Interactive concert examines how music holds a mirror up to society

NEW DURHAM — Music has had power over society, and society has had its own power over music since the first note was sung and the first drum struck.

In celebration of centuries and centuries of music in New Hampshire, the Friends of the New Durham 1772 Meetinghouse are sponsoring "Music: Society's Mirror," an interactive concert, on Sunday, July 12 at 1 p.m.

Held at the New Durham Public Library, the free event is a casual gathering for all ages that offers something for everyone as it explores how culture is reflected in the music of the time. It starts with modern day and travels backward chronologically for 250 years, and then further back to Indigenous musical instruments, chants, and prayers.

The program features former resident Craig Werth, a songwriter and performer familiar to New Durham audiences from his tenure with the Merry-meeting Merrymakers in their many musical melodramas at New Durham School.

"Music: Society's Mirror," a free interactive concert for all ages this Sunday, will feature songs that reflect our culture from present day back through 250 years, performed by Craig Werth. Other parts of the program will be demonstrations of authentic Indigenous musical instruments, composing the audience's own song-of-the-day, a display of handmade instruments, a craft, and make your own sundae. The event is sponsored by the Friends of the New Durham 1772 Meetinghouse and will be held at the New Durham Public Library beginning at 1 p.m. Pictured here: youngsters "try their hand" at drumming at a past Storytime at the Meetinghouse with the Cowasuck Band of the Pennacook-Abenaki People. This drum is just one of many instruments attendees will experience.

Following his relocation to Newmarket, Werth went on to tour internationally for five years with Canadian folk singer David Francey and won a Canadian Juno Award for his work. He has collaborated with many acclaimed artists and performed throughout the United States, Canada, Australia, the United Kingdom, and other European countries.

Werth will open the chronological journey, touching on songs that reflected society at the time and some that helped shape America. Songs of the different eras demonstrate how people were feeling about what was going on around them in good times, difficult times, and periods of unity or discord, as well as how society could use music for change.

"I think of music as language," he said. "These musical expressions are a part of us, and that's why we suggest people sing along. Plus, it's fun."

The program boasts many additional elements to keep it as lively as possible. An accomplished composer, Werth will create a song with the audience as partner that captures the current mood of the participants. Good vibrations, no doubt. All audience participation is based on comfort level; the aim is to just have a good time.

Of course, music played an important role long before colonists set foot on the shores of the East Coast. Indigenous peoples' music was profoundly intertwined with spiritual beliefs and community life, serving specific purposes such as religious ceremonies, hunting, and healing.

Paul and Denise Pouliot, the main speakers of the Cowasuck Band of the Pennacook-Abenaki People, will be on hand to explain and demonstrate how Indigenous musical instruments were used in dances, chants, and prayers, and how they made up such an important part of their culture. They bring with them a wonderful array of authentic instruments that people are allowed to touch and play.

Included in the event is a display and demonstration of instruments Werth

Alton celebrates "250 Years Strong" with annual Old Home Day Parade

ALTON — The Alton Business Association proudly presents the Alton Old Home Day Parade on Saturday, Aug. 8, stepping off at 11:30 a.m. This year's theme, "250 Years Strong," honors the nation's semiquincentennial and the deep-rooted pride of the Alton community.

Spectators are invited to bring their chairs and line the route between Letter S Road and Alton Bay for one of the most anticipated community traditions of the summer. The parade celebrates local organizations, businesses, and residents who make Alton the town it is, and this year that celebration carries the weight of 250 years of American history behind it.

Anyone wishing to participate in the parade may register at altonbusinessassociation.com.

Alton Bay makes for a full day destination on Aug. 8, with the parade as the centerpiece of a day that includes:

The Alton Bay Boat Show, hosted by the New Hampshire Boat Museum, marking its 50th anniversary, runs from 9 a.m. to noon at the Alton Town Docks. The show features restored wooden and early fiberglass boats, free admission, and People's Choice Awards voted on by spectators.

The Old Home Day Weekend Craft Fair brings local artisans and handcrafted goods to the heart of Alton Bay, running alongside the morning's festivities. The Alton Parks and Recreation Summer Concert Series closes out the day with Bittersweet performing live at the Alton Bay Bandstand from 7 to 9 p.m.

"August 8 is the kind of day that reminds you why people fall in love with the Lakes Region," said Sarah Goodrum, Chairperson of the Alton Business Association. "The parade is the heartbeat of Old Home Day, and everything happening around it makes Alton Bay the place to be this summer."

For parade registration and full event details, visit altonbusinessassociation.com.

A 68-year-old New Hampshire resident whose identity was still being withheld pending notification of the family as this week's edition went to press had been hiking on his own and was able to place a call to 911, but stopped communicating with the dispatcher. He was nearly one mile from the trailhead. Hikers who came upon him a short time later attempted CPR.

Along with Conservation Officers members of Alton Fire Department,

Alton Police Department and Gilmanton Fire Department responded. Fire personnel attempted additional life saving procedures but unfortunately the hiker succumbed to his condition.

Meet Sphinx!

Meet Sphinx, a big-eyed tabby girl with a one-of-a-kind meow, an unforgettable face, and a constant look of wonder that gives her a little owl-like charm.

Sphinx is a girl who knows exactly what she wants, and she has made it very clear that she would prefer to be the only feline in the home. The very thought of sharing her space with another cat is enough to make her tail puff up, so she is looking for a home where she can enjoy being the one and only.

Outside of that, Sphinx is a pretty simple girl. She is looking for treats, affection, love, and a place where she can explore and feel comfortable. She wants a person who will show her all the best parts of being a cat, from cozy naps to adventures around the house.

With her big eyes, curious expression, and unique personality, Sphinx is ready for a home where she can be confident, comfortable, and fully herself. She is looking for someone who will appreciate her quirks and give her the chance to be the cat she has always dreamed of being.

A celebration 250 years in the making

Every town has traditions that residents circle on the calendar long before the date arrives. In Alton, Old Home Day is one of those occasions. It is a celebration that brings together lifelong residents, seasonal visitors, former neighbors returning home, and newcomers discovering what makes this corner of New Hampshire so special.

This year's theme, "250 Years Strong," arrives at a fitting moment. As communities across the country mark America's 250th anniversary, Alton has the opportunity to celebrate not only the nation's history but also its own enduring character.

Parades are sometimes dismissed as simple entertainment, but they represent something much deeper. They are one of the few public events where nearly every segment of a community is represented. Veterans, first responders, civic organizations, businesses, youth groups, churches, musicians, classic cars, and families all share the same route. For a couple of hours, differences fade into the background, replaced by smiles, applause, and the unmistakable feeling of belonging.

That sense of connection is becoming increasingly valuable.

Modern life often encourages people to experience communities through screens instead of sidewalks. Shopping happens online. Conversations take place through text messages. Entertainment streams into our living rooms. Yet no app can replace standing shoulder to shoulder with neighbors as children wave from parade floats or local organizations proudly display the work they do throughout the year.

Old Home Day reminds us that communities are built through participation.

The day's lineup reflects that spirit perfectly. The New Hampshire Boat Museum's 50th anniversary boat show celebrates the Lakes Region's rich maritime heritage. The craft fair showcases the creativity and entrepreneurial spirit of local artisans. The evening concert provides another opportunity for friends and families to gather under the summer sky before another season begins to wind down.

Each event stands on its own, but together they create something greater than the sum of their parts. They invite people to spend an entire day reconnecting with neighbors, supporting local organizations, and making new memories.

These traditions also depend on volunteers. Behind every parade float, every craft booth, every concert, and every community celebration are countless hours donated by people who believe their town is worth the effort. Planning meetings, fundraising, traffic control, setup, cleanup, and dozens of unseen tasks rarely receive public attention, yet they make events like Old Home Day possible.

Their work deserves appreciation.

The "250 Years Strong" theme also offers an opportunity to think about what strength truly means. It is not measured only by longevity or historic milestones. It is reflected in communities that continue to welcome new families while honoring longtime residents. It is found in businesses that invest locally, organizations that give back, and neighbors who continue showing up for one another.

Every generation inherits traditions from those who came before. The responsibility is not merely to preserve them, but to keep them vibrant enough that the next generation wants to continue them.

On Aug. 8, Alton will once again demonstrate why small-town traditions continue to matter. There will be laughter along the parade route, conversations between old friends, introductions to new neighbors, and children experiencing the excitement that may one day become their own cherished memories.

That is how communities endure.

For 250 years, America has been shaped not only by the events recorded in history books, but by thousands of towns where people gather, volunteer, celebrate, and build lasting connections. Alton's Old Home Day is one of those gatherings. It is a reminder that while history deserves celebration, community deserves participation.

Here's hoping the sidewalks are full, the weather cooperates, and another generation discovers why this tradition remains one of summer's finest days in the Lakes Region.

The Visitors Band is coming to Barnstead Summer Concert Series!

They have many years of playing together but 2025 was the first time they played at the Barnstead Parade Grounds. To say they were well received would be an understatement! They had some of the audience up dancing and P&R received positive feedback from everyone they spoke to. The Visitors Band is a community music ensemble from Dover, New Hampshire, with a long history in the state's music scene. They perform a mix of classic rock 'n' roll hits from the '60s and '70s, '80s rock anthems, and some country tunes, appealing to fans of retro and mainstream pop/rock from that era. Barnstead Parks and Rec is thrilled to welcome them back to the parade grounds on July 11!

LETTERS FROM EDWIN

Diversions

Not being blessed with air conditioning in my truck, I was driving home from work with the windows open. All of a sudden, I felt something crawling under my leg. It certainly wasn't a tick, it felt like something with wings. I tried to brush it out a couple of times unsuccessfully, thinking it was gone only to have it reassert its presents.

Trying to keep most of my attention on my driving, I reached down into my shorts and scooped the critter up into my hand. It wasn't at all too happy about this action, that was obvious. I looked down to see what I had and realized that it was some kind of a small hornet or a wasp, not just a gentle bee.

It was like my hand knew what to do instinctively and instantly threw it toward the open window where it flew away, off to its freedom, some distance from where it had joined me. I didn't even almost get stung. What a blessing. Thank you, Lord.

So today was a Friday. I usually leave Fridays open for looking at work or finishing up unfinished stuff.

I also use it for small jobs. There's a woman who said that she'd call and didn't, so instead of hounding her, I enjoyed a casual morning inside while it rained quite profusely and after lunch headed off to pick up supplies for an upcoming job.

Everything was written on a little notebook list. I found what I needed and headed for the checkout. The computer wouldn't accept my credit card. She tried and tried; it kept rejecting it. Finally, another cash register person came and got it to work. I loaded up the truck and headed home.

It wasn't till I parked the truck, that I realized I forgot a major portion of the purchase. I really need to remember to check my lists before going to the checkout. I started up the truck and drove back to the store. I was hoping to have time to go for a walk out back to check out the woods, but now that time was all eaten up by my second adventure to town.

Knowing that all my leftovers were gone, and that I'd need to cook something for supper. I took advantage of being in the city and scooped up some fast food, as I wouldn't be getting home till well after six. That's not the time to start cooking something in my book.

At this time of year, for a couple of weeks, the sun comes up around the corner and shines on that hidden side of the house. When the sun gets up above the trees, there is a time when it reflects off of my bedroom window, making this jagged rectangle beam that shines right down into the hole in the bluebird house.

I've noticed this for a couple mornings now. Today I saw things moving round inside. It's usually to dark in there. This beam is like a Super Trouper follow spot, it's blindingly bright. And just like stage lights, I'll bet it warms the place up a bit. When the beam moved off, they again began rustling about, sticking their little beaks out the opening. It must be incredibly bright to them. I know it is to me. They'll soon be crawling out, flying around, and then flying away. That's what birds do.

I wonder if they have music with them? Like the birds in Snow White. Do you? Cosby did a thing on kids having their own individual music on his Wonderfulness album. We used to laugh at his stories a lot.

A drummer friend admitted to me that he also did the personal drumming that I do. Maybe it's a percussion section thing. I'm constantly tapping out rhythms with my teeth. I may have inflicted unnecessary tooth wear in doing so, but my dentist has never commented about it.

By moving my jaw in different ways, hitting different combinations of teeth, I can produce a number of different drum tapping sounds inside my head. I piece them together into a cadence of the moment, that can last a long time. It could easily be my rhythm for the day. They're usually about a measure or two long, and just get repeated.

Life can easily distract me from my music, but when things settle down, it's easy to slide back into the rhythm.

There are some conversations that last an hour and leave you wondering what was actually said.

Then there are the five-minute conversations you have in New Hampshire. Those are the ones that stick with you.

I'm talking about the exchanges that happen in places where nobody is in a hurry, even if everyone claims they are. At the hardware store while waiting for paint to be mixed. On the bench outside the post office. Standing beside a pickup truck after you've both reached for the same cart at the transfer station. You don't know the person's name. They don't know yours. But for five minutes, you're neighbors.

It usually starts with the weather, because that's what New Englanders do. If it's been raining, someone will say we needed it. If it's been dry, someone will say we needed rain. If it's perfect outside, someone will remind you it won't last. Then, almost without realizing it, the conversation wanders.

Someone mentions the old mill that used to stand down the road. Another person remembers buying penny candy at a store that's been gone for thirty years.

Before long, you've learned that the stranger's grandson just graduated, they're hoping the tomatoes finally take off this year, and they're still driving the same truck because, as they put it, "It hasn't given me a reason to replace it."

Five minutes. That's all. Then you both smile, say, "Well, I'd better let you get going," and head in opposite directions.

I've always liked those conversations because they're so... unplanned. Nobody is networking. Nobody is trying to impress anyone. Nobody checks a phone every thirty seconds. They're simply talking. It feels almost old-fashioned now.

These days, we're connected to hundreds of people without actually speaking to very many of them. We know what distant acquaintances had for breakfast, but we couldn't tell you the name of the fellow who always waves from his porch when you drive by.

Somewhere along the line, convenience started replacing conversation. That's a trade I'm not sure was worth making. I still think communities are built one conversation at a time. Not the big speeches at Town Meeting. Not the debates on social media. Just the little chats that remind us we're sharing the same place. Those moments are where trust begins.

You discover the person next to you grew up in town, or moved here because they wanted a quieter life. You learn who's recovering from surgery, whose daughter just started teaching, or who finally caught the fish that got away last summer. By the end of those five minutes, the stranger isn't quite a stranger anymore. The funny thing is, you'll probably never see them again.

Or maybe you will. A month later, you'll pass each other at Old Home Day or the county fair. Neither of you remembers the other's name, but you both remember the conversation. You nod. Maybe you stop and talk for another five minutes. That's how small towns work.

Relationships aren't always built through grand gestures. They're built through repeated moments of familiarity. One wave. One conversation. One chance encounter.

Before long, you realize you've become part of one another's lives, even if only in the smallest way. I hope we never lose that.

Life keeps getting faster. Stores add self-checkout lanes. More errands can be done without speaking to another soul. Some days that's convenient. But convenience has never been the same thing as community.

Community still requires people willing to pause for a few minutes and ask, "How've you been?" It's a simple question. Sometimes, it's exactly what someone needed to hear.

So this week, if you're waiting in line at the feed store, the library, or the local market, don't be too quick to stare at your phone. Look up. You may find yourself having one of those five-minute conversations. And if you're lucky, you'll drive home realizing it was the best part of your day.

Seventh inning rally sinks Post 1 in Conway

JOSHUA SPAULDING

Carter Lloyd fires a pitch for Laconia Post 1 during action last Monday in Conway

BY JOSHUA SPAULDING
Sports Editor

CONWAY — In a game that was a pitchers' duel through the first five innings in American Legion Baseball action on Monday, June 29, Laconia Post 1 opened up a 5-0 lead in the top of the sixth before Conway Post 46 walked off with a 6-5 win in the bottom of the seventh inning at Nasby King Field in Conway.

Conway's Sergio Espezuza and Laconia's Carter Lloyd danced their way through the first few innings, working around a few hits, walks and hit batters.

Brayden Townsend was hit by a pitch with one out in the top of the first, stole second and went to third on a wild pitch. After teammate Wyatt Divers worked a walk and stole second, Espezuza snared a hot line drive back to the mound and turned it into a double play to end the inning. Lloyd gave up a two-out hit to Devin Jakubec in the bottom of the first but the game remained scoreless after one.

Lloyd worked a walk to open the top of the second and Cavan Sanborn was hit by a pitch. One out later, a Landon Sargent base hit plated the first run of the game and one out later, Brendan Dee worked a walk before Espezuza got a strikeout to end the inning. Lloyd then set the side down in order in the bottom of the second inning.

Divers was hit by a pitch to open the top of the third, stole second and went to third on a wild pitch. One out later, Lloyd was hit by a pitch and stole second and one out later, Riley Galloway worked a walk to load the bases, with Espezuza getting another strikeout to end the inning. Korbin James worked a walk to lead off the bottom of the third inning, but Divers picked him off first with a perfect throw. Matt Charrette had a two-out double but he was stranded on the bases.

TJ Charbono led off the top of the fourth with a walk and took second on a passed ball. One out later Divers worked a walk before Espezuza again escaped the jam with a strikeout to keep it 1-0. Lloyd responded by setting the side down in order in the bottom of the inning.

Lloyd worked a walk to start the top of the fifth and after Espezuza struck out two, a Sargent double plated Lloyd with the second run of the game and Bowen Brown took over on the mound for the hosts. Charbono was hit by a pitch and Dee walked, loading the bases, but the Conway hurler got a groundout to his brother, Jacob, at third base to end the inning. Jonah Pepin led off the bottom of the inning with a walk, but Divers again executed a pickoff move to eliminate the runner. James had a base hit that was compounded by an error and Bowen Brown had a base hit, but both runners were stranded as Lloyd got a grounder to third to end the inning.

Divers opened the top of the sixth with a base hit and Jake Tryon walked before a Lloyd bunt hit loaded the bases with nobody out. Sanborn worked a walk to plate a run and a sacrifice fly from Galloway drove in another run. Sargent worked a walk and a Charbono ground-er to second plated another run before Post 46 got out of the inning with Laconia leading 5-0.

Espezuza led off the bottom of the inning with a double and went to third on a Jakubec fly ball to center. Jacob Brown then drove in Conway's first run of the game with a base hit, cutting the lead to 5-1 before Lloyd retired the next two batters to end the inning. Bowen Brown worked around base hits from Divers and Lloyd in the top of the seventh, with Pepin gunning down Divers stealing second to help get out of the frame.

Post 46 then went to work in the bottom of the seventh. Owen Robertson led off with a base hit and one out later, Bowen Brown beat out an infield hit and a Charrette hit drove in the second run of the game for Conway. Espezuza reached on an error with another run crossing the plate and Dee took over on the hill for Laconia. Back-to-back walks to Jakubec and Jacob Brown cut the lead to 5-4 and a Hayden White base hit drove in Espezuza and Jakubec to give Post 46 the walkoff 6-5 win.

The two teams will meet again on Monday,

Abenaki celebrates 30 years of youth lacrosse in Wolfeboro

JOSHUA SPAULDING

Abenaki Youth Lacrosse honored those who were instrumental in helping to start and build the program 30 years ago. Left to right, Bill Pottle, the Garnsey family (Charlie, Fred, Meighan, Ryder and missing, Erin), Margaret Martin, Kate Turner and Bill Lee.

WOLFEBORO — For the past 30 years, Abenaki Lacrosse has helped to bring the sport to thousands of children throughout the Wolfeboro area and last Thursday afternoon, Abenaki alumni gathered at The Nick to celebrate those three decades and catch up on old times.

"I love the game and I wanted to see give every young person an opportunity to experience it," said Bill Pottle, who brought the idea of Abenaki to life back in 1996. "I grew up loving lacrosse and not having an opportunity to participate in a structured environment."

Pottle noted that when he was growing up in Massachusetts, the only lacrosse teams he knew of were at private schools and as someone who didn't go to a private school, he didn't have the chance to play. And he didn't want that to happen to other kids.

"I had access to stuff, I knew officials, I was active in the Lacrosse Foundation, I had fields at my disposal and some extra equipment," said Pottle, who at the time was serving as the Athletics Director and lacrosse coach at Brewster Academy. "And I had Brewster players that were helping me coach." All that came together to become Abenaki Youth Lacrosse with the first team in 1996.

And from the beginning, there was a small group of folks leading the way, including Bill Lee, Kate Turner and Margaret Martin.

"It was a fun time, that first year was just magical," said Turner, who for many years was the Assistant Athletics Director at Brewster Academy. "Everybody was new."

Village Players present "The Play That Goes Wrong" opening July 24

WOLFEBORO — If you've been part of a theater production, you know there's always a chance that things will go wrong. But the hope is always that things won't go wrong, the production will go on as planned and even if something does go wrong, the actors and crew will do their best to make sure that the audience will be none the wiser.

However, when it comes to the Cornley University Drama Society's production of "Murder at Haversham Manor," things go awry, and it will be very obvious to everyone. The results are hilarious.

That is the premise behind "The Play That Goes Wrong," the next production for the Village Players Theater, opening on July 24 at the theater in downtown Wolfeboro.

The actors in the production of "Murder at Haversham Manor" find themselves in all sorts of precarious positions as things literally fall down around them as they try to put on the show. The backstage crew becomes part of the show as well as they look to (sometimes) help keep things together.

Those familiar with the Village Players will recognize many of the faces that are portraying the actors portraying the folks involved in producing "Murder at Haversham Manor. It starts with Christian Boudman, who plays Chris Bean, the leader of Cornley Drama Society and plays Inspector Carter in their production. Bob Rautenberg plays Jonathan Harris, who is playing murder victim Charles Haversham and Jonathan Flower plays Robert Grove, who is playing Thomas Colleymore. Sarah Kuhn, in her second Village Players production, plays Sandra Wilkinson, who is playing Thomas Colleymore's sister, Florence, who is also Charles Haversham's fiancée. Bob Tuttle plays Max Bennett, who plays a pair of characters in the show, Cecil Haversham and Arthur the gardener while AJ O'Neil plays Dennis Tyde, who portrays Perkins the butler. Paul Stewart plays Trevor Watson, who is controlling the lights and sound for the Cornley University Drama Society but somehow finds himself on stage as things continue to go wrong. And trying to hold it all together as a good stage manager should, is Kaylin Gagne, portraying Annie Twilloil, the "Murder at Haversham Manor" stage manager, who like the light and sound guy, also finds herself on stage, but finds that she might actually like it and may actually be pretty good at it.

The backstage crew for the "Murder at Haversham Manor" includes newcomers Dana Gardner and Jon Long along with veteran Village Players Helen Rautenberg and Jeremy Hardin and newcomer Julie Mills, in her second Village Players production.

The Olivier Award-winning comedy is a global phenomenon that's guaranteed to leave you aching with laughter and is directed by veteran Village Players directors Russ Ellis and Jay Sydow, who know a thing or two about bringing the funny to the stage in Wolfeboro.

"The Play That Goes Wrong" will be on the Village Players stage on July 24, 25 and 31 and Aug. 1, all at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday, Aug. 2, at 2 p.m. Once again, The Village Players are offering tiered ticket prices for patrons who purchase tickets online. The $45 "Hero" ticket helps to sustain Village Players shows in addition to covering costs including heating/cooling, cleaning, repairs, insurance and general upkeep of the building. The "Patron" $20 ticket pays for the current show costs including costumes, publicity, scenery, scripts, sheet music, musicians and props. VP is also offering a $10 ticket for "Friends." This price contributes to the current show while keeping ticket prices at a minimum. The theater hopes this price keeps prices affordable for the community. Tickets are available at Black's Paper and Gifts and online at village-players.com.

"The Play That Goes Wrong" is generously sponsored by Dr. Richard J. Neal, DMD.

The Friends of the Wolfeboro Community Bandstand is a non-profit group that sponsors free concerts in Cate Park each Saturday throughout July and August. The concerts run from 7 to 9 p.m. in Cate Park in downtown Wolfeboro. Though there is no charge for the concert, a pass-that offering is taken at intermission to help support the Friends of the Wolfeboro Community Bandstand's mission to bring quality acts to Wolfeboro every summer.

The Windham Community Band will play at 7 p.m. on Saturday, July 11, weather permitting. The concerts are subject to weather conditions. If bad weather is threatening and the concert has to be postponed, there will be a sign posted at the park entrance near the town docks and will be posted online at wolfeborobandstand.org and on the group's Facebook page.

Powerhouse holds auditions for two fall productions

LACONIA — Powerhouse Theatre Collaborative, the resident theatre company of The Colonial Theatre in Laconia, announces auditions for two fall productions. On Sunday, July 19 and Tuesday, July 21 at the Colonial, local actors are invited to audition for the dynamic comedy "Peter and the Starcatcher" and "Big Bad: The Trials and Tribulations of a Fairy Tale Wolf," an original theatrical adventure. The former is part of the 2026 Colonial Series, and the latter is part of the Spark Series and will take place at the beautiful Prescott Farm campus in Laconia.

"Peter and the Starcatcher" will be directed by Bryan Halperin. Based on the popular book series "Peter and the Starcatchers" by Dave Barry and Ridley Pearson, this imaginative play is about how a young orphan boy becomes Peter Pan. Powerhouse is looking for comedic actors to play a variety of roles in this storytelling theatre style play where the actors make the world come to life with creative costumes, props and set pieces. Rehearsals will begin in late August, and performances will be Oct. 9-11. Auditions are open to ages 16 and up.

"Big Bad" is the third new interactive theatre adventure Powerhouse has created to bring kids and adults of all ages to the Prescott Farm campus. Written by Powerhouse veteran Tess Hodges and directed by Courtney Palmer, every 20 minutes a different group will set off on an adventure that takes them through fairy tales regarding big bad wolves. While the promenade theatre experience is appropriate for all ages to attend, auditions will be open to adults and teens 12+. Big Bad runs Sept. 12 and 13 and will begin rehearsals in early August.

Auditioners may audition for both shows. Big Bad auditions will begin at 6 pm both nights and Starcatcher auditions will follow at approximately 7 p.m. Actors are encouraged to audition for both to improve their chances of participating in at least one of the shows. For all the information on how to register and prepare for the auditions check out <https://www.powerhousenh.org/auditions>.

Also, check out powerhousenh.org for all the latest info on Powerhouse including ticket links for its summer production of Shrek the Musical, or contact info@powerhousenh.org for more details. For more information on all the programs at Prescott Farm, go to www.prescottfarm.org.

ABENAKI

Among the new faces coming to Abenaki were Fred and Meighan Garnsey, who's son Charlie was on the very first Abenaki team, a group of young men who would go on to win the 1999 state championship as the Kingswood Knights once they reached high school.

"The kids came to us and said they wanted a high school team," Fred Garnsey said. "We had to raise the money, it was one of those classic, kids will do whatever work someone needed, for a donation to the program.

"We paid for jerseys, equipment, whatever they needed," he added, noting that Lee became the coach and was eventually followed by Mike Jones, who was the coach when the team won the championship in 1999.

When Charlie Garnsey was playing for Abenaki, Pottle recalls his younger brother, Ryder, always hanging around, always soaking in the game that his brother, and his sister, Erin, were loving.

"I got to know (the Garnseys) and little Ryder, with a plastic stick, was at every practice and game, right at my hip," Pottle said.

That little kid with the plastic stick has become Abenaki Youth Lacrosse's greatest success story, as Ryder Garnsey, after playing at Brewster Academy and the University of Notre Dame, is now starring for the California Redwoods in the Premier Lacrosse League, where he has been playing since 2019. He's also an assistant coach with his alma mater in South Bend, Ind.

"Those guys were my heroes," the youngest Garnsey said of his siblings and their teammates. "That (lacrosse) was what they were doing and I thought it was the coolest thing in the world.

"I wasn't thinking about my future when I decided to play lacrosse, I was just doing it because it was the most fun thing to do," Ryder Garnsey said. "Luckily it's been the center of my life for the last 25 years."

"As a four-year-old, he couldn't get enough of it," said Fred Garnsey of his youngest son. "You've got to love it, but that was a crazy time, driving all over the place."

After that first Abenaki team in 1996, a girls' team was added with Turner and Martin leading the charge and that eventually led to Kingswood Regional High School adding lacrosse teams for boys and girls.

"The kids who played in church parking lots are now watching their kids play on the amazing fields at Kingswood, Brewster Academy and The Nick," said Byron Martin as he wrapped up a brief history of Abenaki Youth Lacrosse.

"We had something like 13 kids on that first team and the next year we had at least two teams and now we've had seasons of more than 200 kids," said Pottle, who left Brewster for the Upper Valley and then New York but has since returned and is back on the sidelines with Abenaki Youth Lacrosse.

"For the young girls (on those first teams), some of them it was the first time on a team, with a uniform," Turner said. "Sometimes they even wore their uniform to bed."

Pottle came up with the idea of the white bison that serves as the Abenaki logo, noting it was powerful, graceful, lordly and was sacred to the Native Americans, who created the game that Pottle loves.

"I said wouldn't that white bison look incredible on the uniforms," Pottle said, noting he combined the colors of Syracuse orange, Virginia Blue and Loyola silver. "I am a scientist by trade but I love history, particularly the Native American culture. It just all fit."

After Byron Martin read a history of Abenaki, sprinkling in a number of names of folks who were in attendance, Pottle, Turner, Margaret Martin and Lee (who traveled all the way from Michigan) were all presented with special plaques in honor of their dedication to Abenaki Lacrosse and the Garnsey family was presented with a special piece of artwork created by Byron Martin for their support of the Abenaki program.

Holly Williams Aucoin of The Nick spoke of her own kids' love of the game and their excitement of getting the chance to meet Ryder Garnsey, who also spoke briefly at the end of the ceremony, thanking his family and the Abenaki family.

"This is where I want to be on the Fourth of July," he said.

and his wife Liz have constructed by hand. The collection contains a harp, tongue drums, a mountain dulcimer, a frame drum, and various stringed instruments such as an octave mandolin and banjo.

The Pouliots will lead a craft for children, making a rattle filled with skunk beans, a traditional Abenaki crop, that can be planted when the rattle falls apart from use.

The program will end with an ice cream social, complete with unlimited toppings.

"Music: Society's Mirror" is supported in part by a Civic Life and Belonging grant from New Hampshire Humanities. A spokesperson for the non-profit Friends' group extolled the state organization for making the free event possible. "What better way to come together than to celebrate music? And how amazing is it to include hymns that were actually sung in our town's Meetinghouse?"
