The quiet value of pausing at year's end

The days leading up to Christmas often feel suspended in time. Town offices slow, meeting rooms empty out, and inboxes grow quieter. For some, this lull can feel unproductive. For others, it is a welcome breath after a long year of agendas, deadlines, and obligations.

In small towns like ours, where the calendar is usually filled with board meetings, hearings, school events, and community programs, this pause serves a purpose. It gives residents and local leaders alike a chance to step back and take stock before the next cycle begins. Budgets debated earlier in the fall will soon become spending decisions. Projects discussed in committees will move closer to reality. Policies that seemed abstract months ago will begin to shape daily life.

This quieter stretch is not an absence of civic life. It is part of its rhythm.

Over the past year, our towns have wrestled with familiar questions. How do we manage growth without losing character? How do we balance rising costs with the need to maintain services? How do we support schools, roads, and public safety while respecting the limits of household budgets? These are not questions with quick answers, and they do not disappear simply because the calendar turns.

But there is value in pausing before charging ahead.

For volunteers who serve on boards and committees, this week can be a reminder of why they stepped forward in the first place. For residents who attend meetings or follow town issues from a distance, it is a chance to reflect on what feels settled and what still needs attention. And for everyone, it is an opportunity to remember that community progress is rarely dramatic. It is incremental, built through steady participation over time.

In a world that often celebrates constant motion, our towns quietly model something different. They show that slowing down does not mean losing momentum. It can mean gathering strength. Conversations resume in January with clearer priorities. Decisions benefit from perspective gained during the pause.

As the year draws to a close, there is no requirement to solve every problem or plan every improvement. Sometimes, the most responsible thing a community can do is take a moment to breathe, reconnect with neighbors and family, and return ready to engage again.

The new year will arrive soon enough, bringing with it new agendas and familiar debates. When it does, our towns will be better for having taken this brief, intentional pause together.

COURTESY Incoming Interim Town Administrator John Scruton, left, recently met with New Durham department managers for introductions and status briefings. Cecile Chase will be leaving her position after two years as Town Administrator at the end of December.

Contending

That cold feeling is back. It's been coming on for a month or so now. I keep adding more warm cloths to my regular attire, and I'm comfortable for a while, then the temps drop a few more degrees and it's time to up the ante. Or anti as in antifreeze. Only this time it was add one of those quilt lined flannel shirts under my coat. That worked nicely.

But when I came home and took all that external stuff off, the house didn't take up the slack. The stove was going, but it was only 62 in here, and the temps tonight are supposed to get into the teens. The coldest night yet, and we're still burning that cheesy wood. It was free for the taking, and I figured that it would be finished by the end of November. There's still some left in the first pile.

I got the stove started and filled it up with as much as it could take and got the thing roaring. I threw on a pot of potatoes to boil and headed up stairs. In a couple of hours, I remembered to check on things and headed down, the potatoes were nicely cooked, and the house temp was 65. That's better. When it's cold outside, you need to heat up the chimney which in turn tempers the house into the night.

If it were good wood, the water would have boiled away and I'd have been alerted by the smell of burnt potatoes or a smoke alarm. Or both. I threw a few more pieces of wood in and left the spuds on the counter to cool off. They will make good home fries in the morning.

I looked at the weather report. Besides getting up to a foot of heavy snow tomorrow, on Thursday night it's supposed to get down into the single digits. Perfect timing. It always seems to happen on a full or new moon. Another one of those old wise tales it seems to me. But this time it will hit smack dab, exactly.

The schools have already canceled their classes tomorrow so there is no chance of me working anywhere other than taking care of the snow around my house. Today I did last minute car prep and pulling the windshield wipers out so they won't be stressed by the heavy snow. I usually forget to do that on the first storm.

I got a call from the mountain today and I'll be working there next Saturday, and then if it stays cold, I may have work the next week. The big question is will there be people coming to ski? If they do, there will be some need for me to be there. It could be a good thing. There certainly haven't been many sick teachers so far this year.

Yesterday was a wet and sloppy day so I didn't mind staying inside. I've been using an old amp that I bought back in the late seventies. It's only sixty watts into one 12-inch speaker, so for bass, it's pretty much a practice amp. One of the reasons I bought it was that it had a sub-woofer output. A couple years ago I picked up a 700-watt twelve inch powered sub-woofer to plug into it and now it moves some air. My amp is still only two small boxes big.

I leave these things in the car, not wanting to haul all my equipment in and out of the cellar every gig. Last winter, when it was really cold, my amp wouldn't work until it warmed up. After realizing that, I would take it into the cellar and all remained fine. The amp has been working fine ever since. Until last gig. It was acting strange, going in and out most of the night and by the end was quietly distorting like a pedal with a dying battery.

Knowing it's history, and a lot about how these electronic wonders work, I brought it in the house and ordered a full set of electrolytic capacitors for it. It had to be them, probably only one, but instead of troubleshooting which one, I replaced all four. Heck, they've been working for 45 years.

I was quickly reminded why I stopped fixing electronics. I can't see. LASIC fixed my distance vision while destroying my near. I managed.

The amp sounds swell. Again.

Thank you to the community for supporting Festival of Trees

To the Editor:

The Alton Business Association is proud to share that this year's Festival of Trees was a wonderful success, thanks to the incredible support of our community. With generous participation from local businesses, families, and volunteers, we were able to raise $1,700 for the Mrs. Santa Fund through Alton Community Services (ACS).

The Mrs. Santa Fund is part of ACS's seasonal outreach: families in need with children age 17 and under can sign up to receive holiday assistance.

We extend special thanks to everyone who donated decorated trees, contributed raffle items, volunteered, or attended the event. Your generosity raises critical funds, supports the community, and spreads holiday cheer throughout Alton.

The Alton Business Association is proud to partner with ACS in bringing this tradition to the community and looks forward to celebrating again next year.

Former Belknap County Attorney honored by NH Women’s Bar Association

CONCORD — Former Belknap County attorney Lauren Noether is the 2025 recipient of the New Hampshire Women’s Bar Association Marilla M. Ricker Achievement Award. Named after the first female attorney in New Hampshire, the award is given annually to a woman attorney who has achieved professional excellence and paved the way to success for other women lawyers, or advanced opportunities for women in the legal profession, and/or performed exemplary public service on behalf of women.

Lauren Noether has been an advocate for women and victims of violence throughout her life and career. As a 19-year-old journalism major and co-captain of the women’s track team at the University of Maine, she was a leader and spokesperson in a multi-year effort to overturn a university ban on women athletes, using new state of the art, weightlifting equipment. This incident of discrimination, and the subsequent intensive effort to overturn the ban received national attention as a potential Federal Title IX test case, and had a profound impact on Noether — inspiring her interest in law, justice, and public service.

After serving as a VISTA (Volunteer in Service to America) for the Blackfeet Indian tribe in Montana, Noether attended and graduated from Franklin Pierce Law Center (now UNH Law) in 1982

nia Police Department. Her career as a prosecutor spanned more than 30 years, including being the first woman in NH to serve a term as County Attorney. She served in that role for almost 14 years, having been elected by the citizens of Belknap County six times. She left Belknap County to serve as a Senior Assistant Attorney General with the New Hampshire Department of Justice in their Environmental, and Consumer Protection, bureaus. Noether was known as a formidable litigator having personally tried over 175 felony jury trials, and also as a staunch defender and advocate of the rights of victims, especially women and children.

Noether played a lead role in the effort to establish the Child Advocacy Center of Belknap County which is dedicated to pursuing the truth in child abuse cases and coordinating social services for child victims through community partnerships and collaboration. She was also a founding mother of New Beginnings Without Violence and Abuse, which provides 24/7 supports to victims of domestic and sexual violence. Both organizations have pioneered efforts to lessen the impact of trauma for women and children, particularly those victimized by criminal acts. She has also served as a foster parent, and tutor for refugee elementary school students.

The award was presented at the NH Women’s Bar Associations 28th annual fall reception in front of 150 attorneys, judges and guests. Former Belknap County Victim Witness Coordinator Barbara Belmont was joined by Cornerstone Family Resources Social Worker Linda Juranty and NH Women’s Bar Association President Katherine Hedges in presenting the Marilla

M. Ricker Achievement Award to Attorney Noether. In accepting the award, Lauren stated she was deeply honored to receive this recognition. Her remarks emphasized unity and purpose in the profession and in communities.

“We find ourselves in the most polarized times I have ever witnessed,” she said. “Yet the humanity we share outweighs our differences. We have common goals and aspirations at the most basic levels. When we work toward these goals together, we achieve amazing things.”

Noether concluded her remarks by calling on attendees to engage meaningfully in their communities.

“Find a way to contribute to building community and connectedness. Don’t be deterred by seemingly concrete obstacles — they’re all illusions that can be lifted by through relationships and connected,” she said.

Noether resides in Tilton with her husband Ken.

Toy types to avoid when gifting kids under 5

The holiday season presents plenty of opportunities to spread cheer and bring joy into the lives of others. That's particularly true for parents, grandparents, aunts, and uncles of young children. Few things are more enjoyable come the holiday season than watching a youngster's eyes light up upon receiving a sought-after gift.

Well-meaning adults and even older kids anxious to give a younger sibling or cousin a coveted gift must remember to keep safety in mind when shopping for especially young children. Certain toys may pose a threat to children age five and under. As holiday shoppers begin to search for gifts for children in that age group, they might want to avoid the following types of toys.

· Toys with lots of small pieces: Toys with small, detachable pieces can be hazardous to kids age five and under because kids might intentionally or mistakenly put the tiny pieces into their mouths, which increases their risk of choking. Legos are a wildly popular gift come the holiday season, but it's important that shoppers read the package and purchase a Lego set that's age-appropriate. According to a recent report from Consumer Product Safety Commission, 9 percent of toy-related injuries in kids age four and younger occurred while the children were playing with building sets. Though building sets provide a host of benefits, not the least of which is the fun children get from playing with them, it's imperative to purchase age-appropriate sets.

· Toys with electronic component: Toys with electronic components can pose a number of dangers to children five and under. Such products can heat up, potentially causing burns. And wire coverings can fray over time and thus expose children to electrical currents. When shopping for children five and younger, skip toys with an electrical component.

· Motorized gifts: Motorized gifts like scooters, cars and non-traditional bicycles also pose a threat to children five and younger. Motorized gifts may reach speeds that kids cannot safely manage, as youngsters' motor skills are not fully developed by age five.

· Toys with sharp points: Sharp points also pose a threat to children five and younger. Kids can easily suffer lacerations, eye injuries or other issues that pose a threat to their physical safety when playing with toys with sharp points or edges. Toys with soft, rounded edges and no points are ideal for children age five and under.

· Projectile toys: Toys that shoot projectiles pose a danger to children and anyone who happens to be in the room with youngsters playing with such items. Eye injuries and bruises are two injuries that can occur when children five and under play with projectiles.

The chance to light up a child's eyes with the perfect gift is part of what makes the holiday season such a special time of year. But it's imperative that shoppers find age-appropriate toys for children.

Did you know?

Drunk and drug-impaired driving is illegal in all 50 states and across Canada. Unfortunately, instances of driving under the influence of a substance seem to increase during the holiday season. According to recent data from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, 29.8 percent of all fatal car accidents between 2018 and 2022 (the most recent for data) involved a drunk driver. Fatal crashes involving drunk driving are about 27 percent more common during holiday periods than other times of the year. Nighttime driving during the month of December tends to be particularly dangerous. Almost half of drivers involved in fatal crashes between the hours of midnight and 2:59 a.m. were intoxicated, according to data from December 2023. Thirty percent of drivers involved in fatal traffic crashes between the hours of 6 p.m. and 5:59 a.m. were intoxicated. The NHTSA reminds people that impaired driving is deadly. Drive Sober or Get Pulled Over and If You Feel Different, You Drive Different - Drive High Get a DUI are NHTSA campaigns instituted during the holiday season that are followed up with increased enforcement by police. Holiday celebrants should always plan for a sober ride home from parties or holiday dinners if they plan to drink or consume other substances that can cause impairment.

Leadership development program connects State Capital with Lakes Region governance

LACONIA — A dynamic, full-day leadership program successfully bridged the gap between state and local government for participants, offering a rare, integrated look at policy, governance, and civic engagement across New Hampshire.

The day began in Concord with a private tour of the NH State House led by Virginia Drew, Director of the Visitors Center. This was followed by a high-level briefing on policy and leadership featuring an exclusive visit with Gov. Kelly Ayotte and insights from Assistant Secretary of State, Paula Penney. These sessions provided a crucial understanding of state-level policy development and executive leadership.

Following lunch, the program shifted its focus to local governance with a trip to the Lakes Region. The delegation was welcomed to the City of Laconia by Interim Mayor Charlie St. Clair at the Laconia Fire Department. Discussions centered on the future of the city, featuring City Manager Kirk Beattie who addressed Laconia's history, challenges, and vision. Mayor-Elect Mike Bordes provided further insight into the unique challenges and opportunities facing the broader Lakes Region.

The day concluded with an inspiring Granite State Challenge session led by Donna Kuethe, a board member and program alumna, emphasizing the importance of continued civic participation. The program successfully met its goal of showcasing the interconnectedness of governance, from the historic State House to the practical challenges of municipal leadership, fostering a deeper commitment to civic engagement among attendees.

Holiday Gift & Shopping Guide

Experiential gifts for everyone on your list

Gift exchanges are a hallmark of the holiday season. Individuals spend weeks making lists and shopping for items they believe recipients will appreciate. However, this holiday season shoppers may want to change up their gift-buying strategy to focus less on material offerings and more on experiences. A recent survey from Get Your Guide found 92 percent of Americans prefer to receive an experience over a physical gift during the holiday season. In addition, Deloitte's 2024 survey of more than 4,000 consumers in the Special partners

Experiences can strengthen relationships and intimacy. Possible gift ideas include spa days, cooking classes for two, a weekend travel getaway, or tickets to a theater performance or concert. The Amex Trendex 2024 survey found that 38 percent of people plan to give an experience to a significant other.

Children and families

Families already may be out and about, and parents of young children may appreciate experiences more than additional toys and games that are already filling the house. Annual passes to zoos, museums or aquariums can keep families occupied year-round. Children might Experiential gifts focus on fun, creating memories and reducing waste. Such gifts also tend to be more economical in the long run. The holidays are often filled with excess, and experiential gifts can put the focus back on joy and spending time together.

Teens and young adults

Teens are big on experiences over material gifts. According to TD Bank's 2024 survey, Gen Z leads the trend in experience-first gifting, with 68 percent preferring experiences. Examples of good experiential gifts for this demographic include escape room experiences, concert tickets, adventure sports like indoor rock climbing, subscription services

United States found that spending on experiences during the holidays is expected to rise by 16 percent year-over-year, reaching an average of $735.

The girls have been working hard every day we’re together in the weight room or at the rink.” The Knightwolves will be led by captains Cassidy Libby, Jenna Sykes and Avery Gilpatrick. Sykes returns to her captain role as a senior and her focus is on building a successful team and her leadership will be important for success as the new players get up to speed. Joining her on defense, Gilpatrick continues to impress with her solid defensive play, good decision making and vision. Libby will work up front and continues to impress with her intensity, leadership and focus on and off the ice. Emma Ouellette will also be a key offensive piece of the puzzle, as she uses her quick reflexes on the faceoff dot and her good decision making make her a valuable asset to the team. The Knightwolves will also be welcoming five ninth graders to this year’s team, including three from Plymouth, Sloane McCarthy, Jillian Rubbe and Kylie Vodvarka. “I have high expectations for this group of new players,” Duplinsky said.

“They are all eager to continue learning the game and I am looking forward to seeing how they perform and progress this season.” The Knightwolves play two games each with Bishop Guertin, Pinkerton and St. Thomas and single games with Hanover, Concord, Manchester Central, Bedford, Lebanon, Bishop Brady, Oyster River, Berlin-Gorham, Exeter, Keene, Salem and Souhegan. The Knightwolves opened the season with a 12-2 win over Bishop Guertin on Saturday, Dec. 13. “I was glad to see them successfully implementing our game plan, skills and systems we have been working on in practice,” Duplinsky said. “We still have a lot to work on but this was a great way to start the season as a team.” Ouellette and Libby scored two goals each early in the first period, putting the Knightwolves up 4-0 right away. After a Bishop Guertin timeout, the hosts fought hard for the rest of the period, but the Kingswood-Prospect-Plymouth defense was able to keep them outside and limit the shots. Aliyah Arsenaault made some timely saves to prevent Bishop Guertin from building momentum. In the second and third period, the Knightwolves made good decisions with the puck and found passing lanes to maintain puck control and extend the lead. Ouellette and Libby led the team in scoring with great support from the defensive core of Sykes, Gilpatrick and Adelle Harrington, who generated scoring opportunities by setting up the play from the defensive side. All three Plymouth girls got on the scoresheet, with McCarthy and Rubbe each scoring their first high school goals and Vodvarka picked up an assist. The Knightwolves will be in action on Monday, Dec. 22, at home against Hanover at 7:10 p.m. Sports Editor Joshua Spaulding can be reached at 279-4516, ext. 155 or josh@salmonpress.news.

Everyone had fun at the Breakfast with Santa event over the weekend at New Durham School, especially Santa, who reported that this year the top item requested was a hover board. There were some puppy and make-up requests, too, and since Santa seemed exceptionally jolly, one father tried his luck and asked for an excavator. Proceeds went to the sixth grade fund.
