Mentor Michelle Kelley said she used to vend at craft fairs herself and said she thought it would be a great thing to have at the school and raise money. After seven years it has become a big success.

"The craft fair has expanded and taken off," Kelley said. "It's great, it brings the community in."

Kelley said the day was going great. She said this is the first year that every vendor who signed

Gilford DPW responds to first storms of the season

BY ERIN PLUMMER

GILFORD — Plows were back on the roads for the first snowstorms of the season in a week that saw an overturned vehicle and a generous donation.

The area saw its first significant snowfall of the season on Thanksgiving. According to the National Weather Service, the Thanksgiving storm brought snow totals of four inches measured in Laconia to 5.2 inches measured in Belmont.

DPW Director Meghan Theriault talked about the storm response during her update to the selectmen during the Dec. 4 meeting. She said crews were out on Thanksgiving clearing snow off the roads.

"Huge thank to all the DPW staff who missed Thanksgiving with their families," Theriault said. "I just wanted to mention that this is the stuff we hope doesn't happen, and it does and they miss a holiday. They were all here all afternoon and evening."

Public Works crews did get to enjoy a Thanksgiving dinner thanks to a local business owner.

Theriault thanked Mary Breton of Lakeshore Market and Deli, who donated an entire turkey dinner with all the fixings to the DPW.

Board Chair Gus Benavides said he wanted Breton to receive a formal recognition for her generosity.

Just hours after that meeting crews were back out to clear the roads after another few inches fell on the area. According to the DPW's Facebook page, crews were back out at 2:30 a.m. to address slippery roads.

BARNSTEAD — Barnstead residents, we need your help! Please nominate a worthy individual for the Gordon Preston Outstanding Community Service Award as referenced below:

Mahatma Gandhi said, "The best way to find yourself is to lose yourself in the service of others."

Gordon Preston's life epitomized this quote. He was devoted to serving the community for the benefit of all. When Gordon arrived in Barnstead many years ago, he immediately immersed himself into volunteering within the community. He continued to generously serve this town for the rest of his life. Gordon was welcoming of all newcomers to Barnstead and inspired others to get involved and change our small town for the better. He believed that one person could make a difference and his life's work exemplified that.

In the spirit of Gordon's unwavering service to our community, The Gordon Preston Outstanding Community Service Award is presented to a person who embodies the same type of dedication to The Town of Barnstead. This award recognizes the unsung hero or heroine that continually gives their precious time to benefit our community as a whole. It is a small way to say thank you for all you do.

The Gordon Preston Outstanding Community Service Award ceremony debuted at The Gordon Preston Celebration of Life Gathering in 2019 and we are committed to continuing this award each year in Gordon's honor.

Strong core returns to the court for Gilford girls

BY JOSHUA SPAULDING
Sports Editor

GILFORD — Coach Scott Currier enjoys coming to practice every day and that has him feeling pretty good about his Gilford girls' basketball team this winter.

"I have been happy with the work ethic of the group and their willingness to put the effort into getting better," Currier said. "They are also a great group that takes coaching very well and want to compete."

"So, in short, it is fun to come to practice every day and see where we go," he continued.

The Golden Eagles return a strong group of athletes that saw significant playing time over the course of last season and will be counted on to produce in a big way this year. The group includes Olivia Keenan, Leah Davignon, Lianna Keenan, Grace Kelly and Skye Maltais.

"This group saw significant playing time last year and make up a significant part of our rotation," Currier said. "They will be looked upon to lead us on the floor but also to provide leadership for our team."

The Golden Eagle coach notes that Grace Scott and Abby Watson are both players who are poised for larger roles this season after both had great work during the preseason. The team is also excited about the addition of Gracey LeBlanc, who will strengthen the play underneath and brings plenty of toughness to the table. Additionally, Haley Corum, Emma Horton and Taryn Limanni have all started to carve out the roles with the team.

"They are all working hard to get acclimated to how we want to play every day and showing great strides because of it," Currier stated.

After earning a post-season berth last year, the Golden Eagles are looking to return to the playoffs and take another step forward.

"We are truly taking it on a day to day basis with a goal of getting better every day, working to improve our work as a team and compete at a high level," the Golden Eagle coach continued. "We would love to make our way back to the tournament, but we also recognize that there is a ton of work to be done between that and the start of the season."

The Golden Eagles will play two games each with Belmont, Winnisquam, Conant and Inter-Lakes and single games with White Mountains, Somersworth, Stevens, Monadnock, Hopkinton, Prospect Mountain, Berlin, St. Thomas and Newfound.

The Golden Eagles are set to open the season on Friday, Dec. 13 at 6 p.m. at White Mountains Regional and will be hosting Belmont on Wednesday, Dec. 18, at 6:30 p.m.

Recipient of a legacy

Katherine Egeler, 103, receives the gold-tipped ebony Boston Post cane from New Durham Selectperson Dot Veisel as Selectman Marc DeCoff looks on. Awarding the canes was part of a circulation-boosting campaign launched in 1909 by the now defunct Boston Post newspaper to honor the oldest citizens of New England towns. Not that much later, in 1921, Katherine Egeler was born, and as New Durham has continued the practice through the years, she was awarded the cane this past weekend for being the town's oldest resident. Having lived through 18 different presidents, Egeler has traveled the world and visited every state in the country. Select Board Chairperson David Swenson read a compilation of interesting events that happened in the year of her birth, such as the invention of the pop-up toaster, the unveiling of the Model T convertible, and "Second-Hand Rose" hitting the top of the charts. A much beloved member of the community, Egeler said she was "honored" to receive the cane and engraved plaque.

“The Best Christmas Pageant Ever” is a true family affair

WOLFEBORO — Not only is the Village Players’ production of “The Best Christmas Pageant Ever” a great show to bring the whole family to see, it is also a family affair on the stage as well, with numerous different families taking part in bringing the story to life.

“The Best Christmas Pageant Ever” focuses on the unruly Herdman children who take over the church Christmas pageant despite having never heard the Christmas story before. The result is an unruly process of trying to get numerous angels, shepherds, wise men and the assorted kids involved in the pageant and audiences get the chance to see just how it all unfolds.

On the stage, there is a whole bunch of families taking part together. For Hannah Long, “The Best Christmas Pageant Ever” is a family affair for the second time. Back in 2018 when the show was last on the Village Players stage, she shared the stage with her brother, Ryan. This time, portraying the show’s narrator, Beth Bradley, she is joined by her mother, Sharon, who plays her on-stage mother, Grace, the reluctant leader of the Christmas pageant.

Laura McKenna also appeared on stage the last time the Village Players presented the show and she returns, this time playing Imogene Herdman, and is joined on stage by her mother, Susan, who plays Mrs. Johnson.

Jeremy Hardin stars as Bob Bradley while his wife Rebecca plays Mrs. Slocum and their daughter Lyra plays Shirley, one of the girls in the Christmas pageant. All three are making their Village Players debut in this production.

Cecilia Hamilton made her Village Players debut in Bye Bye Birdie this past fall and she returns to the stage for the Christmas show as Maxine and brings along her sisters, Charlotte (Alice) and Josephine (Beverly) to join in on the fun.

Samantha Marbury takes the stage as Mrs. McCarthy and is also joined by two of her children, Olivia (Leroy Herdman) and Justus (Ollie Herdman) along with her nephew, Gage (David).

There are also three Reese children on the stage, with Peter Reese playing the son of the church reverend, Elmer Hopkins while Anna Reese plays Claude Herman and Maria Reese plays Hobie.

his debut in this past spring’s production of “Wit.” Now, they are sharing the stage together, as Bayleigh plays Juanita and Ryan plays Reverend Hopkins.

“The Best Christmas Pageant Ever” runs this weekend, with shows at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, Dec. 13, and Saturday, Dec. 14, and at 2 p.m. on Sunday, Dec. 15. Tickets are available at Black’s Paper and Gifts, online at village-players.com or at the door, while they last.

New coach, new faces for Prospect hoop girls

BY JOSHUA SPAULDING
Sports Editor

ALTON — With, no seniors, a new coach and plenty of new faces, the Prospect Mountain girls’ basketball team will look a little different as the new year gets under way.

“The Prospect Mountain girls’ basketball team is a young but talented group, ready to compete and grow together,” said first-year head coach Isiah Anderson. “With a young core and a promising mix of returning talent and newcomers, the T-Wolves are eager to compete and build a strong foundation for the future.”

The Timber Wolves will be led by three players with varsity experience last year, including captain Paige Harding and Madison Miller, both junior guards. Harding brings leadership and court vision while Miller brings a sharp shooting touch and defensive grit.

The other player with significant varsity minutes is sophomore forward Ava Foster, who brings versatility and is a strong presence in the paint at 5’10”.

Also returning with some varsity experience is sophomore combo guard Madelyn Howlett and Anderson expects her to make significant impact with her scoring ability and energy.

Ninth grader Katie Jones brings strong rebounding and scoring potential in her first year while international transfer junior Elena Munoz-Martin who brings depth and quickness to the Timber Wolf backcourt.

The remainder of the roster includes sophomores Emma Foster, Delaney Drolet and Felicity Upton and ninth graders Bailey Beck, Chloe Colby and Peyton McAneney.

The Timber Wolves play a schedule that includes two games each with Newfound, Winnisquam, Somersworth and Berlin and single games with Kearsarge, Raymond, St. Thomas, Inter-Lakes, Gilford, Belmont, Campbell and White Mountains Regional.

The season kicks off on Friday, Dec. 13, at home against Newfound at 6 p.m. and continues on Monday, Dec. 16, at home against Kearsarge at 5 p.m. and at Raymond on Tuesday, Dec. 17, at 6 p.m.

Artificial intelligence: Humanity's smartest frenemy

Artificial intelligence (AI) is like that new kid in town who knows everything from helping you find the best Thai food at midnight to crafting the perfect apology text to your partner ("No, you're right. I'm sorry. I didn't mean to eat the last doughnut"). It's efficient, helpful, and eerily insightful. But as with all new friendships, there's a fine line between awe and mild existential terror.

Let's start with the good stuff. AI is a whiz at handling the mundane. Tedious tasks like sorting emails, balancing budgets, and even diagnosing diseases are no match for the lightning-fast algorithms working behind the scenes. For writers (and would-be procrastinators), AI is like having an over-achieving friend proofread your work and suggest snappier titles. It's also a democratizing force: AI in education, for example, can help students in remote corners of the globe access the same quality resources as those in urban centers. Impressive, right?

But there's a catch. AI is a mimic. It learns by absorbing patterns from mountains of data—which means it's less like a wise sage and more like a parrot with a doctorate. While this mimicry has its perks (who wouldn't want a bot to whip up a dinner recipe based on the random five ingredients left in your fridge?), it also poses a risk. The more we rely on AI, the more human creativity and originality could start to wilt.

Picture this: a world where everyone writes in the same witty, polished, AI-generated tone. Every wedding toast, blog post, and Tinder bio starts to sound suspiciously familiar. Instead of unique voices, we might end up with a global chorus of AI-crafted "perfect" responses. The quirks and idiosyncrasies that make us human—like mixing metaphors or inventing words like "hangry"—could fade into uniformity.

Then there's the "Big Brother" side of AI. While it's not (yet) plotting to take over the world, AI does have a penchant for gobbling up data. Every time you scroll through social media, ask your smart speaker for the weather, or upload that cat video, you're feeding the algorithm. AI knows more about you than your best friend does—possibly even more than you know about yourself. Creepy? Just a smidge.

But before we panic and unplug our devices, it's worth noting that AI isn't inherently good or bad. Like fire or a karaoke machine, it all depends on how we use it. Harnessed wisely, AI can do wonders. But if we lean on it too heavily, we risk trading our humanity for convenience.

So, what's the solution? Balance. Use AI as a tool, not a crutch. Write your own jokes, even if they're cheesy. Read a physical book and scribble in the margins. Embrace the imperfections that make you, you. And if AI starts getting too clever for its circuits, remind it who's boss by pulling out a rotary phone.

In the end, the future of AI is like a choose-your-own-adventure book: thrilling, unpredictable, and potentially disastrous if we stop paying attention. Let's just make sure we're the ones writing the story, not the machines.

LETTERS FROM EDWIN

I've been driving a good long time. Fifty-six years. My first car was powered by a three-cylinder two stroke engine, meaning that I needed to add a can of oil with the gas each fill up. That was before we were allowed to pump our own gas. I needed to trust that the gas station attendant would pour the whole can into the gas tank before putting in the gas or I could destroy my motor. That car screamed like a motorcycle. Its engine was pretty similar.

At that point in my life, I was totally ignorant of things automotive. I was of the "just put oil and gas into the thing" mentality. Check tire pressure now and then, and all was good. One day, while going to school, my car lost lots of power to the point that I turned around and brought it to a repair shop. I didn't know that with that engine, you needed to change the spark plugs every ten thousand miles and one plug had fouled. With only three cylinders to start, it's 38 horsepower diminished to around twenty five.

Those were definitely simpler times. You could pretty much see everything inside the engine compartment, and there was plenty of space to do simple repairs yourself. Even muscle cars had sufficient working space.

One day upon parking my car outside of work, I could smell the aroma of burnt oil, so I opened the hood. There right in plain sight, I saw that the oil pressure sensor was squirting oil all over the engine. Simple fix. At lunch I walked over to the auto parts store and picked up the part. Armed with the adjustable wrench, that came with the cars little tool kit, I swapped out the part and that problem was fixed.

Another thing from the past that has disappeared are tune ups. The points and condenser would only last so long. Being one to stretch the time between replacing parts, I'd try to push these to their max. The points would usually go first. When they did, you could pull them out with a screwdriver, file them down with a fingernail file and replace them using a match book cover as a close enough feeler gauge. That would get you home from the mountains.

Over the years I learned how to do all kinds of auto repairs. Exhaust, brakes, water pumps, alternators, clutches, bearings, and shocks come to mind. Undoubtedly there are more. I was pretty much self-taught. Knowing basic mechanics, with a simple look at the problem, solutions usually came to mind.

That was then. Ain't no more. I had a couple of nineteen 71 cars parked back in the woods that I wanted to restore someday. After having kids and realizing that I'd probably never build that garage, I sold them to someone who would. I'm still somewhat nostalgic, but glad I don't have that dream to attend to.

These days, engine compartments are totally crammed with stuff. Working on them is a nightmare. I cut out an air conditioner part that was in my way as I tried to replace a water hose fitting. There was no way to get my hand in otherwise. The AC didn't work anyway, so now it never will.

My last old pre-96 vehicle sits rusting in the front yard, a virtual storage unit as it's a pickup with a cap. It's been sitting there since it blew a ring and started blowing smoke screens down all the roads. Rebuilding a motor wasn't on my wanted skills list. So now all my vehicles are presided over by their computers, monitoring all their sensors and sending me diagnostic engine fault codes. The dreaded check engine light.

This weekend, I headed off to a gig and after a while looked down and noticed that my temp gauge wasn't reading as usual. The heater was working fine so I figured that it wasn't due to lack of coolant. After stopping to get something to eat, it seemed back to normal. I figured that it must be the temperature sensor.

Going home after the gig, the check engine light came on. Oh dread. The code was for a coolant temperature sensor failure. I'm so glad that the computer verified my diagnosis. I'll go pick up a part and figure out how to replace it. I hope it's somewhat accessible.

Star of Bethlehem

For over two thousand years, the Star of Bethlehem has captivated imaginations and sparked debates among scholars, astronomers, and theologians.

Mentioned in the Book of Matthew, this star guided the Three Kings—wise men from the East—to the birthplace of Jesus. But what was this mysterious star? Was it a supernatural event, a naturally occurring astronomical alignment, or something else entirely? To this day, the Star of Bethlehem remains a radiant enigma in the story of Christmas.

The Magi, often depicted in nativity scenes as three kings, were likely not kings at all but astrologers or priests from regions such as Persia, Babylon, or possibly even as far as China.

They were united by their study of the heavens, seeking divine messages in celestial movements. Guided by the mysterious star, they may have traveled along ancient trade routes, such as parts of the Silk Road, on a journey that could have spanned thousands of miles to their ultimate destination, Bethlehem.

They saw the star as a sign of someone destined for greatness. Their gifts—gold for a king, frankincense, incense used in worship, and myrrh, an embalming spice foreshadowing death—reflected what they believed the star was telling them about this person.

But what exactly was this star that inspired such a journey?

Some believe the star was a miraculous sign, a divine light placed in the sky by God to announce the birth of Jesus. This interpretation aligns with the biblical account but leaves no room for scientific explanation. To those with faith, the star's miraculous nature may be the ultimate answer—a symbol of heaven's intervention in earthly affairs.

Others suggest the star could have been a comet, viewed as an omen in ancient times. A comet's bright and fleeting nature would have made it a striking and memorable sign in the night sky.

Could the Star of Bethlehem have been an exploding star—a supernova? A supernova creates a sudden, brilliant light in the sky that can last for weeks or months. While ancient Chinese and Babylonian astronomers meticulously documented celestial events, there are no surviving records of a supernova occurring during the timeframe of Jesus' birth.

One of the most widely accepted theories is that the Star of Bethlehem was a rare alignment of planets. In 7 BC, Jupiter and Saturn came together in three conjunctions within Pisces's constellation. This phenomenon would have created a strikingly bright light in the sky.

Jupiter, often associated with kingship, and Saturn, symbolizing protection, aligned in Pisces—a constellation some ancient astrologers connected to significant events for the Jewish people. Possibly interpreted as heralding the birth of an extraordinary leader or figure of great importance.

The "Great Conjunction" of Jupiter and Saturn occurs every 20 years, but the rare triple conjunction in Pisces around 7 BC has not happened in the same way since. To ancient astronomers, such alignments were seen as divine messages. This unique conjunction in Pisces might have been linked to significant astrological meaning.

While these theories offer intriguing possibilities, none fully explain the Star of Bethlehem.

If the star was a natural phenomenon, why didn't other cultures widely record it? And how did it appear to "stop" over Bethlehem?

These unanswered questions continue to shroud the star in mystery.

The Magi's connection between the star and the birth of a king raises intriguing questions. Did they draw conclusions from ancient Hebrew texts, astrological insights alone, or a combination?

Their reliance on astrology raises the question: could their journey suggest hidden truths found within the ancient study of Astrology and their influence on earthly events? Their interpretation suggests a deep understanding of celestial symbolism and its potential to foretell significant events.

Whatever its true nature, the Star of Bethlehem remains a symbol of hope and mystery, reflecting humanity's timeless quest for meaning in the cosmos.

Whether a miraculous light or celestial alignment, it represents the pursuit of truth and the willingness to follow where it leads.

As we look to the winter sky this Christmas, we can imagine the Magi doing the same over 2,000 years ago, marveling at the unknown. The Star of Bethlehem, still inspiring awe, invites us to journey—not across deserts, but toward our sense of wonder.

Festival of Trees brings out Alton community

BY ERIN PLUMMER
mnews@salmonpress.news

ALTON — Local individuals, organizations, and businesses contributed brightly decorated trees, wreaths, and even a gingerbread house to help local families during the sixth Alton Festival of Trees.

Trees and wreaths lined the inside of the Gilman Museum on Dec. 7 & 8 for the festival. Visitors could stop by and look at the trees as well as buy raffle tickets for each tree and vote for their favorites.

The event is organized every year by the Alton Business Association and benefits Alton Community Services' Mrs. Santa Fund, which helps families in need during the holidays.

At the end of the event on Sunday afternoon, ABA chair Christy Painchaud and ABA board member Jen McCullough drew the winners for each of the trees. The drawing was recorded by ABA board member Heather Dominick and posted on the ABA's Facebook page.

"We want to thank you guys so much for your participation this year," Painchaud said in the video. "We rely on our local businesses, organizations, Alton residents to donate and decorate trees, so we're very, very happy to continue this tradition for our town."

This year, the festival had 15 entries from different Alton businesses, residents, and organizations. Participants could contribute large and small trees as well as wreaths and garlands. Each tree and wreath was decorated in a different theme, and also included other prizes such as gift cards and other items.

Visitors could also vote for a fan favorite tree. The most votes went to the Local Tree from the ABA, though Painchaud said it should have been on her own.

The event also includes a gingerbread contest. Painchaud said only one entry was submitted but the creator was unable to drop it off due to illness.

The event did receive a gingerbread house donated by two anonymous women from Alton to be raffled off. The small gingerbread house was done in the form of a greenhouse with lights and a Christmas tree inside.

"That is truly amazing, they made this and it's just unreal," Painchaud said.

Painchaud thanked everyone who contributed to the event and gave special recognition to the small businesses that donated items included with the trees.

STORMS

six-wheel plow truck slid off Belknap Mountain Road, going off a corner and landing on its side in a ditch. The driver was uninjured and the truck was towed back to the garage. Pickup trucks covered the rest of that route.
Theriault said during the Dec. 4 selectmen's meeting all winter equipment is in good condition and was ready for the first storm of the season.
Systems were calibrated to deliver the right amounts of salt and liquid deicer. She said they are trying to track that equal amounts of both are being used per storm. Since each of the trucks is different, each vehicle comes with an individual "cheat sheet" of how much salt and liquid to use on each and where to turn the dials.
Benavides asked about the different monitoring systems on each of the trucks. Theriault said the systems are working fantastic.

day. She said sometimes areas get missed for different reasons, such as new drivers who are not familiar with the route or drivers who are tired and might miss an area.
Each of the trucks also comes with video, which is especially helpful in the event of an incident, from reports of a damaged mailbox to an accident. The cameras are also used for public relations with a few photos of the trucks in action going on the department's Facebook page.
"It was always our intention especially working hand in hand with the staff that it would be just a helpful tool so I'm glad to hear it's continued to do that," Benavides said.
"I know there were some concerns about it at first; I'm grateful it's a positive."
Theriault said these tools are not used for discipline.
"It's a resource for us if we need it to be able to respond to things," Theriault said.

How some popular holiday traditions got their start

Will you be baking gingerbread or hanging stockings by the fireplace this holiday season? Perhaps you'll be lighting the menorah or playing a game of dreidel? The holidays are steeped in tradition, some of which are older than celebrants may realize.

Individuals gather during the holidays and participate in various traditions that have withstood the test of time. Most people engage in these traditions or recognize symbols automatically, but it can be interesting to learn how these traditions came to be.

Christmas caroling
The British traditions of wassailing and mumming and the Slavic tradition of koliada were some of the precursors to more modern caroling. People would go door-to-door and recite poetry or sing with the hope of bringing about good fortune or influencing a future harvest, according to Rutgers University. Carolers spread hope and good tidings through song during a time of year when sunlight was limited.
Christmas trees
Pagans once displayed evergreen branches as a reminder that spring would come again, while Romans placed them around temples to honor Saturn, the god of agriculture. Eventually the evergreen was used in conjunction with Christian Christmas celebrations. In the sixteenth century, German Christians put trees inside their homes as symbols of everlasting life.

Santa Claus
Children who celebrate Christmas eagerly await the arrival of a jolly sort who goes by the name of Santa Claus. His origin story stretches back to the third century, when Saint Nicholas became the patron saint of children. Saint Nicholas was a monk in what is modern-day Turkey. It is said that he traveled helping the poor and the sick. History.com says he is believed to have saved three impoverished sisters from slavery by providing them with a dowry so they could be married, and he also provided gifts to children.

Menorah
The menorah is a multi-branched candelabra used in Jewish religious rituals. The menorah is first mentioned in the book of Exodus when the design of the lamp was revealed to Moses by God on Mount Sinai. Many menorahs are seven-branched, but during Chanukah, an eight-branched menorah is used. The Chanukah menorah is modeled after the Tabernacle menorah that corresponds to the eight-day festival. It was used to celebrate the rededication of the Second Temple. The available oil supply was supposed to last one day, but the candles actually burned for eight.
Mistletoe
Kissing under the mistletoe is a holiday season tradition that can lead to some red faces when couples are caught beneath the plant. Norse mythology paved the way for kissing under the mistletoe. Legend has it the gods used mistletoe to resurrect Odin's son, Baldur, from the dead. Baldur's mother, Frigg, the goddess of love, made the plant a symbol of love and vowed to kiss anyone who passed under it. Mistletoe blooms under cold conditions, which is how it became associated with the holiday season.

Yule log
Yule logs were once part of winter solstice celebrations to bring good luck and fortune, but America is where a yule log really caught on as a holiday tradition. In 1966, the WPIX television station in New York City aired a continuous loop of a fireplace burning for three hours with holiday songs playing. It became an annual tradition, says History.com. Some people even serve a cake that looks like a yule log. The Bûche de Noël is a traditional Christmas cake that is especially popular in France.
Holiday traditions continue in full force. Traditions are an enduring component of celebrations and help to unite people from all backgrounds during this special time of year.

GHS craft fair brings crowds

BY ERIN PLUMMER
mnews@salmonpress.news

GILFORD — Artisans and shoppers packed Gilford Middle and High Schools for the annual Gilford High School Holiday Craft Fair.

On Saturday, Dec. 7, GMS and GHS were packed with people for the annual fair raising money for the GHS senior class. The gyms and lower hallways of both schools were filled with tables of many different forms of crafts as was the connecting hallway between both schools and the GHS cafeteria. The GMS cafeteria was turned into a food court with different student organizations selling food for a fundraiser.

“We’ve had a fabulous day,” said co-organizer Meg Jenkins.

She said the doors opened at 9 a.m., and there was already a line going out to the curb. The buildings were filled with people all day.

Jenkins said there were some new vendors this year, including people 3D printed items, gourmet coffee, and popcorn.

All members of the senior class had to sign up for a time to volunteer including setting up on Friday, working during the fair, and helping take down right after it ended.

Class secretary Makenna Clayton said students set up by taping off the areas where tables would go and setting up the tables.

the building at 7 a.m. on Saturday to get things ready before the doors opened.

This year the seniors sold an array of wooden Christmas trees. Class vice president Kendal Heyman said all of the wooden Christmas trees sold out before 11 a.m.

The seniors sold food during the day including their traditional staples such as meatball subs with meatballs provided by Lakeshore Market and Deli, coffee, and Brother’s Doughnuts. They added some new items this year like macaroni and cheese, vegetable rice soup, and gourmet cupcakes from Bella’s Bake Shop.

Class treasurer Ella Kelliher and senior Cailin Tarr said they had just sold out of coffee and doughnuts.

“The kids really rocked it selling items,” Jenkins said.

They also did tasks throughout the day, including delivering food to the vendors.

Tarr said working at the fair was great overall.

New to the fair this year was Maple Fools with Jaime Jenkins of Center Harbor and her mom Marie Beaudet of Sandwich selling several flavors of popcorn. Jenkins said they started with a maple flavor and have branched out into other popcorn flavors such as white chocolate, movie theater butter, peppermint for the holidays, and many others.

Maple Fools Popcorn can also be found at stores such as Moulton Farm in Meredith, E.M. Heath in Center Harbor, the Moultonborough Country Store, Zeb’s General Store in North Conway, and many others.

Beaudet said she used to do craft fairs in the past and tabled at the Gilford fair for many years. She said she talked to the organizers of the GHS fair and they got the opportunity to come to the fair this year.

Jenkins said she enjoyed the fair and meeting up with people she knew.

Emily Wernig sold a variety of pottery pieces as part of her business, Clay Culture Studios. Wernig is a graduate of GHS and first started doing ceramics in art class with teacher Leaman Antone. The class inspired ornaments, and many more. She said the different items give people different choices to select.

“I love making mugs, and I like making seasonal things,” Wernig said. “I like ornaments because it gives you a range of prices.”

Linda Dobson of Claremont does string art for her company LJ’s Family Creations. Each of her creations has shape for an outline with string threaded over nails to fill in the area.

She has been doing this for around eight years, starting with a sailboat craft and continuing to a full time activity starting three years ago.

Each outline is put on wood by a drill press, and she puts in the nails and wraps thread around them.

Many of the pieces are made from old closet doors provided by a local crafter.

Dobson’s pieces can also be found at the Manchester Craft Market at the Mall of New Hampshire and Locally Handmade at the Merrimack Premium Outlets.

This was her second year at the GHS fair and she said she enjoyed it.

“A nice way to end my season,” Dobson said.

Shoppers of all ages strolled the aisles in the Kingswood Regional High School practice gymnasium and throughout the hallways to support the students’ fundraising project. Vendor fees contribute to the cause. A robust crowd is much appreciated.

Second Annual Loft Christmas Show to benefit Lakes Region Children's Auction

MEREDITH — Embrace the joy of the Christmas season in the Loft at the Hermit Woods Winery in Meredith as three local musician favorites join together as a trio to celebrate the season through a mix of holiday classics and original compositions. Come and share what promises to be a wonderful evening of music wrapped around the theme of Christmas presented by artists Katie Dobbins, David Lockwood, and Andriana Gnap. This year's show marks the second annual presentation of a Christmas celebration in song by these musicians. For this year's one-night-only show at the Loft, they're back on stage together with additional musical support from the talents of New Hampshire artist Mike Moran on bass and percussion. Come and experience a special evening of Christmas magic.

In the spirit of the season of giving, 50 percent of show proceeds from ticket sales and tips will be given to the Lakes Region Children's Auction in support of local area children and related charities. So purchase a ticket with family members or friends and come with a joyful and generous heart knowing that you'll be supporting a great local business, three talented local musicians, and the good works of the Children's Auction. In the midst of the Christmas season, come and enjoy some of the music and songs that remind us all of its meaning and purpose.

This special show will take place on Wednesday, Dec. 18, starting with a complimentary wine tasting at 5:30 p.m., Loft seating at 6 p.m., and musical performance from 7 – 8:30 p.m. A menu offering delicious foods and wines is available once the Loft has opened for seating. Food orders are taken prior to the musical performance while wine is available throughout the entire evening event. The Loft provides an intimate setting and is a listening room during show times.

Tickets for the show are $10 - $15 and available for purchase online at hermitwoods.com or at the Hermit Woods Winery located at 72 Main St. in Meredith. Seating is limited so be sure to purchase your tickets early.
