contacting them through Facebook messenger and it has been a joy connecting.

"Of the 1800's Danielson Keech's there were 10 children to brothers Chester and Ephraim Keech, Jr. Only four of the children had offspring. I have enjoyed corresponding with cousins descending from all four of the offspring. Each of the four families (including ours) each had a box of old photos of ancestors from the 1800's family. A cousin in Florida said she had a photo of someone in "uniform." I was elated to confirm it was Major Ephraim Keech Jr. Another cousin in Vermont sent a photo of heirlooms. One of the photos was an award cup to Col. Ephraim Keech, Jr., by Infantry Company C 7th Regiment, Conn Militia, West Killingly, May 29, 1858. Being a Col in the State Militia explained why he was promoted to 18th's Major so quickly. Both the photo and the cup are now back in Killingly with me at Alexander Lake.

'The Major as you know resigned May 1863 due to disability weeks prior to the 18th's first battle in the 2nd Battle of Winchester, Va. The Windham County Transcript mentioned he was 'forced' to resign. I assume most likely Typhoid as it was rampant. When Maj. Ephraim returned home May 1863, he got his younger brother Chester to go in his place. Chester not being military trained was assigned as an assistant to Lieut. Col. Monroe Nichols just in time to be in the middle of 2nd Battle of Winchester June 13,15 1863. Chester was lucky to have escaped by finding his way to Baltimore. Lieut. Col Nichols as you know was captured and wounded. As you mentioned, Ephraim did take the train to Harpers Ferry the Saturday after the battle. He helped with the tally of 18th casualties, wounded, captured and escaped. I wonder how Major E. Keech felt having trained the 18th and knowing of the 18th's valor charging an overwhelming foe attempting to give Gen. Milroy time to escape with his army? I hope he had some satisfaction but I'd imagine he felt quite awful for not being with them. He was 'the guy' in Killingly until May 1863, then home as many endured the war

"Chester Keech being a horse guy enlisted that Dec.1863 with the 1st CT Calvary until after the end of the war. The 1st CT Calvary being the only CT Calvary in the Civil War experienced many battles and received much praise. The 1st CT Cal was selected to escort General Grant to Appomattox for the surrender of Gen Lee. They also stayed a bit post war to maintain order in Washington after the assassination of Lincoln. They were also one of the only Calvary's to be allowed to keep their horses.'

I'll summarize a little more of what he wrote about Ephraim and Chester. Both were born in Sterling, CT. Ephraim moved to Danielson in the early 1850's and had a blacksmith shop at the corner of Academy and Mechanic Streets. In 1869 he moved to Poughkeepsie, N.Y., where he died in 1874, age 51. Chester Keech was a wagon maker living in Newport, R.I., then later on Reynolds Street in Danielson. In 1875 he owned a wagon repository on the Wharf in Norwich; by 1890 he was working on his son James E. Keech's farm in Dayville (Larned's History of Windham Co.). James Ezra was also a well-known Killingly merchant and was Darin's grandfather (email Feb. 14,

I have made it a point to include how Darin traced these family connections with the hope that the process might help others who might have hit "dead ends." I know, I still have not made much use of facebook, and forget that a possible "goldmine" awaits.

"In the Studio" is a newer feature for the Villager Newspapers. The Quiet Corner is home to many artists and makers, some of whom have national or international recognition for their work in fine art, handcraft, performing art, art education, and graphic art. In this semi-weekly series, we'll talk with our artist neighbors and learn about their careers, current projects, and connections to our towns. We'll also learn some "artspeak" terms in our conversations, demystifying some of those "artist

Today we're talking with Brett Laffert. A multi-talented artist. Brett works in numerous mediums and is a trained chef. You may know him as the owner of Coriander Cafe in Eastford (now closed).

Brett, I'd like to focus on your stained glass windows. A post by Ann Chuk (Artists in the Country sponsor) caught my attention. Some of our readers may be familiar with your installation at the Vanilla Bean restaurant in Pomfret, or other commissions. Your composition and style contain so much movement and voice.

How did your glass work evolve?

I began to work in stained glass from a need to find a hobby while surviving the long winters living on Nantucket. A friend had given me his stained glass kit and so I dabbled in making sun catchers as most fledgling glass artists do; it's evolved from there.

You use old window frames to hold your pieces which, I imagine, adds another layer of effort to your pieces, yes?

It does. The windows are my canvas to lay the glass onto and create the artwork. They often need to be fully restored with new glass, glazing and I always strip them down to natural

Do you think that there is a relationship between working with food and the art you create?

I do. I think that I've always been trying to find a way to express myself and both are good mediums to exercise that part of my brain. I think there must be a connection on the creative level working with composition and color. Being able to have the time in 2020 to get back into art after Coriander has been positive and welcome activity.

What are you working on right now?

I'm sketching a window about a school of fish with sunlight penetrating the surface of the water--we'll see if i can pull it off!

What kind of research or preparation do you do before starting a project?

Typically, if I'm working on any object, I will research the subject-- for instance, on the bird windows I've been doing lately I'll research things for imagery, color, movement etc.

After I've looked at many images, I'll generally sketch out the piece and scale to size then use some of the drawings I've made as templates for the glass.

Describe your workspace in 10 words or less.

My work space is small, but efficient, with good lighting.

But I alternate between working outside on my back porch which overlooks a river so that's nice.

If you could give your younger self one piece of career advice, what would it be?

Stay focused. Try and improve. Continue to strive to do pieces outside of your comfort zone. It's important, especially these days, to network and take advantage of social media for marketing and don't be afraid to be confident and sell yourself.

Which of your windows has the most meaning for you?

I think lately it would be a four-panel transom window with four crows: one sitting still and the other three in flight. I have become kind of obsessed with crows lately--how intelligent and mischievous they can be.

Why do you think our geographic area is home to many artists?

I think the Quiet Corner is a good place because it's a beautiful place to live and you can get inspiration from your surroundings.

Where are your favorite "art

I'm interpreting this question to mean what geographic areas ...

I'm very much attracted to Asheville. North Carolina which I recently had the opportunity to visit and was blow away by the artist community and caliber of artists.

This area has a bunch of great artists many of whom I can call friends but they tend to be hidden because we are spread out in the country.

What's next for you?

Continuing to grow and be inspired to try new things. I've been working on pen and ink drawing and have found great satisfaction getting back into that.

Where can people see your work or contact you?

I can be found on Instagram at blaffertmixedmedia or Pinterest under my full name or on Facebook but I don't have a big art presence there yet. Instagram is best.

Thanks for talking with us today, Brett. I really like your work and look forward to seeing more!

Word of the day:

Transom windows are named as such because they are located over top of a window or door's transom- this is the beam that separates the top of the window or door from the rest of the wall. Consequently, transom windows can come in many different shapes, styles and designs, but retain the name due to their location. (ref. info. glass.com)

KHS ATHLETES SUPPORT

LOCAL ANIMAL SHELTER

Emma Carpenter, Sophia Moore, Makala Dube, Ella Lach and Hannah Grudzien, student athletes and members of the ECC North Champion Killingly High Girls Basketball team, are regular members and train at Windham County Strength. Prior to the 2021 basketball season, professional trainer Mike Behrle challenged his pupils to elevate their games and committed to donate $3 to a local charity for every three point basket they made during the season. The KHS girls had a very successful season and registered 55 three-point shots during the season. To fill his commitment to the girls, Behrle personally donated his $165 to meet his commitment to them. He also extended the invitation to his network of members and associates and the network of the girls to increase the generosity. With some communication and the generosity of his and the girls' networks, they were able to increase the Charitable gift to $800. As a group, they decided to make the donation to the Animal Shelter in Dayville to help them with their noble and compassionate work.

Senators praise Biden's executive action on guns

BY JASON BLEAU

WASHINGTON, D.C. - In the wake of numerous mass shootings in the United States in the first three months of 2021 President Joe Biden issued six executive actions designed to combat gun violence on April 8, receiving raise from Connecticut's two U.S. Senators, Democrats Chris Murphy and Richard Blumenthal.

Biden's actions weren't surprising with numerous outlets predicting the inevitability of executive orders following a string of mass shootings, defined as incidents involving four or more victims of firearm-related violence, including shootings in Georgia and Colorado that gained national media coverage. Two more mass shootings in Rock Hill, S.C. and Bryon, Texas were recorded the day before and the day of the president's announcement respectively. Estimates calculate more than 130 mass shootings to date in 2021.

Biden unveiled his executive actions calling gun violence and "epidemic' in the United States and a "blemish on the character of our nation." Despite criticism that any executive action would violate the Second Amendment, the President issued orders that would initiate a review of federal policies on "ghost guns," which are firearms sold as kits that lack serial numbers, as well as the use of stabilizing braces on pistols and regulating a modification that can turn a pistol into a short-barrel shotgun. Other actions include directing federal agencies to prioritize violence intervention programs, instructing the Justice Department to create a template for states to use to enact red flag laws allowing judges to seize firearms from those deemed a threat to themselves or others, and ordering a repeat of a gun-trafficking study conducted in 2000.

The President's executive actions received praise form his fellow Democrats in Congress, with Murphy, one of the most outspoken lawmakers in the Capital advocating for strengthening gun laws in the United States, praising the President for his swift reaction to the gun violence that has plagued the first three months of his administration.

"In Joe Biden, we finally have a president who is ready to treat gun violence like an epidemic we can solve. Today's Executive Actions are an important first step toward stemming the tide of violence that ends 100 American lives every single day. These modest, common sense actions will help stop the proliferation of untraceable ghost guns, encourage states to adopt red flag laws and invest in community intervention programs to prevent violence before it happens," said Murphy. "I've been working hard over the last two weeks, talking to my colleagues on both sides of the aisle about the need to expand background checks. The NRA's influence is fading, the gun violence prevention movement is stronger than ever, and the prospect to pass lifesaving legislation that is supported by more than 90 percent of Americans has never been better."

Murphy's fellow Connecticut Senator, Richard Blumenthal, shared his thoughts of social media, calling President Biden's orders "the most significant action on gun violence in a generation."

"For years, I have worked to provide additional support for states seeking to help law enforcement take action when there is solid evidence that someone is in crisis—intensely & imminently a danger to themselves or to others. ERPO laws are already on the books in 19 states & DC & a model bill that provides best practices & critical guidance will help even more states follow suit. The action on ghost guns will protect against untraceable, homemade weapons that no law-abiding gun owner would want. We've seen a large increase in the sale & use of these dangerous DIY weapons since the start of the COVID-19 pandemic, making this action all the more urgent," Blumenthal said. "There is no reason that a gun built in vour kitchen should be treated any differently that one bought in a store. This public health epidemic demands a comprehensive, 'whole of government' solution. Bold & inclusive investments in evidence-based, community-violence intervention programs will address the daily toll of gun violence-and its disproportionate impact on communities

One of the final notes in Biden's announcement was for Congress to pass a ban on assault weapons, something Biden helped push in 1994 when he served as a senator. Such legislation would likely be difficult to approve in the Senate where Democrats hold a 50-seat majority, but 60 votes would be required to initiate the ban. Republican lawmakers have been adamant against such measures over the last decade.

Creation Church launches new missions evening series

THOMPSON — Creation Church is pleased to announce the launching of a brand-new missions evening called Acts 1:8, based on Jesus's encouragement to His disciples in Acts 1 when He said. "You will receive power when the Holy Spirit has come upon you; and you shall be My witnesses both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and even to the remotest part of the earth.'

The evening will have a three-fold purpose of incorporating worship, prayer and missions, and will take place at 6:30 p.m. every other Wednesday night through the Spring. The inaugural event took place on April 7 with special guest speaker, Julia Budd, a missionary to the Czech Republic with the ministry known as Josiah Venture. The mission of Josiah Venture is to equip and train young leaders throughout Central and Eastern Europe in fulfilling Christ's commission through the local church.

This coming Wednesday evening, April 21, Sarah Brady of Hope For Tomorrow Guatemala will be the guest speaker. The Mission Teams for Hope For Tomorrow spend time in mountain villages, local schools, and in the community providing nutrition and medical outreach, Vacation Bible School activities, and participating in construction projects. Hope For Tomorrow is a Christian humanitarian organization dedicated to building the kingdom of God. Their mission is to feed the hungry, heal the sick, and bring hope to the hopeless.

On May 5, Russ and Diane Kraines of TeachBeyond will be the guest speakers followed by Marissa Fagerquist of Your Options Medical in Sturbridge, Mass. on May 12. Chap Bettis of The Apollos Project will be the guest speaker on June 2nd followed by Jeremy Bradley of Caring Families on June 16.

Creation Church is a non-denominational, Christian church located at 47 West Thompson Rd. in Thompson. But on the 113th circuit, Bobby Santos III spun to bring out the 10th and final caution. Silk saw his opportunity and went for it, jumping from fourth to second on the restart and then diving beneath Rocco in turn three one lap later, with Rocco making an unsuccessful crossover attempt. Silk kept the field at bay from there, leading the final 12 laps for the Icebreaker win.

'It's cool to say you won the first Open race in this new structure here, and 10 Grand is always great," Silk said. "(This team has) put a lot of effort and money into this, so it's good to get them some results.'

Rocco finished second after winning the Sunoco Modified feature earlier in the day. Santos put on fresh tires after his spin and tore through the field to take third. Lutz, Williams, Rameau, Matt Swanson, Sesely, Mike Christopher Jr., and Patrick Emerling completed the top-

Warwick, Mass.'s Tom Carey III pulled away late to win the 40-lap Late Model feature. Carey started sixth and was challenging N. Dartmouth, Mass.'s Derek Gluchacki when the third caution flew on lap eight for Paul Heard's front stretch spin. It was part of a calamitous start that also Jason Larivee, Jr. and Donald Macrino scale the turn-three wall in an earlier incident.

Carey put the nose out front on the third restart just before another yellow for Kevin Bowe. This time, when the green flew, Carey and Gluchacki spent multiple laps swapping paint before Carey finally gained the upper hand. Once the field finally got a long greenflag run, Carey's Chevrolet truly came to life as he steadily extended the margin.

The fifth and final vellow for a turntwo spin by Charles H. Bailey IV set up a seven-lap dash for cash. On the restart, North Franklin's Ryan Morgan wound it up on the outside and went from fourth to second Gluchacki then tried to get back at Morgan, which gave Carey the cushion he needed to take the victory and a $1,200 payday. It was Carey's second straight Late Model Icebreaker win.

"I'm lucky enough to have two of these (Icebreaker wins) now," Carey said after the event. "It's huge, man. This event has always been a stable to kick off the season in New England. I'm just honored, really, to win at a historic track like Thompson — a track that I really love and always have since I was a little kid."

Morgan held on for the runner-up spot. Gluchacki completed the podium followed by Woody Pitkat and Rick Gentes. Matthew Lowinski-Loh, Corey Fanning, Charles H. Bailey III, Nicolas Johnson, and Mark Jenison rounded out the top-

Moosup's Larry Barnett found his way to Thompson's Victory Lane for the first time since 2017 in the 25-lap Limited Sportsmen feature. Barnett was running fourth on lap seven when Kyle Gero and Ryan Waterman tangled in turn two racing for lead. Troy Waterman severely damaging both cars.

One more caution on lap 20 for Jeffrey VanPelt's spin re-racked the field for a sprint to the finish. Barnett took charge again and rolled to another victory on the Thompson high banks.

Fanning held off Gleason by a few feet to finish second. Ryan Waterman recovered from the lap-7 incident to finish fourth. Scott Sundeen, Douglas Curry, Nicholas Hovey, Michael Malbaurn, Tommy Shea, and Aaron Plemons completed the top-10.

Newtown's Anthony Bello saved his best for last to capture the SK Light Modified feature by a whisker. Bello spent most of the 25-lap event stalking Danbury's George Bessette Jr., who had led from the outside pole. As many as six cars raced under a blanket with a minor spin on lap three being the only thing to slow them down.

Bello looked to Bessette's inside midway through the race, but nothing was doing. Coming into turn three for the final time, though, Bello swept by Bessette on the inside. Bessette pulled the crossover move off turn four and the

played on the weekends."

Truth be told, it wasn't Daley's first foray into coaching. Following his freshman year at Mitchell, after his playing eligibility had expired, Daley was a member of the coaching staff of the Danielson Post 21 American Legion baseball team, the squad he played for during his Killingly High days.

Coaching with Desaulnier last summer was different, however. He didn't expect to have the impact he had on a group of 16- and 17-year-old players.

"That was the biggest thing; I was able to really relate to these kids and make these kids feel comfortable." Daley said. "I told them, 'I was in your shoes four or five years ago.' Ben and I, we're not that much older than these Heading into the recently-started high school season, Desaulnier asked Daley to come on board as his pitching coach at their alma mater.

When Ben asked if I wanted to help out, it was a no-brainer," Daley said. "It's a good feeling to be a part of this."

Desaulnier was hired as Killingly High varsity baseball coach prior to the 2020 season, but that season was cancelled due to COVID-19. The 2021 season is officially his second leading the team, but the first actually playing games.

'Drew's ability to connect with the players last summer and earn high levels of respect from them makes me very confident that he will be an excellent coach in our program here at Killingly High," Desaulnier said. "I'm looking to seeing Drew help develop the young pitchers on our staff while at the same time helping to cultivate a culture of hard work and positivity."

Daley, a member of the Killingly High in 2020. He finished his career with the Mariners with a 7-3 record. Daley made 16 career starts — two during the pandemic-shortened 2020 season –

Desaunier was asked to explain Daley's relatability to Killingly's current baseball team members.

"First of all, by being someone who was in their shoes pretty recently; he was our star pitcher when we played at Killingly, and then he had a lot of success playing in college," Desaulnier said. "His coaches at Mitchell [Travis Beausoleil and Scott Heath] were very good coaches. He's bringing a lot of the knowledge he picked up at Mitchell to our program.

As excited as he is to be coaching the game he loves, Daley said it's even more special to be doing so at his alma

'When you decide you want to be a coach, you're happy to hop on any coaching opportunity that comes your way. But, finding a position in your hometown, while it's a little far-fetched for most guys, is a big deal for me,' Daley said. "But, the opportunity presented itself, a spot needed to be filled. It just so happens I'm lucky enough to be close friends with Ben for the past 10-12 years, so he asked me to coach that's what makes it so special," Daley to be giving back to my high school. Two of the biggest things I learned at Mitchell were to create community leaders and give back to the program. Giving back is the biggest thing for me; that's why this is so special."

Revolutionary legacy April 19, 1775, next week, 246 years ago, was the start of the Revolutionary War after the battles of Lexington and Concord. The big debate still remains as to whether or not 'The Shot Heard Round' the World' took place in Concord, or in neighboring Lexington.

This time in our history, while brutal and necessary brings with it much intrigue for many. The tenacity and bravery of those who fought for our independence is beyond admirable. The events that took place during the Revolutionary War, read like a novel in modern times and have been brought to life through such works as Howard Fast's "April Morning," where we need to be reminded that this story is not fiction.

On that spring morning, more than 700 British soldiers who were given a secret tip on the whereabouts of colonial military supplies in Concord, marched towards town to confiscate the lot. The Patriots who had developed a top-notch intelligence network, largely the work of George Washington's Culper Ring, and the Sons of Liberty, had received notice weeks in advance and were able to move the supplies to safety.

Paul Revere and William Dawes had plans to ride ahead of the British troops to warn other Patriots. Knowing the task was risky, Revere secured the help of about 30 other men to make sure word reached Lexington and Concord if the two were captured. Revere told militia leaders to look at the steeple of the Old North Church each night for a signal. One lit lantern meant the Regulars would come by land through the Boston Neck. Two lanterns meant the British would come via the Charles river on row boats into Cambridge, "One if by land, two if by sea."

The night before the famous battle, Dr. Joseph Warren sent Dawes to Lexington where he was joined with Revere to warn Sam Adams and John Hancock that the British were coming.

It was midnight in Lexington when third rider, Dr. Samuel Prescott. Prescott had been courting a woman in Lexington and met Dawes and Revere by chance. Because he believed in the cause, Prescott joined the men. The three riders were stopped by a British patrol not long after. Dawes was able to escape by reversing his direction. Prescott jumped a stone wall and fled using a short cut only locals knew about. The doctor was the only rider to reach Concord. Revere who was now captured, was surrounded by six Regulars and was searched and interrogated. "An officer clapped his pistol to my head, called me by name and told me he was going to ask me some questions, and if I did not give him true answers, he would blow my brains out." Revere wrote in his diary. The Regulars were spooked by the sound of gunfire in the distance, and let Revere go after asking him for an alternative route to town. Revere made his way back to Lexington where he regrouped with Hancock and Adams, who planned an escape to Woburn.

Throughout the night, the 'Rebels' gathered to intercept the British. When the red coats were seen marching onto the Lexington green, the local minutemen knew they were outnumbered. Out of the dawn a shot was fired, and no one knows to this day which side was responsible for it. After the scuttle on the green, eight minutemen and one British soldier were killed. There were accusations from both sides laying blame on one another.

William Sutherland, a British sol $dier, is \, on \, record \, saying, ``I \, heard \, Major$ Pitcairn's voice call out. 'Soldiers, don't fire, keep your ranks, form and surround them.' Instantly some of the villains who got over the hedge fired at us which our men for the first time returned.'

Sylvanus Wood, a minute man had recalled something different: "He swung his sword, and said, 'Lay down your arms, you damned rebels, or you are all dead men - fire!' Some guns were fired by the British at us from the first platoon, but no person was killed or hurt, being probably charged only with gunpowder. The company immediately dispersed; and while the company was dispersing and leaping over the wall, the second platoon of the British fired, and killed some of our men. There was not a gun fired by any

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

It's time for the lies to stop

To the Editor:

In his April 9 letter to you ("Stimulus bill should have been passed before Biden took office"), Ed DeLuca deals in pure fantasy, i.e. fake news, "alternative facts" or lies. Whether he comes by his version of how the stimulus bill was enacted through an honest misunderstanding of how legislation is enacted or is deliberately disingenuous, I'll leave that judgement to others. But it seems obvious that dealing in facts instead of gratuitous name calling ("mindless ilk, boot-licking puppets") would facilitate honest debate.

I'm sure that most of your readers know that a bill must be passed by both the House of Representatives and the Senate and be signed by the President to become law. The exception is when a bill is vetoed by the President, but the veto is overridden by twothirds votes of both houses. Your readers will no doubt remember that, prior to January, Republicans were in the majority in the Senate, Democrats were in control of the House and a Republican was President.

Those who deal in facts, not fantasy, will recall that before the last session of Congress ended and President Biden was inaugurated, the House, led by Democrat Nancy Pelosi, passed legislation to increase the $600 checks to Americans previously enacted into law to $2,000 after President Trump championed the idea. The Senate, led by Republican Mitch McConnell, blocked it.

Does that sound like Speaker "Pelosi and her mindless ilk" held it up because they didn't want Trump to get credit as Mr. DeLuca states? Or does it sound like the Republican Senate held it up? To paraphrase Mr. DeLuca, hopefully that will be considered come re-election time.

Lies, such as those still being repeated by former President Trump and many Republicans, are jeopardizing the future of the "American Experiment" by sowing hate and division. Witness the recent deplorable racist rant espousing "white replacement theory" by Fox News host Tucker Carlson. And recall the white supremacists in Charlottesville whom Trump praised as fine people chanting, "Jews will not replace us."

It's long past time for the lies, and the racist, anti-Semitic and conspiratorial theories to stop. The future of the Republic may well depend on it.

Little boy, scared

Are there some things in life worth believing in ... whether they are true or not?

Like most of my generation, I was raised by a veteran of the Second World War. Tom Brokaw labeled them "The Greatest Generation" and as I've mentioned before, I agree. At a moment's notice, they left their homes for the local recruiting station and into a life and death struggle against the Fascism of Hitler and Mussolini, and the treachery of imperialist Japan. Were they perfect? Of course not. We are all flawed, but they answered the call and saved the free world as

As such, my Dad expected from an early age that I stand up straight, respect the flag and fight for what's right. He also told me never to be afraid to defend myself. He'd say, "Never start the fight but never run away and swing as hard as you can to win it." My dad wasn't encouraging me to fight but to stand up and defend myself.

The first movie I ever viewed in a theater wasn't a Disney cartoon. My dad took me to see an almost four-hour epic starring John Wayne. I sat as a five-year-old, riveted to the screen, as I watched Davy Crockett fighting like a tiger against overwhelming odds, giving his life for his cause. The impact of "The Alamo" shaped my life. Later, Errol Flynn as George Armstrong Custer in the highly fictionalized "They Died with Their Boots On." and others ... all epic struggles of fighting with courage on both sides of the battle. I absorbed these stories and they've become part of my DNA, understanding they are more fiction than fact. The point is they are stories of perseverance and courage.

In my teens I became almost obsessed with learning of heroic acts of bravery against insurmountable odds. A common prayer was "Dear God, when I grow up let me fight in 'the battle for my life' and overcome." Be careful what you wish for. Yesterday, that prayer came to mind with regret as the impact of my chemo ravaged my body and mind and I felt as though my prayer had unfortunately come true, as I am fighting for my life. My enemy, as most of you know is stage 4 gastric cancer.

Fatigue does make cowards of us all and yesterday morning was my moment in the darkness. For those of you who follow me on social media, I'm sorry if I alarmed you with my posts. I awoke yesterday morning as a frightened little boy, clinging to my storebought-faux-fur coonskin cap wishing I were as brave as Davy ... but was not.

Today is different. My Crockett cap is firmly upon my head. The frightened little boy cowering yesterday in Positively a cancer-ridden sixty-six-year-SPEAKING old body, today feels strong, confident, and unafraid. I believe I GARY W. can and will beat this cancer. I'm enthused by the challenge and MOORE

Where does this fight come from? The books, stories and movies of my youth that encourage me still, play in my head. Heroic speeches ring in my ears. The belief that there are things worth fighting for ... especially your life, against an indiscriminate, unfair disease. I know that someday, somevnere, someone is going to beat this cancer.

Why not here and now? Why not me? There is a song I played for my kids; it's titled "Give it all you've got!" It began with the lyrics ... "Hero's come in all shapes and sizes, different colors too. Yes, it's true, yes, you know it's true. But a fact of all different hero's, they give it their best shot. Every time win or not, they give it all they've got." I think it encouraged them, as it still does me. I sing this song in my head in my weakest moments.

The examples, stories or fables of others inspire us. They give us courage and often the ability to fight when we'd rather run. They strengthen us to stand back up when we get knocked down. And I wonder ... why is there a move to remove and tear down our traditional heroes at a time they are needed most? (A subject for another time) Scan the records of history and show me anything positive that has ever begun by banning books, erasing history, or trying to change culture by force.

Let me leave you with this little speech from a fun movie and is delivered by Robert Duvall in "Secondhand Lions":

"Sometimes the things that may or may not be true are the things that a man needs to believe in the most. That people are basically good. That honor, courage and virtues mean everything. That power and money, money and power mean nothing; that Good always triumphs over Evil; and I want you to remember this: That Love, true Love never dies. Doesn't matter if any of this is true or not. You see a man should believe in these things because these are the things worth believing in."

I always look for and believe the best. What do look for and believe?

No matter what I am doing, I always think I should be doing something else, be somewhere else. As life swirls around me, I want to capture certain moments and examine them carefully, sure that I will remember every aspect, only to forget, often in minutes. The capacity to pay attention, listen and feel things needs to be nurtured by whatever means possible. One way for me is through reading and writing poetry. During the month of April, I am sharing the work of local poets.

Writing anything is hard work. Writing poetry even harder. People who write often can't help themselves. Images and words come together, and until they land on the page or are read out loud, the writer feels an itch like poison ivy under the skin. It has to be scratched, but the results can be raw and revelatory. Being part of a group can help.

Hiking in the Spanish Pyrenees

"Travel is the best way we have of rescuing the humanity of places and saving them from abstraction and ideology.

Barcelona was epic. The works of Gaudi, Joan Miro and Pablo Picasso did not disappointment. But it was over-touristed in the extreme and the forests and mountains were calling.

We drove north to Torla, the gateway to Ordesa National Park which is considered to have some of the best hiking in the Spanish Pyrenees. October is not considered high season, even though temperatures were in the 60s and low 70s and the foliage was turning brilliant shades of color. It was as good as anything we experience in New England, yet the medieval cobblestone streets were deserted. So deserted in fact that we had trouble finding a place to eat. The first day we did any easy 10 mile hike up the Ordesa Valley, along the Arazas River. More of a walk than a hike and the trail was full of families enjoying the weather.

The next day, we hiked six miles on the Faja Racon trail. It began with a 1.700-foot ascent and then the narrow trail wound in and out of several valleys, with the mountains rising precipitously on one side and sheer drop offs on the other. We saw only four or five other hikers on this trail. The pointed rock peak of Tozal del Malo (hill of the bad guy) jutted heavenward like one of Gaudi's spires.

The third day, we decided to hike around the Otal River Valley. It wasn't in any of our guidebooks but our host had left a sketch of the route on the coffee table. "It's a gorgeous place to hike," she said," but the road to get there is very bad." The gravel road was rutted and narrow, but not treacherous. We had driven on worse. The goal was a loop hike and we started north up the GR-11 along the Rio Ara.

GR (Grand Randonnée or Gran Recorrido) is a series of long-distance trails in Europe. GR-10 and GR-11 run along the Pyrenees from the Atlantic to the Mediterranean Ocean. As we were pondering this, we almost missed the sign (a hardly visible stone in the ground) for the cut off to Burguil. The trail immediately led to a suspension foot bridge that swayed dramatically under our weight. The topographic map showed an un-named trail heading south to the Otal Valley but it was not well marked and eventually died out. We backtracked until we picked up a trail marked by cairns. It seemed to go in the direction we wanted but after a dozen switchbacks, we could no longer tell in what direction we were going. The compass, that we carry everywhere but never need on the well-marked trails in New England, finally came in handy. We discovered we were on an un-mapped trail heading west toward a city far from where we had parked. We turned around again, followed the compass south and eventually picked up the correct trail (and then lost it several more times) before finally arriving at the Otal River with gorgeous views up the Otal Valley. We followed the river down to the road where we encountered the first people we had seen since we had left the GR 11 earlier in the day.

Girona

The racket of our wheeled suitcases on the cobblestones of La Rambla de la Libertat, past street cafes and crowded shops, made it feel like every single person was staring at us. I went in search of the bar where someone had the key ever stayed before. The front window looked out on La Rambla and the rear window looked out over the River Onyar and the gorgeously colored buildings lining it. Wandering around the streets we noticed signs of the Catalonian Separatist movement - protest signs and demonstrators wearing flag capes. On one side street we saw the following banner hung across the road: "Dear visitors, be aware: every tourist apartment is a home taken away from the local people." That night small groups of demonstrators milled about the plaza below the apartment beating on it sounds and when we

On Monday, we hired a guide for the day. She had a wicked sense of humor and spoke English well, but even so, I could tell I was only picking up part of what she was putting down. She toured an Irish couple and us around the city for about 2 hours, taking us to the Arab Baths, the Basilica of Sant Feliu and Sant Pere de Galligants, a 12th century Benedictine monastery, showing us things we would have never discovered on our own. She pointed out the various places that Game of Thrones scenes had been filmed. Some were not immediately recognizable because they were shot with green screen background. But once she pointed them out and showed pictures of how they actually looked in the show, they came to life. She claimed to be certified to give Game of Thrones tours, along with a slight smirk, and I couldn't tell if she

I questioned her on the banner we had seen regarding tourist apartments and the general feeling towards tourists. Her response was that the unrest was caused by a small group that could not remember the past. According to her, Girona was a dying town until the tourists came and brought it back to life. Now that it has been rejuvenated a selfish group of people want it all for themselves. "Always be sure," she said, "tourists are welcome."

On Monday night, the demonstrations ramped up considerably in anticipation of the Tuesday sentencings of the Catalonian Separatists. The entire plaza was filled with demonstrators banging drums and chanting. One by one, windows of the apartments on both sides of La Rambla opened and the residents began chanting and banging drums in support of the demonstrators.

The verdicts read on Tuesday found most of those on trial guilty of sedition and they were given nineto 13-year prison sentences. The protests increased day by day as we made our way through Costa Brava back toward Barcelona. A general strike was announced for Friday, the day of our departure. The separatists planned to block highways in and out of Barcelona and threatened to close the airport. We glanced at each other in dismay. On our last international trip, the incompetence of Delta Airlines had left us stranded in Ecuador and turned a routine 6 hour trip into a three-day nightmare. We plugged "Barcelona Airport" into Google Maps and like Jack Reacher, "hoped for best and prepared for the worst." We arrived at the airport ahead of schedule without encountering any blockades. I was simultaneously grateful that Google got us there and unnerved that they

Four steps to a winning short-term savings strategy

Saving money for emergencies and short-term goals is of course a critical component to financial wellbeing. But when it comes to creating short-term savings strategy, many people don't think beyond the traditional savings account and some may not be saving at all. Here's a four-step process to get you on the road to successyou can plan well to be prepared for the unexpected, and have the funds to afford those larger purchases and experiences that'll help you to live well in the next several years ahead.

First, understand the difference between short-term and long-term saving.

This is different than longterm savings such as college savings plans or retirement savings. Long-term and shortterm savings require different strategies, so it's important to understand that you can't apply a one-size-fits-all approach to both. It's also important to remember not to prioritize your short-term "saving to spend" over your longterm "saving to invest." Next, determine how much you can save.

In order for you to build up short-term savings successfully, you first need to determine how much you can realistically save while also paying your bills, meeting your everyday needs and maintaining your long-term investment strategy. This is where having a solid budget comes ful short-term saving so that into play. A good rule of thumb is to follow the 50/30/20 rule. Take your monthly income after taxes and earmark 50 percent of it to cover your bills and basic needs; allow 30 percent for spending on every day non-essentials; and dedicate 20 percent to savings. Just remember, though, to then further divide up that 20 percent earmarked for savings between your short-term savings and your long-term investments.

Choose the right savings

want to stay away from higher-risk investments like stocks, because there's not enough time to recover your losses if there's a dip in the market. Instead, opt for a lower-risk option like savings accounts, bonds, or CDs. Keep in mind that even among these products there are differences in risk, though and that, in general, products with higher risk also provide a higher return. You must also consider whether your deposits will be liquid, meaning that you can withdraw your funds at any time without penalties or loss of principal. Some savings vehicles, for example CDs, require that your deposit remain in the account for a certain amount

Depending on your overall savings goals, it may be a good idea to set up a combination of accounts. A low risk, high-liquidity account is ideal for an emergency fund, while a slightly higher-risk, less liquid investment may be the better option to maximize savings for a particular purchase or goal that is several years away

Here are some good shortterm savings options to con-

Savings or money market accounts - These accounts carry the least risk and are highly liquid. They're best for saving funds that you may want to access within a year or less. Interest rates on savings and money market accounts are low in general right now but some accounts do still offer a greater interest rate than others, so it pays to shop around. A savings account with an online bank will typically offer a slightly higher annual percentage yield (APY) than a traditional bank, since it doesn't have the same overhead costs. And a high-yield savings account or money market account will likely provide greater returns than a traditional savings account – currently anywhere from about .4 to .6 percent APY. A little online research can go a long way toward finding an account with the best return -Bankrate.com is a great place to start.

Short-term corporate or U.S. government bond funds and U.S. Treasury's - Shortterm bonds are issued by corporations to fund their investments, and by the U.S. government to cover its investments. Treasurys are specific securities you can purchase from the government in the form of T-bonds, T-bills or T-notes. All are low-risk and highly liquid they can be bought and sold on any day that the stock market is open. They pay out a higher interest rate than savings accounts - about 1 percent, on average - but you'll need to leave your money in longer to see those gains. This is a good option for saving money that you don't intend to access for two to five years.

Certificate of Deposit (CD)-A CD offers higher interest rates than either savings accounts or money market accounts, but you are required to leave your money in them for a specified amount of time. This can range from weeks to years. The longer you agree to leave your money in the CD, the higher the rate the bank will pay. Currently, a three-month CD pays 0.4 percent APY, while a five-year CD can pay out up to 1.25 percent APY. If you plan to use a CD, consider aligning the maturity of the CD with when you will need the money.

Lastly, remove temptation to stray from your saving strategy by making it automatic.

Automating the saving process is a great way to avoid the temptation to divert your savings into your pocket for spending cash. Set up an automatic transfer to occur on each pay day, so that the funds you've earmarked to save go from your checking account to your savings account without you even having to think about it. If you have direct deposit from your employer, you may even be able to set up the direct deposit so that your paycheck is split between your checking and savings accounts.

In his diary, Paul Revere wrote about the battle, "I heard the report, turned my head, and saw the smoke in front of the British troops, they immediately gave a great shout, ran a few paces, and then the whole fired. I could first distinguish irregular firing, which I suppose was the advance guard, and then platoons. At the time I could not see our Militia, for they were covered from me, by a house at the bottom of the street.'

British Concord, Lieutenant Colonel Francis Smith in a report to General

Thomas Gage said that the British were the first to fire in Concord, stating "While at Concord we saw vast numbers assembling in many parts; at one of the bridges they marched down, with a very considerable body, on the light infantry posted there. On their coming pretty near, one of our men fired on them, which they returned."

The debate has continued between the towns of Concord and Lexington, as to which is the birth place of American Liberty. Even though the first shots took place in Lexington, Emerson's 'Shot' was fired in Concord.

In 1875, President Ulysses S. Grant wanted to forgo attending the centennial to avoid conflict between the two towns. In 1894, the Lexington Historical Society sought to name April 19, 'Lexington Day' to the outright objections of Concord citizens. To ease both towns, a compromise was made where April 19 is now referred to as Patriot's

Cool and refreshing – cucumbers

GARDEN MOMENTS MELINDA MYERS

Add a cool refreshing twist to your meals, beverages, appetizers, and snacks with cucumbers. These popular vegetables are grown worldwide, adding anti-inflammatory vitamin K. vitamins C, B-5 and more to your meals. Take it a step further by using your own fresh-from-the-garden cucumbers.

Grow cucumbers sprawled on the ground or in a container on your patio, balcony, or deck. Save space and train them up a decorative support. They make great vertical accents in containers as well as edible and ornamental gardens. Going vertical not only saves space, it improves productivity by reducing disease problems while also making harvesting easier.

You will find a wide variety of cucumbers available from seed company catalogs and on the seed racks of your favorite garden center. Check with your local Extension service website for their recommendations for your location.

Select the best cucumber for your garden space, meals, and snacks. Bush types like Salad bush produce eightinch slicing cucumbers on a small plant. Spacemaster is a compact plant, spreading 24 inches and suitable for containers and hanging baskets. All-America Selections winner Saladmore Bush is another semi-bush plant that starts producing cucumbers in 55 days from planting.

Green Light is a 2020 All-America Selections winner that produces an abundance of great tasting mini cucumbers. Grow to the other extreme with burpless-type cucumbers that can be harvested when much larger. They have been bred to contain little or no cucurbitacin that causes bitterness and the tendency to burp when consumed.

Wait for the soil to warm and danger of frost to pass for planting seeds one half to one inch deep in properly prepared soil. Plant several cucumber seeds in a large container or in rows or hills in the garden Space see inches apart in rows 36 inches apart. Or plant several seeds in hills (small mounds of soil) spaced 36 inches apart.

Water thoroughly and often enough to keep the soil slightly moist. Apply a one- to two-inch layer of shredded leaves, evergreen needles, or other organic matter over the soil surface to conserve moisture, suppress weeds and reduce the risk of soil borne diseases.

Watch for the first flush of flowers in 50 to 70 days after planting. The first set of flowers are all male flowers, so no fruit can form. Soon male and female flowers will appear for bees to pollinate and fruit to develop.

Harvest your cucumbers based on how you plan to use them. Pick when one and a half to two and a half inches

After the first flush of flowers, male and female flowers will appear for bees to pollinate and cucumbers to develop.

long for making sweet pickles and three to four inches for dills. Harvest slicing cucumbers when the fruit is firm, green, crisp and six to eight inches long. Burpless-type cucumbers will maintain their flavor at even larger sizes. Check the seed packet for harvesting direc-

With proper selection, planting and care you will be rewarded with an abundant harvest. So be prepared to enjoy, preserve, and share your homegrown fresh cucumbers.
