longevity, but a consistent dedication to access, learning, and public service.

A member of the library's Board of Trustees shared their appreciation, commenting, "Holly's loyalty and dedication to the Gilman Library are truly extraordinary. For thirty years, she has been a constant and compassionate presence, always putting the needs of the community first. Her thoughtful guidance has shaped the library into what it is today, and this tribute is a fitting recognition of her lasting impact."

Fish & Game Commission Chair to speak at New Durham Library

NEW DURHAM — New Durham resident and Chairperson of the New Hampshire Fish and Game Commission A.J. DeRosa will speak on the duties and authorities of the Commission on Monday, May 18 at 7 p.m. at the New Durham Public Library.

Promoting sustainable wildlife management and conservation state-wide is a key obligation of the Commission and that tracks perfectly with why DeRosa wanted to be involved.

"Growing up as a hunter," he said, "I have always felt a responsibility to wildlife and to conserving it in perpetuity for future generations, knowing that without hard work and critical problem-solving, what makes

New Hampshire truly wild cannot endure."

He said serving on the Commission has been "a rewarding opportunity to put those values into practice."

DeRosa was appointed in 2021.

A New England native and life-long outdoorsman, he is the founder of Project Upland Magazine and author of "The Urban Deer Complex." His writing, photography, and film work have appeared in national and regional publications and on television.

DeRosa's work has centered on connecting hunters, landowners, and the broader public with conservation science and wildlife management. He has participated in

Alton Garden Club meets Tuesday

ALTON — The Alton Garden Club's upcoming meeting will be held at Gilman Library on Tuesday, May 19, with our presentation starting at the usual time of 1:30 p.m.

Our topic will be "Birdscaping: Landscaping for the Birds," a program to be presented by Ruth Droescher, an advanced Master Gardener with the University of New Hampshire Extension. As part of her Master Gardener volunteer work, Ruth develops and presents several topics as a member of their Speaker's Bureau, with a particular focus on using native plants in the landscape when gardening for pollinators, birds, and wildlife. Ruth has also completed the Extension's Natural Resources Stewards program.

Droescher has gardened in New England since childhood and in New Hampshire for over 28 years. Both her former and current backyards are registered with the National Wildlife Federation as Certified Wildlife Habitats, and her yard is also certified as a Monarch Waystation by Monarch Watch. She is an Ambassador for The Xerces Society for the Protection of Invertebrates and works at her local garden center in Henniker.

Whether you are a gardener who enjoys birds or a birdwatcher who likes to garden, you are invited to join us to learn how to provide a welcoming habitat for your avian guests. Creating a layered landscape that emphasizes native plants and bird-friendly features will help increase the number and variety of birds that visit your yard. This presentation will cover a selection of regionally native plants, shrubs, and trees to include in your landscape, along with suggestions on how to provide the appropriate food, shelter and water sources that make an inviting habitat for birds.

Please call Peggy McKinney at 603-776-6032 if you are a non-member interested in attending. Guests are always welcome.

Kate Sullivan among Flagler College graduating Class of 2026

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. — Flagler College will celebrate the academic and personal accomplishments of Kate Sullivan, from Gilford, and more than 600 graduates from the Class of 2026.

Flagler's Class of 2026 reflects a generation of graduates who are as capable as they are curious. Through rigorous academics and hands-on learning, they have developed the skills and perspective to contribute meaningfully wherever their path leads next.

This year's class reflects a broad range of experiences and perspectives, including 21 international students and domestic students representing 34 states.

The Class of 2026 reflects a wide range of experiences and perspectives, spanning generations and life paths. Among the graduates is the College's oldest graduate, a 59-year-old earning a degree in Public Administration, alongside its youngest, a 19-year-old completing a degree in Communication with a focus in Public Relations. Together, they represent the breadth of ambition and opportunity that defines the Flagler experience. The class also includes 16 military veterans, whose service and leadership have enriched the campus community and continue to shape their academic journeys.

The most represented majors among graduating seniors are Psychology (87), Business Administration (68), Coastal Environmental Science (61), Criminology (47), Marketing (29), Graphic Design (26), Sport Management (24), and Hospitality and Tourism Management (22).

Sullivan, from Gilford, will be honored with a Bachelor of Science in Coastal Environmental Science.

In total, the Class of 2026 will be awarded 689 degrees: 515 Bachelor of Arts, 13 Bachelor of Fine Arts, and 143 Bachelor of Science, along with 7 Master of Arts and 11 Master of Public Administration. Each degree reflects a rigorous academic journey and stands as a testament to the graduates' hard work and dedication.

Experiential learning has been a defining feature of the Flagler experience, with 92% of graduates participating in hands-on opportunities during their time at the College. This commitment transforms St. Augustine's Historic Coast into a dynamic classroom and living laboratory.

Academic excellence is also strongly represented, with more than one-third of the class graduating with honors. This includes 92 students earning Cum Laude (GPA 3.5-3.64), 98 earning Magna Cum Laude (GPA 3.65-3.79), and 75 earning Summa Cum Laude (GPA 3.8-4.0).

Among the graduates are 91 student athletes who have balanced the demands of competition and coursework while representing Flagler at the highest level. As members of championship-caliber teams, they have developed discipline, resilience, and leadership skills that extend far beyond the field of play. Many have also made a meaningful impact off the field, giving back through community service and outreach efforts throughout St. Augustine.

Additionally, 26 students completed Flagler's Honors Program, earning a distinction noted on their academic transcripts. These students were among the top 5% of their class invited to join the program as first-year students.

Flagler's commitment to global learning is also evident, with more than one-third of the class participating in programs such as FlagSHIP, study abroad experiences, and international exchanges.

Now, Sullivan will join Flagler's growing alumni network, individuals who continue to demonstrate the value of a Flagler education through their impact and achievements around the world, and make history.

Lions Club plastics & Styrofoam collection rescheduled

LACONIA — Inclement weather forced the latest plastics collection event to be postponed, so weather permitting, members of the Unitarian-Universalist Green Sanctuary & Social Justice Committees, as well as the Laconia/Gilford Lions Club, will be curbside at the little white UU church at 172 Pleasant St. on Saturday, May 16 from 11 a.m.-1 p.m. to collect soft plastics & #6 styrofoam for recycling.

No hard plastics, 'crunchy' plastics or pet food bags are acceptable. Try the following tests to see if plastics can be dropped off. 1) See if the plastic will stretch when pulled. If yes it can be included. If it tears like paper it cannot be used for this program. 2) Is the plastic shiny or does it make a crinkly/crunchy sound when crumpled? If yes it cannot be included.

Only hard styrofoam products bearing a "#6" symbol will be accepted.

Soft plastics & styrofoam must all be clean, dry, free of labels. Please keep plastics & styrofoam separate. There is no charge or fee to drop off these items. You do not need to be a resident of Laconia to take part in this effort. It is open to all. Soft plastics will be repurposed into composite decking & deck furniture. Styrofoam will be delivered to the styrofoam recycling center at the Gilford transfer station.

Please screen your items to insure you include only what is acceptable. Items mixed with other unusable items will have to be rejected or trashed. Help us keep our lakes & landfills clear.

SALMON PRESS, THURSDAY, MAY 14, 2026

A portrait of service in the heart of Alton

In every small town, there are a few people whose work quietly becomes part of the landscape. Not because they seek attention or recognition, but because they show up year after year, helping hold together the places that matter most. In Alton, Holly Brown is clearly one of those people.

The decision by the Gilman Library to honor Brown's 30 years of service with a permanent portrait is more than a tribute to one individual. It is a recognition of the role local libraries continue to play in the life of a community and the importance of steady, compassionate leadership in keeping those institutions strong.

Libraries have changed dramatically over the past three decades. They are no longer simply quiet buildings filled with books, though books remain at their core. Today's libraries serve as community centers, technology hubs, educational resources, gathering places, and safe spaces for people of every age and background. They host programs for children, seniors, families, job seekers, and lifelong learners. They provide internet access, local history archives, public meeting rooms, and opportunities for connection in an increasingly disconnected world.

Guiding a library through that kind of transformation takes patience, adaptability, and a genuine understanding of people. By all accounts, Holly Brown brought those qualities to the Gilman Library every day for 30 years.

What stands out most in this recognition is not simply longevity, though three decades of service is certainly remarkable. It is the description of her as a "constant and compassionate presence." In many ways, those words capture what people value most in local institutions. Technology changes. Trends come and go. But communities still depend on people who are dependable, thoughtful, and deeply invested in the well-being of others.

Small-town libraries often succeed because of relationships. Patrons are greeted by name. Children who attended story hour grow up and return with children of their own. Trustees, volunteers, and staff members become part of the extended civic family of a town. Over time, the library becomes more than a building. It becomes part of the town's shared memory.

That kind of continuity matters.

At a time when so much public life feels rushed, impersonal, or temporary, there is something deeply reassuring about honoring someone who devoted three decades to one institution and one community. It reminds us that meaningful work is not always loud or headline-grabbing. Often, it is found in the quiet consistency of people who help others learn, grow, and feel welcome.

The portrait that will soon hang in the Gilman Library will no doubt become familiar to generations of future visitors. Children attending programs may someday ask who Holly Brown was. New residents may pause and read about her service. Longtime patrons will likely smile with recognition and remember countless interactions over the years.

That is how local legacies endure.

Communities are built not only by major projects or dramatic moments, but by the accumulation of everyday acts of care and commitment. A librarian helping a child discover the joy of reading. A staff member guiding someone through a difficult moment with kindness. A familiar face behind the desk year after year.

Those things matter more than we sometimes realize.

Alton is fortunate to have a library that values both its future and its history enough to recognize someone who helped shape both. Honoring Holly Brown is also a reminder to appreciate the many dedicated people working quietly throughout our communities every day, often without fanfare.

Their work leaves a mark that lasts far beyond their years of service.

Surfing

What a beautiful day it was today. It still continues as I type. Or should I actually say enter? That's what they say people do when they're working on computers, entering data. So rewriting that sentence, It still continues as I enter, could possibly have a completely different meaning. It could mean that the inappropriate activities of a room full of teenagers kept going on as I entered the room. Couldn't it? Typing pretty much nails what I'm doing.

Now where was I? I'm so easily distracted. My energy is dying like I should take a nap. Maybe I will. Today came and went pretty uneventfully, but I'm still tired. (Nap) Now I'm completely exhausted. Please, just let me sleep some more? That didn't work very good at all.

Thank you Lord for this new morning! Looking outside, the green grass is growing very quickly. My ingrained psychosis from seeing such a thing is kicking in. It's got to be mowed. Doesn't it?

I mentioned this to a friend and she said "Oh No! It's No Mow May." What? It's a save the planet kind of thing. Let all the wildflowers grow so that all the pollinators can do their thing and everybody will be for the better, except maybe lawn mower repair and salesman.

I'll go for that. Where do I sign? All my mowers are ready to attack and I'm starting out with a cease fire. Cool. I'm totally ready to just lye around in my hammock and watch everything grow.

I grew up in a neighborhood where every lawn was immaculate. Hedges maybe not so, but the green grass had to be trimmed nicely, like a butch haircut. My first summer job was mowing my neighbor's lawn. It was a crazy big lawn with lots of inclines. House lots in this neighborhood were actually lots and a half, making this three lots worth. I don't know what that comes out to acre wise, but it could be researched if you really care.

There were big hills with two terraces plus the bottom. We kids would go sledding there in the wintertime. Needless to say, they all needed to be kept nice. There were also two super steep embankments on two sides of the house. For this he had two lawn mowers to choose from. A three horsepower twenty inch one, the most powerful home lawn mower at that time, and a small probably 16-inch two cycle cast aluminum frame bugger that was incredibly light. It was the key component on the extremely steep banks next to the house. No self-propelled luxury here, totally push machines. It was crazy, but I did it every Saturday morning for five bucks. It took me two to three hours to do it, then I had to go home and do my own yard.

Even with all that yard work, there was always time to wash the cars in the afternoon. That was kind of a nice thing. These days, I'm usually so strung out trying to get all my homeowner to do list accomplished, that washing my car is a once or twice a year extravagance. It's all my fault I know, but all my environmental demons are always attacking me for wasting water and pouring soap on the ground. Who knows how much these saving the planet psychos have affected our society. Everywhere you look, there are things that we don't see, that pose incredible threat to life as we know it. It's the hidden stuff that we never hear about. It's too insignificant to be publicized. In the meantime, they only present us with spectacular issues. If we knew about all the eminent impending potential disasters, we'd probably consider giving up. Every little issue has its own scenario of doom. Putting them all together, we should all be praying for Jesus' to hurry up and return to fix everything all up as he said he would. So far, he's got a good record of keeping his word.

In the meantime, there is another spring happening right before our eyes. The forsythias are now in full bloom, fiddle heads are popping up. Gardener types are in full bore preparing their gardens for planting. Homeowners are doing their first mow job.

So far, I've been totally non-committal to anything. The imperative list is getting too imposing. I'm caught in a wave.

The last pencil sharpener in town

I was standing in a small hardware store the other day when I saw something I hadn't thought about in years.

Mounted to a wooden post near the register was an old metal pencil sharpener. The kind with a hand crank on the side. Gray paint worn thin around the edges. Tiny shavings curled beneath it like cedar ribbons.

For a second, I honestly thought it might not even work anymore.

But then, a little boy, maybe eight or nine years old, walked over with a yellow pencil and started turning the crank. You could hear the soft grinding sound clear across the store. Not loud. Just steady and mechanical in a comforting sort of way.

His mother smiled at him like he'd discovered buried treasure.

And maybe he had.

But I still trust a pencil more than a battery.

A pencil doesn't freeze up during an important moment. It doesn't ask for software updates. It doesn't suddenly decide your password isn't good enough anymore after you've typed the exact same thing for three years.

A pencil just quietly waits.

There was a time when every town in New Hampshire smelled faintly of pencil shavings this time of year. School offices. Town halls. Library desks. Bank counters. Tiny insurance agencies with fake wood paneling and coffee brewing somewhere in the back room.

ed on the wall and a coffee mug full of sharpened pencils near the phone.

Nobody thought twice about it.

Now half the pens chained to public counters don't even work.

I suppose every generation notices these little disappearances. My father probably looked around at some point and wondered where all the hitching posts went. Or why nobody repaired shoes anymore.

For me, it's the vanishing of ordinary little objects that once felt permanent.

The wall-mounted pencil sharpener.

The metal ice cube tray you had to twist.

The cardboard box beside a cash register marked "Take a penny, leave a penny."

Not valuable things. Just familiar things.

Maybe that's why seeing that sharpener stopped me in my tracks. It reminded me that not everything useful needs replacing simply because something newer came along.

There's an old-fashioned dignity to tools that do one simple job well.

And maybe people aren't so different.

I think sometimes we wear ourselves out trying to become newer versions of ourselves all the time. Faster. More connected. More productive. More reachable every second of the day. Meanwhile the best people I know are usually the steadiest ones.

The neighbor who remembers to check on an elderly widow after a snowstorm. The fellow at the transfer station who waves to everybody. The waitress who calls you "hon" and actually seems to mean it.

No upgrades required. Just dependable.

That little boy at the hardware store stood there mesmerized by the pencil sharpener for nearly a full minute. Turning the crank slowly. Watching the curls fall. Looking genuinely pleased with himself afterward.

I realized then that maybe younger people aren't as different from us as we sometimes claim. Give anybody something real to hold in their hands, something simple and honest, and they understand its value pretty quickly.

The world still knows quality when it sees it.

As I left the store, I noticed the owner had written the day's lunch special on a small paper sign near the register. Thick pencil marks. Slightly crooked handwriting.

Nothing fancy. But somehow it felt more trustworthy than a digital screen ever could.

LHMS will host a free public program on Sunday, May 17 at 11 a.m. at The Archives at 65 Water Street, featuring Brenda “Birdie” Nanina Awabejiwani Jordan-Turner. Birdie will share stories and traditions connected to her Flint/Mohawk and Abenaki heritage. The program is appropriate for all ages and includes storytelling, cultural activities, and a children’s craft and is part of a year-long celebration of Native American history in Laconia.

agement from a doctor. Through conversations with her grandmother, she discovered her Flint/Mohawk roots on her maternal side and Abenaki ancestry on her paternal side. Beginning in 1989, Birdie spent more than a decade researching her family history, deepening her understanding of her heritage.

After studying fashion design and merchandising in Boston and raising five children, now with five grandchildren, Birdie’s connection to her heritage grew stronger as she attended powwows during her children’s school years. Her journey was shaped in part by the challenges her children faced, leading her to more fully embrace her Mohawk identity and uncover shared ancestry within her community. Today, she continues to share her story and cultural knowledge with others.

Guests are invited to an engaging and interactive afternoon featuring personal storytelling, traditional teachings, and a special turtle story. The program will also include a simple hands-on craft for children, along with opportunities to explore cultural artifacts and connect with Native traditions.

PETS OF THE WEEK

Meet Laci!

a friend, chances are Laci will start to feel the same way too. Watching her gain confidence and come out of her shell is incredibly rewarding, and she forms strong bonds with those she trusts.

This silly girl enjoys getting fresh air and would love a home where she can join you for peaceful walks and little outdoor adventures. She’s got a playful side that peeks through once she feels safe, and it’s sure to make you smile.

Laci may need some dental work down the line, so her future family should be prepared to keep an eye on her dental health and continue with any care she may need. With the right support, she’ll continue to thrive.

If you have a soft spot for the quieter ones and the patience to let her blossom at her own pace, Laci will reward you with a loyal, loving companionship—and maybe a few silly moments along the way.

Meet Scrappy!

side. Scrappy would be more than happy to be your daily sidekick—whether you’re out and about or just lounging at home, he’s happiest just being with his people.

Scrappy and his sister are also working on getting into their best shape, so they’ll need a forever home that’s committed to helping them stay healthy. A little extra exercise and mindful feeding will go a long way for this pair!

Scrappy does have a seizure disorder that is currently well-managed with medication. Because of this, his future family will need to be comfortable continuing his medication routine and staying on top of his care to keep him feeling his best. He doesn’t let it slow him down, and with the right support, he can continue to live a happy, full life.

If you’re looking for a loyal companion who’s equal parts laid-back and loving, Scrappy just might be your guy. He’s ready to drop the tough act and settle into a life full of comfort, care, and companionship.

Nursing is a diverse field

Nursing is a wise career choice for people looking for a challenging yet rewarding profession. Significant nursing shortages continue to pose a challenge within the health care industry, as the United States was expected to have a deficit of around 295,800 nurses by the end of 2025.

Nurses work in many different facilities and can focus on an array of specialties. Nurses may be categorized by their levels of education. Each level has a different scope of practice and responsibility. Those considering nursing as a career, or patients preparing to see a nursing provider for care, can explore these types of nurses.

Licensed practical nurse (LPN)

LPNs are health care professionals responsible for basic patient care and comfort. They typically are a patient's primary point of contact and relay information to the rest of the care team. One can think of LPNs as entry-level nurses, although their responsibilities are no less important than other medical professionals'. LPNs typically work under others' direct supervision and assist patients with eating, dressing and bathing. LPNs also take vital signs and administer medications. The American Nursing Association says becoming an LPN or a licensed vocational nurse requires a high school diploma or GED and a vocational training course, and a passing grade on the National Council Licensure Examination for Practical Nurses is necessary.

Registered nurse (RN)

RNs require a higher level of education than LPNs and they can provide more complex and comprehensive care for patients. RNs often handle a wider range of patient services and take on more responsibilities than LPNs. The ANA says two college degree paths available to aspiring RNs are an Associate Degree in Nursing (ADN) and a Bachelor of Science in Nursing (BSN). A BSN requires a greater financial commitment and a four-year undergraduate program takes time to complete. Many employers zero in on candidates with a BSN.

Nurses who have advanced degrees are called Advanced Practice Registered Nurses. They have specialized training beyond that of a typical registered nurse and have broader scopes of practice. They may work with greater autonomy in certain specialties.

Certified nurse practitioner (CNP)

A CNP is a health partner of choice for many people. The American Association of Nurse Practitioners® says CNPs are clinicians that blend clinical expertise in diagnosing and treating health conditions with an emphasis on disease prevention and health management. Advanced education, like a master's or doctoral degree, is required to become a CNP. He or she is able to prescribe medications, order diagnostic tests and manage chronic condi-

Certified nurse-midwife (CNM)

CNMs provide gynecological and low-risk obstetrical care. These advance practice registered nurses focus their study and practices on gynecology, family planning, prenatal, labor, and postpartum care. In addition to an advanced degree, CNMs must complete an accredited midwifery education program and pass a national certification exam.

Certified registered nurse anesthetist (CRNA)

CRNAs have specialized training in anesthesia. The Cleveland Clinic notes CRNAs can administer anesthesia for procedures and surgeries. These professionals work with surgeons, anesthesiologists, dentists, podiatrists, and other providers. CRNAs often are the sole anesthesia providers in hospitals in rural areas and the U.S. armed forces.

Nursing is an extensive field with many opportunities for individuals to find their niche.

Life in Four Parts," is published in "L. Ron Hubbard Presents Writers of the Future Volume 42," which was officially released on April 28.

Sidari lives in the Boston suburbs with his wife and a delightfully spoiled labradoodle named Chloe, who takes him for walks twice a day. As a practicing physician, he works hard caring for his patients while trying to kill off his protagonists. He is a current member of the Grub Street Writers Group of Boston, and a former member of the Spacecraft Writers' Group.

He's been a lifelong fan of reading speculative fiction, but only started writing it after flipping his bicycle during triathlon training. Typing at his computer felt like a less risky hobby, so that summer, with his wrist on the mend, he wrote a novel. Then another. On his third attempt, he found an agent who suggested that writing short stories could help build his reputation while the book was being shopped around. The manuscript never sold, but he realized short stories were fun, too. Since then, he has earned multiple honorable mentions in the Writers of the Future contest and two Silvers, while publishing several short stories—though not enough to "pro out."

This story was one of those honorable mentions.

"You know the email Joni Labaqui [contest director] sends? The one that suggests to 'revise and re-submit an old story if you don't have anything new?' It resonated," he says. "I liked the idea of the epistolary tale I'd entered to the Contest about a woman trying to free the last dragon in America. But I needed to double down on the premise. Write more than just blog posts. So, I rewrote it from top to bottom."

And here is the new and improved story.

The contest, one of the most prestigious writing and illustrating competitions in the world, is currently in its 43rd year and is judged by some of the premier names in speculative fiction.

The Writers of the Future Contest judges include Tim Powers (author of "On Stranger Tides"), Kevin J. Anderson and Brian Herbert ("Dune" prequel series), Robert J. Sawyer ("The Oppenheimer Alternative"), Brandon Sanderson (Mistborn series, "The Stormlight Archive"), Larry Niven ("Ringworld"), Orson Scott Card ("Ender's Game"), Nnedi Okorafor ("Who Fears Death"), Hugh Howey ("Wool"), and Katherine Kurtz (Deryni series) to name a few.

The Illustrators of the Future Contest judges include, Bob Eggleton (11 Chesley Awards and nine Hugo Awards), Larry Elmore (Dungeons & Dragons book covers), Echo Chernik (graphic designs for major corporations including Celestial Seasonings tea packaging), Rob Prior (art for "Spawn," "Heavy Metal" comics and "Buffy the Vampire Slayer"), Ciruelo ("Eragon" Coloring Book).

Following the 1982 release of his internationally acclaimed bestselling science fiction novel, "Battlefield Earth," written in celebration of 50 years as a professional writer, L. Ron Hubbard created the Writers of the Future (writersofthefuture.com) in 1983 to provide a means for aspiring writers of speculative fiction to get that much-needed break. Due to the success of the Writers of the Future Contest, the companion Illustrators of the Future Contest was inaugurated five years later.

In the 42 years of the Writers of the Future

Contest, there have been 583 winners and published finalists. The past winners of the Writing Contest have published 2,000 novels and nearly 6,300 short stories. They have produced 36 New York Times bestsellers, and their works have sold more than 60 million copies.

In the 37 years of the Illustrators of the Future Contest, there have been 430 winners. The past winners of the Illustrating Contest have produced over 6,800 illustrations, 390 comic books, graced 700 books and albums with their art, and visually contributed to 68 television shows and 40 major movies.

The Writers of the Future Award is the genre's most prestigious award of its kind and has now become the largest, most successful, and demonstrably most influential vehicle for budding creative talent in the world of speculative fiction. Since its inception, the Writers and Illustrators of the Future contests have produced 42 anthology volumes and awarded upwards of $1 million in cash prizes and royalties.

Touch-a-Plane event rescheduled at Laconia Airport

GILFORD — Winn Aero, the STEM education non-profit for youth, has rescheduled its popular Touch a Plane, Touch a Truck for Saturday, May 16. The event was postponed last Saturday due to heavy rains.

The family-oriented event dubbed “Wings, Water & Wheels,” will operate in the “touch a plane, touch-a-truck” format. Several aircraft owners will display their airplanes, while Gilford Fire and Police, and the County Sheriff will have vehicles for kids to see. The Belknap County SWAT vehicle will also be on display. This is an excellent opportunity to speak directly with the pilots, operators, police and fire personnel about their planes, vehicles and careers. Kids under 18 can fly free orientation flights at the event thanks to the local chapter of the EAA. The World’s largest association of aircraft owners is donating their aircraft and pilots to fly kids, free of charge, on “Young Eagle Flights”; pre-register at www.eaachapters.org. Pine Tree Helicopters will be offering helo rides for a fee to children and adults.

Laconia Airport gates open at 9 a.m. on May 16, and the event will run until 2 p.m. Wings, Water Wheels is WinnAero’s main fundraiser to help deliver aviation and aerospace education to youth throughout New Hampshire. An admission of $5 per person or $20 per family is gratefully accepted to support this mission. Youth registered for Young Eagle flights get free admission. A Food Truck will be available.

WinnAero appreciates the financial and in-kind support from the Laconia Airport Authority, The Bank of New Hampshire, the EAA, Granite State Glass, SkyBright Aviation, The Glidden Trust, Pine Tree Helicopters and Emerson Aviation. Besides the Open House event, WinnAero also operates summer aviation-themed day camps for youth, the ACE Academies. Camp openings still exist in Aeromedical Aviation, Air Traffic Control, Girls in Aviation, Pre-Ground School and Search & Rescue. Visit www.winn-aero.org.

talented ski jumpers. The ski shows included barefoot skiing, trick skiing, spectacular jumping acts, pyramid acts and more. The club also sponsored the Miss Alton Bay Beauty Contest, which debuted in 1958.

If you have memories of the Sunday afternoon ski shows you won’t want to miss this talk. All Alton Historical Society programs are open to the public and are always free of charge. For more information, contact Mary Cornelissen at cotntail@tds.net. Hope to see you there.

Mr. Pappaceno’s metals class at Prospect Mountain High School has been constructing firewood storage racks out of steel and recycled materials generously donated by locals in Belknap County. The class has been working since January to enhance their welding abilities and prepare them for a job in the field if they choose to pursue the skill further. These wood racks will be sold at a silent auction held on the evening of Wednesday, May 20 from 6-8 p.m. at PMHS located at 242 Suncook Valley Highway, Alton. This event is in conjunction with the Chorus Concert, held by Mr. Young, also held the same evening. Bidding will start at $50 per storage rack. Portions of the proceeds will go to the students and the metals class to invest in more material, tools, and PPE (Personal Protective Equipment). We hope to see you all there!
