Gilford library sees increase in circulation

GILFORD – The Gilford Public Library has been seeing increases in the number of visitors and checkouts with programs running strong.

Library Director Katherine Dormody gave the selectmen an update on the library during the March 27 meeting.

Dormody said more than 6,000 people entered the building between January and February. She said circulation of materials is up eight percent overall from last year and the number of first-time checkouts is up seven percent during the same time frame.

As of late March, 1,443 people had used their library card and have checked out around 20,000 items. The total cost of all these checkouts is around $345,645, meaning each cardholder has saved around $250 they would have paid if they purchased these materials.

Dormody said they were looking forward to a busy schedule in April, especially National Library Month coming the second week of April.

The library would be used for many different activities including a fitness program for seniors that was already at capacity, three book clubs, and many rain fell over Central New Hampshire starting the night of Wednesday, April 3, which switched to wet snow overnight. Snow continued falling all day on April 4 and through the beginning of April 5. Alton Public Works reported the town got over a foot of snow during the storm.

The storm resulted in mass road closures and power outages with many trees and wires down over roads.

By April 6, Ever-source reported that power had been restored to over 289,000 customers across the state with 2,200 tree, line, and service crews working to restore the last of the power. By the end of the storm, the New Hampshire Electric Co-op said around 40,000 customers across the state were without power. By Saturday night crews had restored power to all but around 8,400 with efforts continuing.

In Gilford, Public Works crews started cleaning up at 10:15 p.m. on Wednesday and continued through the night.

Champs prepared for another run to Division III title game

BY JOSHUA SPAULDING

Sports Editor

ALTON — Coach James Christie knows that if his team does what it is capable of, there will be another banner hung in the Prospect Mountain gym next to the championship banners from the last two years.

“We’ll see what the season brings, but if we do what we’re capable of, it will end in our favor,” Christie said. “This senior group, they want to finish the right way.”

The Timber Wolf seniors, Gwen Christie, Ella Bernier, Mariah Gates and Eve Roberge, have lost just two games over the course of their high school career, both during their COVID freshmen campaign. Prospect has gone undefeated in winning the Division III championship the last two seasons.

“We only lost one starting senior (Maren Rayno), we’ve basically got everyone back,” said Christie. “We’re going to rely a lot on our seniors. They’ve been there, they’ve played high level games for three years and I expect them to again.”

Bernier returns to the pitching circle again this year with her eyes set on the Prospect Mountain softball strikeout record, which belongs to Brianna Burley. Christie expects that somewhere around the fifth or sixth game his talented senior will reach the mark.

Christie at second base and Gates at first base return for their senior years to anchor the right side of the infield, while fellow senior Eve Roberge moves from centerfield to third base.

“We’re preparing for small ball other teams might play,” Christie said of the move for Roberge. “We want to have an athlete at third base.”

Junior Alexis Wilson rounds out the infield at shortstop while Olivia Noyes returns behind the plate to do the catching for Bernier.

The outfield will be a bit different, though Tori Christie returns to right field for her junior season. Sophomore Paige Harding will slide into center to replace Roberge while three players are in a battle to earn the left field job, including Abby Fisichelli, Taylor Greenwood and Paityn Glidden. Christie said that he expects Fisichelli’s bat to be in the lineup no matter what, either in left or as a flex hitter.

The good news for the program is that for the first time in a while there will be a true Prospect Mountain JV team, with only a couple of kids needed to swing back and forth.

“We have a good crop of freshmen and some sophomores who have decided to play this year,” Christie said. “We need the younger players who can come in now and get their reps and learn what it’s about.

“And we’ve got some great six, seventh and eighth graders at Alton and Barnstead too,” the Timber Wolf coach continued. “I don’t expect a drop-off after this senior group graduates.”

Christie said that he expects Gilford, last year’s runners up and St. Thomas to be among the top teams in the division, while Newport has a new pitcher who could make a difference and Raymond is a dark horse in his mind as well.

Prospect is scheduled to play two games each with Berlin, Kearsarge, Belmont, Hillsboro-Deering and Somersworth along with single games with Monadnock, Bishop Brady, Hopkinton, Newfound, Raymond and St. Thomas.

The season was scheduled to kick off after deadline Wednesday vs. Bishop Brady and continue today, April 11, at home against Kearsarge, at Monadnock on Friday, April 12, and at home against Berlin on Monday, April 15.

All games are subject to field conditions and Christie noted that he anticipated that the storm on April 4 likely led the schedule back at least a week, if not more.

State aid approved for BES expansion project

BY ERIN PLUMMER

mnews@salmonpress.news

BARNSTEAD – A project to expand Barnstead Elementary School that was put on hold due to a lack of state funding is being revived after the state announced the project was in fact approved for Building Aid.

Last year the school district proposed an article that would appropriate $23,398,200 to create an addition to the building that will include a gym, additional classroom space, unified arts programs, and science labs. This article would be contingent on the school receiving $10,210,940 in State Building Aid to cover around 45 percent of the cost and bonding the remaining $13,187,260. Another article was also passed that would renovate sections of the building for around $1.8 million in case state aid wasn’t received.

Both projects went on the warrant last year as voter approval was required for the district to accept state funds for the larger project. School officials, however, said that this possibility might not happen as the state ranked the BES project 10th in priority compared to other projects around the state.

Both articles passed at the 2023 district meeting. Superintendent Tim Broadrick said later that school year that the state notified the district that it would not be receiving a letter to intent to fund the project, failing to meet the contingency set in the warrant article. Focus then went on the smaller project that would renovate the older wings of the school known as A wing, B wing, and the Old Lobby with improvements such as new flooring for a multipurpose room and HVAC improvements.

The district took time over the year to look at what exactly needed to get done and received a guaranteed maximum price from Milestone Construction for the smaller project. The proposed cost came in around $40,000 less than the original projected cost for the project, as a result the district can borrow less than anticipated. This year, the renovation project was back on the warrant for around $1.78 million.

Days before the distinct meeting, however, the school received notice from the state that it was in fact eligible for

New Durham Historical Society hosting program on Joseph Libbey Home

NEW DURHAM — The New Durham Historical Society is proud to host the Thursday, April 11 program entitled “Reflections on the Joseph Libbey Home,” featuring NDHS member and current proprietor Sherry Cullimore. By sharing in-depth knowledge about her remarkable home, Cullimore is sure to rouse one’s interest in the history and lore surrounding this enduring homestead.

The Cullimore home is situated on Ridge Road, and has served as a gathering place for Civil War encampments for more than 25 years. The actual age of the home is uncertain. However, it was one of the forty-one existing houses listed in the 1770 “Report of Settlement.” Interestingly, Joseph Libbey appeared that year as head of a family on the list containing “families, houses, improved ground and felled trees in New Durham.”

The program is set to provide an interesting glimpse into a bygone era, and we look forward to seeing you. The program will be held at the New Durham Public Library, located at the corner of Birch Hill Road and Main Street. Beginning at 7 p.m. on Thursday, April 11. For additional information, please call President Catherine Orlowicz at (603) 859-4643 or e-mail cathyo@tds.net.

Gilford looking to switch Web site domain

BY ERIN PLUMMER
mnews@salmonpress.news

GILFORD – The town is working on converting its municipal Web domains to a government address with help from a state grant.

Currently the town uses gilfordnh.org for its domain. The town recently received a grant to help convert its municipal domain to a .gov, signifying a government address. The New Hampshire Department of Information Technology (DoIT) states on its website that any county, town, city, SAU, fire department, and sheriff's department can switch to a .gov domain. DoIT states that there are numerous advantages to switching to a government domain such as meeting regulatory compliance and access to certain government resources only available to .gov domains among many others.

Town Administrator Scott Dunn gave the selectmen an update on the process during the board's meeting on March 27.

Dunn said that day he met with two representatives from the Overwatch Foundation, an organization that provides assistance on homeland security defense, including cyber-systems defense. The discussion also included Deputy Fire Chief Brad Ober, who Dunn said has been a big advocate for the switch, as well as representatives from the town's technology provider, Mainstay Technologies.

The grant doesn't cover transitioning the domain for the police department and library.

Dunn said right now Police Chief Kris Kelley hasn't expressed too much interest in converting the domain, especially for security considerations. He said he would also have a conversation with Library Director Katherine Dorbody on if the library would be interested in switching over as well.

Dunn said three quarters of the town's offices use the current .org address. He said changing over the address for one part of municipal government could work out for the best since it will provide some lessons on the transition.

Dunn said five different communities in the state received the grant to switch domains and all are being referred to as "guinea pigs" in this process.

Other towns in the state have done this process without a grant.

"As far as this particular way of doing things we are considered guinea pigs," Dunn said.

Dunn said there wasn't yet a specific timeframe for the switchover because different cases have different requirements.

Granite State Matters founder to speak in New Durham

NEW DURHAM — Jeanne Dietsch, speaking at the New Durham Public Library on Monday, April 15, has served in so many capacities, each one more impressive than the last, it is difficult to know how to refer to her.

Among her accomplishments, she has been president of Talmis, Inc.; Director of Educational Market Research for International Data Corporation; co-founder of Kinemation, developing computer games and educational software; president and founder of ActivMedia Research, an e-commerce market research company; co-founder and CEO of Mobile Robots, Inc.; emerging technologies vice-president at Adept Technology; a columnist for IEEE Robotics and Automation Society; and, among other things, a former New Hampshire state senator.

From robots to zoning boards, from taxes to culture, and with a Master's of Public Administration from the Harvard Kennedy School of Government, she knows her stuff.

A few years ago, Dietsch became aware that nearly half of the 235 candidates endorsed across the nation by the Libertarian PAC Make Liberty Win were in New Hampshire. Following the money, she compiled a report that explains what the PAC means to New Hampshire residents.

The report has been published as "NH: Battleground in the Fight to Dismantle Democracy: a Wake-up Call for Granite Staters and the Nation."

Her presentation will cover the threats to democracy she sees and the actions New Hampshire residents can take to preserve democracy.

Recently, Dietsch launched the Web site Granite State Matters, designed to digest and bring information regarding what's going on at the state level to residents who don't have the time to do it on their own.

Elected as a Democrat, she now identifies herself as an Independent. She has said that Granite State Matters will hopefully open people's eyes as to what is really going on in New Hampshire.

The free presentation begins at 7 p.m. Refreshments, provided by the New Durham Democratic Committee, will be served.

You may have caught his performances as The Everywhere Man, at any of several local libraries or senior centers, performing magic tricks, or singing and playing guitar for all ages, from preschoolers up to retirement age. You may have heard his street music or watched him perform in any number of plays in the local small theater groups. Or perhaps you caught his interview with Jane Cormier, Host of Artful Living, on NH Talk Radio. Now Philip Reilly is adding another feather to his cap as he invites children to "Sketch with Phil" in the Gilman Library at 100 Main St., Alton.

Kids of all ages are welcome. Seating is limited to ten for this small group tutorial. Please sign up early. Call 603-875-2550.

The allure of outer space and eclipses

Humanity's fascination with outer space and celestial events like eclipses stretches back to the dawn of our existence. From ancient civilizations to modern-day space agencies, the allure of the cosmos has captured our imaginations and sparked a colossal sense of wonder and curiosity. But what is it about outer space and eclipses that continues to captivate us?

One of the most undeniable reasons is the utter scale and mystery of the universe. Outer space represents the ultimate frontier; a vast expanse of uncharted territory waiting to be explored. The unfathomable distances between stars and galaxies, the enigmatic nature of black holes, and the possibility of extraterrestrial life all contribute to a sense of awe and intrigue. The exploration of outer space offers us the chance to push the boundaries of our knowledge and understanding, to uncover the secrets of the cosmos, and to answer some of humanity's most weighty questions about our place in the universe.

Eclipses, in particular, hold a special place because they offer a tangible connection to the cosmos. These rare celestial events, where the sun, moon, and Earth align in perfect harmony, produce breathtaking displays of light and shadow that captivate millions of people around the world. Whether it's a solar eclipse, where the moon passes between the sun and Earth, casting a temporary shadow on our planet, or a lunar eclipse, where Earth's shadow falls across the surface of the moon, eclipses remind us of the beauty and grandeur of the universe.

Moreover, eclipses have played a significant role in shaping human history and culture. Ancient civilizations viewed eclipses as omens or portents, often interpreting them as signs from the gods. Today, eclipses continue to inspire awe and wonder, bringing people together to witness these rare cosmic events firsthand. Whether it's through scientific expeditions to observe and study eclipses or community gatherings to marvel at their beauty, eclipses have a way of uniting us in our shared sense of wonder and appreciation for the cosmos.

In addition to their aesthetic appeal, outer space and eclipses also hold immense scientific value. Studying the cosmos allows us to better understand the fundamental laws of nature, from the forces that govern the motion of celestial bodies to the origins of the universe itself. Eclipses provide scientists with unique opportunities to conduct experiments and observations that would be impossible under normal circumstances, offering valuable insights into everything from solar physics to the dynamics of Earth's atmosphere.

Furthermore, our fascination with outer space and eclipses speaks to something deeper within us – a primal instinct to explore, to seek out new frontiers, and to push the boundaries of what is possible.

Let's talk about That Thing

BY PAMELA MOTT

Alton

Life's demands can feel insurmountable. Almost hilarious, in a gallows humor kind of way. The pressures of the daily grind can be a little much. Frustrations. Incomplete, hypocritical contradiction in the authority messages. The dance of illusion, like smoke of mirrors. All the outside, us versus them. Fear, rage, blame, blah, blah. Our own attachments. Feelings of separation and loneliness. A human without a home. No sense of belonging or to belong. Ahhhhhh! No thanks.

This Wellness series will address those topics that are just below the surface and relate to us all. This series will focus on local experiences, traditions, wisdom and loves. This series will introduce concepts of wellbeing and healthy lifestyles and is associated with a special event: That Thing, scheduled for Aug. 31 in Alton Bay. By locals for locals, in service to community. Let's talk.

This is a series associated with a piolet program for associated nonprofit development benefiting recreational and healthy lifestyle opportunities in our community. It is organic and grassroot grown. There is no money to follow here. It is all about talking mental health and wellbeing. Isn't that what we want. Our locals are some kind of wonderful. This series is around community, recreation and having a hell of a good time. No money needed. Nothing to buy, only to receive. Weird concept?

How much of our stress is Self-created? The racing of the mind and the restless tension. The restless tension is like a badge of honor. How's your neck? Do you tense your jaw? Honor to what? That tricky mind.

The body armors up like a shield. Maybe that shield of armor locked up your shoulder or hip. Maybe that's why you feel crooked? Somatics. Don't know about you, but I didn't learn about that in school.

Somatics, how the body perceives it's self in time and space. Feeling a felt sense of the moment promotes fosters attachment and safety. Felt sense autonomic regulation. Yes please. That tricky mind is at ease.

In the constant pressure of obligation there is little time for gathering. This series will explore concepts of recreation from a local lens with offerings of information of ideas for community building in love.

LETTERS FROM EDWIN

Reorganize

Another Easter Sunday morning. Another early rise, get everything ready for the breakfast before the sunrise service in the park. Then rush on back to cook the sausage, eggs, and pancakes.

Now that it's all cleaned up, I have a few moments to find a comfortable seat to take some notes before church. By now, it's all automatic pilot. My sister and her husband have been organizing this event every year since '85, and I don't believe that I've missed one.

This is the church I grew up in. The building has changed since some vandals got in back when I was in college and lit it on fire. That got rid of a lot of the old history of the place. They tried to recreate it, but they could never have rebuilt all the woodwork or replace the old real pipe organ. But that's just stuff, and church is people.

There are still some faces that I remember from years long gone by, but there are mostly new ones, in this revolving confluence of souls. By the time you reach my age, you've usually been bounced around a number of times.

When I went out to the car to get the computer, I heard a train whistle, or more accurately, horn, blowing in the train yard. Hearing this used to be a regular daily occurrence for me growing up. I stopped to listen as its echoes bounced back from the hills of the city. The pattern of echoes was still as I remember them. Time goes on, but spaces stay the same.

If you timed it right, you would be able to hop on a train after it had slowed down to pass through the city and get a free ride up town. You needed to grab a freight car because if the guys in the caboose saw you, they would yell at you and try to grab you, so you'd jump off so as to not get in trouble. It's probably still that way, but somewhere I heard that they've done away with cabooses. I don't know for sure, and I ain't going to try and find out.

Looking up from my nice comfy chair here in the narthex, I noticed a number of electronic light dimmers on the wall. That triggered my memory back to the old building that had this large variac in a big gray box with a large steering wheel kind of thing on top. Being a budding technical sort of guy, I thought that it was pretty cool. It had marks to designate levels of dimness for all the lights in the church. If they dimmed them to a certain level for too long, smoke would start coming from the holes in the gray box. Didn't want that. Yep, them good old days.

They used to call it the singing church. We easily had a 40-person choir and another fifteen plus in the kids choir, a real musical director and a professional organist to play the pipe organ. I got my early vocal instruction there, so I learned to sing properly. When I got interested in playing rock and roll music, my band mates said I sounded like a choir boy, so I had to learn to yell and scream like the rest of the unschooled.

It's still a singing church, but the roots of its songs have become somewhat modified over the years. Back in the '60s, there were always the standard hymns, and the Hallelujah Chorus was a regular yearly piece. These days, the choir is much smaller, and with the influx of many Liberian immigrants, it has become highly influenced by African styles and rhythms. It's now more attune to southern gospel and negro spirituals. Nothing against the classics, but what a wonderful addition. Hand clapping and hallelujah praise the Lord. Pretty soon, they'll be dancing! Maybe.

After the service, during coffee time, I found myself talking with some of the singers from the choir and was summarily invited to come join them in song. If I were still living in the area, I probably would already be joining them, but living two and a half hours away, I had to gracefully decline.

I hear it said that there's a decline in the number of people of faith. Knowing that "they" so often don't know what they're talking about. Feel that it's just a reorganization.

STORM

ing storm with countless trees down, hung up in wires or completely uprooted, making it hard or sometimes impossible to access the routes for plowing," read a Facebook post from the Gilford Public Works Department. "If it looks like your road has not been plowed, chances are there is a tree down somewhere preventing us from getting there."

Many trees couldn't be removed until the power companies said there were no live wire issues. By Thursday power was out through much of town.

After 22 hours of cleaning, Public Works crews went home around 8 p.m. on Thursday for a break with plans to come back at 3 a.m. Three members of Public Works Staff were kept available for emergencies.

The generator at the Public Works building went down on Thursday, taking out power and phone service. Power was restored to Public Works and the Solid Waste Facility by Friday night.

Due to downed lines, trees, and the snow conditions many roads in town were impassable and Public Works asked people to avoid traveling. Some major roads that were blocked for a time including a section of Cherry Valley Road and Intervale Road.

The town opened a warming shelter in the town hall lobby, that was also serving as the Emergency Operations Center.

Emergency and business lines in Gilford went down for a day, but were restored by Friday.

In Alton, the Public Works Department's Facebook page reported that crews had been out for around 26 hours before going home for a break before going back out at 4 a.m. By the time crews went out they were down to three trucks to clear roads, though warm pavement conditions worked to their advantage. Downed trees, wires, and limbs made clearing roads difficult for Public Works crews with some roads down to one lane.

The Alton Fire Department helped Public Works through the process. Alton Fire updated residents on what roads were closed and opening on its Facebook page.

By the end of the storm, Public Works reported that around 95 percent of the town was without power, including the Transfer Station and other town facilities.

The Pearson Community Center was opened as a warming shelter for residents.

The Barnstead Police Department reported that first responders were out all night during the storm handling emergency calls.

The storm blocked access to many roads, including by fallen trees and powerlines. The Barnstead Public Works Department worked to get the roads open and utilities were working on restoring power.

The Barnstead Fire Department advised residents of treacherous road conditions and visibility that was down to zero. They also reported the center of town was without power by the middle of the storm.

By Saturday, April 6, the New Durham Fire Department reported that crews from the NH Electric Cooperative were working on downed powerlines on Merry Meeting Road. The Barnstead Fire Department posted that power companies were working to get roads open first

All Gilford, Prospect Mountain, and Governor Wentworth schools were closed on Thursday and Friday because of the storm and ensuing power and road conditions.

Town buildings and facilities in all four towns also closed during the storm, including local libraries. By Saturday, facilities such as several local libraries had power, but didn't have Internet or phone service.

meetings.

The library has partnered with many different community organizations that has enhanced offerings in the library, such as Belknap County 4-H, the Belknap County Conservation District, the Gilford schools, Gilford Got Lunch, the Granite VNA, UNH Cooperative Extension, and others.

"The amount of people participating in our programming is at an all time high," Dormody said.

Maintenance work has also continued on the library building. A generator is now in service, and some landscaping will be done around it. The second well pump on the geothermal system had to be serviced, the first was done the year before. They also installed a panic button.

Library collections were being moved around to add more to in-demand areas.

The library switched servers for its email system to Google from Piper Webs. The library was able to receive pricing for nonprofit organizations for this switch through the Friends of the Library. They will continue to offer the Web site through Piper Webs because they have been able to operate the site through that company at no cost.

funding for the full expansion project.

Broadrick said the state legislature approved around $50 million in building aid for the 2025 and 2026 fiscal years and the Department of Education sent out five letters of intent for funding. The highest ranked project was the construction of a new building for Rundlett Middle School in Concord. Broadrick said the Concord School District, however, recently notified the DoE that it would not be able to accept the funds for the project in the 2025 fiscal year. A number of other projects on the priority list were also withdrawn or canceled for reasons including warrant articles that failed with voters.

Broadrick said days before the district meeting when voters were going to decide on the smaller project the district did receive a letter of intent from the state to fund the project. While the project was originally eligible for 45 percent funding, it was now eligible for 55 percent.

While the news was happy, school officials were left in the position of having to explain the new situation in the simplest terms possible at the district meeting.

"This left us in a little bit of a quandary," Broadrick said.

School officials explained the situation to voters and Broadrick said voters seemed to understand the new circumstances and approved the article.

"The community of Barnstead has been incredibly supportive of finding a fiscally conservative, cost-effective way of meeting the deferred expansion and maintenance needs," Broadrick said.

The district will likely have to schedule a special meeting for voter to approve the revised expansion project. Broadrick said they hope the Space Needs Committee will reconvene to discuss the project and the district is talking with attorneys and engineers about moving forward. The next step will be for the school board to approve moving forward with the project.

"I think in the end there's an opportunity here, I don't want to say it's a done deal," Broadrick said, saying they will still have to overcome some hurdles. "A lot of us who have been involved in this a long time are feeling optimistic we can do the work that needs to be done."

Broadrick said voters will ultimately have the final say on any project.

BES was built around 1956. Broadrick said the current building contains 60 percent of the capacity for a K-8 school building. In addition to a capacity crunch, Broadrick said a lot of maintenance has been deferred over the years.

"The town's been incredibly supportive, it's not as if the citizens of Barnstead haven't wanted to do something with the building," he said.

Broadrick said until recently voters were still paying for the bond from when Prospect Mountain High School was built, which took the priority for taxpayer money.

The renovation project that voters approved this year is still scheduled to get underway this summer. Work will be done on the HVAC system using around $700,000 in funds from Elementary and Secondary School Emergency Relief funds (ESSER), which have been approved for improving air quality in response to the pandemic. The single pane window that have been in the A and B wing that have been there since the building was built will be replaced with modern double pane, aluminum framed windows.

This project will be one area removed from the scope of work for the expansion.

Last year voters for the town and the school district approved the sale of a piece of town owned land to the school district. That land contains a church building that is now being used for the preschool program.

Since preschool isn't mandatory in New Hampshire, Broadrick said the state funding couldn't cover a space for preschoolers and the district would be entirely responsible for that amount. Now that the school has already established a classroom space for preschool, that is one more area that will not be included in the scope of the expansion project.

The Barnstead School Board will meet on April 17 to discuss how to move forward and possibly vote on going ahead. The district will likely have to go through a superior court process and a noticing process to schedule a special meeting. Broadrick said any action will need to be taken soon to utilize the funds.

"With a little bit of luck and the wind on our back hopefully it means in the next 24 months we will have the frame of an addition built," Broadrick said.

Broadrick said a space needs committee has existed for the school in some form since the 1990s and he wants to honor the decades of work people have put into this.

"I think the citizens, the friends, and neighbors that serve on the Space Needs Committee have gained a lot of credibility to the community by sticking with the plan," Broadrick said. "I think that's a factor in why the meeting has been so supportive."

Pieces in place for solid run for Gilford baseball

BY JOSHUA SPAULDING
Sports Editor

GILFORD — The potential is there for the Gilford baseball team as the Golden Eagles look to improve on a 7-9 record from a year ago.

“The offense is popping with potential with speed and power up and down the lineup,” said third-year head coach Mike Giovanditto. “It is going to take a total team effort for Gilford to take the next step, but the pieces are in place for a deep run.”

The Golden Eagles bring back 11 players with varsity experience, led by seniors Gavin Clark, Caleb Giovanditto, Will Wallace, Brendan Folan and Tanner Keenan. Clark will be working at third base and will be a key piece of the pitching mix, Folan will play in the outfield, Giovanditto returns behind the plate, Wallace will play at first base and also be in the pitching mix and Keenan will play shortstop and spend time on the mound.

Sophomores Ryan Folan and Drew Smith will also be keys in the pitching rotation as they join the varsity team for the first time and join Clark and Keenan to form a nice mix of finesse and power.

Coach Giovanditto noted that he sees what could be a difference for this year’s Gilford baseball team.

“Team chemistry is the missing link Gilford is searching for and if they find it, it could mean they’ll be in the mix atop Division III,” Giovanditto said.

The Golden Eagles will feature a season that includes two games each with Belmont, Hopkinton, Monadnock, Winisquam, Inter-Lakes and defending champion White Mountains Regional along with single games with Campbell, Somersworth, Newfound and Berlin.

The season was scheduled to begin after deadline at Campbell on April 10, and continues at Belmont on Friday, April 12, and at Hopkinton on Wednesday, April 17.
