LRTC student Kaleb Chase wins statewide collision repair technology competition

BY JOSHUA SPAULDING

WOLFEBORO — When he competed in the SkillsUSA collision repair technology state competition at Nashua Community College last month, Lakes Region Technology Center student Kaleb Chase did not think he had done terribly well.

As it turns out, he did just fine. The junior took home top honors at the state competition, allowing him to move on to the SkillsUSA Championships at the beginning of June in Georgia.

“I was shocked when I got the gold, I was not confident in my work at all,” he said. “I was on auto pilot the whole time. Screwed up on my Bondo twice, too much hardener once and too little hardener another time.”

However, the work that he did across three stations and on a 30-question test was enough to garner him the top spot in the competition.

Chase noted that the students competed in three different stations. The first was working out a dent using hand tools, the second was different types of welding and the third was measuring using a tram gauge.

In the first station, Chase and his fellow competitors had to properly clean the panels, paint and sand down the panel and use body filler correctly with the proper technique. In the welding station, they had to do super thin plug welds along with butt welds and lap welds and the final station had them measuring between different bolts set up on a piece of metal. Then they had to complete a 30-question final exam and everything was timed and judged individually.

And while Chase has proven adept at collision repair technology and plans to take collision tech two next year in his senior year, he does have a different career path in mind, noting the collision repair is something he can always fall back on.

Prospect Mountain recognized by Google for innovative learning practices

ALTON — Prospect Mountain High School is proud to be recognized by Google as a Google for Education Reference Institution.

This designation highlights our excellence and innovation in using Google tools—such as Google Workspace for Education Plus, Gemini, and Chromebooks—to create innovative and effective teaching and learning environments that unlock the potential of every K-12 student.

A Google for Education Reference Institution (or Reference School/University) is a prestigious, invite-only designation recognizing exceptional, system-wide use of Google tools to drive student success. These schools lead by example, hosting visitors, sharing best practices, and mentoring other educators.

Google awards this status to both K-12 schools (Google Reference Schools) and higher education institutions

(Gemini for Education Reference Universities). To be considered for an invitation, an institution must typically meet the following requirements:

- Demonstrate deep, system-wide adoption of tools like Google Workspace for Education and Chromebooks.
- Integrate advanced features, such as Gemini for Education and NotebookLM.
- Show high levels of staff professional development, including holding Google Certified Educator or Trainer credentials.

Schools benefit from the designation by being granted early access to test new Google for Education products and AI features before they are released to the general public, being featured in the public Google for Education Director as a model of best practices, and through knowledge sharing opportunities such as on-site visits, events and workshops.

Community welcomes new business to Alton Bay

ALTON — The Alton Business Association was proud to join the community on May 8 in celebrating the grand opening of a new ice cream shop, Dottie & Hazel's Bayside Scoops, the newest addition to the waterfront community of Alton Bay on Lake Winnepesaukee.

Located at 18 Mount Major Highway in Alton Bay, the shop is perfectly situated for both locals and visitors, accessible by car and by boat along the shores of Lake Winnepesaukee, making it a welcome addition to the community that makes Alton Bay so special.

The ribbon cutting was a festive occasion, complete with bubbles filling the air and a wonderful turnout that included the local fire department, business owners, neighbors, and community members, all coming together to celebrate what promises to be a cherished stop along one of New Hampshire's most beloved lakes.

Dottie and Hazel's Bayside Scoops is also giving back to young readers in the community with their Ice Cream Reading Program for children ages 6 to 10. Kids who read five books earn a free ice cream, a sweet reward that encourages a love of reading all summer long.

Dottie and Hazel's Bayside Scoops, The Sweetest Spot on the Lake, can be found on Facebook for hours, updates, and more.

Smith homer, complete game, lifts Gilford over Bears

BY JOSHUA SPAULDING
Sports Editor

GILFORD — For the second day in a row, the Gilford and Winnisquam baseball teams took to the diamond on Tuesday, May 12, this time in Gilford, and while the end result was the same, a Gilford win, the game had a much different vibe.

On Monday, Gilford won by a 13-0 score and on Tuesday, it took a solo homer in the bottom of the sixth inning to give Gilford the 1-0 win.

Drew Smith got the start on the mound for Gilford and set the side down in order in the top of the first inning and his counterpart, Carter Lloyd, worked around a base hit from Cohen Elliott in the bottom of the first inning to set the Golden Eagles down.

Smith then struck out the side in the top of the second inning and Lloyd set the side in order in the bottom

JOSHUA SPAULDING

Drew Smith pitched a complete game and launched the game-winning homer in last Tuesday's game with Winnisquam. Ryan Folan walked to open the bottom of the fourth and Smith singled, but Lloyd retired the next three batters in a row to end the threat.

in order in the top of the fifth inning and Gilford threatened again in the bottom of the inning. Carson Anthony reached on an error and Hazelton singled on a bunt. Both runners moved up on a sacrifice bunt from Andy Taylor and Elliott reached on a fielder's choice to load the bases. However, Bear catcher Danny Blodgett-Fralic turned a double play to end the inning.

Jordan Hill singled with one out in the top of the sixth inning for Winnisquam's first hit of the game and moved to second on a Kellan Hilliker sacrifice

Laci may need some dental work down the line, so her future family should be prepared to keep an eye on her dental health and continue with any care she may need. With the right support, she'll continue to thrive.

If you have a soft spot for the quieter ones and the patience to let her blossom at her own pace, Laci will reward you with a loyal, loving companionship—and maybe a few silly moments along the way.

Meet Laci - One half of the Dachshund Duo

Laci is a beautiful long-haired dachshund mix with a gentle soul and a touch of shyness that only makes her more endearing. She may take a little time to warm up to new people, but with patience and kindness, her sweet personality truly begins to shine.

Scrapy does have a seizure disorder that is currently well-managed with medication. Because of this, his future family will need to be comfortable continuing his medication routine and staying on top of his care to keep him feeling his best. Young actors bring Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" to Wolfeboro WOLFEBORO — Perform It! Stage Company brings "Twelfth Night," a story of misplaced love, mistaken identities, drunken antics, and comical revenge, to the stage at the Wolfeboro Town Hall; Directed by Gwen Dudley, with original music by Christopher Dudley. Performances will take place for one weekend only: May 22, 23, and 24.

Between musical themes for each character, gossiping narrators, and incredible actors, this production will be easily accessible and enjoyable for both seasoned Shakespeare buffs, as well as those who could barely make it through "Romeo and Juliet" in high school English class.

"Shakespeare never set out to write books," says director Gwen Dudley. "His works are meant to be enjoyed on the stage."

Perform It! Stage Company has brought Shakespeare's works alive in Wolfeboro, and in the hearts of its students, since 1994. With a goal to create a collaborative learning experience that can help home-schooled youth grow in character, gain self-confidence, and learn clear communication skills. This educational theater company gives students, their families, and general audiences an opportunity to experience classic theater.

"Twelfth Night" is a timeless Shakespearean laugh-out-loud comedy. One disguise leads to a disastrous love-triangle and a wild start to a marriage; and with one drunken puppeteer at the wheel, practical jokes are taken to the extreme and an orderly household is turned on its head. "After working with such a heavy, serious, play last year, I decided that we should do something that was truly outrageous and fun," says director Gwen Dudley.

Performances will take place at Wolfeboro Town Hall on Friday, May 22 at 10 a.m. and 6:30 p.m.; Saturday, May 23 at 6:30 p.m.; and Sunday, May 24 at 2 p.m. Tickets are $10 and are available for purchase at performitstagecompany.com/ticket or at the door. Tickets can also be reserved by emailing tickets@performitstagecompany.com.

Alton Garden Club members learn about edible gardening

ALTON — The Alton Garden Club's April meeting welcomed spring with member Lisa Hynes' timely presentation entitled "Lean into Edible Gardening – Baby Steps to Growing Your Own Food."

Hynes, a certified kitchen garden coach and consultant, spoke about edible annuals, perennials and shrubs, both native and foreign, that can be grown here in New Hampshire. She recommended that beginner gardeners start with the easiest and quickest things to grow, such as microgreens, sprouts, herbs and salad greens. Lisa displayed photos of several vegetable gardens, mostly in raised beds, and commented on the importance of garden location, soil preparation, timing of plantings, fertilizing, watering, fencing and companion plantings.

Following Hynes' program, Kelly Sullivan presented the Horticulture Moment. Sullivan praised the UNH Cooperative Extension as an invaluable resource for New Hampshire gardeners. She advised that they are available to analyze soil samples or to answer agricultural questions - lawn, garden or tree care - by calling them at the number found on their website.

Following the presentations we enjoyed refreshments and had time to socialize with our Garden Club friends. The April meeting was just the first of many informative and fun programs. Watch for Baysider articles for news of upcoming meetings and see our blog at altongardenclub.com for a preview of our exciting line-up.

SALMON PRESS, THURSDAY, MAY 21, 2026

When technology creates opportunity

In small-town communities, it is easy to assume that cutting-edge educational innovation only happens in large suburban districts or elite private schools with massive budgets and sprawling campuses. That is why Prospect Mountain High School's recent recognition by Google as a Google for Education Reference Institution deserves real attention and pride.

This is not simply a technology award. It is recognition that students in Alton and the surrounding communities are receiving an education connected to the tools, skills, and collaborative environments shaping today's workforce and tomorrow's opportunities.

The designation is invite-only and recognizes schools that demonstrate exceptional system-wide use of Google educational tools, including Google Workspace for Education, Chromebooks, Gemini, and other advanced learning technologies. More importantly, it recognizes schools that use those tools effectively to improve teaching and student learning, not merely to appear modern.

That distinction matters.

Technology by itself does not guarantee better education. A laptop sitting unopened on a desk accomplishes little. Smartboards and software subscriptions mean nothing without teachers who understand how to integrate them thoughtfully into classrooms. What separates strong schools from average ones is not the hardware. It is the willingness of educators to adapt, learn, and continually improve how students engage with information and ideas.

Prospect Mountain's recognition reflects that deeper commitment.

The school's inclusion among Google's recognized institutions suggests a culture where professional development is taken seriously and where educators are willing to grow alongside rapidly changing technology. Staff members earning Google certifications and embracing advanced educational tools demonstrates something important: learning does not stop with students. The adults in the building are learning too.

That mindset is increasingly essential.

Today's students are entering a world where digital literacy is no longer optional. Employers across nearly every field now expect workers to collaborate online, manage digital information, adapt to evolving technology, and think critically about artificial intelligence and information sources. Whether students eventually become mechanics, nurses, teachers, small business owners, engineers, or tradespeople, technological fluency will likely play some role in their future careers.

Rural schools sometimes face unfair stereotypes suggesting they lag behind larger districts in innovation or opportunity. Achievements like this help challenge that narrative. Students in the Lakes Region deserve access to the same modern tools and forward-thinking educational approaches available anywhere else, and Prospect Mountain's recognition shows that local schools can compete at a very high level.

At the same time, schools must continue balancing innovation with common sense and human connection. Technology should support education, not replace the relationships that remain at the center of meaningful learning. The best classrooms will always involve teachers who inspire curiosity, encourage confidence, and help students navigate challenges both academic and personal.

Artificial intelligence and digital tools are evolving at astonishing speed, and schools everywhere are still determining the best ways to use them responsibly. That reality understandably creates concern among some parents and educators. Questions about screen time, attention spans, academic honesty, and overreliance on technology are valid and deserve thoughtful discussion.

But refusing to engage with these changes is not a realistic option either.

The stronger approach is exactly what schools like Prospect Mountain appear to be doing: learning how to use emerging technology intentionally, responsibly, and in ways that genuinely benefit students.

One of the most encouraging aspects of this designation is the opportunity for collaboration and leadership. Google Reference Institutions are expected to share best practices, host visitors, and help mentor other schools. That means Prospect Mountain is not simply participating in innovation. It is helping shape it.

For a local public high school in the Lakes Region, that is an accomplishment worth celebrating.

Recognition alone is never the final goal in education. Student growth, confidence, and long-term success remain what matters most. But honors like this remind communities that important, forward-looking work is happening every day inside local classrooms.

And in an era where public education too often receives criticism without enough appreciation, it is important to pause and recognize excellence when it appears close to home.

LETTERS FROM EDWIN

Seasonal

I worked all day today getting a customer's place ready for her arrival back north from Florida next week. The housekeeper had been there earlier in the week and the grounds guys also. It looked pretty darn good when I walked down the drive. There were some maple blossoms strewn around but I would blow them away later if I had time.

Some of the things that I expected to do were already done so I just moved down my list. First, I put up all the flower boxes and pots after pulling out last year's remains and tossing them in the woods. I did the same to the terraced flower beds. After finishing all the horticultural endeavors, I hooked up all the hoses and got them running nicely. Then I got to setting out all the deck furniture that I could carry by myself.

By this time, it was time to take a break. The sun was high and so was the temperature so off came my vest and hat. I continued moving things out of storage in the garage. I kept walking by the blower machine and thinking how she'd love to see everything nice a clean.

I didn't have a lot of time left, and the hostas were coming up. So far, they were perfect. She loves her hostas, and she has them lining her driveway and walkways. All different kinds.

Every year, there is a battle over the hostas. You see, she's not the only one who loves hostas. Deer do too. Only they don't like looking at them, they like eating them. Needless to say, she's always coming up with new things for me to spray or put around them to disincentivize the herbivores from destroying her ornamentals. Last year she came across something that worked really well.

It wasn't supposed to freeze so I had stored it in the cellar furnace room. The garage has zero heat. I went to where I always stored this type of stuff over the winter and it was totally cleaned out. Looking at my watch, I could see that I wouldn't have time to get to the store and back and still have time to complete my desired tasks, so I pondered my situation and remembered that there was another such hideaway under the new side of the house.

Entering that little hideout under the stairs, I found all the missing paint and products that don't appreciate being frozen. Thank you, Lord. I grabbed the stuff and headed up and out to get to work, shaking it as I went. Soon I was spraying the smelly stuff on all the sprouts. I certainly wouldn't want to eat anything that smells like that. And my smeller doesn't work much anymore.

It wasn't long before the thing clogged up. I couldn't get it to unclog, so I came up with a plan B. Find another sprayer. There had to be one. I finally came up with two bleach sprayers that I could mix their contents and get one that I could use. That one worked for about the same amount of time as the first one, and I'd only gotten to about a quarter of the plants.

Not wanting to waste any more time on sprayers, I dribbled the stuff on every sprouting hostas in her yard. It wasn't as efficient as a sprayer, but I'll bet it'll smell so bad that it'll be a while before they need a touch up, and by then I'll have a real sprayer.

I don't have much confidence in those little sprayer things. Seeing as they have become disposable items, I'm sure that the engineers have designed them to work just a little longer than the quantity of whatever there is in the container. That doesn't allow much use for someone like me who tries to recycle everything. Recycled sprayers never last long, and it ain't worth your while to take them apart to clean them.

After dousing all the plants and cleaning up the sprayer mess, there wasn't any time to do anything else. I checked the place out, locked all the doors and set the alarm. So much for the first day of the season. It was a good start. Next week I'll have another chance to pick away at the list that never seems to end until everything I just did today gets undone again in the fall.

The quiet things we carry home

There's a certain sound to Memorial Day in small towns.

It's the distant thump of a bass drum echoing down Main Street. The squeak of folding chairs being opened along a parade route. The soft flutter of little American flags planted in damp cemetery grass before sunrise by volunteers who probably didn't tell anyone they were doing it.

When I was a boy, Memorial Day seemed simple to me. It meant a day off from school, a parade, maybe the smell of charcoal grills drifting through the neighborhood by late afternoon. I remember old veterans standing straighter than usual in their uniforms, though I was too young then to notice how some of them walked a little slower than others.

As a kid, you don't fully understand why grown men go quiet during the playing of "Taps."

You just know they do. Now that I'm older, Memorial Day feels different. Not heavier exactly, but deeper. The older you get, the more you realize every town has names carved into stone somewhere. Boys who grew up on the same streets we drive every day. Young men who probably fished the same ponds, sat in the same diners, worked summer jobs, complained about cold winters and muddy springs just like the rest of us.

And then one day, they left home wearing a uniform and never came back.

That's what Memorial Day really asks of us. Not grand speeches. Not perfect patriotism. Mostly remembrance.

Just remembrance.

I think that's why New England towns observe Memorial Day the way they do. There's something modest about it here. The ceremonies are rarely flashy. A few speeches. A prayer maybe. Flowers placed carefully at a monument. Veterans standing shoulder to shoulder, even when age has bent their backs a little.

People still show up. That matters.

I've always noticed how children behave differently during Memorial Day ceremonies too. Even the fidgety ones somehow sense this is not quite like the Fourth of July. There's usually one little boy waving a flag too enthusiastically until his mother gently lowers his arm. Somebody's toddler starts asking questions halfway through the ceremony. Teenagers stand around trying to look uninterested while quietly paying attention anyway.

That matters too. Because remembrance has to keep getting handed down.

The older generation understood that. My father

KIND HEARTS, COLD WINTERS
By CHIPPY

He certainly did, though he wasn't much for emotional speeches. He belonged to that old school of men who believed you showed respect by showing up. Rain or shine. Suit jacket on. Hat off during the anthem. Handshake firm. No fuss made about it.

A lot of those men are gone now.

Truth be told, Memorial Day can feel a little lonely sometimes because of that. You look around town greens and realize many of the veterans who once led the parades now ride quietly in the passenger seat instead of marching. Some are missing altogether.

Time catches everybody eventually.

Still, there's comfort in the traditions staying put even as generations change. The local scout troops still help. High school bands still miss a few notes halfway through the march. Volunteers still place flags at gravesites. Somebody still brings extra donuts nobody asked for.

And somehow that ordinary kindness feels connected to the meaning of the day itself.

Memorial Day was never really meant to glorify war. At least I don't think so. It's about honoring sacrifice while quietly hoping future generations won't have to make the same sacrifices quite so often.

That may sound old-fashioned nowadays. So be it.

I suppose I've reached the age where I don't mind sounding a little old-fashioned now and then. There are worse things a man can be.

Over the years, I've noticed something else too. The people who attend Memorial Day ceremonies most faithfully are often not the loudest people the other 364 days of the year. They're usually steady people. Humble people. Folks who understand gratitude doesn't always need a microphone.

Maybe that's the lesson I keep carrying home from Memorial Day each year.

A healthy town remembers.

Not perfectly. Not dramatically. But sincerely.

It remembers the people who built the community, protected it, sacrificed for it, and never made it back to enjoy the peaceful little moments the rest of us often take for granted. Ballgames. Backyard cookouts. Kids riding bicycles at dusk. A quiet evening with family while the screen door creaks open and shut.

Ordinary American life. The kind of life somebody else once gave up everything to protect.

And every Memorial Day, whether we realize it or not, we carry that gift home with us.

Building Smarter in the Lakes Region

BY DONALD CHAPMAN,
President & Co-Founder,
Strong Tree Engineering

Lake Winnepesaukee and the surrounding Lakes Region are among the most special places in New Hampshire. For many families, these lakes, forests, and small towns are woven into generations of memories - summer cottages, boating, hiking, local businesses, and a way of life that feels uniquely New England.

As more people continue to discover the beauty of the region, demand for housing improvements, renovations, additions, septic upgrades, and new development continues to grow. That growth creates opportunity for homeowners, contractors, local businesses, and the regional economy. But it also creates responsibility.

Recent reports regarding increased cyanobacteria blooms in Lake Winnepesaukee have raised understandable concerns about water quality and environmental pressure throughout the region. While there is no single cause, experts point to a combination of factors including stormwater runoff, aging septic systems, fertilizer use, shoreline disturbance, and increasing development density.

The good news is that growth and environmental protection do not have to be opposing forces.

With proper engineering, planning, permitting, and construction practices, homeowners and developers can improve their properties while still protecting the lakes, wetlands, and natural systems that make this area so valuable in the first place.

At Strong Tree Engineering (STE), we believe responsible development starts with thoughtful design. Whether it's a septic system replacement, a waterfront renovation, drainage improvements, a subdivision in an undeveloped area, or a commercial project, every property exists within a larger environmental ecosystem. Small decisions matter.

- This means:
- Designing stormwater systems that properly manage runoff
 - Supporting septic upgrades that improve long-term environmental performance
 - Preserving natural vegetation and shoreline buffers where practical
 - Helping clients navigate local and state permitting requirements efficiently and responsibly

- Planning projects with both property value, as well as community and environmental sustainability in mind

As engineers, surveyors, and environmental professionals, we also understand that regulations can sometimes feel overwhelming for homeowners. Our role is not simply to "check boxes", but to guide clients through the process in a practical, solutions-oriented way that balances project goals with environmental stewardship.

Personally, this mission is deeply meaningful to me. I spent much of my childhood summers on Lake Winnepesaukee at my Nana's cottage in Moultonborough, and those experiences helped inspire me to co-found Strong Tree Engineering. Protecting the character and health of the Lakes Region is not just professional - it's personal. It's one of the reasons we opened our office in Ossipee. We believe local presence matters. We believe communities benefit when experienced professionals live, work, and invest in the areas they serve.

New Hampshire can continue to grow and prosper while still preserving the natural beauty that defines it. But doing so requires thoughtful planning, responsible investment, and a commitment to building smarter.

The Lakes Region deserves nothing less.

How trees and plants can change the look of a landscape

Spring is home renovation season, and no area of a home is off limits. That includes home exteriors, particularly in regard to landscaping.

Lawn and garden centers draw crowds on spring weekends, as homeowners are anxious to get out in the yard after spending more time indoors over the winter. Plants and trees provide a simple and unique way to transform the look and feel of a property. As homeowners ponder what can be done to freshen up their landscapes, they can consider these benefits of incorporating new plants and trees into their properties.

- Add some pops of color. There's no shortage of colorful plants to add some pops of color to a property.

ty. Azaleas, lilacs, pansies, and, of course, rose bushes can add a wide range of colors to a landscape, providing undeniable and awe-inspiring curb appeal when the plants bloom.

- Native plants won't compromise their neighbors. When choosing plants for a landscape, it's important to pick those accustomed to the local climate. A non-native plant might be able to withstand local conditions, but it also might compromise other trees and plants on a property. When choosing new plants and trees for a landscape, work with professionals at a local lawn and garden center to identify native plants that can handle local weather conditions and do so without putting existing plants on the property in jeopardy.

- Trees can add considerable privacy. Homeowners who don't want fencing, or those whose towns or homeowners' associations won't allow fencing, may look to trees to add the privacy typically provided by fences. The growth rates of trees vary by species, so homeowners who want instant privacy should look for trees that are already tall and/or fast-growing. Needlepoint holly (which reach an average height of 10 to 15 feet) and sweet viburnum (25 to 30 feet at maturity) are fast-growing species to consider when planting for privacy. Green giant arborvitae are a popular privacy tree, as they can reach significant heights and widths within a few years of being planted. And while it's always good to consult a lawn and garden center for advice on the compatibility of a given tree with the local climate, green giant arborvitae are known to thrive in U.S. Department of Agriculture hardiness zones five through eight, which cover a significant portion of the United States.

- Evergreens keep a property green throughout the year. Homeowners who lament the loss of color each fall when their existing trees shed their leaves can keep a property green throughout the winter by choosing evergreen trees for landscapes. The New Jersey Conservation Foundation notes that evergreen trees excel at conserving moisture, which allows them to keep their leaves and maintain that distinct and appealing green color throughout the winter.

Various plants and trees can help homeowners change the look of their landscapes without busting homeowners' budgets.

GILFORD — Gilford pitchers Belle Dow and Lucy Akerstrom combined on a one-hit shutout on Tuesday, May 12, as the Golden Eagle softball team defeated Winnisquam for the second time in as many days by a 7-0 score.

Maddi Metz led off with a double to center and scored on a single from Addison Hodsdon for the 1-0 lead. She eventually scored on a passed ball and Dow worked a walk. Courtesy runner Emma Horton scored when Taylor Marsh homered to left and Gilford had the 4-0 lead after one inning of play.

Dow again set the side down in order in the top of the second inning and Savannah Halligan led off the bottom of the second with a double. Akerstrom reached on an error and a Metz base hit drove in Gilford's fifth run. Two outs later, Marsh doubled to center and Gilford had the 6-0 lead after two.

The event is held at the Georgia World Congress

Center in Atlanta, and it covers more than 1.79 million square feet of floor space, the equivalent of 31 football fields. The philosophy of the SkillsUSA Championships is to reward students for excellence, to involve industry in directly evaluating student performance and to keep classroom training relevant to employers' needs.

Competitions are created, overseen, and judged by nearly 2,000 industry volunteers, each committed to building the next generation of skilled professionals, career-ready leaders and responsible community members on which the future depends.

Local winners advance to district or regional competitions, testing their skills against competitors from other schools. Those winners advance to state competitions each spring, and state gold medalists earn the right to compete nationally at the SkillsUSA Championships each June. Along with gold, silver and bronze medallions, competitors may earn scholarships, tools of the trade, and even job offers right off the competition floor.

At the Lakes Region Technology Center, the collision technology program is designed to provide students the fundamental skills and information used by the auto collision repair technician. Hands-on instruction is directed toward preparing the student to repair the newest "unitized" automobiles. The beginning class teaches fundamental skills including how to form, shape, weld, and finish metals. Painting will also be introduced.

Collision Repair II is a program is designed to provide students further skills in state of the art auto collision repair. Classes will focus on the basics and more advanced techniques to include custom metal work and painting.

Chase will head to Atlanta in June for the SkillsUSA National Leadership Skills competition, where he will compete against other students from around the United States.

A guide to survive lengthy home renovations

Renovations can transform homes into spaces that mirror homeowners' dreams. Regardless of the scope of a project, a home renovation will involve some level of disruption to residents' daily lives. Lengthy, more involved projects may impact daily life considerably.

Renovation timelines vary depending on the scale of the project. Painting may take a week or two, while a kitchen or bathroom remodel may last anywhere from four to 16 weeks. Larger projects like adding a room can take between three and six months, say the experts at John Merrill Homes. Projects also often take longer than expected, as surprises may be in store once homeowners begin peeling back the layers in homes. Homeowners about to embark on lengthy renovation projects can embrace these tips to come through on the other side relatively unscathed.

Choose your timing
The timing of a renovation may have to coincide with contractor availability or having the budget to fund the project. But homeowners should consider life circumstances and season before starting a project. You might not have the energy to take on a project right before the holidays. If kids play on sports teams that require a lot of travel, it might be better to wait until the season winds down. Figure out what you can realistically take on to reduce the likelihood that you'll feel overwhelmed.

Plan accordingly
Creating and sticking to a daily schedule, and knowing what is happening each day, can keep a project on track. It also allows you to determine which days will be the most chaotic. Demolition days can be noisy and messy, and may be those are days when you plan to be away from the house for a few hours.

Store items out of harm's way

Invest in a storage solution for the duration of the renovation. Decluttering and removing items before the project is in full force will make it easier to work and maneuver, and it also means fewer items will need to be cleaned afterwards. Renovations tend to kick up a lot of construction dust, after all.

Designate a safe zone
Establish a room or rooms as work-free areas to which residents can retreat. If multiple rooms are being renovated, you might consider spending time with a family member or friend, or getting a hotel for a short duration until the bulk of disruption dies down.

Lower your standards
Homecooked meals may be your standard most days of the week, but it's alright to be a bit lax when remodeling projects begin. Relying on frozen foods or takeout might be necessary for a little while.

Remodeling projects can be disruptive and stressful, but certain strategies can make it easier to get through projects without too much disruption.

New owners to carry on Molly's mission

WOLFEBORO — Molly the Trolley will celebrate her 40th season this year right where she belongs, serving Wolfeboro and New Hampshire's Lakes Region.

"Molly and I are delighted to announce that the Wolfeboro Trolley Company has been sold to a local couple who plan to continue operating the business in Wolfeboro," said Kathy Fairman, now the former owner of this iconic Wolfeboro small business. "Please welcome Kristin Schepici and Patrick Woods, Molly's new owners."

After vacationing on Lake Winnepesaukee for several years, Schepici and Woods bought a home in Wolfeboro in 2018 and began thinking about acquiring a small business in the community.

Their backgrounds and experience in marketing and communications align well with Molly's business model. They are eager to learn all aspects of the business, including obtaining their commercial driver's licenses, and they understand the important role Molly plays in promoting Wolfeboro as a vacation destination throughout the Lakes Region and in New Hampshire.

As board secretary of the Lakes Region Humane Society, Schepici has demonstrated her commitment to becoming an active member of her community. She and Woods see assuming ownership of the Wolfeboro Trolley Company as another step in that direction, one of their goals in choosing Wolfeboro for their home.

"We are very excited about being in Wolfeboro and especially excited about being part of Molly's future," said Schepici. "While we have many favorite places here, we look forward to getting to know all of Molly's friends."

Molly with new owners Pat Woods and Kristin Schepici.

Company was established in 1987 to help ease traffic congestion and welcome visitors to Wolfeboro. A narrated tour enhanced the attraction and private charters provided a festive and safe means of group transportation for special events and private parties.

Molly's annual Map/Brochure is distributed throughout the Lakes Region and at New Hampshire rest areas as part of the company's collaborative efforts with some eighty local businesses to attract visitors to Wolfeboro.

NH Boat Museum hosts 50th Annual Alton Bay Boat Show

ALTON BAY — The New Hampshire Boat Museum (NHBM) will host the 50th Annual Alton Bay Boat Show on Saturday, Aug. 9 from 9 a.m. to noon at the Alton Bay Town Docks. The free public event marks a half-century of celebrating New Hampshire's freshwater boating heritage and is among the longest-running vintage boat shows in the region.

"What I love about the Alton Bay Boat Show is how it turns the whole waterfront into a living gallery," noted NHBM Executive Director Devon Kurtz. "Every boat carries a story, every owner is eager to share it, and the community leans in with real affection. It's one of the coolest, most heartfelt days on the lake."

At the show, which features classic wooden and early fiberglass vessels (model year 1975 and earlier), spectators are invited to walk the docks, meet the owners, and cast ballots for the People's Choice Award.

"This is one of the most exciting events of the summer for the whole family," said NHBM Executive Director Devon Kurtz. "It's truly a remarkable collection of boats, and spectators can get up close and talk with the owners."

Pre-registration is not required, and docking is first-come, first-served.

"Reaching the 50th anniversary is a significant milestone for the museum and for the boating community across New Hampshire," added Kurtz.

The 50th Annual Alton Bay Boat Show is sponsored by The NASWA Resort, Mundial Group, Inc., and Water's Nook Home Decor and Gifts.

Founded in 1992, NHBM is dedicated to preserving and sharing the state's rich freshwater boating heritage. Through dynamic exhibits, youth programs like Junior Skippers, and on-the-water experiences, NHBM brings New Hampshire's boating story to life for visitors from across the state and beyond.
