The Planning Board will hold a public hearing on six proposed amendments to the zoning ordinance on Dec. 20. Voters will decide on these amendments during town meeting voting in March of 2023.

Amendment 1 would add definitions and regulations related to short-term rentals.

The proposed amendment would add new definitions to the terms "Short-term rental," "nontransient, "owner-occupied, and "transient" along with amending the definitions for "Accessory building, structure, or use," "bed and breakfast," "and "lodging house."

The building's septic system must be functioning properly and permit from the NH Department of Environmental Services must be on file for the number of bedrooms. If there is no permit on file an evaluation by a state certified septic system evaluator will be required as well as a design approved by DES that will be constructed.

The roots of Thanksgiving

From 1621 to 2019, Thanksgiving has always been about celebrating an abundant fall harvest. The holiday's roots date back to the original Plymouth colonists and the Wampanoag tribe, who shared the first Thanksgiving meal together.

The celebratory feast was held by individual colonies up until 1789 off and on with a proclamation from President George Washington. President Thomas Jefferson chose not to observe Thanksgiving, and it wasn't until Abraham Lincoln's Presidency in 1863 that it became a federal holiday.

Many of the food items on our Thanksgiving menu are not what was served during the first few traditional Thanksgivings. For one, turkey was not served.

There aren't many documents from that time regarding that first Thanksgiving; however, one note did describe wildfowl (duck or geese) cod, bass, deer, bread, corn and porridge being served. The birds were described as being stuffed with onions and nuts. Seafood such as mussels and lobster was also served. For vegetables, squash, beans, corn, cabbage, carrots and peas were on the table.

Not on the table was mashed potatoes and gravy (gasp!), and there was no cranberry sauce or pies.

Perhaps no one has managed to capture the feeling gratitude better than Henry David Thoreau, author of "Walden," in 1856.

"I am grateful for what I am and have," he wrote. "My thanksgiving is perpetual. It is surprising how contented one can be with nothing definite - only a sense of existence. Well, anything for variety. I am ready to try this for the next ten thousand years, and exhaust it. How sweet to think of my extremities well charred, and my intellectual part too, so that there is no danger of worm or rot for a long while. My breath is sweet to me. O how I laugh when I think of my vague indefinite riches. No run on my bank can drain it, for my wealth is not possession but enjoyment."

LETTERS FROM EDWIN Domestics

A long time ago, somebody purchased a piece of land out in the woods. After a couple of owners, I became the holder of the deed. In the interim period, a foundation was made along with a well and a septic system. The first floor was put in and tar papered over so the owner and his family could live in their cellar home. There were chimney holes on each end of the foundation so there were probably two wood stoves. I can't say, I've plugged them both up.

It must have been interesting living there because the septic pipe exits the cellar twenty inches over the floor and a platform needed to be constructed on which to place the tub and toilet in order for them to gravity feed into the septic system. I could probably have gotten used to dealing with such an inconvenience. In this life we all adapt to things.

They lived there a couple of years then decided to move back to modern society. I wonder if they ever wish that they had stayed. A while after we were living there, they came back to visit the old place and had lots of fond memories and stories to tell. I never saw them again.

Since they had left, the next owner decided to drop a log house on top of the floor. It almost fit. There are a number of cement posts holding up the edge of the house where it overhangs. Like I said, we adapt.

The shortcomings of this guy were dramatic and numerous. Seeing as the house was in the middle of the woods, nobody would ever know what was going on there, and as it turned out, the bankers who had the mortgage didn't want to go there either. They just handed out their payments on his word. Needless to say, he squandered the money and was busy finishing the house by himself, in his spare time, with his spare change.

One day, the town building inspector got wind of something going on out in the woods so so he went out to check on it. Needless to say, he wasn't impressed with what he saw and posted a cease and desist order. Here was a two thousand square foot house with inadequate stairs that was structurally flawed, had shoddy plumbing and electrical that never had a building permit.

The guy stopped paying his mortgage, so the bank took the house, but that didn't matter much, he had already walked off with most of the money.

Now the bank owned it, and they certainly didn't want it. They put it up for auction and Elisa, who was looking for something bigger to live in found the ad. After checking it out, we went and joined the bidding on auction day. I didn't realize that I was bidding against the bank who was just trying to get the price They'd raise it a thousand, I'd up it ten. Finally, I hit my price and I walked out. They were freaked. They sent a grunt after me promising that they wouldn't up it again if I'd just put in one more bid. So I raised it another ten and became the new owner.

I really don't have space here to expound upon all the corrective work that we needed to perform. I'll leave that for another installment. I was reminded of all this by my talking to a plumber who just replaced the pressure tank that was installed with everything else back in the mid-eighties. It's been many years since there was a rattling sound every time the water pump turned on. Since everything still seemed to be working alright, I passed it off to some metal item hanging up on the pipes. Life went on.

He was working in a house that I was, and I mentioned that my pump was cycling every fifteen minutes without any water being drawn. He wondered how I knew that the pump was running and I told him about the rattle and he said that something wasn't right and agreed to come check it out. When I told him that it was from the mid-'80s, he expressed concerns as to why anything was still working.

In the mean time, the cycling returned to normal and I considered letting it be. He diagnosed the pressure tank which has now been installed. The water works better, and there is no more rattling pipes. Sometimes things just slide by. Thank you, Lord!

Your support is appreciated

To the Editor:

Congratulations to Sen. James Gray for his election to New Hampshire Senate District 6. Although his vision of New Hampshire and mine differed in many ways, I wish him well as he returns to Concord.

To my supporters and to all the friends I met during my campaign, thank you for the trust you put in me. Our campaign was a spirited one, with a lot of joy in it. Even though it was always viewed as an uphill battle, in a heavily gerrymandered district, we gave it our best.

As for the future, I plan to continue to work toward the same goals that have been motivating me for years, including voting rights, reproductive rights, LGBTQ+ rights, fair taxation, support of our local schools, the environment and clean energy, cannabis legalization, and an end to extremism in New Hampshire politics.

About thanks and turkeys

By John Harrigan

COLUMNIST

Editor's note: Mr. Harrigan was unable to submit a new North Country Notebook column in time to meet our press deadline for this week's edition. In its place, we present the following column, originally published on Thanksgiving 2011.

Because this is being writ- ten for around Thanksgiving, it could be about thanks and about turkeys. Perhaps both.

Thanks, for living in a place where people don't come after you in the dead of night for writing or saying anything you want. That is a precious thing in an ever-worsening world. We live in one of the most free societies on earth. "Thanks" doesn't even begin to cover it.

And now on to the turkeys.

Benjamin Franklin want- ed the wild turkey to be the new nation's symbolic bird. He lost that fight, one of the few fights he ever lost, and we wound up with the eagle, not a bad second choice.

Where we live there are few choices for fresh, as op-posed to frozen, turkeys, and almost no choices for locally raised birds, so for a few years we raised our own. These were turkeys who got to live like real turkeys, grubbing around for roots and stuff, and of course, came time to kill a few turkeys, my daughter

Karen, now owner and publisher of the newspaper in Colebrook, volunteered to help. Never will I forget her lugging two huge, muddy turkeys from the pen, their wings flapping her almost to death. "I'm never touching another live turkey again," she said, which is fine with me, because I'd rather raise pigs than turkeys. Pigs are clean if given the chance, while turkeys are just plain filthy.

One of my first memories of an altercation between adults concerned a turkey. My grandparents on the White side (my mother's family) were from Littleton, and my father's parents lived in Lisbon. On this occasion everyone got together for Thanksgiving in the Harrigans' house in Lisbon, on the bluff just out of town on the road to Landaff.

The Whites had their way of doing things in the kitchen, and the Harrigans had theirs. Still, all was tranquil until it came time to carve up and serve the turkey.

I'm not sure what the is- sue was, but a terrific squabble ensued, and as I remember, it came down to who was going to rule. And in that case there was no doubt, because the occupant of the house rules the roost. The Harrigans won that one. Whatever the case, the turkey was just fine.

Later, of course, time did its inevitable work and responsibilities changed, and the Thanksgiving turkey became my job. I've always loved getting up early Thanksgiving morning to fix the bird. It's just one of those things, like cutting and dragging a Christmas tree. In the case of the turkey, the hours are wee and the house is qui- et. There is all the time in the world. We often have compa-One year, when it ny, but they're not due until noon or so, and we don't plan to serve up until mid-after- noon. So I get up early, and have the kitchen to myself, just me and the turkey.

I rinse and oil the bird, and season it, and prepare the pan, and get the stuffing ready, and pre-heat the oven, in between taking care of animals and feeding fires. It's a ritual.

During the past two decades, I've become fond of draping a piece of old (and of course clean) sheet, drenched in butter, atop the turkey breast before I slide it into the oven. It helps to keep things moist. In my book there is nothing worse than dry turkey. I'd rather eat a shoe.

One year, my sister Mary and her husband Pat were up, and I'd purchased a large foil roasting pan because we had so much company, and it had a pin-hole in its bottom that I'd failed to notice, and while we were all sitting around the kitchen counter, cracking nuts and playing pitch, the oven erupted in flames. Now here was a situation. We are more than three miles from town, and even with one of the best volunteer fire departments anywhere (and believe me, it's the best), we'd have wound up with a cellar-hole.

Pat is from a farm family and is a practical guy, and he didn't hesitate for a second. "Baking soda," he shouted, and I knew just where it was, and handed it to him, and he threw a handful into the oven, and quelled the flames.

The turkey was just fine, and we were able to laugh at it all around the table.

You can find many ways to support charitable organizations. One method that's gained popularity over the past few years is called a donor-advised fund. Should you consider it? The answer depends on your individual situation, because donor-advised funds are not appropriate for everyone. However, if you're in a position to make larger charitable gifts, you might at least want to see what this strategy has to offer.

Paid Advertisemen

• Contribute to the fund. You can contribute to your donor-advised fund with cash or marketable securities, which are assets that can be converted to cash quickly. If your contribution is tax deductible, you'll get the deduction in the year you make the contribution to the fund. Of course, these contributions are still subject to IRS limits on charitable tax deductions and whether you itemize your deductions. If you typically don't give enough each year to itemize and plan on making consistent charitable contributions, you could consider combining multiple years' worth of planned giving into a single donor-advised fund contribution, and claim a larger deduction in that year. This move may be especially impactful if you have years with a higher amount of income, with an accompanying higher tax rate. If you contribute marketable securities, like stocks and bonds, into the fund, a subsequent sale of the securities avoids capital gains taxes, maximizing the impact of your contribution.

Here's how it works:

• Choose an investment. Typically, donor-advised funds offer several professionally managed diversified portfolios where you can place your contributions. You'll want to consider the level of investment risk to which your fund may be exposed. And assuming all requirements are met, any investment growth is not taxable to you, the donor-advised fund or the charity that ultimately receives the grant, making your charitable gift go even further. • Choose the charities. You can > choose grants for the IRS-approved charities that you want to support. You decide when you want the money donated and how it should be granted. You're generally free to choose as many IRS-approved charitable organizations as you like. And the tax reporting is relatively easy - you don't have to keep track of receipts from every charity you support. Instead, you can just keep the receipts from your contributions to the fund.

Although donor-advised funds clearly offer some benefits, there are important trade-offs to consider. For one thing, your contributions are irrevocable, which means once you put the money in the fund, you cannot access it for any reason other than charitable giving. And the investments you choose within your fund will carry some risk, as is true of all investments. Also, donor-advised funds do have investment manage ment fees and other costs. So, consider the impacts of these fees when deciding how you want to give.

In any case, you should consult with your tax and financial professionals before opening a donor-advised fund And if the fund becomes part of your estate plans, you'll also want to work with your legal advisor. But give this philanthropic tool some thought - it can help you do some good while also potentially benefiting your own long-term financial strategy.

New Hampshire ranks fourth in prosperity despite Pandemic and economic challenges

Hampshire ranks fourth in overall prosperity according to the American Dream Prosperity Index (ADPI), released this month by the Milken Center for Advancing the American Dream partnership with Legatum Institute. The United States continues to see a rise in prosperity, even as we faced the long-term impacts of a pandemic and the economic realities of rising inflation and a shrinking economy. But while the overall trend points to a prosperous nation, prosperity continues to be unequally distributed regionally, often eluding rural communities and Black Americans.

Prosperity is a multidimensional concept which the American Dream Prosperity Index seeks to measure, explore, and understand. The framework of the Index captures prosperity through three equaldomains ly-weighted which are the essential foundations of prosperity — Inclusive Societ-Open Economies, Empowered People. These domains are Center's President Kerry made up of 11 pillars of prosperity, built upon 49 actionable policy areas, and are underpinned by more than 200 reliable indicators.

While fourth in terms of overall prosperity, New Hampshire ranks first in the living conditions pillar, second in safety and security and second in personal freedom. The state also ranks eighth in the social capital and health pillars. According to the Index, New Hampshire has multiple opportunities for improvement as it currently ranks 43rd in governance and 23rd in economic quality. New Hampshire's infrastructure ranking is most improved, going from 29th in 2012 to 21st in 2022.

"While our nation faces many challenges including record inflation, increased gun violence, and a deteriorating mental health landscape, we are encouraged by the resiliency of communities across our country as they work to create prosperous lives for their residents," said the Healey. "The American Dream Prosperity Index was founded on the principle that better data leads to better decisions and outcomes. It is our goal to make this report one of the most important tools for local, state and federal lawmakers and civic leaders."

"We are encouraged by the steady rebound of prosperity post-pandemic, even in the face of unique regional challenges," said Legatum Institute CEO Philippa Stroud. "The foundations of the U.S. economy continue to stand strong, particularly due to the innovative entrepreneurial mindset that Americans are known for. This forward momentum highlights the genuine push towards prosperity in the face of continued adversity." Across the country, millions of Americans are facing challenges that continue to threaten prosperity. According to the 2022 ADPI, since 2012, all states apart from North Dakota have increased their prosperity, but prosperity reacross and within states. For most people, 2022 has been a year of progress as the nation continues to recover from the COVID-19 pandemic and as the economy strengthens. However, this increase in prosperity is tempered by rising gun violence in nearly every state. Also detrimental to the nation's prosperity is the deteriorating mental health of America, marked by a rise in suicides and opioid-related deaths, even as Americans' overall health continues to improve. ADPI's key findings also point to waning social cohesion across the country as another roadblock to U.S. prosperity. This is seen in the decreasing number of Americans who have helped a stranger, donated money to charity, volunteered or frequently talked to a neighbor.

ADPI National Patterns toward Greater Prosperity:

In 2022, 26 states have recovered to pre-pandemic levels of overall prosperity, with Okla-mains unequally shared homa, New Jersey and New Mexico seeing the biggest improvement. Reasons for the improvement in these states vary, but economic factors such as the increasing number of entrepreneurs played a key role in the post-pandemic rebound and bodes well for further improvement.

Over the past decade, Americans' physical health have improved. Since 2012, rates of smoking have fallen by nearly a third, excessive alcohol use has decreased by 17 percent and pain reliever misuse has decreased by 21 percent.

The long-term downward trend in property crime is an encouraging development across the United States, with all but six states improving over the past decade.

ADPI Key Findings:

While U.S. prosperity rebounded post-pandemic in 2022, current record inflation threatens this recovery

In 2022, Prosperity has increased in every state except North Dakota, but this progress remains unequally distributed within state and local communities and across ethnic groups

High and rising gun violence in nearly every state is impacting American's individual sense of security and prosper-

Mental health has deteriorated in every state, including increased deaths of despair

A continuing decline in social cohesion and group relationships at all levels of society creates barriers to prosperity.

Although the data does highlight a substantial number of barricades to prosperity, ADPI can be used to craft unique solutions across all levels of government. A deeper examination of prosperity, prompted by the Index, can reveal individual issues that each state can tackle in order to advance the prosperity of its citizens. This push towards the development of local data-led initiatives, rather than a 'one size fits all' approach, is essential for transformation across the country.

Beginner Knitting lessons at the Belknap Mill

Beth James

LACONIA — The Belknap Mill is pleased to offer two beginner knitting lessons. Classes will be Mondays from 5-6:30 p.m. or Thursday mornings 9:30-11 a.m. Classes will start the week of Tuesday, Nov. 28, and will take place at the Belknap Mill. The cost is $80 for the six-week session and includes start up materials. Classes will make a sampler scarf using basic patterns. Registration can be found at www.belknapmill.org.

The class will be taught by Beth James. Beth James grew up in the White Mountains. She is an eighth generation New Hampshire native. Her grandmother placed her first pair of knitting needles in her hands at age eight.

It was love at first stitch. Whether making hats to donate or custom designing that one of a kind, something special item, James is well known for having knitting needles in her hands. Over the years, she has expanded her love of fiber to include hand spinning yarns and dyeing her own textiles.

James started teaching Fiber Arts 30 years ago. She demonstrated and taught a children's program for the Rochester Fair for eight years. At Fryeburg Fair Fiber Arts Center, 20 years were dedicated to education and demonstrating. Individual classes have been taught at the former Downhome and Company yarn store, New Hampshire Sheep and Wool festival, and Creative Arts Center just to name a few. She is also a member of the New Hampshire Spinner and Dyers Guild.

She brings her passion for textiles to her new position, Resident Fiber Artist at the Belknap Mill. Beths' motto is: "Learn to knit, wear the warmth and share the

Out of all the locations around the world that have seen battles between superheroes and powerful enemies in the Marvel Cinematic Universe, one location just a few hours south of us just joined those ranks. The recently released "Black Panther: Wakanda Forever" features locations around Cambridge, Mass., including an epic fight between three heroes and an army of underwater warriors right on the Massachusetts Avenue Bridge. The scenes around Cambridge are brief, but these few locations are certainly worth a visit with some more fun activities near-

Panther: "Black Wakanda Forever" pays tribute to the late actor Chadwick Boseman, who played King T'Challa in the first "Black Panther" movie and other films in the MCU. Boseman was battling colon cancer when he filmed "Black Panther" and died from the disease in 2020 at the age of 43. In "Wakanda Forever," T'Challa's family and kingdom mourn his passing and face a grave threat from the underwater civilization of Talokan and its godlike leader Namor (played by Tanoch Huerta Mejía).

I'm going to try to avoid any significant plot details or spoilers, though if you want to go into the movie completely blind, maybe skip the next few paragraphs.

There is one part of "Wakanda Forever" where Queen Ramunda (Angela Basset) and Princess Shuri (Letitia Wright) learn about a scientist who plays a significant role in the story. That scientist is Riri Williams (played by Dominique Thorne), a 19-year-old student at Massachusetts Institute of Technology whose technological skills are, shall we say, superhero caliber. The audience is suddenly transported from Wakanda to the MIT campus, where Shuri and Okoye (played by Dani Gurira) go to meet with Riri. The group runs meets at Riri's workshop in a garage, but find themselves surrounded by police and run for the Mass Ave Bridge with the aim of losing the cops and blending into Boston traffic. What happens next is a classic MCU action scene with the three women fighting off enemies, including the Talokanil warriors attacking from the Charles River.

Filming in Massachusetts took place in the summer of 2021. Scenes from Riri's workshop were filmed in Worcester, Mass., and the action scene itself was filmed on location on the Mass Ave Bridge. According to published reports Wright was injured while filming this scene and production shut down for a few months while she recovered.

For anyone familiar with the Boston area there are so many different familiar landmarks in these scenes. I found myself torn between paying attention to the fight and identifying all the buildings on either side of the river. Many of the familiar sites are right in the Back Bay including the famous Citgo sign in Kenmore Square blocks from Fenway Park, the John Hancock Tower, the Prudential Tower and neighboring Sheraton

Hotel, and many more. The Mass Ave Bridge and the neighborhoods nearby are a great place to explore. The bridge runs parallel to the Longfellow Bridge on the other side of the river and is a direct route from Cambridge into the Back Bay. The bridge itself is pedestrian friendly and I recently found out it's great to bike across too. As shown in the film, the bridge has some amazing views of the Boston skyline especially at night.

The Boston side of the bridge has a long, accessible ramp that leads to the Esplanade. On the Cambridge side is the Dr. Paul Dudley White Bike Path, a multiuse path that goes past the MIT tennis courts, boathouses, and the MIT Sailing Pavilion, and other landmarks.

This area is also a great place to watch Boston's Fourth of July Fireworks without dealing with the crowds on the Esplanade. I found a nice perch here on the Fourth of July in 2019, the area is busy but not crowded. While there wasn't a direct way to watch the show on the Hatch Shell, there were large speakers set up that broadcast the concert. There were plenty of concession stands and food trucks supplying all kinds of food and refreshments. You also get a front seat to the fireworks on the Charles. The MIT campus is right by the bridge especially the famous Great Dome. The MIT campus itself is also fun to walk around, especially on the other side near the Longfellow Bridge where there are some buildings that are architectural marvels (pardon the pun). There are a lot of people reading this from the Lakes Region who might be even more familiar with the campus because they are MIT students, alumni, faculty, or employees themselves.

The movie also has a tie-in with Target, and there is an ad that features Thorne as Riri. ad specifically shows the Boston skyline with the label "Bos-Massachusetts" and shows Riri in her workshop before stopping to make a Target run. The Target location they show is in Central Square, which is right by the MIT campus. As soon as I saw this was in Boston, I immediately recognized that distinctive corner in Central Square. That particular Target store is pretty small but has a lot of necessities, especially anything a college student would need. That whole neighborhood has a lot of great stores and restaurants. When I'm there I will probably pop in Target as well as H Mart (a Korean grocery chain with food from all over Asia) and Blick Art Materials.

I can't comment too much on the locations in Worcester since I'm not as familiar with that city. Maybe that's a road trip for another time.

"Wakanda Forever" features many different locations around the world and it's pretty thrilling when one of those is a place so close and so familiar. It is always great to see Boston on the silver screen no matter what movie and it is especially thrilling when a big scene like, say, something involving superheroes, goes on in a place that's not that far from our backyard.

East Bay Grease defined their sound and landed them with Warner Brothers. Bump City, their 1972 debut for the label, was a hit on both the Billboard 200 and the R&B Albums chart, and netted them the hits "You're Still A Young Man" and "Down to The Nightclub." The '70s were a boom period with radio classics like "So Very Hard to Go" and "What Is Hip?" and the band continued to tour and record over the years. For more than 50 years, Tower of Power has delivered the best in funk and soul music.

"We were a Soul band called The Motowns," recalls Emilio Castillo. "Rocco was the bass player, I was there, and my brother was the drummer. I met 'Doc' Kupka back in 1968, and gave him an audition. He came in the band, and we eventually changed our name to the Tower of Power."

The reason for the band name change was that they had a specific goal in mind.

Gilford Community Church revisits clean energy project

GILFORD — It has been one year since Gilford Community Church (GCC) installed 204 solar panels installed on the adjoining Gilford Youth Center building as part of a multi-phase Clean Energy Project. While formally considered complete after this installation, the intention behind the project lives on.

"The desire for clean energy represents an ongoing intention, a care and concern for the planet, people, and all life forms," said Pastor Michael Graham.

This intention, said GCC member Warren Hutchins, who spearheaded the church's Clean Energy Project, now finds new 'fuel' in the need to upgrade their heating system. "We are looking at energy efficient boilers for the church as well as ways to reduce the constant operation of our UV system operation to coincide with their operation," he explained.

According to Graham, reducing energy usage means a reduction in expenses, savings he said they invest back into the community through their community outreach initiatives. "By controlling our energy costs, that frees us up to address critical community needs and support local nonprofits," he said.
