Camp Invention wraps up at New Durham School

On Friday, June 30, New Durham School wrapped up their week long Camp Invention with 38 students in grades 2-6. This was the seventh year of the program at NDS. The theme was "Wonder." Students created their own pop-up businesses, engineered their own mimic-bot, had next level celebrations, and learned about the physics of skateboarding.

BES likely moving toward smaller building project

BY ERIN PLUMMER
mnews@salmonpress.news

BARNSTEAD — The proposed $23 million expansion project at Barnstead Elementary School is looking less likely to happen in the near future because it is unlikely to receive state building aid, according to the superintendent. A smaller alternative project might move ahead instead.

At this year's annual meeting, voters approved two warrant articles with two different renovation and expansion projects for the building. Article 2 would appropriate $23,398,200 to create an addition to the building that would include a gym, additional classroom space, unified arts programs, and science labs. This article would be contingent on the school receiving $10,210,940 in State Building Aid and bonding the remaining $13,187,260. If Article 2 was defeated or the school didn't receive Building Aid, Article 3 proposed a scaled back expansion project for $1.8 million. This project would construct and renovate additions to the A and B Wings as well as the cafeteria and the "Old Lobby." The $1.8 million cost would be bonded.

The BES project qualified for around $10 million. SEE BES PAGE A13

Mother-daughter duo promote sustainability at Rayne Refillery

ALTON — Business partners should share the same goals and dedication. An Alton business has partners who share even more — Ronnie Hanson and Gracie Hanson share the same family, as they are mother and daughter.

There is no denying they also hold the same passion and commitment to their store Rayne Refillery.

The business opened its doors in September of 2022 with what most shoppers would find an unusual concept. Rayne Refillery is a low waste refill store, founded to bring sustainable, eco-friendly, and less-waste products to consumers.

With a store designed to reduce single-use plastic and unnecessary packaging, customers can reuse and refill their own containers with the store's bulk items.

"Remember when the slogan 'Reduce, Reuse, and Recycle' came out?" Ronnie asked. "Now we say, 'Reduce, Reuse, and Refill' because recycling isn't working."

Awareness is growing that separating our plastic and putting it in the recycling bin at transfer stations is not actually ensuring the containers don't wind up in landfills or the ocean.

Edward Albee's "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" opens July 28 at the Village Players

THE ATMOSPHERE gets tense as Nick (Robby Sturtevant) reacts to George's (Bob Rautenberg) taunts in "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" opening July 28.

GEORGE (Bob Rautenberg) and Martha (Michaela Andruzzi) share a laugh in "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" coming to the Village Players Theater in July.

WOLFEBORO — The Village Players are excited to present the American classic "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" to a new generation of theatergoers this summer. Actors are deep into rehearsals for this summer's production, which opens July 28 in Wolfeboro.

"Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?," first produced in 1962, went on to win the Tony Award and the New York Drama Critics' Circle award for best play, launching playwright Edward Albee into the forefront of American theater. This intensely compelling work delves into human relationships and the masks people wear before others-- the stories we tell other people and that we tell ourselves. George and Martha seem like a fun-loving couple when they invite Nick and Honey over for drinks, but the evening of fun and games turns into verbal sparring, cruelty, and betrayal. What follows is an intense and psychologically gripping battle of wits and emotions that exposes the fragile nature of their own lives.

Director Jay Sydow points out that this play has been an amazing departure from the fun, light-hearted, no-thinking-required productions he is used to bringing to the stage. "Everything I learned in American Literature in high school came flooding back to me. This production has been a great deal of work for all involved, and I am extremely grateful for their dedication and conviction to bring this play to life."

George is played by Bob Rautenberg; Martha, his wife, is played by Michaela Andruzzi.

Young marrieds, Nick and Honey, are played by Robby Sturtevant and Amanda Wagner. Sydow is directing, assisted by Joshua Spaulding. Carol Bense is acting as advisor. Cathy Fraser is producing the show, taking care of the many details that surround a community theater production. Special thanks go out to show sponsors Linda Penney and Keith Lion.

Performances are Fridays and Saturdays, July 28 and 29, Aug. 4 and 5, at 7:30 p.m., and Sunday Aug. 6, at 2 p.m., at the Village Players Theater, 51 Glendon St., Wolfeboro. Tickets, $20, are available at village-players.com, Black's Paper Store in Wolfeboro, and at the door.

Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? is presented by special arrangement with Broadway Licensing, LLC, servicing the Dramatists Play Service collection. (www.dramatists.com)

Friends of the Wolfeboro Community Bandstand summer concert series.

Kelleher, who graduated from Kingswood Regional High School and went on to study music at Berklee College of Music, is now based in Nashville, Tenn., but will be home to perform in the Lakes Region as the third concert in the free Saturday night series. Kelleher takes the stage at 7 p.m.

Kelleher brings a pop and rock combination to her songwriting and is unafraid to be blunt. She blends electronic elements and driving guitars together to create her own unique sound and her signature raspy vocal tone makes her a force to be reckoned with.

Kelleher has received numerous musical honors and accolades, including songwriting awards from Berklee. She is also an avid touring musician performing all over New England and beyond. She has performed at legendary venues including the Hotel Café in Los Angeles, Calif. and the Ryman Auditorium in Nashville, Tenn.

Her melodies and emotive lyrics blended with indie-pop production has cultivated a unique sound, a sound of a young woman who is working hard and keeping it clear. Her debut EP "Songs So Far" has garnered more than 125,000 streams on Spotify alone among the many other successful singles she released last year.

The Friends of the Wolfeboro Community Bandstand summer concerts take place each Saturday night in July and August in the bandstand, which is located in Cate Park in downtown Wolfeboro. The concerts start at 7 p.m. and run for two hours, with a short intermission. The concerts are free, but a pass-the-buck-et collection is taken at intermission to help support the concert series.

In the event of bad weather, check the Friends of the Wolfeboro Community Bandstand Facebook page and signs will also be posted at the entrance to the park.

Peaches and Politics fundraiser returns July 22

BY CATHY ALLYN
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

NEW DURHAM — People always look forward to annual events, and the events themselves often grow bigger and more encompassing.

That's the case with Peaches and Politics, a yearly fundraiser put on by the New Durham Democratic Committee, that features food, fellowship, speakers, music, and a lovely locale.

It got its start in 2019 and attracted three Presidential primary candidates and a representative of another as speakers. The next year, Covid forced the event into an on-line raffle, but Peaches and Politics bounced back in 2021 with keynote speaker Lawrence Lessig of Harvard University.

Last year, several state-level candidates spoke, including gubernatorial candidate Dr. Tom Sherman.

Monies raised go toward the support of local, state, and national candidates. There is more to the group than that, though. It donates to local non-partisan causes and organizations, and members care for a garden near the New Durham Police Station and email legislators regarding upcoming bills.

Beginning in September, the group will host a series of presentations, virtual and in-person, on non-partisan issues that will benefit the community. The first will be on Social Security, virtually, at noon on Sept. 27. The session will be recorded, so registrants who are unavailable then will be able to watch at their leisure.

Everything begins with the group's big event, though, and it is scheduled this year for Saturday, July 22 at the Miller Farm, 51 Miller Rd., New Durham, from noon until 4 p.m.

Acting as coordinators of all of the volunteers necessary to pull off an event like this are David and Polly Wessel. The husband/wife team employs a spreadsheet to keep track of everything from who's helping with parking to how many tablecloths are needed.

It's no mean feat, and it doesn't start a few weeks before.

Polly said the best thing about the hard work and time commitment is "just the day itself. The whole day is always a great experience."

She listed all of the positives.

"The farm is beautiful, we have a chance to be with people and catch up with those we haven't seen, the food is great, and the speakers are a valuable part of it. Everything we can do to make that day a success is worth it," she said.

She said people can come and go as they please.

"Some stay the entire time, since we have things going on, but others might stay for just a brief while," she added.

The two also research and engage the speakers for the event.

This year, at press time, gubernatorial candidate Cinde Warmington and Dan MacMillan, whose non-partisan group Save Democracy in America is working to get big money out of elections, will be on the program.

David is always on the look-out for speakers.

"When you come across an interesting person who has something to say and a good voice to present those ideas, that's what we want," he said.

Back in February, he saw MacMillan's op-ed in the "New Hampshire Business Review" and started up a correspondence that resulted in MacMillan speaking at Peaches and Politics at 12:30 p.m.

"He's a marvelous speaker with a great cause," a member who has been at another of his speaking engagements said.

MacMillan, holding a law degree from Fordham University and a PhD from Columbia University, is the author of an acclaimed book for the general public about why the Holocaust happened.

Interestingly, it was his research for a new book on money in politics that spurred him to take direct political action, leading to his latest endeavor.

His talk, "Voter-Owned Elections Can Overcome Big Money and Bring Americans Together," reflects his thoughts on Democracy Dollars.

This system, used in several cities, including Portland, ME, uses vouchers from a government fund that voters can give to the candidates of their choice, in an effort to keep moneyed interests out of elections.

"It's an American issue," MacMillan wrote in an email to David, "because we're all fed up with politics as usual, we need a government that serves us instead of campaign donors, and we all believe in government by the people."

He said his proposed reforms have cross-partisan appeal and can help unite the country, "because campaign cash worsens polarization."

Warmington, who will speak at 1:30 p.m., is a lifelong health care advocate who currently serves on the Executive Council. Prior to becoming an attorney, she worked in health care for two decades.

Along with increasing access to affordable housing, she has vowed to increase mental health resources. She is a recipient of the Lakes Region Mental Health Center's Pete Harris Community Service Award for her advocacy work to raise awareness of mental health issues.

During her tenure on the Council, she voted against defunding Planned Parenthood. She announced her run for governor in June and has indicated her campaign is about freedom for the state's people, including freedom for women to make their own health care decisions, for workers to earn fair wages, for parents to send their kids to school without fear of gun violence, and for everyone to thrive.

In addition to the special guests, the peach-themed food prepared by committee members is a draw. Some recurring favorites are chicken wings with spicy peach glaze, peach salsa with chips, and peach iced tea.

"We always have all sorts of cobblers," Polly said. "It's fun to make something that utilizes peach jam, too."

She said this year she was contemplating baking savory peach muffins.

Tickets are $10, with children 12 and under admitted free. They are available at the door or online at <https://secure.actblue.com/donate/peaches-2023>.

Chaz Proulx will provide music and a peach themed gift basket will be raffled off.

Richard Leonard said Peaches and Politics is a "connection" and a good opportunity for networking. He was glad to offer the grounds of the Miller Farm for the event.

"I do it to support local Democrats," he said.

The committee can be reached at newdurhamdems@gmail.com for more information or to be added to the group's email list to stay abreast of activities.

St. John's-on-the-Lake welcomes Rev. Carol Asher

Rev. Carol Snow Asher

GILFORD — St. John's-on-the-Lake welcomes the Rev. Carol Snow Asher to its pulpit on July 23. The Rev. Asher, ordained with both the American Baptist church and the United Church of Christ, is the former pastor of the Center Harbor Congregational Church, where she served for eleven years. Previously she served churches in Massachusetts.

The ministry is a third career for the Rev. Asher. She served many years as a Peace Corps Volunteer in Northeast Brazil and later taught foreign languages in Providence, R.I., high schools. In her spare time, she loves to nurture the gardens in her yard, even as she nurtures her own "inner garden" and seeks to help others to tend both inner and outer gardens.

Saint John's is a picturesque church built in 1927 of native stone. A wooden tower surrounds a structure that was originally a private lookout tower. The birch altar and the stained glass windows add to its charm. It is an ecumenical chapel whose mission is to serve the summer residents of the island area. Services are held each summer Sunday at 10 a.m.

St. John's is located on the highest point of Bear Island, Lake Winnepesaukee, and it can be reached by a short walk from the church docks in Church Cove (Deep Cove) on the west side of Bear Island, as well as by other marked paths. For "taxi" service from Meredith Neck, email us at bear.island.church.ferry@gmail.com. Sturdy shoes are recommended. All are welcome, as are well-behaved leashed dogs. Freedom for all, understanding for one another

In a world where our differences should be celebrated, and progress towards equality has always been the driving force, it is crucial to emphasize the values of acceptance and freedom for every individual. True freedom does not discriminate; it extends its embrace to all, regardless of differences or misunderstandings. We must recognize that just because we may not fully understand someone's experiences, culture, or identity, it does not justify denying them the same rights, respects, and freedoms that we hold dear.

Acceptance means realizing that every person has the right to exist and thrive without facing discrimination or exclusion. It is not a statement that should provoke offense or threaten anyone's beliefs. On the contrary, it is a profound affirmation that we are building a society where everyone feels valued, regardless of their background or individuality.

For too long, certain individuals have been subjected to being stared at, treated differently, or made to feel like they do not belong. But imagine the transformative power of a society where everyone truly feels that they belong, where their unique qualities are celebrated and respected. By embracing acceptance, we create an environment where people are empowered to be their authentic selves and contribute to the rich tapestry of our communities.

It is our responsibility to challenge any biases or preconceived notions we may hold and actively seek understanding. Instead of closing our minds, let us open our hearts and engage in meaningful dialogue. By listening to each other's stories, we can gain valuable insights and bridge the gaps that may divide us.

Acceptance is not a one-sided endeavor; it requires empathy, compassion, and a willingness to learn from one another. As we champion freedom for ourselves, let us extend that same freedom to our fellow human beings. Let us forge a path that affirms the inherent worth and dignity of every individual.

Acceptance and freedom go hand in hand. They are the foundations upon which we can construct a society that truly values and honors each individual. By recognizing that everyone belongs, we empower those who have been marginalized, stigmatized, or misunderstood. Together, let us champion acceptance, nurture understanding, and create a world where freedom is for everyone, unequivocally and unconditionally.

Story Time

During the last week of June, the Oscar Foss Memorial Library's Wednesday Storytime came with a special and unexpected treat! Barnstead resident, Debbie Keene, knitted and donated these beautiful African dolls to be handed out to the children who attended. Special thanks to Ms. Keene for her generosity!

LETTERS FROM EDWIN

Every morning, I get woken up by my friend tapping on my bedroom window. A while ago, I saw him chasing around with his significant other, looking like a couple of love birds. He found out how to grab onto and hang on my window screens and was really impressing her by doing so. I was busy doing yard work but decided to watch for a while.

Their antics continued from window to ladder to porch railing and roof. Back and forth. For a moment I thought that I would witness the consummation of their relationship, but she shied away and the chase went on. I watched the show for a few more moments before they flew off around the house and out of sight.

These days, looking out my bedroom, and others, you will see lots of little white marks. My guess is that it's probably dried up Bluebird saliva that gets deposited there during its constant pecks. I haven't seen her for a number of days, so my guess is that she's probably sitting on eggs in the little birdhouse. He's outside protecting her by fighting off all the invading Bluebirds that he sees in all my windows.

There's been so much rain lately that it's been hard to keep up with outside my jobs. This woman asked me to bring my tiller over her place and rough up the ground where she wanted to plant new grass. The other day rain wasn't forecast till like three o'clock. I figured that I could easily accomplish that so I set my sights on doing so.

I knew that I could fit the tiller into my truck, but that would mean emptying all my stuff out from it and leaving it exposed to the rain sitting in the yard. I decided not today.

Last year a woman asked me to bring my four wheeler to her place to drag and smooth out her new lawn. When I pulled my seldomly used trailer from it's space in the woods, one of the tires came loose from the wheel. I tried to get it to reveal myself unsuccessfully, so I took it off the trailer and brought it down to some tire guys to repair. When it came back it was holding air.

Now knowing from experience that running on a low tire will break the bead, I checked the air before moving it. That very same tire was already off the rim. With my attempts to get it to inflate proving ineffective, I jacked up the trailer and removed the wheel again. Not wanting to bring it back to the same tire guys, I got out my rubber cement and slobbered it into the seam, cranked up the ratchet strap and shot it with air. It inflated and wasn't losing air. So far, a success. By the time I got it back on the trailer it was noon time.

I arrived at my customers place around one and was soon churning up her dirt. It wasn't long before the little occasional showers turned into occasional rain. Seeing the progression, I proceeded to remove my cloths and get into my bathing suit. Soon after, it was a torrential downpour. I didn't care. My boots were getting wet and muddy but what a nice day to be out in such a summer rain. Remember the song? In 68, Johnny Rivers sang "summer rain taps at my window," a sweet song of multidimensional love. They don't seem to write them like that anymore.

That's a song too! By the Greg Kihn band, called the breakup song. We actually cover that one; it's guaranteed to get them up on the dance floor. There are some songs that just seem to get to everybody hopping.

So after all was done, I drove the tiller back onto the trailer and brought it home whereupon driving it down off the trailer I noticed that it's tire too had broken the bead. I drove it over by the cellar door and pulled off the wheel and did my best to clean out all the dirt and tried to blow it back up in the rain. No luck, air leaking out all over the place. Not a good thing to be doing in the pouring rain. I left everything as it was and took the wheel with me, inside to dry off.

The bird is again tapping my window, reminding me to get off to work.

Learning to walk again

Take a trip down memory lane to when we were kids. Everything was fresh and new. We watched the world in awe as our older siblings, parents, or other grown-ups seemingly defied gravity, strutting around on two feet while we were stuck crawling. How badly we wanted to walk.

We'd take a couple of steps, only to end up with a mouthful of carpet. But that desire? It fueled us; it made us dust ourselves off and try again. We were relentless, relentless in our pursuit to join the walking crew. And after countless tumbles and stumbles, we did it! How did we do it? By watching others and then trying to do it like them.

As adults, we embark on new adventures and face new challenges. But guess what? The same strategy still applies. What could be more potent than observing and learning from those who came before us if we're seeking success in a particular endeavor?

When I wanted to be a fast swimmer, I was obsessed with the world's top swimmers and their routines. I studied their eating habits, workouts, cross-training, and techniques. If I was to be as fast as they were, I had to do what they did.

POSITIVELY

MOORE

My mindset was simple: why waste time creating a new method when a successful one already exists?

Isaac Newton, the renowned physicist, and mathematician, said, "If I have seen further, it is by standing on the shoulders of giants."

What does it mean to stand on the shoulders of giants? No matter what we seek to achieve, there's a high likelihood someone has already accomplished it or at least something similar. Their experiences, successes, and even failures can provide insight to move you toward achieving your dreams faster.

Would you ever consider climbing Mount Everest without examining the routes and strategies of the climbers who have summited before? You'd be insane not to. I'd only attempt such a feat by doing the same thing other successful climbers have done to get up and down without killing themselves.

You can apply this same principle to anything you set out to accomplish.

Are you looking to write a novel? Identify an author whose style resonates with the type of book you'd like to write. Consider the length of their books and how many words they have. Get into the author's routine: do they write every day? What does their writing schedule look like? Who is their publisher, and what is their submission process?

Want to be the best salesperson in your office? Identify the leading salesperson in your field. How do they generate leads? How many client meetings do they schedule daily? How do they utilize time during the workday? If possible, shadow them, ask questions, emulate their selling style, and adopt their closing strategies.

Ambitious about changing the world or shaking up a particular industry? Seek wisdom from the pioneers. What challenges did they confront, and do those hurdles still stand? Study how they tackled challenges and incorporate their strategies into your approach.

You may want to do it your way, and you can. While that may be true, it's always beneficial to learn from the mistakes of those who came before us. You can find someone comparable even if they didn't do exactly what you're doing.

Eleanor Roosevelt, the former First Lady of the United States, said, "Learn from the mistakes of others. You can't live long enough to make them all yourself."

Emulating the habits of successful people is about something other than copying or being unoriginal. It's about intelligent strategy and recognizing proven pathways to success.

Kobe Bryant, recognized as one of the greatest players in NBA history, actively studied and emulated Michael Jordan's moves, mannerisms, and speaking style.

Someone else has faced the same challenges, persevered, and emerged victorious. How did they do it?

Here's my challenge to you. Identify someone who has achieved what you're striving for. Study them. Get to know their story. Understand their journey and, most importantly, draw lessons from their experiences.

Be open, be curious, and reach for the stars. After all, you're just learning to walk again, this time in a new field.

Edward Jones: Financial Focus

Retirees: Talk finances with your grown children

When you're retired, you'll likely have some financial concerns — just like all retirees. However, if you've invested regularly and followed a long-term financial strategy, you should be able to address most issues that come your way. But there's one important action that's sometimes overlooked by retirees: sharing their financial situation with their grown children. And this knowledge can benefit everyone in your family.

You might be surprised by the concern your children have for your financial well-being. Consider these findings from a 2023 study by Age Wave and Edward Jones:

- 66% of millennials (generally defined as ranging from 27 to 42) worry that their parents or in-laws may not have enough money to live comfortably in retirement.
- 83% of millennials would rather know their parents are financially secure in their retirement, even if it means their parents pass on less money to them.

If you have children in this age range or older, or who soon will be, how can you address their concerns and potentially improve your financial outlook? Communication is the key. By openly communicating with your family about your financial status, you can reduce anxieties and misperceptions. If you're in good financial shape, your adult children may be reassured that you won't be needing their assistance. And if you are feeling some financial pressures, you can inform your children of the steps you are taking to improve your situation.

One such step may be to reduce your cost of living — the less you spend day to day, the better your ability to preserve your investment and retirement accounts. You may be able to reduce costs in many small ways, such as ending streaming services you no longer use, but you could make an even bigger impact by downsizing your living arrangements. In fact, 72% of today's retirees have downsized or are willing to downsize to reduce their housing costs, according to the Age Wave/Edward Jones survey. Downsizing isn't for everyone, but if it's a possibility for you, it may be worth considering because the savings could be significant.

You may also be able to reduce or consolidate your debts. Start by understanding how much and what kinds of debt you have. Then, consider ways to lower your payments, such as refinancing. For example, if you're carrying a balance on multiple credit cards, you might be able to transfer the amounts you owe onto a single card with a more favorable interest rate.

Here's another move to consider: Adjust your investment mix to possibly provide you with more income in retirement. During your working years, you may have invested primarily for growth — after all, you could be retired for two or more decades, so you'll need to draw on as many financial assets as possible. But once you're retired, your investment focus may need to shift somewhat toward income-producing opportunities. Keep in mind, though, that you'll still need some growth potential to help keep ahead of inflation.

One final suggestion: Let your children know if you already have a strategy in place to meet the potentially high costs of long-term care, such as a nursing home stay. This burden is certainly something you won't want your children to take on.

By informing your children about your financial picture, and how you're trying to improve it, you can ease everyone's minds — so keep the lines of communication open.

Alton Historical Society to visit Town Hall

ALTON — For its July program, the Alton Historical Society will be visiting the 129 year old Alton Town Hall. Designed by well-known architect Alvah T. Ramsdell of Dover and erected by contractor G.H. Proctor and Son also of Dover, our Town Hall was completed at a cost of $15,098.75 in 1894.

The program will be held on Wednesday, July 19 at 7 p.m. in the Town Hall Auditorium (second floor). Ryan Heath, Town Administrator, will speak about the updating, repairs and renovations that have been addressed at Town Hall over the past year. The project has included the remodel of the old balcony area into an office, repairing roof leaks, rot and brick deterioration, a new HVAC system, repairs and painting to the auditorium and two new ADA compliant bathrooms on the first floor. Other plans include new offices, new flooring throughout, repairs to exterior window frames and exterior brick restoration. The goal is to ensure the building is maintained appropriately to last many more years while also restoring some of the historical characteristics.

The presentation by Mr. Heath will include a tour of the basement, main floor, second floor and third floor. This will be an interesting evening where we can see and enjoy the charm and character in the building's historic architecture. All are welcome to our Society programs and they are always free of charge.

Visit the 1838 Rowe House in Gilford Village

GILFORD — The 1838 Rowe House in Gilford Village will be open for tours on Saturday mornings from 10-12 on July 8 through July 29, and on Aug. 5. It will be open during Old Home Day on Aug. 26 from 9 a.m.-noon. It is located at 88 Belknap Mountain Rd., beside the elementary school.

This house is unique in New Hampshire as it is the only brick farmhouse with four interior chimneys arranged around a central hallway floor plan. There are four rooms in the brick main house that are set up to resemble an early farmhouse and an ell that was a later addition.

If you bring a child or grandchild, they will be asked many questions, such as “what do you guess this is?” concerning an icebox, glass milk bottles, butter churn, butter molds, all items in the kitchen that will help them to understand how their ancestors lived in the 1800s and early 1900s. Adults will be asked if they know the significance of the Rumford fireplaces and its connection to our New Hampshire history.

Do you know the expression “sleep tight and don’t let the bed bugs bite”? Learn the answer when you visit the bedroom and examine the rope bed.

In the ell there is a special exhibit, “Toys From Yesteryear.” In the days before television and videos, how did adults and children entertain themselves? One way was to view slides using a stereoscope. In the 1940s, a child might use a view master to enjoy the story of Alice In Wonderland. Everything in this exhibit is touchable. Children (and adults) are encouraged to try to catch the wooden ball in the hoop and the other old time wooden toys that test your patience and dexterity or to play a game of Chinese checkers.

Visit the 1838 Rowe House, both to view this treasured house in the midst of the Village for yourself and to bring your young ones. They may be amazed at how families lived in the 1800s and even into the 1940s. They may even appreciate our modern life more by learning what their family would have experienced in the earlier days.

Gilford Community Church to host New Hampshire Music Festival

GILFORD — This summer, Gilford Community Church (GCC) will host two concerts as part of the New Hampshire Music Festival with an Orchestra Concert on Friday, July 14 and a Chamber Music Concert on Monday, July 24.

“We are thrilled to have them here,” said

GCC Pastor Michael Graham, who noted the church’s acoustics help to create “the perfect environment” for live music. “It’s a beautiful immersive experience, one many have experienced during our annual Summer Music Series where we have musicians from all over come to play here.”

Regarding why they selected GCC for two of their concerts, Mary Kay Robinson, Flute and Piccolo said Festival musicians play for church services at GCC’s Summer Music Series.

“We have a long history with this wonderful community, including past board members, Festival Chorus members, audience members, teachers, and friends,” she said. “It seemed a very natural decision as we have such a great history together.”

For those unfamiliar with the New Hampshire Music Festival, Robinson described the group as sharing a “unique esprit des corps.” “We come from around the country to make great music together, hike together, enjoy the lakes and the pancakes together,” she said. “Our children have grown up summering together with the families in the Lakes Region with camps, swim teams, shared meals, and parties.”

These connections are strengthened by their love of music. “Getting up close and inside the score and experiencing the shaping and architecture of the music for an immersive, engaging experience — we think you will find it rather unique,” added Robinson.

For nearly 20 years, the Festival has been in residence at Plymouth State University at the Silver Center for the Arts. The Festival was founded in 1952 as a small chamber orchestra performing on Melody Island in Lake Winnepesaukee.

Located in Gilford at 19 Potter Hill Rd., Gilford Community Church (GCC) welcomes believers and doubters, seekers and skeptics, young and old. To purchase tickets to GCC’s concerts on Friday, July 14 or Monday, July 24, visit nhmf.org.

St. John’s-on-the-Lake welcomes Rev. John Bethell

GILFORD — On July 16, St. John’s-on-the-Lake welcomes the Rev. John Bethell. The Lord’s Supper will be served.

The Rev. John C. Bithell was born and raised in New York City, but like many here, spent summers in New Hampshire and finally made the move permanent a few years ago. He is an Episcopal priest currently serving as the chaplain of the Laconia Fire Department, having spent his caret in a number of chaplaincy positions to include the FDNY and the US Navy. He owns a frame shop in downtown Laconia where he will almost always offer you a glass of Prosecco.

St. John’s is a summer chapel located on Bear Island on Lake Winnepesaukee. It was built in the summer of 1927, and the first service was held the same year. Stained glass windows and a birch communion table add to its rustic charm. It can be reached from the docks in Deep Cove; there is also a boat taxi service from Cattle Landing. Contact bear.island.church.ferry@gmail.com. All are welcome, as are well-behaved dogs. For more information, see our Web site,

BES managing staff turnover

BY ERIN PLUMMER
ernews@salmonpress.news

BARNSTEAD — Officials at Barnstead Elementary School are managing 11 resignations and looking at ways to fill in any gaps while studying the outgoing educator's biggest concerns.

Superintendent Tim Broadrick discussed the staffing issues during the June 29 Barnstead School Board meeting.

By the end of the school year, 11 people had resigned from BES. Broadrick said surveys were sent out to nine of them, saying the reason why surveys were not given to two of them is an issue best discussed in nonpublic session.

Of the nine surveyed, five responded to the multiple choice and open-ended questions.

Broadrick said three of the 11 were retiring and two of the five who submitted responses reiterated this. He said all of these retirements were already known to the school.

Respondents were given a list of possible reasons they might have wanted to leave the school and encouraged to choose as many answers as they wanted. Three chose the answers that a factor was the transition in building leadership that year. Two respondents also said they were concerned about district level leadership and the direction of the district.

Two answers were also that comprehensive support and improvement was a concern. Broadrick said part of this concern was how test scores at BES were in the bottom five percent of the state. Now the school is working with a consulting firm and changing curriculum, which might have created some tensions.

Three of the respondents will be going to work at other public schools with two receiving more money at their new jobs.

Broadrick said three volunteered to give exit interviews and those will be scheduled soon.

In the meantime, the school is going through the hiring process for new candidates as well as looking at options if key positions aren't filled.

Broadrick said alternative measures have been discussed before, including having an art cart that was unpopular with the board.

Right now, it's looking like there will be no general education classes in the modular buildings. Music classes are already there, and they will likely move the art room. Broadrick said the school hasn't had a health class in a while and they have used carts for health education, though depending on the hiring process they could put a health class in the modulars.

One option that has been especially gained attention is an idea of having teachers follow students to the next grade and offer a have a looping system of classes. Broadrick said this is one option that was mentioned that will need to be studied further before it could be implemented on a pilot basis. He said they were mostly discussing having fourth grade teachers move ahead with the coming fifth graders, though they have also talked to the third and fourth grade teachers about this option as well. Under this system the third, fourth, and fifth grade would all be in one wing and taught by the same teachers, even if a few teachers from each of the grades are on board for this system. Instead of a system where so many students in one grade are in separate classrooms, students in multiple grades could rotate between the same teachers for a few years.

Broadrick said this creates a greater sense of stability and familiarity for the students especially with a turnover of teachers. It could also lead to more focused teaching in certain subjects.

"This is a few steps down the road," Broadrick said. "Don't take away that I'm announcing something here, I'm sharing one of the things we've talked about."

Other positions could be created if critical roles are not filled, such as possibly having a classroom assistant to cover multiple grades while one Title I position remains open.

Wright Museum hosting presentation on experience of Black troops in WWII WOLFEBORO — On Tuesday, July 18, the Wright Museum will welcome Mathew F. Delmont. This is the sixth program of the Wright Museum's 2023 Education Series.

More than one million Black men and women served in World War II. Black troops were at Normandy, Iwo Jima, and the Battle of the Bulge, serving in segregated units and performing unheralded but vital support jobs, only to be denied housing and educational opportunities on their return home. Without their crucial contributions to the war effort, the United States could not have won the war. And yet the stories of these Black veterans have long been ignored, cast aside in favor of the myth of the "Good War" fought by the "Greatest Generation."

"Half American" is American history as you've likely never read it before. In these pages are stories of Black heroes such as Thurgood Marshall, the chief lawyer for the NAACP, who investigated and publicized violence against Black troops and veterans; Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., leader of the Tuskegee Army, who was at the forefront of the years-long fight to open the Air Force to Black pilots; Ella Baker, the civil rights leader who advocated on the home front for Black soldiers, veterans, and their families; James Thompson, the 26-year-old whose letter to a newspaper laying bare the hypocrisy of fighting against fascism abroad when racism still reigned at home set in motion the Double Victory campaign; and poet Langston Hughes, who worked as a war correspondent for the Black press. Their bravery and patriotism in the face of unfathomable racism is both inspiring and galvanizing. In a time when the questions World War II raised regarding race and democracy in America remain troublingly relevant and still unanswered, this meticulously researched retelling makes for urgently necessary reading.

Dr. Matthew Delmont is the Frank J. Guarini Associate Dean of International Studies and Interdisciplinary Programs and the Sherman Fairchild Distinguished

Professor of History. An expert on African-American History and the history of Civil Rights, his book, Half American: The Epic Story of African Americans Fighting World War II at Home and Abroad, was published by Viking Books in October 2022. He is the author of four previous books: Black Quotidian: Everyday History in African American Newspapers (Stanford University Press, 2019); Making Roots: A Nation Captivated (University of California Press, 2016); Why Busing Failed: Race, Media, and the National Resistance to School Desegregation (UC Press, 2016); and The Nicest Kids in Town: American Bandstand, Rock 'n' Roll, and the Struggle for Civil Rights in 1950s Phila- delphia (UC Press, 2012). He was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship and National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) Public Scholar Award to support this research. In addition to these books, he regularly shares his research with media outlets, including the New York Times, NPR, The Atlantic.com, Washington Post, and The Conversation. Dr. Delmont has spoken and consulted with Fortune 500 companies, universities, colleges, and community organizations regarding civil rights, diversity, and inclusivity, and how to reckon with the history of racism in America.

Doors open at 6:30 p.m., the program begins at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, July 18 at the Wright Museum's DuQuoin Education Center, 77 Center St. in Wolfboro. Admission is $5 for members and $10 for non-members. Reservations are strongly encouraged and can be made online at www.wrightmuseum.org/lecture-series or by calling 603-569-1212.

PMHS students learn about “Work, Wealth and Whales: An Abbreviated History of Southern New England”

ALTON — Students from Prospect Mountain Highschool visited some historical sites around Southern New England the first week of their summer vacation during an enrichment trip which allowed them to learn about some of the culture outside of New Hampshire.

During the first day of this adventure the student travelled to Lowell, Mass. and Pawtucket, R.I., visiting the Lowell Mills and Slater Mills where they learned about some of the early history of industrial New England and witnessed some of the difficult working conditions that people experienced during the 17 and 1800’s. The second day, the students explored Newport, R.I., where they visited the Gilded Mansions where the owners of these mills owned summer homes. as well as visiting, famous Thames Street and Fort Adams the largest coastal fort on the East Coast which guarded the mouth of Narragansett Harbor. The last day of the adventure the students’ experience led them to New Bedford, Massachusetts to the Whaling Museum, where they learned about the early New England whaling industry and the absolute importance of protecting our natural resources and marine life.

The final leg of their adventure was to Amesbury, Mass. on the bank of the Merrimack River where the kids learned how to make a skiff at the Lowell Boat Shop who has been making boats the same way since 1793, which was an excellent hands on experience where they could appreciate craftsmanship and clever technologies from the past. The most popular comment from the students at the end of this great experience was that they absolutely love their school and the fantastic opportunities that they provide for us. The students also wanted to send a special thankyou to Superintendent Broadrick for providing this opportunity for them, and makes PMHS the best place to gain an education.

percent of plastic is actually recycled," Ronnie said.

A registered nurse with a focus on risk and patient safety, she said the store came about from a sense of social good.

"Our family recycled and looked to reduce use of plastics for decades because we want to be good to our Earth and do what we can so when our kids are grown, it's the best place it can be," she said.

She said when her family realized how little plastic is recycled, they started conversations on how to improve the situation.

Enter business administration major Gracie, who noted refilleries pop-lion in state aid and in order to have any chance of receiving it this article had to be approved by the voters. The money for state aid, however, is usually limited and only goes to the top project or projects on the list depending on how much money is available in the biennial budget. As of March the BES project was ranked 10th though had a chance of rising a few places.

During the June 29 school board meeting, Superintendent Tim Broadrick said it was now looking likely the project would not get that funding though nothing was official. He said the state's proposed budget moving through the legislature had $50 million in state building aid for the next two years, which Broadrick said was the same amount budgeted during the last biennium. He said nothing was official yet, but it looked at the ping up in Utah, where she was attending school.

"I wanted to get my mom on board and get something like that going in our community," she said.

A refillery "is about creating a space where you cannot buy plastic," Ronnie said. "Our store gives folks a chance to do that."

They started by developing their values and then searched for vendors that matched them. They then curated products that met those values of sustainability, cruelty-free, eco-friendly, small business, local when possible, plastic free, and ethically sourced.

With the help of another family member, they created a website, moment like the school would likely move forward with the smaller project in the next few months.

"It's not completely official yet because it hasn't gone to the governor for his signature, but that's the direction we're going in," Broadrick said.

If this latest proposed budget was signed by the governor, the school would go to the state's bond bank in January for the $1.8 million project all the while working with the school board.

Broadrick said the $1.8 million was roughly the same amount of debt Barnstead accrued for the high school building project that had recently come offline.

The school also has an additional $700,000 left from COVID relief funds which also could be used for HVAC possibly in one wing and the hallway.

While the BES expansion might not receive state aid in this budget advertising all of their products as "good for you and good for the Earth." When they opened, they were only the third refillery in the state.

Rayne Refillery is located at 20 Homestead Place and carries personal products such as shampoo and conditioner, shower gel, hand soap, lotion, sugar scrub, salt soak, and toothpaste tabs and household items such as laundry and dishwasher soap, candles, and purpose cleaners.

Grab and go items are available in refillable containers. Customers are encouraged to bring in their own clean and dry containers to fill with product. In the store's first six months, it has given new life to 600 single-use plastic containers cycle, Broadrick said a bill that was recently signed by the governor proposes to write new rules for the state building aid process that might benefit BES. The exact rules are still being drafted, but Broadrick said one proposal is that the ranking for state aid will no longer be canceled out every two years and require candidates to reapply. Instead, projects that are found eligible for state aid will remain on the list and go through the ranks until they are built or taxpayers in a municipality do not fund any matching costs.

Broadrick said while the BES project will not be funded in the next two years, it can still happen for a future budget cycle. If the project does receive that funding, it will still have to go to voters for approval.

"For us, it's good news compared to where we were last week," Broadrick said.

and refilled 7,225 ounces of product.

The mother/daughter team is working out well. Gracie is still in school, and it's been a bonus to have a business major involved in this enterprise.

"It's nice to use updated marketing strategies," she said. "It's helped me to excel in school because I'm hands-on here, and it helps me excel in business because I'm learning about it in school."

Ronnie said she has never been nervous about opening the store with Gracie.

"I've always had an open mind about it; I just knew we were going to do this. It's been a lot of late nights but it's all worth it. We're doing a lot more talking together than we did before," she added.

Gracie's reaction to the venture has been excitement.

"Sometimes, that can be masked by exhaustion," she pointed out, "or by being nervous about a certain product doing well, but overall the excitement is huge."

As Ronnie still works full-time as a nurse, Gracie typically mans the store, so she sees upfront what the public's reaction has been. She reported open arms and acceptance overwhelmingly.

"The surrounding community has been welcoming, although there are some who love their chemical and plastic products, and don't understand where we are coming from," Ronnie said.

Ronnie touched on the idea that many people assume they can't afford prices in a store like theirs.

"We really strive to price our products competitively," she said, "and many are concentrated, so they last a long time."

Gracie said she typically hears customers say they thought their purchases would cost more than they actually do.

"In reality, anyone can shop with us," she said.

"We want to continue to grow and bring this different, but simple, concept of shopping to people," Ronnie said. "It's satisfying when people get excited about it. It's not just about not using plastic; it's about getting quality natural products."

The pair never try to convince people to use their products.

"It's an education, really," Gracie said. "We show them why these things are good for them, their kids, their home, and the Earth. The products sell themselves."

Ronnie said sharing returning customers' feedback with new customers is important, too. "We're overjoyed, whatever the degree of buy-in."

In order to get the word out about their shop, Ronnie spends Saturdays at the New Durham Farmers' Market. The family has lived in New Durham since 2001, so choosing that venue made sense.

Ronnie and Gracie also hit trade shows and do pop-ups at high schools, farms, and bike parks.

"We do local shows as time permits," Ronnie said. "It's a great way to network and share with people what we are loving about this."

She said gatherings such as that are proving to be a benefit, as some people are unaware of their store and how it functions.

"I get satisfaction when someone understands why we're doing this and when they're excited to see what new products we have," Ronnie said. "That's what we were hoping for."

Gracie calls the store "our baby. We built it from nothing and to see others love it is a dream come true."

She said this is the best part of running the store. "We're excited about it, so to see someone else feel the same is an insane feeling."

If working and studying and running a store aren't enough, the pair is moving forward with opening a second location in Rochester.

"There are a lot of logistics involved," Ronnie said, "but we know where we'd like to be and we're in the process."

An expansion certainly indicates they are working well together.

"I'd be lying if I said there weren't challenges," Gracie said, "but I have so much respect for my mother. It allows me to tap into my passion and strive to be the best I can."

Ronnie said she was "honored" to work with her daughter.

"There are ups and downs," she acknowledged. "Overall, I'm happy we're able to be on this journey together. Our passion and commitment connects us."

"It's been amazing and frustrating," Gracie said, "and lots of laughs. I wouldn't want anybody else as a business partner."

A preliminary site plan for a full expansion and renovation project for Barnstead Elementary School as submitted by H.L. Turner to the NH Department of Education as part of the application for State Building Aid in 2022. The school recently learned this project will likely not receive the state funding to go forward in the latest budgeting cycle, though school officials are optimistic possible rules changes for Building Aid might make this possible in the future.

Burnt Timber and friends ready to “dunk” for charity

WOLFEBORO — Ed Michno, owner of Burnt Timber Brewing & Tavern, will do almost anything to give back to the community, which includes allowing himself to “get dunked” at a fundraiser on Sunday, July 23. Proceeds from the fundraiser will benefit Make-A-Wish New Hampshire.

“We have supported Make-A-Wish before, and I’m happy to support them again,” said Michno, who noted he is one of nearly a dozen people who have volunteered for Burnt Timber’s “Dunk Tank for NH Make-A-Wish.” “I plan on dunking a few of the volunteers more than once—it will be a lot of fun.”

One of these volunteers who have volunteered to “get dunked” at the fundraiser, Burnt Timber Chef Oliver Harston said he will “be aiming” for Michno himself. “He certainly deserves it,” he laughed. “The lines will be long for him.”

As for the timing of the event, Michno said it follows a big weekend for Make-A-Wish NH, whose Rafting for Wishes concludes the prior day in Meredith Bay and on land at Hesky Park.

At the event, sponsored by Service CU, teams are tasked with the goal to “raft” together over the course of the 24-hour event in Meredith or 10-hour event at their own location.

The goal of Rafting for Wishes is to raise more than $400,000 to help grant wishes for critically ill children in New Hampshire. “I’m hoping we can meaningfully add to their total,” said Michno.

Scheduled to take place at Burnt Timber on Sunday, July 23 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., “Dunk Tank for NH Make-A-Wish” is sponsored by several businesses, including major sponsor Eastern Propane and Oil. At the event, Marker 21 will serve food and Twin Barns Brewing Company will serve beer.

“It’s a community event, and I am super excited we have some of our friends from area businesses to show their support, too,” said Michno.

Located at 96 Lehner St, Wolfeboro, Burnt Timber is a family-friendly brewpub that features an extensive rotating beer selection, Sunday Brunch, live music, catering, mocktails, and full cocktail and food menu. Herbs in a Bucket

On Thursday, June 29, the Alton Garden Club met at Gilman Library for our monthly meeting. The topic, “Herbs in a Bucket,” was presented by long-time member Joan Blackwood. Joan expanded on the day’s subject with general facts about herbs and by introducing the group to hugelkultur, a traditional way of building a layered bed using logs, plant debris and soil. Nancy Malone added to the presentation by sharing her experience of growing herbs for tea. As usual, members actively participated through their questions and through offering further information.
