Alton selectmen review departmental budgets

BY RICHARD SHEA
ALTON BOARD OF SELECTMEN

ALTON — The Alton Board of Selectmen's meeting on Nov. 10 covered several issues. Below is a summary of the meeting:

The board held two brief public hearings to accept grant funds. One was from the town's insurance carrier, Primex, for a partial refund of premium in the amount of $18,208. The other was for an Assistance to Firefighters grant in the amount of $36,404.76, which required matching funds from the town for $1,820.24. There was no public comment, and the board voted to accept both grants. The Board expressed its appreciation to the fire department for pursuing its grant. The board further voted to use a portion of the Primex refund to purchase the Voteworks voter sign-in computers and supporting software, as had been proposed at the Oct. 22 board meeting by the Town Moderator and Town Clerk.

The board reviewed and approved department budgets for Insurance, Benefits, and Water. The insurance budget was reduced by $38,358 due to lower-than-projected costs for workers' compensation and unemployment benefits and a reduction in the liability premium. The water department budget was reduced by

Meet Salt!

Salt is an opinionated lady with an open mind and a personality all her own! She's willing to try just about anything once, but don't be surprised if she forms an opinion about it within the first five seconds. She's a girl who knows what she likes and isn't afraid to let you know!

Salt is your classic independent lady. She enjoys a little affection and cuddle time, but she's certainly not looking to be attached at the hip. She appreciates having her own space, doing her own thing, and checking in for some love when SHE decides it's time.

Salt is looking to be the only cat in her future home! She prefers to have her space to herself and would love a home where she doesn't have to share her kingdom with any other feline friends.

If you're looking for a cat with a little sass, a lot of personality, and just the right amount of affection, Salt might be the perfect addition to your home!

One thing is for sure: life with Salt will never be boring!

A food drive with curb appeal

WOLFEBORO — Maxfield Real Estate is launching "Fill the House," a community food drive to benefit LIFE Ministries Food Pantry. Now through Dec. 15, residents are invited to drop off non-perishable food donations at any of Maxfield's three offices.

"For more than 70 years, Maxfield's agents have been helping people find a place to call home. This holiday season, we're inviting our neighbors to help us fill one," says agency owner Randy Parker.

Here's how it works: Stop by any of Maxfield's three locations: Wolfeboro (15 Railroad Avenue across from Bradley's Hardware Store), Alton (108 Main St., near Town Hall), or Center Harbor (319 Whittier Highway, across from Ace Hardware) to drop off a non-perishable food donation. For a little extra cheer, come stack your donation in front of the house display at the Wolfeboro office's lobby (see photo above). As donations arrive, they'll fill the space and create a visual reminder of just how much a community can accomplish when everyone pitches in.

REALTOR® Julie Moore, one of the food drive's organizers, reminds folks that they don't have to bring a bag bursting with groceries to make a difference. A couple cans of soup, a box of cereal, a jar of preserves, or a container of garlic powder is fine. Every contribution, big or small, helps LIFE Ministries Food Pantry provide essential support to individuals and families in our community. According to the team at the Pantry, there are some items that are in higher demand around the holidays: boxed scalloped potatoes, boxed stuffing, and gravy. Year round, the most popular and most needed items are saltines, cereal, corned beef hash, cans of tuna and chicken, canned fruit and veggies, and protein shakes.

Maxfield's agents are excited to see the house fill up as the weeks go by and hope they get enough donations to "build an addition." The Maxfield Real Estate food drive will continue through Dec. 15.

Note: The LIFE Ministries Food Pantry is located at 264 South Main St. in Wolfeboro. It is typically open the first and third Wednesday of each month, but in November, the next distribution day will be Monday, Nov. 23. In December, distribution days are Dec. 2 and 16. Hours are 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 3:30 to 6 p.m. For more information, visit lifeministriesfoodpantry.org, email lifeministriesfoodpantry@gmail.com, or call 603-569-0202.

Opinion

The value of a town that remembers its history

There is a difference between a town that has a history and a town that remembers it.

Every community has a past. There are old buildings, familiar roads, family names that have appeared in town records for generations and stories about how things used to be. But preserving that history requires something more than allowing the years to pass. It takes attention, curiosity and a willingness to recognize that the ordinary details of life today may become important pieces of the historical record tomorrow.

In communities such as Alton, Barnstead, Gilford, and New Durham, history is never particularly far away. It can be found in old meetinghouses, cemeteries, farms, village centers and buildings that have served several purposes over the course of their existence. Sometimes it is visible in a stone wall running through the woods or a road whose name recalls a family that once lived nearby. These reminders are part of what gives each town its individual character.

Yet there is a tendency to think of local history as something that belongs primarily to historians, historical societies or longtime residents. That is an unfortunate misconception. History belongs to everyone who calls a community home.

Consider how much of what is known about earlier generations comes from relatively simple sources. Old photographs show what Main Street looked like before buildings were replaced or roads were widened. Newspaper clippings document school activities, business openings and community celebrations. Letters and diaries reveal how families managed through difficult winters, economic uncertainty and changing times.

Much of this material was never intended to become historically significant. It was simply a record of everyday life. The same is true today.

A photograph of a school event, a program from a community concert or a record of a local organization's anniversary may not seem particularly remarkable now. Fifty years from now, however, it could help someone understand what life was like in these towns during the 2020s. That makes preservation an ongoing responsibility rather than an occasional project.

There are practical challenges, of course. Historic buildings require maintenance, and restoration can be expensive. Old documents must be stored properly. Photographs need to be identified before the people and places in them are forgotten. Digital records present their own difficulties, particularly when files disappear with outdated computers or abandoned accounts.

Not every old structure can be saved, and not every object deserves a permanent place in a collection. Communities must make reasonable decisions about limited resources. But there is considerable value in asking what might be lost before something disappears.

Equally important is the preservation of personal memories. Older residents often carry knowledge that cannot be found in official records. They remember businesses that once operated in town, neighborhoods that have changed, local traditions that have faded and the personalities who helped shape community life. Those recollections are worth recording while the opportunity remains.

Schools can play a particularly meaningful role in this work. Students who interview longtime residents, examine historical photographs or research the origins of familiar landmarks gain something that a textbook alone cannot provide. They begin to see their hometowns as places shaped by real people making decisions, overcoming difficulties and adapting to change.

That understanding can create a stronger connection between generations. It can also provide perspective.

The challenges facing today's communities may be different in their details, but earlier residents also struggled with questions involving growth, transportation, education, public spending and the preservation of local identity. Knowing how those issues were addressed in the past does not automatically provide answers for the present. It does, however, remind us that change has always been part of small-town life.

Preserving history should never mean insisting that everything remain exactly as it was. Towns must continue to evolve, and future generations deserve the opportunity to leave their own mark. The goal is to make certain that progress does not require forgetting what came before.

A town's history is more than a collection of dates and distinguished names. It is the accumulated experience of the families, workers, teachers, business owners and neighbors who made a community what it is.

Some of their stories have already been carefully preserved. Others are sitting in photograph albums, filing cabinets and boxes in attics, waiting to be rediscovered. Those stories deserve attention before another generation passes and the opportunity to tell them is gone.

LETTERS FROM EDWIN

Indian Summer

I made it through another Halloween without getting possessed. I watched this movie that got me wondering. Some of the creatures I saw wandering around town I can't be so confident about. Either way, I should be safe for another year.

Last week, I was commenting about how the leaves of the forest were still on the trees to the point where I couldn't see the sun rising. That's certainly not the case anymore. There are still tree trunks and branches in the way, but that giant golden beam came and filled the house with its color this morning. Now everything in the house is getting UV'd into oblivion again.

I have a couple of cheap plastic filing cabinets under my computer table. Since they never get any direct exposure to sunlight, I figured that they were safe. I went to open one the other day and the whole front face just sort of crumbled to bits. For the time being, the interior structure is maintaining things, but for sure, sunshine and plastic do not coexist.

There are still some outliers though. Heading up the highway the other morning, through a totally winter landscape, I came upon two large maples that hadn't gotten the memo. They were in their peak splendor. Both golden yellow, almost glowing in the sunshine. You would expect to see such a thing in some fantasy movie, only these were totally real! Probably my last flash of fall for the season. By now, even these are fading into obscurity.

I took a walk around the property yesterday and the road was all covered with leaves. It was nice, the trail bikes hadn't cleared them away yet. There is a light at the end of that tunnel to. The kids are growing up and will more than likely cease tearing up the trails as much. If at all. But I'm pretty sure that I will never again see the soft blanketed earthen paths without all the rocks sticking through.

As soon as the weather shifts in September, whenever a nice day shows up, I always hear people wondering if this is Indian summer. I always shake my head. No way. Now the days and nights keep getting colder and colder. Most of the leaves have fallen off the trees and there are regular freezing nights. All mention of the annual weather blip ceases.

Then from nowhere, we get a number of days in the mid to high sixties. Today, I didn't need to wear my fleece vest. My flannel shirt is even too warm. Today I didn't even wear a hat. This is Indian summer. Yesterday was the same and tomorrow is supposed to be even warmer.

I feel that it's a little early this year. Sometimes, it doesn't happen till around the Thanksgiving holiday. I remember going for a boat ride out on the ocean one Thanksgiving afternoon. That was a rare opportunity.

This makes me wonder if we could possibly have a re-occurrence before December's lack of sunshine plunges us down into day long freezing temperatures. Locking us into winter for the season.

For me this has been quite wonderful. I have spent the last two glorious days picking away at all my outdoor fall projects. Not having been called to sub allowed me this time. I hope that the phone remains silent again tomorrow as I have another full day of activities awaiting me. It won't help my checkbook balance much, but there's something to be said for completing one's to do list.

I slipped out this morning to head off to the school to go vote. It was wonderful that it was such a nice day, weather wise. Everybody was in a wonderful mood. Maybe it was because it was morning and all the tensions that tear the goodness out of everyone's days, hadn't kicked in yet. But maybe it was a subliminal joy for being able to get out and casting your vote.

The school is all constricted by reconstructions. The major reason for why the taxes jumped up so much. It always has something to do with the schools. Yes, think of the kids, but lets be reasonable.

As I was walking down the hallway, it just came upon me to start singing one of my old favorite songs. If I had a hammer, I'd hammer in the morning, by Peter, Paul, and Mary when I caught onto music in 1962.

Country Bookseller welcomes author Howard Mansfield

COURTESY PHOTO

Howard Mansfield

WOLFEBORO — Howard Mansfield will be discussing his new book, "Invisible Monuments: Tribute, Memory, and the Summoning of the Past," on Saturday, Nov. 21 at 11 a.m. at the Country Bookseller.

Any monument that we stand before asks something of us.Think of monuments as the first part of a call and response, as in music, as in worship. We bring our sense of history to the present, otherwise the granite/marble/limestone/bronze before us will be mute. Howard Mansfield sifts through the commonplace and the forgotten to discover stories that tell us about ourselves and our place in the world. He writes about history, architecture, and preservation, very often set in the Monadnock region. He is the author of a dozen books, including The Bones of the Earth, The Same Ax Twice, Chasing Eden, Dwelling in Possibility, and In the Memory House, which The New York Times called "a wise and beautiful book." Books will be available for purchase and signing.

For more information or to reserve a copy of the book, call The Country Bookseller at (603)-569-6030.

SELECTMEN

$22,543 due to reductions in several expense categories. The Benefits budget increased by $239,623, driven by a 16 percent increase in the cost of employee health insurance.

These three budgets were the last to be reviewed, and the overall town budget, which will now be forwarded to the Budget Committee for review, is projected to have a 2.9 percent total increase.

The board also reviewed and approved the Default budgets for both Town and Water Department Operations.

The board reviewed and approved the lease-purchase of a 2025 Chevrolet Tahoe to replace the existing Dodge cruiser serving as our K9 unit. The present cruiser has over 170,000 miles plus substantial additional engine idle time and has become a maintenance issue. The board considered outright purchase, but decided to execute a lease, with the option of an early payoff if funding allows. The cost of the vehicle is $54,856 to be paid through the Police Detail Operating Fund, which will have no impact of taxes.

Outfitting the cruiser with necessary equipment, including that required for K9 use, will cost $24,360, partially offset by a $6,800 grant from the Working Dog Foundation. This will be paid using surplus funds from the operating budget. Given the very low trade-in value of the present cruiser, it was decided to retain it as a spare, and ultimately as a source of parts for the other Dodge cruisers.

The board reviewed the proposed contract with Breezeline for a town-wide cable franchise agreement. The proposal is complex, and it was decided to hold a public hearing on it at a future date, likely in late December. The entire agreement will be posted on the town website for public review.

Town Administrator Ryan Heath provided updates on several issues:

-Town Planner Cameron Armstrong has been awarded his Planner's Certification from American Institute of Certified Planners, the national municipal planners association. The Board voiced its congratulations and expressed its appreciation for his efforts.

-The town hall replacement roof work is slated to start this week, either Wednesday or Friday. All materials are on site. The Board discussed the importance of close monitoring of the work, which will be provided by our building inspector, and include extensive use of drones for observation.

-Stumping and cleanup of the Hidden Springs site is underway. The Board will conduct a site inspection at a future date, likely after most of the work is completed. The date and time will be announced so the Public may attend.

-Gomez and Sullivan, the engineering firm engaged by the town to review and monitor state activities at the Alton Power Dam, has inspected the dam site and forwarded an extensive list of requested documents to the State. The state Fish and Game department has advised that its drawdown and test efforts are now complete, and the water level has been restored to 2.5 feet below the dam top. Any further actions are yet to be determined.

-The Fire Department has located a 2018 Pierce ladder truck with 56,000 miles on it available for purchase. It has a 107 ft ladder and is a single axle design. The posted price is $990,000 well below the current balance in the department's Equipment Reserve fund. The Board decided to seek further information on the truck's location, condition and equipment.

-The Public Works Department has successfully recruited 2 new employees 1 for grounds and maintenance and the other as a light equipment operator. This will bring our staffing level up to the minimum needed for timely storm management.

Selectmen Paul LaRochelle and Dick Shea voiced their appreciation to the Alton Central School students and staff for their Veteran's Day presentation. Many residents who are veterans or active-duty men and women attended, and were clearly moved by the program, which included songs, poems and prayers. The American Legion Color Guard posted the flag, and the school band outdid itself with patriotic music.

Select Board Chair Larochelle reported that the cameras and weather-reporting equipment planned for the Alton Bay water bandstand have been installed. Information for on-line access will be posted this week on the town website and on Facebook.

Police Chief Adam Painchaud advised the board that he's been able to hire two new officers, one that's fully certified and the other that will be attending the Police Academy to obtain certification. This will significantly improve staffing levels in the department and reduce the need for overtime scheduling.

The Chief also presented the Board with written recommendations for the promotions of 2 officers. Sergeant Tyler Glidden to Staff Sergeant and Lieutenant Bill Tolios to Captain. It was noted that both officers are long-time members of the Force, and both are currently performing the duties that the promotions would formalize. The board voted unanimously to approve the promotions, noting that they were very much deserved.

Please note: This article is offered as part of an effort to better inform Alton residents about the activities of town government. From backyard herbs to winter remedies

Farmstead Herbals brings two November workshops to Makers Mill

WOLFEBORO — More than a decade after teaching herbal salve workshops with G.A.L.A., the organization now known as Makers Mill, local herbalist Jessica Cole is returning to share her love of plants, traditional herbal medicine, and hands-on learning through two November workshops.

Cole previously operated Sumner Brook Herbals, offering small-batch herbal preparations at the Wolfeboro Farmers Market, including her popular Chaga Chai tea and memorably named "Bug Free or Die" bug spray. After stepping away from selling her products while raising her three children, she's returning to her herbal work under a new name, Farmstead Herbals.

Her small-batch herbal teas, seasonal syrups, and other preparations are currently available exclusively at Makers Mill, where she's also beginning to share her knowledge through a new series of classes.

And with winter just around the corner, the timing couldn't be better.

"The plants are all around us, and there is so much to learn and prepare from the herbs growing right in our own backyards," says Cole. "When we learn to safely and mindfully harvest and use the plants around us, we can support our well-being and connect more deeply with the natural world. Even just smelling the flowers and herbs is medicine!"

Herbalist Jessica Cole leads a hands-on herbal salve workshop in 2014, when Makers Mill was known as G.A.L.A. More than a decade later, Cole returns to teach two November workshops exploring medicinal roots, winter syrups, and herbal teas. Photo courtesy of Makers Mill.

Cole's approach to herbalism is practical and approachable. You don't need an elaborate herb garden or a cabinet full of unfamiliar ingredients to get started. Sometimes, the first step is simply learning to recognize what's already growing nearby.

On Sunday, Nov. 22, from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Cole will lead "Backyard Herbalism: Medicinal Roots & Winter Syrups." Participants will explore traditional uses of roots such as astragalus, echinacea, burdock, dandelion, and yellow dock, along with plant identification, sustainable harvesting, preparation, and herbal syrup-making.

The following Sunday, Nov. 29, from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Cole will offer "Backyard Herbalism: Winter Teas for Health & Calm."

And who couldn't use a little more calm during the busy holiday season?

This cozy, hands-on workshop explores herbs traditionally used for relaxation and seasonal wellness, including nettle, lemon balm, holy basil, hops, motherwort, and milky oats. Participants will sample herbal teas, learn blending techniques, and create a personalized winter tea blend to take home.

For Cole, herbalism is about more than making remedies. It's about slowing down, paying attention to the seasons, and rediscovering the relationship between people and plants.

After studying Environmental Education, Cole became a certified herbalist through Greenwood Herbals in Limerick, Maine. Through Farmstead Herbals, she creates small-batch herbal preparations inspired by traditional plant medicine and a lifelong love of plants and seasonal living.

Both workshops welcome beginners and anyone curious about herbs. Through hands-on learning, participants can explore traditional plant knowledge, develop practical skills, and connect with the plants growing around them, reflecting Makers Mill's mission of learning and sharing together.

Space is limited, and advance registration is encouraged. Find class details and register at makersmill.org/herbs. For questions about the workshops, contact Cole at jess@farmsteadherbals.com.

Meet Jessica and explore her Farmstead Herbals products at Makers Mill's Holiday Market & Open House on Sunday, Nov. 15, from 1–4 p.m.

Makers Mill is a nonprofit community makerspace and vocation hub located at 23 Bay Street in Wolfeboro, offering hands-on classes, shared workshops, and opportunities to learn, create, and connect.

LACONIA — The Power Chords celebrate the end of their 2026 season with two free Holiday concerts open to the public. Lorraine Barrows leads the Power Chords at a performance at the Congregational Church of Laconia.

The concert will include selections from the group's ever increasing repertoire of Broadway showtunes, plus traditional holiday classics and will last about an hour. This year's group is made up of about 50 community members who have been working hard all year long working towards their final presentation.

The Power Chords are led by Lorraine Barrows, a longtime music educator who moved to Laconia upon retirement and quickly got involved in Powerhouse productions, and Lorraine is assisted by Jay Labrecque. Power Chords is open to anybody, without audition, and is a great way to meet new people or build the skill and confidence to audition for a community theatre production. A new season of Power Chords begins in early January. Those interested in signing up are encouraged to attend one of the concerts to see what the group is all about! Information on the 2027 Power Chords schedule can be found at https://www.powerhousenh.org/power-chords.

The Power Chords Holiday Concert is part of Powerhouse's 2026 Spark Series sponsored by Taylor Community and the Laconia Daily Sun. Powerhouse's 2026 season has been sponsored by Grappone Automotive, MVSB and LaValley Middleton Building Supply. Powerhouse's exciting 2027 season has already been announced - to find out how you can get involved as a sponsor contact info@powerhousenh.org for more details. Audubon announces Baxter State Park program

MOULTONBOROUGH — On Thursday, Nov. 19 at 7 p.m. at the Loon Center in Moultonborough, the Lakes Region Chapter of the New Hampshire Audubon Society will present a program called Baxter State Park — Maine Magic, with wildlife photographer Joe Callanan.

Join Callanan as he takes you to one of the most exceptional wildlife sanctuaries in the eastern half of our country.

Baxter State Park was the result of one man's magnificent lifelong obsession. Percival Baxter was taken to climb Mt. Katahdin as an 11-year-old boy. He was so taken with the grandeur of the mountain and its wildlife that he made it his personal mission to preserve this mountainous paradise in its original state for perpetuity.

Incredibly, he singlehandedly purchased the land, designed the campground layouts, and set up a trust to cover its costs. Then he donated it to the State of Maine.

This was the stomping ground that birthed Joe's passion for wildlife and rugged adventures. Come and discover this place in all its primitive, wild and rugged glory! This place will leave its mark.

Joe Callanan strives to capture wildlife acting naturally during its daily activity, as he believes these images can become the window by which we are allowed to view the wonder and natural history of these animals.

The Loon Center is located on Lee's Mill Road; follow the signs on Blake Road from Route 25 near the Moultonborough Central School, or from Route 109, turn on to Lee Road and turn left on Lee's Mill Road.

WOLFEBORO — Get ready to soar when Kingswood Theater proudly presents the timeless, magic-filled adventure "Peter Pan," taking flight in the Kingswood Arts Center on Friday, Nov. 20 at 7 p.m.; Saturday, Nov. 21 at 2 and 7 p.m.; and Sunday, Nov. 22 at 2 p.m. Audience members of all ages are invited to an exclusive Meet & Greet with the cast on stage immediately following each of the 2 p.m. matinees! Don't miss out—tickets are available in advance at kingswoodtheater.org, as well as at the door.

This spectacular production features breathtaking flying effects by ZFX Inc. alongside a thrilling full live pit orchestra conducted by Music Director, Jennifer Ouellette; vibrant choreography by Kaylin Gagne, Kiersta Tessier, and Kristin Cooper; dynamic fight choreography by London Summers; and stunning sets, props, and costumes expertly built and designed by Kingswood Theater students under the guidance of Norman Adjutant, Carrie Kinzlmaier, and Michael Allfrey.

Peter Pan highlights the extraordinary talent of Kingswood's middle and high school performers. After the Darling parents (Bella Dickey and Kurtis Sheffer) step out for the evening, Peter Pan (Laura Fernandes) and Tinker Bell burst into the nursery to reclaim Peter's runaway shadow. Awakened by the commotion, Wendy (Delilah Mills) sews his shadow back on and agrees—joining forces with her brothers Michael (Sawyer Mills) and John (Gabe Giessler), their loyal dog Nana (Lorelai Tuttle), and housemaid Liza (Caroline Kinzlmaier)—to embark on an unforgettable journey to Never Land powered by pixie dust and happy thoughts.

Upon reaching Never Land, Wendy embraces her role as mother figure to the spirited Lost Boys (Abigail Ames, Sara Fernandes, Peyton Ghent, Ezra Grehan, Abigail Morin, Natalee Nash), and forms a powerful alliance with Tiger Lily (Kristin Cooper) and her Neverlander Friends (David Campbell, Katie Duran, Atticus Kail, Moira Leavitt-Carlson, Emily Meattey, Ruth Quinn, Alex Rigg, Jamie Rigg, Haley Stansfield, Dallas Wright-Cray). But danger lurks nearby: the villainous Captain Hook (Sheffer) is plotting to annihilate Peter and the Boys once and for all! When a wave of homesickness prompts the children to head home, Hook's ruthless pirates (Jacob Beebe, Ethan Johnson, Leo Paquette, Audrey Speikers, Riley Waltersheid, Jaicie Weemhoff) launch a surprise ambush and capture everyone except Peter. Now, it's up to Peter, Tinkerbell, and the Neverlanders to launch a daring rescue mission!

This beloved 1954 musical is based on J. M. Barrie's iconic 1904 play "Peter Pan" and his 1911 classic novelization, "Peter and Wendy," featuring memorable music by Moose Charlap and lyrics by Carolyn Leigh.

The legendary original Broadway production starred Mary Martin as Peter and Cyril Ritchard as Captain Hook, earning prestigious Tony Awards for both lead actors. Its sensational success inspired landmark NBC television broadcasts in 1955, 1956, and 1960. More recently, NBC brought the show back to millions in 2014 with a brand-new production starring Allison Williams and Christopher Walken, continuing the musical's rich legacy of magical theatrical revivals.
