Alton librarian receives commendation from Governor

ALTON — Holly Brown received a special proclamation of achievement from New Hampshire Gov. Kelly Ayotte and a declaration from Speaker of the New Hampshire House of Representatives, Sherman Packard, upon retirement and in recognition of her 30 years of service as Director of Gilman Library in Alton.

Both commendations were presented during a retirement party on Dec. 30 by Alton representative to the New Hampshire State House, Paul Terry.

When Brown set off for college in Vermont, working part-time in the college library to cover expenses, she did not envision a career in the field. After several years of retail sales, marriage, and family, Brown's love of libraries was rekindled and she embarked on a career which initially involved working in the Gafney Library in Sanbornton and then the Moultonborough Public Library. The love of libraries, learning, and helping others led her to that path. The opportunity arose to apply for the Director of the Gilman Library in Alton and the Board of Trustees selected Brown to fill the vacant position.

Affectionately known as "Miss Holly" by the younger patrons, Brown eagerly was helpful to everyone. She gladly oversaw the numerous programs throughout the year and easily and creatively brought new ideas to the table. With excitement and enthusiasm, Brown oversaw the physical expansion of the growing library with its accompanying needs. As a quiet and humble person, she hesitates to speak of her own accomplishments.

Over the years, Brown has maintained her reputation as a soft-spoken gentlewoman, earning the respect of the town officials, business and community leaders, teachers, parents, as well as the children of this community who have since grown and returned to the library with their own children.

Sincere congratulations on these two well-deserved commendations from the State of New Hampshire.

Local hiking challenge raises money for NH conservation

ALTON — Founded last spring, Alton Trail Chaser challenges hikers to explore all 14 trails in Alton to earn an embroidered patch. Twenty percent of net sales are donated to local conservation organizations. In 2025, the program raised a total of $41.67 for Lakes Region Conservation Trust, including a bonus donation from a generous patch finisher.

If you have a New Year's resolution to get out and exercise or hike more, the Alton Trail Chaser challenge is a perfect opportunity. You can explore trails locally while enjoying the physical and mental benefits of spending time in nature. Alton offers hiking trails of all levels, from gentle wooded paths to more advanced mountain hikes. Many trails offer rewarding views of lakes or wetlands, mountains near and far, diverse flora, and peaceful forests. For goal oriented people, hiking challenges provide motivation and direction, with the tangible bragging right of earning a hiking patch after completion. As of Dec. 31, a total of 21 people and three dogs had earned their ATC patch. Will you be next?

In 2026, Alton Trail Chaser will continue donating 20 percent of net profits from patch and merchandise sales, with this year's proceeds going to the Society for the Protection of New Hampshire Forests, aka the Forest Society. Like LRCT, the Forest Society does a significant amount of local conservation work, including maintaining several properties in Alton. Pine Mountain in the Morse Preserve is one such gem. Check out this and other beautiful trails in town while supporting a good cause.

Friends of Music sponsors Taiko artist in residence at Kingswood

WOLFEBORO — On Jan. 6 and 7, the Wolfeboro Friends of Music presented artist in residence Stuart Paton of Burlington Taiko at Kingswood Regional High School. The two-day clinic was primarily presented to the cast of Kingswood Theater's The Last Firefly, as well as many other students of the Kingswood Arts Center.

Stuart Paton, Founder and Artistic Director, spent the better part of two days teaching twenty high school students the art, history and culture of Taiko. Paton spent most of his childhood in Japan from age nine months through eighteen years. His formal study of Taiko began in 1984 during a summer apprenticeship with Grandmaster Seiichi Tanaka, founder of San Francisco Taiko Dojo – the first taiko group in North America. In 1986, not long after settling in Vermont, he founded the Burlington Taiko Group.

The Wolfeboro Friends of Music sponsored Paton's two-day educational event for Kingswood's performing arts students. Kingswood's production of "The Last Firefly," which uses Taiko drumming in its storytelling, debuts on the Kingswood Arts Center stage and at the NHETG Theatre festival in March of this year. Paton's instruction is a key first step to the students' production.

"This is precisely why the Kingswood Arts Center was built," notes theater director and Arts Center Coordinator, Scott Giessler. "I am just so incredibly grateful for the generosity of The Friends of Music, and their willingness to provide this opportunity for our students. The amount of knowledge imparted to our students in just two short days was nothing short of stunning. We couldn't have done it without them."

Burlington Taiko founder Paton has established an artistic style that combines movement, rhythm, voice, and the efficient and graceful movement of chi, or "energy," from the player to the drum. His affection for the group dynamic of Taiko is evident both when he performs at the most advanced level, and when he instructs the most novice players.

"The Last Firefly" will debut on March 13 at 7 p.m. and March 15 at 2 p.m. in the Kingswood Arts Center.

LACONIA — The Belmont-Gilford hockey team celebrated Jake Deware in the best way possible, coming through with a 5-3 win over visiting Pembroke-Campbell on Saturday, Jan. 10. The game was the annual Jake Deware Kindness Game, honoring the late former Belmont student and the Bulldogs wore special jerseys to celebrate the occasion.

Max Ryder had an early shot denied by the PAC goalie and the visitors came back with a chance that went through the crease and another that went wide of the net. The Bulldogs took a penalty less than a minute into the game and Ben Girard had a solid penalty kill before the visitors scored the first goal of the game with 12:24 to go in the first period.

Thomas Murphy sent a shot over the top of the net and Ryder had another shot go wide. Sean Ellis had a chance denied, as did

Toss or keep? How to sort items when organizing

Getting organized routinely tops people's lists of New Year's resolutions. After many months of accumulating an assortment of things, starting fresh in January with goals to organize such acquisitions can be a healthy endeavor.

One of the obstacles of getting organized is sorting through belongings and identifying what to get rid of and what to keep. In fact, uncertainty about what's worthy of donation or trash is a common problem that can create clutter. These organizational tips can help people figure out what to toss and what to keep.

Determine if items are useful

Ask yourself if you have used the item in the last month to 90 days, or if you see yourself needing it in the next month. If not, this item likely can be put aside. An easy way to identify items that won't be useful is to check for duplicates or if anything is expired. Duplicate items can immediately be moved to the toss pile.

"Why do I want this item?"
Consider each item you come across and ask yourself how it serves a purpose. If it looks great in the home or is a cherished memento, then it likely can be kept. But if you can't say why you want it, it needs to find a new home, particularly if you already own something else that does the same thing but might also have other uses.

Does it fit?
One of the biggest culprits to clutter and overflowing closets is holding on to clothes with the hope that you'll once again fit into them. Keeping a collection of multi-sized shirts and pants with the intention of dropping or gaining weight so that they fit once more only leads to hangers and bins full of useless items. Although clothes can be expensive, should you fluctuate in weight, it's likely that you'll want to get new clothes instead of wearing outdated styles. When assessing shoes, figure out which ones are uncomfortable or seldom used (a collection of sandals might not be appropriate if you live in a cold climate). Donate items in good condition.

Do you still feel the same about collectibles?
People often collect figurines, shot glasses or other items through the years out of habit. Over time, items that once were popular fall out of favor. If your interest in porcelain pigs has waned, it may be time to clear out collectibles to make room for other things.

Assess your paper files
Major financial records and/or business documents can be kept indefinitely, but other files likely can be shredded. The Internal Revenue Service generally has up to six years to audit a return, so it is helpful to keep tax returns and supporting documents for around seven years. Most people have pivoted to online bank statements and pay stubs, but the general consensus is to keep bank and credit card statements, pay stubs, paid medical bills, and such for a year before discarding them. Going digital by scanning files or documents and storing them securely might be an alternative to bulky files.

Getting organized means figuring out what to keep and what needs to go, a process that differs for each person.

PETS OF THE WEEK

Meet Simi!

Simi is the total package — handsome, loyal, and full of energy! This athletic boy loves to run, jump, and show off his playful spirit, so a home that can give him plenty of exercise and adventure is a must. Whether it’s a long walk, a backyard sprint, or a good game of fetch, Simi is always ready to move.

Once his zoomies are out of the way, though, he’s all about snuggles.

True to his velcro-dog nature, Simi loves nothing more than being right by your side, soaking up all the love he can get. When he gets excited, he proudly picks up his favorite toy to show it off — and yes, he insists his harness goes around both him and his toy. Simi would prefer to be the only dog in the home without other pets- he loves to chase and hunt smaller animals for fun.

A man knows what he wants, after all!

Simi always looks dashing in his signature bandana and is ready to steal hearts (and maybe a few squeaky toys) wherever he goes. If you’re looking for a loyal best friend with energy, style, and endless affection, Simi is your guy.

A quiet stretch of winter still belongs to us

Mid-January rarely makes headlines, and that may be exactly its strength.

The holidays are packed away. The calendar has turned, but the rush of the new year has settled into something more manageable. Spring meetings and summer events are still weeks or months away. For many people in Alton, Gilford, Gilmanton, Barnstead, and neighboring communities, this stretch of winter is quieter, steadier, and more predictable than the weeks that surround it.

That does not mean nothing is happening.

In fact, much of what shapes the rest of the year begins right now, often without much notice. Town boards meet regularly in January, sometimes with shorter agendas and smaller audiences, but the discussions held during these meetings matter. Budget lines are examined. Policies are refined. Long-range plans quietly take shape. Decisions made now often resurface later, when the stakes feel higher and the room is more crowded.

Schools follow a similar rhythm. By midwinter, administrators and school boards are already looking ahead. Enrollment trends, staffing needs, and program priorities are discussed while classrooms continue their daily routines. Families may not feel the impact immediately, but the groundwork is being laid for what students will experience in the next school year and beyond.

This is also the season when community institutions simply keep going. Libraries host weekly programs even when snow is falling outside. Volunteer groups meet around folding tables to plan months ahead. Senior centers and town offices remain open, serving residents who rely on their consistency. These efforts rarely generate headlines, yet they form the backbone of small-town life.

In communities like ours, steadiness is not a lack of ambition. It is a sign of health.

There is something to be said for showing up when there is no crisis to solve and no spotlight shining. A planning board meeting in January may draw fewer residents than one held in April or May, but its conversations can be just as consequential. A budget committee discussion held on a cold evening can shape tax bills, services, and priorities for the entire year.

Winter also provides an opportunity for residents to take stock. When daylight is short and schedules are simpler, it becomes easier to notice what is working and what is not. Is communication from town offices clear and timely. Are roads being maintained effectively after storms. Do residents feel informed about decisions being made on their behalf.

These questions do not require outrage to be meaningful. They require attention.

Small towns are often measured by how they respond to emergencies or celebrate big moments. Those moments matter, but they are not the whole story. Communities should also be measured by how they function during ordinary weeks, when routines are followed and responsibilities are met without fanfare.

Mid-January is one of those weeks.

It is a time to read posted agendas, to attend meetings when possible, and to stay engaged even when there is no obvious controversy drawing attention. It is a time to appreciate the people who keep municipal services running, who volunteer their time, and who ensure that essential work continues regardless of season or weather.

Winter does not need to be dramatic to be meaningful. Sometimes, the most important progress happens quietly, when there is time to think clearly and get things right. This stretch of winter belongs to all of us, and how we use it helps shape the year ahead.

Gifts

Thank you, Lord, for this new day. Thank you for the knee pains left over from going skiing one more time. Thank you for the back pains that constantly remind me I should no longer do jobs I formerly would readily accept. Thank you for my friends and family that brighten up my life. Thank you for this life, whatever it means.

Who else could you thank? On a scale of ten, the left knee is about a two, the right one a three. The back pains are about a four today; they can sometimes hit five or six. That's life at this point in time. Whatever that is.

So, what else is there to do? I've accomplished the only thing one can do with this life, which is passing it on. I would have welcomed a van load, but I'll settle for a pair. I don't expect to be expanding my universe anymore any time soon.

I could acquire great riches, knowledge, or fame, for what purpose other than my own pleasure and gratification. Making exquisite art, or world saving inventions won't mean a thing when I pass onto the next world.

There's no way anyone can gain a scintilla of favor in that moment. All this, everything, will have passed away. Every last bit.

It was in junior high school, probably seventh grade. Disposable pens were shot out of guns into wood and still wrote. Commercials were all over the tube. Us younger folks found out that if you ripped out the insides, that the plastic outside made a magnificent spitball shooter.

Our science teacher had a reputation of having a drinking problem with us kids. She would constantly visit her little closet and had the tendency to walk kind of wobbly. My friend and I, in utter boredom in her class, took to shooting spit balls up onto the long fluorescent lights running the length of the classroom. If it was juicy enough and landed just right, it would stick, and we could count scores.

A new skinny little kid came and joined our class. One day he came into school with a pocket full of little beads. He gave us each a hand full. I didn't think they worked as well as the real thing, they didn't stick to the light tubes. So, I threw them away.

He liked them. He'd put them in his mouth and shot a spray like a machine gun. In reading class in the cafeteria, one of our classmates jumped over our table and started beating up on the new kid. The teacher quickly subdued the disturbance and ascertained that one of his little pellets had landed in the attacker's eye. It was time for him to go visit the principal.

I didn't think too much about it. Another class disturbance come and gone. Later, in English class, a call came over the intercom from the principal. He understood that there were two other fellows in the class who also shot spit balls and wanted to talk to us. He promised that nothing would happen if we surrendered and came to his office.

My friend and I kind of nodded in agreement and headed off to the office. We got our talking to and I figured that we'd soon be sent back to class. Instead, he had his secretary draw up suspension papers for us all. For shooting spit balls at light bulbs?!

It was close to end of school when the principal explained the dangers of shooting spit balls to the school and how three were getting suspended. I snagged my friend and pulled him into the bathroom where we hid till the bell rang. Then we anonymously exited the school with the masses.

That was the day I learned never to trust authority.

We all had to return to school with our parents. The kids' mother was very concerned that we were going to beat him up or something. For what? Getting to sit at home watching TV for a day? It wasn't something either one of us would have ever considered doing.

He had some medical issues and died a couple years later. I hope the stress of thinking we were going to beat him up didn't negatively affect him.

The fact that my principal lied, or my classmate rattled on me won't matter when it's my turn. Only that I know why it's a free gift.

Town Hall at risk

To the Editor:

Alton's Town Hall is a grand old structure with historical significance which has served the town since 1896. Over the last few years, it has received several significant upgrades, from ADA-compliant rest rooms to an elevator serving the second floor. These improvements are most welcome, but there remains a threat to the building's health: water. The existing roof has proven prone to leakage, and the old-style lead flashings are no longer effective. Ceiling stains in several places are indicative of the problem. The town has spent over $18,000 in the last two years on repairs, but new leaks continue to appear. Worst yet, it is very likely that additional water penetration is occurring that can't be detected, and that water will, over time, cause rotting of sheathing and structural members.

The only long-term solution is a complete replacement roof, including flashings, drip edge, ridge venting and sheathing repair if required. Although more research is needed, the most attractive option identified to date is a roofing system manufactured by Vicwest Corporation of Burlington Ontario. This is an all-metal system using 28-gauge galvalume sheet in 12-by-50-inch panels with fully hidden fasteners. The panels duplicate the appearance of a traditional slate roof in a dark gray color which would complement the building's appearance. The system is designed for high-wind environments and meets the code requirements in areas such as Florida where hurricane-force winds and heavy rain are a constant threat.

The cost is estimated to be $95,000, based on a preliminary quotation. $55,000 of this can be paid from the Clough-Morrill Trust Fund, a fund established years ago to meet Town Hall maintenance and improvement needs. The balance would come from the current fully funded Town Hall Capital Reserve account. As a result, there would be no impact on property taxes, and further expenditures on additional temporary repairs could be avoided. Residents will be asked to approve this as a Warrant Article this year. Given the critical need and the absence of any impact on property taxes, approval would certainly be in the town's best interest.

When the quiet gets loud

Some of the best moments in life are the ones nobody schedules. They slip in quietly between the bigger, louder parts of our days. You are standing at the kitchen sink, waiting for the kettle to boil. You are sitting in the car while the windshield warms up. You are walking across a parking lot with your hands shoved into your pockets because winter is not quite done with us yet. Nothing important is supposed to happen in those moments. And yet, that is often when the important things do. I have noticed lately that the world has grown very noisy. Not just in the obvious ways, with televisions turned up too loud or phones chiming every few minutes, but in the way we fill every empty space with something. Music in our ears while we shop. Podcasts while we drive. A screen in front of us even when we are sitting with people we care about. Silence has become something to be avoided, as if it were an awkward guest at the table. I grew up in a time when silence was just part of the day. It was there early in the morning before anyone else was awake. It was there on long car rides when the radio faded out. It was there in the evenings when you could hear nothing but the ticking of a clock and maybe the wind against the house. Nobody thought much about it. It was simply the space where your own thoughts could stretch out a little.

These days, I sometimes have to work a bit to find that kind of quiet. When I do, I am always surprised by how much it has to say. In a quiet moment, I remember things I had forgotten. A conversation with my daughter from years ago. The sound of my son laughing when he was younger. A neighbor who once did me a small kindness I never properly thanked him for. None of those thoughts arrive when I am rushing from one thing to the next. They seem to need a little room.

There is something honest about quiet. When the noise drops away, there is nothing to distract you from how you really feel. You notice when you are tired. You notice when something has been weighing on you. You also notice when you are content, which is something we do not always take time to recognize. Contentment is not flashy. It does not announce itself. It sits there patiently, waiting for you to notice.

I have also found that quiet makes me more grateful. When I am not being pulled in a dozen directions, I can appreciate the simple fact that my wife and I are sitting in the same room, each of us doing our own small thing. I can be thankful for a warm cup of coffee, for a roof that keeps the snow out, for a phone call from one of the kids that lasts longer than I expected. None of that feels ordinary when you are really paying attention.

Of course, life cannot be quiet all the time, and it should not be. There is joy in busy kitchens, in crowded rooms, in voices overlapping as people tell stories. Noise can mean life is happening. But when noise becomes constant, it wears you down in ways you do not always notice right away. You become restless. You become distracted. You forget how to sit with yourself.

So every now and then, I try to give myself a small gift. I turn something off. The radio. The television. The phone. I sit there for a few minutes and let the world be as it is. At first it can feel strange, even uncomfortable. Then something settles. The day slows down. My thoughts line up in a more sensible way. I come back to myself.

I do not think we need to make a big production out of it. Quiet does not require a retreat or a special cushion on the floor. It can happen in a parked car, in a living room, or on a back step looking out at the yard. It just asks that we stop, even briefly, and listen.

In a place like New Hampshire, we are lucky. We have long stretches of road, wide skies, and winters that insist you stay inside once in a while. We are given plenty of chances to be still if we are willing to take them. In that stillness, you may hear things you have been missing.

And if you listen closely, you might find that the quiet, far from being empty, is full of everything that really matters.

Comfort Keepers

Well, technically, no. However, there is a growing body of evidence that shows how you perceive aging, and your perception of how old you feel, can affect your general overall health and wellbeing and how old you seem to yourself and others.

Many people may scoff at the idea that you can change your physiology by thinking differently about yourself, but a famous unconventional experiment conducted by Harvard researcher, Ellen Langer, in 1981 has gained prominence over the last several years. In this experiment, Langer invited two groups of men in their 70s on a "reminiscing retreat," without telling them that they were part of a study. All these men had physical difficulties or memory issues that caused them to rely on others for help.

One group of men spent the week reminiscing about life in 1959 while surrounded by present-day familiarities. The other group of men was actually "dropped" into the year 1959, so to speak. This group was immersed in mementos from that era, from newspaper articles to radios and black-and-white televisions that played shows from the time and told to pretend they were back in 1959. This latter group of men engaged in debates about world events of 1959 as if they were occurring in the present day. Of additional interest is that the men were not given any assistance at the retreat at any time. There were no handrails or ramps to help with walking, and they were not given any assistance bringing their luggage to their rooms. They needed to find a way to transport their belongings and get around the retreat grounds on their own.

By the end of the retreat period, both groups of men showed significant, positive changes in every aspect, but the second group that was immersed in 1959 showed the greatest improvement, to the extent that this group of once-frail men were playing touch football at the end of the retreat. Further, these positive cognitive and physiological changes were confirmed by laboratory tests that showed improvement in the men's memory and other cognitive abilities, flexibility, gait, arthritis, speed of movement, and dexterity. What was more surprising was that the men also had lower blood pressure, better hearing, and better eyesight. It appeared as though by thinking they were younger, these men had physically become "younger."

As doctors and scientists continue to study the connections between the mind and body, it is becoming more evident that aging is not a fixed process. More evidence is mounting that attitudes affect physical, cognitive, and psychological wellbeing—that humans can "think themselves younger." By changing attitudes about the aging process and self-perceptions about their own physical and cognitive wellbeing, average people have greater power than they may realize over how well they age.

Knightwolves come up short against strong Raider squad

BY JOSHUA SPAULDING
Sports Editor

WOLFEBORO — A week after a dominating win over a less than premium opponent, the Kingswood-Prospect Mountain-Plymouth girls' hockey team welcomed one of the top teams in the state to the Pop Whalen Arena.

While Lebanon-Kearsarge-Mascoma left Wolfboro still undefeated against New Hampshire opponents, the Knightwolves put up a heck of a fight, eventually dropping a 2-0 decision to the Raiders.

The Raiders wasted little time getting on the board as they slipped the puck into the net just 35 seconds into the game for the 1-0 lead. The Raiders had another shot go wide of the net, another go high and Aliyah Arsenault handled another shot in the Knightwolf net.

Kingswood-Prospect-Plymouth took a penalty in the first few minutes and the Raiders made them pay, scoring on the power play with 12:13 to go in the game for the 2-0 lead. From there, nobody else found the back of the net.

Cassidy Libby had a good offensive chance and Arsenault stopped another Raider chance. Jenna Sykes also got in close for the Knightwolves and Arsenault handled another bid from the visitors. Sykes had a centering pass miss the mark in front and Paityn Glidden sent a shot wide of the net. Arsenault stopped a couple more chances and Avery Gilpatrick sent a nice pass up to Libby, but the Raider defense held tight.

Emily Bouse had a shot denied for the Knightwolves, as did Emma Ouellette and the Knightwolves took a five-minute penalty with just more than five minutes to go in the period. Arsenault stopped a chance and Hadley Aucoin, Gilpatrick and Sykes all had good clears while Libby had a shorthanded chance. The Raiders sent a few shots wide of the net before the penalty was killed and the first period ended with the visitors up 2-0.

Libby had a centering pass early in the second and Sloan McCarthy had a shot denied while Ouellette got in close on the rebound. The Raiders sent a shot wide and Arsenault stopped another bid. Aucoin had a good centering pass and the visitors had a couple of bids denied by Arsenault.

The Knightwolves went on the power play with 9:40 to go in the period and Libby and Sykes got in close with a bid and Adelle Harrington had a wraparound chance denied. The Raiders took another penalty with 8:32 to go, giving the hosts 52 seconds of five-on-three power play, but the Raiders killed off the penalties.

Kingswood-Prospect-Plymouth went on the power play with 4:18 to go and Gilpatrick sent the puck through the crease. However, the Raiders had a good penalty kill and kept the Knightwolves off the board. Arsenault denied a couple of chances late and the Knightwolves took a penalty in the final seconds as the game went to the third with the Raiders up 2-0.

The visitors had a couple of good chances on the power play to start the third period, but Arsenault made the saves and Sykes had a good clear. McCarthy sent a shot wide of the net and Libby had a chance in the zone. Aucoin had a shot blocked in front and McCarthy's chance was denied by the Raider goalie.

The Knightwolves went on the power play with 5:09 to go but they could not get on the board and the Raiders were able to kill off the advantage and finish out the 2-0 win.

The Knightwolves are slated to be back at it on Saturday, Jan. 17, at home against former coach Aaron House and his Bishop Brady team at 7:30 p.m.

Alex Rowley had a pair of goals in Belmont-Gilford's win over Pembroke-Campbell Saturday afternoon.

HOCKEY

Ryder and Murphy got in close on a bid. Goalie Jacoby Drouin stopped a PAC chance and Brayden Drew and Ryder had chances denied by the PAC goalie.

With eight minutes to go in the first period, the Bulldogs tied things up with Drew sending the puck up to Ryder, who buried the shot for the tying goal. Ryder had another shot denied and also had a chance stopped by the PAC defense. Alex Rowley found Drew for another chance as well.

The Bulldogs took the lead with 4:43 to go in the first period, as Rowley got in close and finished the shot on assists from William Hazelton and Ellis for the 2-1 advantage. Murphy had another shot denied and Drouin stopped another PAC chance. Cam McClary sent a shot wide of the net and Ryder and Colton Byars had chances denied by the PAC keeper.

The Bulldogs took a penalty with 2:30 to go and Drouin stopped a couple of good chances while Ethan Girard and Ellis both had good clears before the penalty was killed off. Tyler Mull had a shot denied by the Pembroke-Campbell goalie to close out the first period and the Bulldogs led 2-1 at the first intermission.

Drouin stopped a couple of bids early in the second period and Mull and Ryder teamed up on a chance that was denied. Murphy and Byars had bids stopped by the PAC goalie and Drouin stopped a couple more Pembroke-Campbell chances. The visitors sent a shot over the top of the net and Drouin stopped a few more bids. Ryder and Drew had chances and Ellis fired a shot off the post as the Bulldogs pressured.

With 7:49 to go, the pressure paid off, as Murphy sent a shot on net that was saved but Rowley was there to put the puck home for the 3-1 lead. Jack Rodrigue picked up the secondary assist on the goal.

The Bulldogs upped the lead to 4-1 just one minutes later, as Drew got in all alone and beat the PAC goalie on assists from Ellis and Ryder. PAC sent a couple shots wide of the net and Ben Girard and Rowley had chances that missed the mark for the Bulldogs.

The visitors scored off a faceoff with 4:22 to go, cutting the lead to 4-2. Belmont-Gilford went on the power play with 3:42 to go in the period and Murphy sent a shot wide and Byars sent the puck through the crease. Ryder and Ethan Girard teamed up on a chance that was denied and Ryder sent a shot high before the power play was killed off. Ryder and Ellis had bids denied and Ethan Girard had a shot from the point stopped. Drouin held off a late PAC shot and the game went to the third with the Bulldogs up 4-2.

After early PAC pressure in the third, Ellis sent a shot wide of the net and Mull had a nice centering pass that missed the mark in front. Rodrigue had a shot go wide of the net and Ryder had a bid stopped by the goalie. Drew and Ryder teamed up on a chance that went wide of the net and Drouin stopped another Pembroke-Campbell chance.

The visitors sent a shot wide of the net and Ryder sent a shot wide at the other end of the ice. Belmont-Gilford went on the power play with 2:51 to go and Drew had a couple of chances but it was PAC who got on the board, scoring with 1:33 to go to cut the lead to 4-3.

The visitors pulled their goalie in the final minute and Byars finished off the scoring with a shot that went almost the entire length of the ice into the net for the empty net goal and the 5-3 win for the Bulldogs.

Belmont-Gilford is slated to take on Berlin-Gorham in Berlin on Wednesday, Jan. 21, at 6 p.m.

ABA Monthly Member Highlight: The NH Snowmobile Museum

ALTON — Every month, the Alton Business Association sits down with one of our amazing ABA members to get to know them a little better! We ask each member the same questions, providing an opportunity for our members to highlight the important work they do in our communities.

January 2026 Monthly Member Highlight: The NH Snowmobile Museum — The Alton Business Association is pleased to spotlight the NH Snowmobile Museum, operated by the New Hampshire Snowmobile Museum Association, a non-profit organization dedicated to preserving the history of snowmobiling in New Hampshire and beyond. Founded in 1985, the museum showcases more than 100 historic snowmobiles and an extensive collection of vintage memorabilia, celebrating 40 years of innovation, recreation, and community while educating future generations and keeping the spirit of snowmobiling alive.

Tell us about your business.

Since its establishment in 1985, the NH Snowmobile Museum has been dedicated to bringing the early days of snowmobiling to life through vintage exhibits and public events. As a non-profit 501(c)(3) organization, we rely on the support of our members, donations, and fundraising efforts—support that has helped keep the spirit of snowmobiling alive for 40 years.

Tell us about yourself.
The NH Snowmobile

Museum is 40 years young and still going strong. Our collection features more than 100 snowmobiles, along with vintage memorabilia of every kind—including handcrafted items that showcase the creativity and history of the sport.

One of our most prized pieces is the first Ski-Doo snowmobile ever sold and ridden in New Hampshire. The museum is also home to a beautifully restored Lombard machine, used in the early 1900s for log hauling. Beyond these highlights, our collection includes an array of unique and historic sleds, including models from John Deere, Hus-Ski, Bolens, Caribou, and many more.

How did your business get started?

The dream of founding a museum became a reality in 1985 when a non-profit organization, the New Hampshire Snowmobile Museum Association was created. The, then Bureau of Off Highway Vehicles and now the Bureau of Trails, part of the Division of Parks and Recreation, provided space at two Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) building at Bear Brook State Park in Allenstown, New Hampshire. In that year, the first and only state sponsored snowmobile museum in the United States became an actuality. This public-private partnership has proven to be very successful, resulting in a one-of-a-kind museum collection of over 80 snow-traveling machines and a large collection of memorabilia.

What has your relationship with the Alton Business Association done for you or your business?

We are a new member of the Alton Business Association! Being part of this vibrant network of local businesses is an important step for us as we are looking forward to growing, collaborating, and contributing to the Alton community.

What do you value most about this community?

The NH Snowmobile Museum's mission is to preserve and share the rich history of snowmobiling in New Hampshire and beyond. We are passionate about educating future generations and celebrating the legacy of this incredible sport. But we can't do it alone. We need the support of our community to keep the history alive! In turn, we are committed to giving back and supporting the community that supports us.

Why did you want to open your business in this community?

The Lakes Region isn't just scenic, it's historically significant in the evolution of winter transportation and recreation. Ossipee is the birthplace of the snowmobile!

From Alton to the surrounding towns, hundreds of miles of snowmobile trails weave through forests, fields and communities. These trails carry stories, the clubs that carved them out, the generations of riders who have explored them and the traditions, events and friendships that have grown along the way. Our mission is to preserve and share the rich history of snowmobiling in New Hampshire and beyond.

What business accomplishment are you most proud of?

The NH Snowmobile Museum is most proud of its mission to keep the history of snowmobiling alive. For 40 years, we've brought smiles to countless faces as visitors reflect on days gone by—remembering adventures shared with family and friends on the very snowmobiles they now see on display.

What does the future hold for you and your business?

As we celebrate our 40th anniversary this year, we are reflecting on how we can continue to keep the history of snowmobiling alive in New Hampshire and throughout our surrounding states. Earlier this year, the NH Snowmobile Museum was informed that our building had been structurally compromised beyond repair, requiring us to vacate the space.

Although the future is uncertain, we are choosing to view this moment as an exciting opportunity—a chance to find a new home that will allow us to grow, expand our offerings, and become even more accessible to the public

What is one piece of advice you wish you had as a new business owner?

One piece of advice I wish we had as a non-profit business is a better understanding of how to attract volunteers and members—and how to remain appealing in an ever changing world.

How can people who want to learn more about you or your business get in touch with you?

If you would like to get in touch with the NH Snowmobile Museum, we offer several ways to connect.

Stay up to date with museum news and events by following us on Facebook and Instagram. BY JOSHUA SPAULDING
Sports Editor

ALTON — The Prospect Mountain hoop girls returned to regular season action on Tuesday, Jan. 6, cruising to a 70-10 win on the road in Somersworth.

The Timber Wolves set the tone out of the gate, using their relentless ball pressure, forcing turnovers and turning defense into points on the other end of the court. Prospect Mountain led 19-3 at the end of the first quarter and held the ‘Toppers to just one point in the second quarter for a 38-4 lead at the halftime break.

Prospect then outscored the hosts 32-6 in the second half to cruise to the 70-10 win.

Kourtney Kaplan, coming off her MVP performance in the Mike Lee Holiday Basketball Bash, led the way for Prospect with 23 points, seven rebounds, five steals and four assists while Ava Foster added 18 points, four rebounds and three steals. Paige Harding

Wicked Cool Mechanical relocates to new Gilford facility to strengthen local service

GILFORD — Wicked Cool Mechanical, a locally owned commercial HVAC and refrigeration contractor serving New Hampshire’s Lakes Region, has relocated its operations to a new facility at 21 Meadowbrook Lane, Unit 1, Gilford.

Alesha Desharnais, Wicked Cool Mechanical moved into the new space in December as part of a strategic investment in operational efficiency, long-term growth, and continued service to the local community.

The new facility brings office, warehouse, and field operations together under one roof, allowing the team to work more efficiently, better manage inventory, and support faster response times for commercial customers. The space also provides room for growth, including the ability to add up to two additional office team members as the company expands.

“This move is about setting Wicked Cool Mechanical up for the next phase of growth while staying rooted in the community we serve,” said John Desharnais, owner of Wicked Cool Mechanical. “Owning our own facility as we move into our fourth year in business is something we’re incredibly proud of. It allows us to operate more effectively and continue delivering the level of service our customers expect.”

Strategically located in Gilford, the new facility improves access for technicians serving retail, banking, office, and institutional clients throughout the Lakes Region. The expanded warehouse space also allows Wicked Cool Mechanical to stock critical parts more effectively, reducing delays and supporting smoother service execution.

John and Alesha Desharnais emphasized that remaining in the Lakes Region was a deliberate decision. “This is where we live, and this is our community,” added Alesha Desharnais. “We’re active members of the Meredith Chamber of Commerce and expect to be even more involved locally this year.”

Founded in Meredith, Wicked Cool Mechanical has built a reputation for responsive customer service, live call handling, and following through on complex commercial HVAC and refrigeration challenges. The new Gilford facility supports the company’s continued growth while reinforcing its commitment to reliability, accountability, and community involvement.

For more information about Wicked Cool Mechanical and its commercial HVAC and refrigeration services, visit wickedcoolmech.com or call 603-524-0445.

Village Players receive nominations for New Hampshire Theatre Awards

The Village Players production of “Calendar Girls” was nominated as a semifinals for Outstanding Community Production of a Play at the New Hampshire Theatre Awards.

WOLFEBORO — After another busy year, the Village Players Theater is excited to announce a number of nominations as semifinalists for the New Hampshire Theatre Awards.

The New Hampshire Theatre Awards are held each year at the end of January or early February to celebrate the best that New Hampshire theatre has to offer. Awards are presented in all the major categories and have showcased the state's remarkable achievements and exceptional talent in locally produced theatre since 2002.

This year, the Village Players have received nine nominations across their spring and summer productions. The nominations are based on the adjudication done by fellow theater members from around the state. Each theater puts a couple of their productions up for adjudication and this year the Village

Players put up the spring comedy, “Escanaba in da Moonlight” and the summer production, “Calendar Girls.”

Both of those productions were nominated for Outstanding Community Production of a Play.

“Escanaba in da Moonlight” is the hunting story to beat all hunting stories. When the Soady clan reunites for the opening day of deer season at the family’s Upper Peninsula camp, 35-year-old Reuben Soady brings with him the infamous reputation of being the oldest Soady in the history of the Soadys never to bag a buck. The show spins a hilarious tale of humor, horror and heart as Reuben goes to any and all lengths to remove himself from the wrong end of the family record book. One of the oddest characters in Escanaba is the Jimmer. To hear him tell it, he was abducted by aliens some years ago and hasn’t been the same since.

In addition to the nomination for Outstanding Community Production of a Play, “Escanaba in da Moonlight” also featured other nominations. Directors Paul Stewart and Jonathan Flower were nominated for Outstanding Direction of a Community Production of a Play and Stewart was also nominated for Outstanding Sound Design in a Community Production. AJ O’Neil was also nominated for Outstanding Performance in a Leading Role in a Community Production of a Play for his portrayal of Remnar Soady and Jeremy Hardin was nominated for Outstanding Performance in a Supporting Role in a Community Production of a Play for his incredible portrayal of Jimmer Negamane.

nary women in a small Yorkshire village who do something extraordinary. When one of their own loses her husband to leukemia, these women-of-a-certain-age rally to raise money by posing nude for a charity calendar. When two friends realize that the annual calendar featuring views of the countryside won't raise nearly enough for their local hospital, they hatch a bold new plan: a calendar featuring them and their friends proudly posing with their crafts, hobbies and nothing else. Their quiet Yorkshire village is quickly thrown into delightful chaos.

“Calendar Girls” also received a number of nominations in addition to its Outstanding Community Production of a Play nod. Director Rosemary Lounsbury was nominated for Outstanding Direction of a Community Production of a Play and Outstanding Performance in a Leading Role in a Community Production of a Play nominations went to Jayson Andrews for her portrayal of Ruth and Michaela Andruzzi for her portrayal of Celia.

Andruzzi won this award two years ago for her portrayal of Martha in the Village Players production of “Who’s Afraid of Virginia Woolf?”

The New Hampshire Theatre Awards are scheduled to take place on Saturday, Jan. 31, at the Capitol Center for the Arts in Concord.
