Planning trends reflect tight economy

BY ERIN PLUMMER
mnews@salmonpress.news

GILFORD — The number of single-family homes has gone down as the number of short-term rentals continues to rise.

Planning and Land Use Director John Ayer gave the selectmen an update on his department during the board's meeting on Nov. 13.

"As with every time I come to report to you, some things are up, some things are down, and some things are generally about the same overall from the same per last year," Ayer said.

Ayer said some of the latest statistics mirror the report Welfare Director Tom Carr gave just a few minutes before showing indicating many people are facing economic hardships.

The number of new single-family homes has gone down since last year though the value has seen a small decrease, indicating housing costs might be an issue for many people.

Ayer said last year at this time the town had 38 new single-family homes, a number that has gone down to 28 for this time last year. Ayer also said the value of single-family homes went down around $600,000, which is around the same as last year though he said that is the average value of one home.

The town has had the same number of commercial permits, though the value of those properties went down by $4.5 million.

The overall number of permits have gone down around seven percent as well as the fees they collect, though Ayer said these applications are still going strong.

The number of permits for repairs and remodels is up to 55 this year from 36 the same time last year, though Ayer said different kinds of work are being done this year than last year. Permits for additions are up to 20 this year from 16 last year with an increase in value around $2 million.

Demolition permits are up 50 percent from last year.

There have been half as many applications for solar panels this year compared to last year. They did see 10 more site plans this year than this time last year

The town has seen many more short-term rental applications, especially in the past six months.

Selectman Kevin Hayes asked if most of the renovations and additions are being done on single family homes or short-term rentals.

"It's been interesting, we see some of each," Ayer said. "Sometimes people are adding an accessory apartment, oftentimes those get used for short term rentals. I'm not sure we've been tracking that or comparing where these things are going and what they're being used for."

Ayer said most of the applications they have seen for single family homes are from short-term rentals. He said many of the short-term rental applications they have been getting are from property specifically being bought for short term rentals where someone purchased the property within the past month or two months.

Anyone who wishes to run a short-term rental in Gilford needs to apply for a special use permit, but Selectman Chan Eddy said he knows there have property owners who still refuse to apply for one. Eddy asked how the town is going to deal

NEW DURHAM — Residents gave their thoughts on housing and development in town in the results of a townwide housing survey.

The survey is part of a housing study as part of the town's master plan update. The full results can be found at <https://www.newdurhamnh.us/home/news/new-durham-housing-and-land-use-survey-results-0>.

Around 67 percent of those polled live in New Durham year round, while more than 30 percent are part time residents or own a second home in town. Almost 46 percent said they pay less than 30 percent of their income on housing with nearly 38 percent saying they pay 30 to 49 percent of their income on housing. In the past year around 39 percent of residents said their total housing costs have gone up by $500 or more.

When asked on a spectrum of 0 if "housing should be denser in one place to conserve greenspace throughout the rest of the community" to 10 "Housing should be evenly spread out throughout the community," the average answer was a five on that scale.

On the question whether there is a need for a village center or focal point in the town, 31.5 percent said yes, over 26 percent said possibly, and over 18 percent said they didn't think so.

When asked to rank in order of importance what the town could do to support commerce

Rediscovering the lost art of handwritten recipes

In an era of digital convenience and instant gratification, some of life's most cherished traditions are quietly slipping away. Among these, the art of handwritten recipes. These are a tangible connection to the flavors of our past, the love of our grandmothers, and the warmth of family gatherings. In a world dominated by cooking apps and online recipe repositories, the simple act of putting pen to paper to share culinary secrets seems almost archaic. Yet, it's precisely this nostalgia and intimacy that make handwritten recipes a lost art worth preserving.

Handwritten recipes are more than just a list of ingredients and instructions; they are pieces of culinary history, infused with the personality and heritage of those who penned them. Each smudged, stained, and dog-eared card or piece of paper tells a story, a tale of generations passing down family traditions, the evolution of tastes and preferences, and the love and care that goes into creating a homemade meal.

The act of writing out a recipe by hand is an act of devotion. It's a moment where the cook imparts their wisdom, tips, and variations to the next in line. The penmanship, the flourishes, and the personal notes ("This one's always a hit at family gatherings!") add a layer of character that cannot be replicated by sterile digital text.

One of the most remarkable aspects of handwritten recipes is their adaptability. They are not bound by the limitations of standardized formats and measurements. Instead, they encourage creativity and experimentation. A pinch of this, a handful of that, and a dash of love, these imprecise yet heartfelt instructions allow each generation to put their own spin on the family classics, ensuring that the recipes remain dynamic and relevant.

In an age where convenience often trumps sentimentality, it's easy to overlook the value of preserving handwritten recipes. But as we flip through fading recipe cards and rediscover the treasures hidden in old recipe boxes, we are reminded that these handwritten culinary heirlooms are more than just instructions; they are a link to our past, a source of inspiration, and hold tradition.

LETTERS FROM EDWIN

Attractions

Today, I got a call from the robot, and it offered me a job as a music teacher. I jumped at the chance. Then I found out that it was only for half a day, I hesitated. I usually turn down a half day gig. But I rarely get offered music. So I took it. It would work out as I also had a small handy man job that I had agreed to do today.

My first class was a band. They pretty much worked through their material with me keeping time, providing a visual cue for the down beat. In listening to them, I wondered if bands actually tune up anymore. In these days of electronic tuners, everyone can do it themselves privately. Or do they just let it go. It was in tune the other day wasn't it? There's nothing worse than two horns playing in unison, out of tune. It just makes me cringe.

After they all took off, I grabbed a bass, plugged it in and was just noodling around when the next class arrived. They were totally surprised to see me playing bass. I'm the math guy. Well, not today.

Soon the room was all filled with beginner guitar players, strumming away. I couldn't help them much with their chords, but I could suggest they tune up a little. There was a guitar sitting there next to the teacher's desk with a broken low E string. I found a pack of strings in the desk and proceeded to change it. It wasn't long before I had changed another E and a B string. That teacher should be pleased that I subbed.

Towards the end of my classes, the sub lady came down and asked me if I could stay for the remaining periods as she had a teacher that needed to leave early. So much for my half day. I figured that I would still have enough time to get my other job completed so I said OK.

Very often there are new kids showing up. Add to that, the fact that I'm highly memory challenged, every class has the potential to provide me with some new experience. Knowing this, I noted that there was new tall and slim girl sitting on the stool in the front of the room throughout the class. Most kids are allowed to choose their seating positions until it becomes a problem, I just took this as normal.

After class, instead of filing out of the room with the rest of the class, she came up to me and introduced herself. She was a college student acting as a student aid. With her clothing and physique, she perfectly integrated into that middle school class. Good Lord, I would have never guessed.

These eyes of ours can be totally distracting sometimes. I had to close mine when I braided my hair. If I watched what I was doing I'd screw it up every time. Seeing with my fingers worked much better. That works a lot of times when fixing things too. If I can't see what I'm doing, my hands need to take over.

How many things do we all do because of what our eyes tell us? Cars, cloths, companions? A very extensive list I would surmise. I once really wanted an orange car I saw in a show room. That was when most cars were white. There was a time of mostly silver gray colored cars too. Now I find that they're painting them bright rich colors. Why should I even care what color the machine that carries me to work and back is? Why do I prefer olive to blue jeans? Why am I always attracted to...

The marketing world makes total use of our biases. I would sometimes drink orange soda. When I was in Europe, I selected a can of the same brand and it was like, wow, this was different. Better! It was hardly orange colored at all but it tasted more like the real thing. It actually had the real thing in it. I stopped drinking the sugar saturated, imitation food colored stuff when I came back.

After a red die was deemed dangerous, these red colored candy coated chocolate treats disappeared from their packages to the lament of some. There was no difference in taste at all, but people missed, and wanted red ones. They're back.

Letters to the Editor

An update from Concord

To the Editor:

I wanted to update the people in New Durham on a few issues.

The first is about the Powder Mill Fish Hatchery. The hatchery will have a new EPA Discharge Permit effective Jan. 1 that will drastically reduce the amount of pollution being released from it. Although I was involved in the work to change the permit from an average discharge limit to a maximum limit, the heaving lifting was done by the Alton/New Durham Water Quality Committee. Their work convinced the EPA to change from an average to a maximum discharge limit. This is especially important in the summer months when the river flow rates are low. The hatchery has already instituted various actions to improve the quality of the discharge water and will reduce the number of fish raised so that the new lower limit will be met. Though it will take time for the Merry Meeting River to clean up, the new permit is a big step in the right direction.

The second issue is the status of the dams on the Merry Meeting River. Dams are becoming a major issue all over New Hampshire. There are four dams on the Merry Meeting River. Three in New Durham (the main dam on the lake, the Jones Dam and the Downing Pond Dam) and one in Alton (the Alton Powe Dam). The state Fish and Game owns all the dams except for the Downing Pond Dam which is owned by New Durham. The Dam Division of the Department of Environmental Services is studying the status of all of four dams. Their work should be done by December or January and a public meeting will be held to present the results. It is not clear what the study will recommend but it will most likely include recommendations for repairs to some or all of the dams.

I also wanted to thank all the New Durham citizens who voted to reelect me, and to remind those who did not that I represent all the citizens of New Durham at the State House.

Should you have questions on this or other state issues, please feel free to contact me at 603-942-8691 or harringt@metrocast.net (please put New Durham resident in the subject block).

Thoughtful gifts for aging parents

Children typically want to treat their parents to something special during the holiday season. Parents do a lot for their children, and when those kids become adults, a desire to express their appreciation for Mom and Dad grows.

According to The Wrap Up: Snappy's 2022 Holiday Gift Report, the majority of Americans (64.2 percent) report they need help when it comes to holiday gifting. They may want to carefully consider a recipient's interests, as the report also discovered more than half of all Americans want a gift that reflects their personal interests and hobbies. When shopping for elderly parents, it may not be as simple as identifying interests, particularly if Mom and Dad are experiencing age-related health issues. Consider these gift ideas that may be ideal for the aging adults in your life.

- Cozy blanket: Older adults may have trouble regulating their body temperatures, which can translate to feeling cold a lot of the time. A new blanket or throw for a bed or to cuddle up with in a favorite recliner might be the perfect gift.
- Family history book: Budding writers can interview their aging parents and jot down family stories. Those stories and anecdotes can be compiled into a book and combined with photos to make a family history log, which can be gifted back to the interviewee.

- Gripping slippers: Slips and falls can injure aging adults and put them out of commission for quite some time. Sturdy and secure slippers with anti-slip soles are good for getting around the house and making quick trips to take out the trash or get the mail.
- Robotic vacuum: Keeping up with the household chores is easier with a robotic vacuum that automatically scours carpets and hard-surface floors. This eliminates having to wrestle with a cumbersome vacuum.

- Key finder: A key finder can help adults find their keys if they are misplaced. Some employ radio frequency, while others utilize Bluetooth technology and can be paired to a smartphone.
- Magnifying light: Older parents who like to do puzzles or close-up work like knitting or stitching can benefit from an LED lamp that also has a magnifying glass built right in.
- E-reader: Avid readers may enjoy an e-reader because they don't have to find spots to store even more books in their homes. E-readers can be customized so the print is the right size for the reader's needs. Also, the devices are lightweight and easy to stow in a bag.

- Automatic card shuffler: Parents who are known card sharks around the community can use an automatic card shuffler to make card play even easier.
- Resistance bands: Resistance bands are like large rubber bands that exert force to strengthen muscles and improve flexibility. They can help aging adults stay in shape in a low-impact way.

- Dining gift cards: When parents do not want to spend additional time in the kitchen, they may opt to visit a favorite restaurant. A combination of a gift card to a favorite establishment as well as prepaid taxi or ride share service ensures a good meal and a safe ride home.

Although they seem to have everything, aging parents still can benefit from some thoughtful gifts.

Gift-giving is a significant component of the holiday season. Families can embrace traditional gift-giving, but those who want to add a touch of whimsy to gatherings with loved ones can consider these five creative and fun ways to exchange gifts.

1. Play the plastic wrap game. To exchange small stocking stuffer gifts, compile gift cards, cash, small toys, candy, and even some larger gifts (all participants can chip in and one person shops for the gifts). The designated person in charge begins rolling up the gifts in the plastic, adding one every few rolls. Turning the ball 90 degrees while wrapping helps make a more round, finished gift ball. To play, the person with the ball puts on oven mitts and tries to unwrap as much as they can to access the gifts, while the person to the left is attempting to roll doubles on dice. When doubles are made, that person passes the dice to the left and starts his or her own attempts to get at the gifts in the plastic ball. The game ends when all the gifts are revealed, whether everyone has had a chance to unwrap or not.

2. Plan a white elephant gift exchange. A white elephant exchange is like a secret grab bag. Everyone brings a wrapped gift, and then takes turns choosing a gift based on the number they've been given. When the gift is chosen, the person opens it. The next player can select a fresh gift or steal one of the presents that's already been opened.

3. Host a make-and-take craft party. With this type of exchange, participants will engage in some form of crafting for the duration of the event, whether it's pottery, painting, epoxy resin pouring, or even knit crafts. At the end of the night everyone can swap their creations with another or keep their own crafts as gifts.

4. Give the gift of a group outing. Instead of exchanging material gifts, focus on sharing experiences with friends and family. A trip to watch a sports game or a theater performance can be an excellent way to spend time together, and something a person may not be inclined to do on his or her own. Certain venues will offer discounts on group tickets, so everyone can pool their resources.

5. Host a DIY cookie and cocoa exchange. Cookies, cocoa and the holidays are a perfect combination. A gift exchange where participants supply ingredients for these sweet treats, share their favorite recipes and then put together the finished products can make for an entertaining and festive afternoon. Each person can fill a cookie tin with baked cookies to take home and mason jars filled with homemade hot cocoa mix and marshmallows can be an additional gift to enjoy later on a chilly evening.

There are plenty of fun ways to exchange gifts during the holiday season.

How some popular holiday traditions got their start

Will you be baking gingerbread or hanging stockings by the fireplace this holiday season? Perhaps you'll be lighting the menorah or playing a game of dreidl? The holidays are steeped in tradition, some of which are older than celebrants may realize.

Individuals gather during the holidays and participate in various traditions that have withstood the test of time. Most people engage in these traditions or recognize symbols automatically, but it can be interesting to learn how these traditions came to be.

Christmas caroling

The British traditions of wassailing and mumming and the Slavic tradition of koliada were some of the precursors to more modern caroling. People would go door-to-door and recite poetry or sing with the hope of bringing about good fortune or influencing a future harvest, according to Rutgers University. Carolers spread hope and good tidings through song during a time of year when sunlight was limited.

Christmas trees

Pagans once displayed evergreen branches as a reminder that spring would come again, while Romans placed them around temples to honor Saturn, the god of agriculture. Eventually the evergreen was used in conjunction with Christian Christmas celebrations. In the sixteenth century, German Christians put trees inside their homes as symbols of everlasting life.

Santa Claus

Children who celebrate Christmas eagerly await the arrival of a jolly sort who goes by the name of Santa Claus. His origin story stretches back to the third century, when Saint Nicholas became the patron saint of children. Saint Nicholas was a monk in what is modern-day Turkey.

It is said that he traveled helping the poor and the sick. History.com says he is believed to have saved three impoverished sisters from slavery by providing them with a dowry so they could be married, and he also provided gifts to children.

Menorah

The menorah is a multi-branched candelabra used in Jewish religious rituals. The menorah is first mentioned in the book of Exodus when the design of the lamp was revealed to Moses by God on Mount Sinai. Many menorahs are seven-branched, but during Chanukah, an eight-branched menorah is used. The Chanukah menorah is modeled after the Tabernacle menorah that corresponds to the eight-day festival. It was used to celebrate the rededication of the Second Temple. The available oil supply was supposed to light the menorah for just one day, but the candles actually burned for eight.

Mistletoe

Kissing under the mistletoe is a holiday season tradition that can lead to some red faces when couples are caught beneath the plant. Norse mythology paved the way for kissing under the mistletoe. Legend has it the gods used mistletoe to resurrect Odin's son, Baldur, from the dead. Baldur's mother, Frigg, the goddess of love, made the plant a symbol of love and vowed to kiss anyone who passed under it. Mistletoe blooms under cold conditions, which is how it became associated with the holiday season.

Yule log

Yule logs were once part of winter solstice celebrations to bring good luck and fortune, but America is where a yule log really caught on as a holiday tradition. In 1966, the WPIX television station in New York City aired a continuous loop of a fireplace burning for three hours with holiday songs playing. It became an annual tradition, says History.com. Some people even serve a cake that looks like a yule log. The Bûche de Noël is a traditional Christmas cake that is especially popular in France.

Holiday traditions continue in full force. Traditions are an endearing component of celebrations and help to unite people from all backgrounds during this special time of year.

Gilford at 50: Changes after Columbine

Many people see public schools as open and inviting institutions, offering learning, compassion, structure, food, counseling, connections, job training, sports, entertainment, and a host of other opportunities for kids to advance and interact with others. Schools do the best they can to be all of those things; but then, everything changed on April 20, 1999. Two teenagers at Columbine High School in Littleton, Colorado, went on a shooting rampage, resulting in the deaths of thirteen people, with twenty others wounded. And while schools still hope to share all forms of higher learning, some of the former “everyone is welcome here” attitude has quietly slipped away, as school and law enforcement officials around the country have changed many of their former practices regarding safety and access.

The first wave of post-Columbine awareness came to Gilford High School in a couple of different ways. For 25 years, students and visitors had entered the school through the front door, the sports lobby doors, and the auditorium lobby doors, with faculty generally entering through the side doors adjacent to where they park their cars. Working with law enforcement input, a decision was made to funnel all students, parents, visitors, delivery people, mail, and everything else through the front of the school. The door now has two locking systems; there is a “doorbell: on the outside door, and the front desk secretary can see and speak with people, deciding on who she buzzes in. Some of the safety changes came through school budgeting, though most of it appeared in the form of federal grant money. Teachers were provided with identify cards (they must wear them at all times during the school day) originally containing microchips that were used in conjunction with codes typed into numbered keypads. Nowadays, the technology has changed slightly, and the chips are part of proximity fobs. Foot traffic (other than teachers) enters through GHS’s front doors.

Just outside of the front doors are concrete bollards—security barriers that would help to stop or slow any vehicle headed toward the windows. The windows themselves have been covered in 3M Safety and Security film. This film is nearly bullet-proof; a barrage of bullets can, ultimately, penetrate the film, but to do so takes nearly two minutes of constant impact. What that does: it allows for reaction time from inside of the school.

SRO’s became a regular part of the schools themselves. School Resource Officers work directly in the school setting, with provided office space. The officers get to know students and establish positive relationships. An officer working in the school needs special training, in specialized areas such as adolescent brain development, cyber safety, and violence prevention. SRO’s aren’t in the school simply for safety and law enforcement—they also perform informal mentoring and counseling while increasing general surveillance over the schools.

Cameras have been installed strategically to cover school hallways and stairwells. The feeds from these cameras can be monitored from the SRO office, and the footage is recorded. Similarly, cameras have been installed on school buses. While some community members feel that so many cameras are an abundance of caution, the years since Columbine have taught us: Columbine was not an isolated incident. Sandy Hook Elementary School, Marjorie Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland, Florida, and Robb Elementary School in Uvalde, Texas have unfortunately reminded us: school shootings continue to occur. Since 1999, there have been 2,032 school shootings, with the year 2023 registering a record high of 348 incidents.

Fire and Safety drills, along with Emergency drills for school bus riders, have always been a part of school practice.

The “duck-and-cover” drills of the 1950’s — instituted as a shelter in place practice against the possibility of an atomic attack—have gone away, but students in the twenty-first century continue with bus evacuations and they practice ALICE drills inside the buildings. The A in ALICE stands for Alert—becoming aware of a danger, be it through announcements or personal detection; L stands for Lockdown. This part of the drill is actually twofold: students and their teachers clear the halls, moving to the safety of classrooms that are swiftly closing up. The respective students and teachers then barricade their room, though they continue listening to alerts that might indicate that evacuation is a viable choice. Students have all been taught how to apply Night Locks—floor-to-door security door stoppers that are located inside of every classroom. I stands for Inform: video surveillance, 911 calls, and PA announcements gather and communicate information as quickly as possible, and pass it on. C stands for Counter. If evacuation isn’t viable, then classrooms continue to enhance their barricades and, as a last resort, students and staff locate various items that could potentially serve as weapons of last resort. Students might grab a stapler or a metal water bottle—whatever is close at hand that could be effective if the barricade were ever breached. Finally, E stands for Evacuate—everyone, working together, would hopefully use the drill’s practiced techniques for safer and more strategic evacuations. School administrators have educated and practiced with students, and there are various contingency plans for gathering afterwards, in the event that such a need arises.

Keypads with microchipped fobs are now used to access all GHS doors other than the front door.

While school fist fights haven’t completely disappeared from the hallways of the schools, school leaders and law enforcement work together to ensure school safety while maintaining a safe haven for learning, and fights have dramatically reduced in numbers over the years. Gilford High School has adopted anti-hazing and anti-violence policies, observes the Guns-Free School Act, teaches anti-bullying and community engagement, and has increased access to mental health services for students. As far as fights go, School Resource Officers employ their special training in school environments, and they serve as a presence/deterrent to issues of violence and potential threats. Students are aware that such behavior could result in a charge of simple assault.

Every substitute teacher who works in our Gilford and Gilman-ton schools goes through a background check and undergoes fingerprinting before working in the buildings. They also attend classes and workshops for best practices strategies when working with young people. Educators are updated with annual workshops that explain changes in state and school policies and law.

So many safety measures have been added at Gilford High School (as well as the Middle and Elementary schools) since it opened wide its doors in 1974. And while there are occasionally voices who disagree with this abundance of education initiatives, surveillance, expenditure, and caution, there can be no denying: the safety and innocence present fifty years ago is nostalgic at best, considering how the world around us has dramatically changed. Of course, locals like to think “it could never happen here;” and while that positivity feels right for our Gilford and Gilmanton communities, the practices and the preparedness put present-day students and staff into a confident state of readiness. Twenty-five years after Columbine, the Gilford School District is alert and progressive, and works hand in hand with law enforcement, doing their absolute best to avert, prevent, and teach a stronger, safer way of working with and listening to one another.

NOTES FROM WINDY HOLLOW

The shrinking can goods

BY VIVIAN LEE DION
Contributing Writer

Getting ready for guests and preparing a large dinner can be overwhelming. First of all cleaning the house and making sure that the oven sparkles becomes my first priority. However my company always wants to help in the kitchen. They ask where the serving dishes are while searching the cabinets. I have a small serving dish that I inherited from my mother and that’s very special to me. It’s the one piece of Noritake China I own. Guess I really wanted one piece of the beautiful China and somehow it ended up in my cabinet; oops! There were several numerous serving dishes in mom’s set, I’m sure my sister Helen didn’t miss this one. She lives in Illinois and her husband died in January. Her daughter Judy is handling Helen’s affairs because my sister is no long capable of making decisions due to memory issues. Twenty-two years have passed since we distributed mom’s estate. Life goes on and the last piece of mom’s beautiful China is here in New Hampshire. There was no squabbling on the distribution of assets and Helen being the oldest daughter inherited mom’s Noritake dinnerware. The family seemed satisfied with the distribution of things. The serving dish is used exclusively for holidays and special gatherings and is earmarked for my niece Judy when the time comes.

Let’s get down to the subject of “shrinking can goods.” Recently, I noticed that the can of green beans for my casserole was different. What’s going on here? The can label describes the weight as only 14.5 ounces. My recipe lists one pound (16 ounces) as the correct weight for the perfect casserole. Thank goodness I have a second can of green beans and will add the small amount of the mixture to compensate for the missing few ounces. On Jan. 6, 2015, writer Dianne Jacob, mentioned the smaller can sizes in her newsletter. “If you are a recipe blogger, this change is a pain. Your older recipes now need revision.” She continues, “Do canned goods makers have any idea how this affects recipe developers and cooks?” Other items mentioned that are sold in smaller sizes are sweetened condensed milk, evaporated milk, canned beans and vegetables

One reader of Dianne Jacob’s newsletter wrote, “I happened to work at a sugar company when the size of a bag of sugar went from five pounds to four pounds. It was not about convenience instead it was about making it seem like the price wasn’t going up. I pointed out that I had a storage container that was the perfect size for five pounds of sugar and that I would notice that it wasn’t filling up... but as far as I can tell, most people don’t notice and don’t actually pay attention to price/ounce.”

Cake mixes and puddings come in smaller size boxes. Although I recently made some butter-scotch pudding and was happy to learn that the volume appears to be the same. Bakers and cooks pay close attention to volume and price, when making the perfect homemade creation. “Behind every successful baker are a sprinkle of determination and a dash of passion.”

Unique gifts in the big city at The Holiday Market at Snowport

One of the last places you might expect to find a little winter village is right in the middle of Boston. Tucked among the skyscrapers and busy streets in the Seaport is a village of tiny cabins under a web of Christmas lights with crafters from across New England selling their eclectic creations. Even in the big city there is a place here to sit in an Adirondack chair and enjoy some hot food or even an overloaded cup of cocoa. This is the Holiday Market at Snowport: an excellent place to spend some cozy time and buy some hand-crafted gifts that will stay open until just before New Year's.

I first heard of the Holiday Market at Snowport last year, and checked it out right before New Years. It was such a fun place to spend some time, check out some amazing creations, and enjoy one of the most decadent cups of cocoa I have ever had. It truly is a little winter village right in the middle of the big city. The Holiday Market reopened for 2024 just a few weeks ago and will stay open seven days a week until Dec. 29.

Every holiday season, the Seaport district becomes Snowport with an array of events and activities going on from but its biggest offering is its decadent hot chocolate. Each cup of its cocoa has one of its chocolate truffles. You can order an a la carte cocoa with different toppings to choose from or you can go all out and order one of the filled creations from its Over the Top Hot Chocolate menu. These concoctions are loaded with different toppings and flavors and taste like a dessert in cocoa form. Last year I ordered a s'mores cocoa topped with marshmallows they toast right there, graham crackers, and a chocolate bar. These cost around $12.50 each but it's worth the splurge. This isn't the type of cocoa you gulp, it's the type you sit with and savor slowly. I remember walking out of the market and enjoying one right by the water on the Harborwalk just a few minutes away, sipping while watching the planes land and takeoff from Logan Airport.

There are other fun activities at the Holiday Market for people of all ages including a craft space for kids and the Mistletoe Arch covered in 50 sprigs of mistletoe.

It's easy to spend a few hours looking over the many different stands at the Holiday Market and easier to spend more time sitting to enjoy some hot food or tasty drinks. It is also a great way to support small businesses and check out some gifts that might be off the beaten path. The Holiday Market at Snowport will be open seven days a week through Dec. 29. For more information including a full list of hours and vendors visit <https://www.bostonseaport.xyz/holidaymarket>.

November through December, including tree lightings, appearances by Betty the Yeti, an area for curling, and numerous promotions by Seaport businesses. The Holiday Market as the center of the festivities and the biggest activity. The Market itself is located on Seaport Boulevard a few blocks away from the Moakley Bridge and is about a five-minute walk from Courthouse Station on the MBTA's Silver Line. When arriving at the area, the market is hard to miss.

Visitors can walk in through different entrances during the market's operating hours completely for free. The lefthand entrances lead into the Food and Beverage lounge, a large courtyard lined with food trucks with Adirondack chairs and barrel tables in the center. Here visitors can find an array of food choices including waffles and crepes, pasta served from a cheese wheel, a selection of soups, Mexican specialties, and much more. There are also a few bars in this area as well. People can sit in the chairs in the courtyard or at the tables in the Food and Beverage Tent. The market has a regular schedule of live entertainment here as well.

From there you can walk the rows of craft stands. Each different, decorated shack is filled with shelves and displays lining the walls. You can go into each of these little shops and see the many different creations. The market includes different crafts from across the globe made by artisans from around New England and beyond. Most of these stands are run by small business owners with many showing the art of different cultures.

Last year I discovered the work of Boston-based artist Laurel Greenfield and her array of whimsical paintings of food. One of my new favorite artists Flynn Costello of Westbrook, Maine, has a stand for her business Flynn selling her artwork on hats.

One of my favorite stands at the market is Tuck's Truffles of Boston (also known as The Fat Cactus). Tucks sells an array of chocolate truffles,

Alton Garden Club looks back on 2024

ALTON — The one advantage of being a gardener, or lover of gardens, is that we know that life is like the perennial flower that has its seasons. At this time of year, we're mulching the grounds, cleaning up the items we don't want to winter over and looking forward to the spring's rebirth and the earth being renewed again.

On Nov. 12, our club had its Annual Meeting, Election of Officers and Holiday Luncheon at the Christian Conference Center at the Bay. We enjoyed a delicious traditional holiday dinner and took the time to socialize and enjoy each other's company. Everyone left the event smiling and already looking forward to next year's Garden Club meetings.

Like our gardens, this past year's activities have been enjoyed, and the knowledge gained and co-operation of each member having done their jobs have contributed to our success.

We may be quiet, but we're not quite finished. The first Saturday in December will be Light Up Night in downtown Alton. There will be carol singing with the help of the Praise Group of Gilmanton Iron Works Church. Earlier in the day the Festival of Trees will be opened for viewing at the Gilman Museum. Along with the other organizations in town and the various businesses, each group will create its own Christmas tree or decorations to be raffled as a fundraiser for the community. Alton Garden Club's Festival of Trees project for this year is a lovely Christmas wreath and matching garland designed by Joan Blackwood and Jane Bradbury. Santa will be at Town Hall waiting to greet the children and perhaps provide a place to get warm if it's a cold night. The Community Church of Alton will be serving hot chocolate and Christmas cookies. Alton Home and Garden will be offering hayrides around the village and general merriment will be the order of the night. Alton Garden Club will also be placing wreaths and garlands on town building and on the fencing at Old Riverside Cemetery soon.

The Program Committee will be busy arranging various programs, covering a range of interesting subjects, all in the name of knowledge and understanding of our living world.

We hope that you've been enriched by our efforts in adding color throughout the summer and might consider joining our team. We'd like to thank Bruce Holmes for his dedication to the club and the town of Alton with his donations of flowers, planted and cared for by Alton Garden Club. You can learn more about our organization by going to our website, Alton-gardenclub.com. The dues are only $10 for the year, and if you join before the end of January, your name will make it into the yearly membership book.

cial development, most respondents indicated that offering property tax incentives was the top priority followed by allowing for denser development and installing municipal water and sewer.

The survey has a list of different types of features and asked respondents to rank them by wanting to see more of to wanting to see less. Around 51 percent of respondents said they wanted to see safer place to walk and bike that don't share a road. Almost 51 percent said they wanted to see more restaurants whether they are local or national. More than 47 percent said they wanted more protected land that allows for passive recreation. Around 53 percent of respondents said they wanted to see less self storage entities and more than 51 percent wanted to see fewer major retailers or department stores.

When asked about different types of housing the town needs, over 35 percent said there is a greater need for accessory dwelling units and over 30 percent said there is a need for smaller homes. More than 62 percent said there was no need for townhomes and row homes and almost 61 percent said there was no need for lakefront housing.

On some of the biggest impacts on housing in town, almost 77 percent said the cost of construction was a high impact with almost 69 percent saying property taxes and interest rates.

When asked what options would be more feasible if the town pursued greater oversight on short-term rentals, more than 56 percent said it would be regulating the maximum number of guests allowed on a property with more than 40 percent saying they would want to see a rental registry vetted with the town on an annual or biannual basis.

When asked about the biggest advantages and disadvantages of short-term rentals on the town, most had neutral responses to all the questions. More people overall said the impacts on septic capacity and noise were overall negatives. Few responded with any overall "very positive" or "somewhat positive" scores. Nearly 11 percent each rated supplemental income and tourism as "very positive."

CRAFT FAIR

class President Grace Kelly.

Kelly said this year the seniors will be selling wooden Christmas trees made by two students and decorated by members of the class. There are also miniature versions given to the class by another student volunteer.

Every year the seniors sell meatball subs. Co-organizer Meg Jenkins said this year they are also adding macaroni and cheese and vegetable rice soup.

Jenkins said the vendor slots for this year's fair are all sold out.

"It's slammed: every inch of wall space, rooms everything's full," said class co-advisor Audra Warren. "It's the most we've ever had with a waitlist of like 40."

While the event is a major fundraiser for the seniors, other classes and different student organizations will sell food to fundraise for their own activities.

After going through the years of working at the fair in different ways, the coming senior class gets ready to take the reins on this event.

"I feel like we definitely have a huge leadership role in this," said class Vice President Kendal Heyman. "Other years we had small tables with our classes, now its much more demanding."

She said it is great seeing the entire class show up and work together.

"I think senior year that's what happens: everyone kind of steps in and builds bonds with each other," Kelly said.

December events at Oscar Foss Memorial Library

BARNSTEAD — Good to Know Info: We are closed for staff training on the second Thursday of every month until 3 p.m. (Dec. 12). We will also be closed Tuesday, Dec. 24, and Wednesday, Dec. 25, for Christmas, and the following Tuesday, Dec. 31, and Wednesday, Jan. 1, for New Year's. Last but not least, there will be a special Storytime with Santa on Dec. 18!

Do you like animals? Especially cute ones? Well, look no further. "Pets of OFML" calendars will be available at the library the first week of December for the low, low price of $14! You can buy one for yourself, but they would also make a great gift for your pet loving friends and family (first come, first served)! Extra bonus: Proceeds from our calendar sales go to fund library programs.

New! Home School Group: Join us Fridays from 10:30 a.m.-noon for a mix of stories, simple science/learning activities, and a creative art/craft activity that all go along with a theme for the week. The activities are geared towards kids ages 4 and up, and younger siblings are welcome to come along. There will be an event posted ahead of time on our Facebook group for each weekly meet-up, so you'll always know what to expect and if you need to bring anything.

Music and Movement Storytime, a.k.a. Littles Love to Learn! Join us on Tuesdays at 10:30 for an interactive storytime filled with stories, songs, and loads of sensory play designed specifically for toddlers.

Every Wednesday at 10:30 a.m. is Children's Storytime. Yes, you heard that right. Every Wednesday! Visit us at the library for stories, crafts, and singing. Then experience the cozy ambience in the children's area, which has all sorts of neat things to do. Make new friends. Set up playdates. Check out books, movies, and games, play with the trains, Legos, and puppets. Come for the learning, stay for the fun!

Start your week off with Yoga Monday! Gentle Hatha-Flow runs from 10:15-11:40 a.m., Senior/Beginner/Chair Yoga is noon-1 p.m., and Intermediate Hatha-Flow lasts from 5:30-6:50 p.m. Classes are by donation (suggested $8). All are welcome and encouraged to attend, regardless of ability to donate.

Between now and Dec. 15, the library will serve as a drop-off site for holiday cards and donations for the Veterans Home. Donations include personal care items, such as: Toothpaste, Mouthwash, Shampoo, Lotion, Shaving Cream, Aftershave, Body Wash, Combs, Tissues, and Deodorant, and entertainment items, like: Word Searches, Crossword Puzzles, Jigsaw Puzzles, and Sudoku.

Our Meet and Read Book Club (ages 18 and up) takes place on the first Wednesday of the month (Dec. 4, from 6-7:30 p.m.), in the library's Meeting Room. This month's book will be "Yellowface" by R.F. Kuang. Next month's book will be "The Art Forger" by Barbara Shapiro. Books are available at the library. Bring food, bring thoughts, bring a friend! Please Note: Due to the holiday, there will be a temporary change of dates for January's meeting to Wednesday, Jan. 8.

Want to frost cookies like a pro? Thursday, Dec. 5, from 4-5:30 p.m., join Leah Whitney from Cookie Bear Baking LLC for a festive and fun hands-on workshop where you'll learn the art of decorating holiday-themed cookies! We'll start with the basics of frosting and then dive into decorating your own cookies with festive designs. Whether you're a newbie or a cookie decorating expert, you'll leave with skills and cookies that look (and taste) amazing! This is a popular one, folks, so registration is required.

Tuesday, Dec. 10, from 5-7 p.m., we are hosting a Holiday Card-Making Workshop! 'Tis the season for getting crafty. Get into the festive spirit and unleash your creativity by crafting your own unique holiday cards to share with your loved ones. We'll provide all the supplies—paper, embellishments, stamps, and more!

On Friday, Dec. 13, from 5-7 p.m., Oscar's Elves are in the house! We are here to help with all of your holiday wrapping needs. We will have wrapping paper, tags, bags, and ribbon for all of your presents. Bring in your gifts to have them wrapped while you check out what the library has to offer. The wrapping (and rapping) is free, but you're more than welcome to give a donation to the library to be used to fund future programming (and maybe singing lessons).

Join the Senior Social Club, a program designed to provide 65 and older adults with fun and engaging activities that foster community and relationship building. Each session will focus on different activities, including arts and crafts, storytelling, and technology workshops. The club will meet the third Tuesday of the month at 3 p.m. (Dec. 17). Light refreshments will be served.

New! The Tight-Knit Knitting and Crocheting Circle is here. Knitters and crocheters come together to work on your projects, discuss any technical difficulties you're having, and support one another. The group typically meets the fourth Thursday of the month from 6:00-7:30 in the library meeting room, but with Christmas this month, the date has been rescheduled to Tuesday, Dec. 17.

The OFML Sewcial Club meets the 3rd Wednesday (Dec. 18) of the month from 12:30-3:30 p.m. Guests can bring any sewing or quilting project they are working on (along with their sewing machines and supplies) to the library to socialize and share tips while they sew.

Family Crafternoon is a family-focused event that happens every third Friday of the month (Dec. 20). Join us for a special time of 1 p.m. (due to early release at BES) as we make a holiday treat and watch a movie. Materials will be provided and light refreshments served.

On Friday, Dec. 20, from 6:30-8 p.m., join us for Books & Banter! This lively book club is open to everyone and invites you to share and explore a wide range of genres—everything from non-fiction to horror to romantasy! Feel free to come ready to discuss up to three books you've recently read, giving a brief synopsis to spark conversation. It's a fantastic way to discover new titles and engage with fellow book lovers. Whether you're a seasoned reader or just looking to explore new genres, there's a place for you here. Don't miss out on the fun—come share your thoughts, learn about new books, and enjoy a cozy evening of discussion. We can't wait to see you!

Let's Write a Novel! Join us in the library's meeting room for a series of structured classes on the how-to's of writing a book. Note: We typically meet from 6-7:30 p.m. on the last Friday of the month, but due to the holiday, we will meet on Friday, Dec. 20, instead. Budding writers, 16 and older, ignite your passion for storytelling, discover how to build your hero's journey, and take your novel from concept to can-do! This structured course includes sessions on creating: Chapter Cheat Sheets, Character Cards, and a Tracking the Timeline graph. We welcome all genres from Fantasy to Action Adventure to Romance, focusing on a target audience of Middle School and above.

On Friday, Dec. 27,

Wolfeboro Friends of Music presents ‘Seamus Egan’s Good Winter: A Celtic Christmas’

WOLFEBORO — It’s hard to think of an artist in traditional Irish music more influential than Seamus Egan. From his beginnings as a teen prodigy, to his founding of Irish American powerhouse band “Solas,” hailed by The Boston Globe as “the finest Celtic ensemble this country has ever produced”, Seamus Egan has inspired multiple generations of musicians and helped re-define the sound of traditional Irish music today and more importantly- to tell its stories.

What season is more about stories than the season of Christmas! Tradition, ritual, and collective memory, all come together in “Seamus Egan’s Good Winter: A Celtic Christmas” performed with his amazing Irish band: The Seamus Egan Project Saturday, Dec. 14 at 7 p.m. at the First Congregational Church in Wolfeboro.

Songs of the season, original songs, traditional and original music, poetry and spoken word seamlessly weaving together to create an intimate story full of joy, humor, and reverie. Combining fiddle, flute, whistle, guitar, banjo, piano and piano accordion with vocals to raise the rafters in celebration, A Celtic Christmas’ is sure to brighten the darkest midnight. We invite you to “push the old year against the wall and welcome in the new” and celebrate the holiday season.

This is the fourth of nine concert performances comprising the current season running through May, 89 years of artistic excellence in service to New Hampshire’s Lakes Region!
