Day Kimball establishes food pantry for cancer patients

PUTNAM — Day Kimball Healthcare (DKH) recently established Caitlyn's Cupboard, a hospital-based food pantry to support cancer patients struggling with food insecurity.

Caitlyn's Cupboard addresses malnutrition and food insecurity among patients treated in Day Kimball Hospital's Rose Bove LaRose Cancer Center through the provision of no-cost shelf-stable food and nutritional education on a monthly basis.

"At DKH, we recognize that nutrition plays a vital role in cancer prevention and treatment," said Caitlyn Sward, registered dietitian nutritionist, Day Kimball Healthcare. "Our food pantry program has added another level in our pursuit to treat the whole patient by meeting their nutrition-related needs during and after their cancer treatment."

Nearly 80 DKH Cancer Center patients have already signed up to receive food through the pantry since its establishment in late March 2020.

"Approximately 42 percent of cancer patients spend their entire life savings within 2 years after their diagnosis," said Sward. "We believe that no one should have to choose between keeping their electricity on and buying groceries for the week. Caitlyn's Cupboard is an opportunity for us to help eliminate some of those difficult choices for our patients."

Day Kimball Healthcare's Cancer Center patients who identify as food insecure can access the pantry.

Sward will schedule pantry appointments with each patient to help them select foods tailored to their specific treatment plan, health needs and dietary requirements. Each person served will receive a three-day supply of non-perishable food for each member of the family, including staple items and healthy snacks.

Caitlyn's Cupboard also provides patients with nutritional information, healthy recipes, and a comprehensive list of local food assistance programs and other community resources.

"We are proud to be able to offer this innovative solution to our patients," said Kristen Willis, director of development, Day Kimball Healthcare. "And we couldn't do it with-

All Aboard: Boxcar Museum seeks help to complete restoration

PUTNAM — The Aspinock Historical Society (AHS) is seeking the community's assistance as the final stages of restoration of the Boxcar Children Museum are rounding the bend.

Covid-19 has been quite a disturbance to our lives this year, and distancing requirements would make managing visitors difficult, so the Boxcar team has used the time wisely to reinforce and re-do the structural body of the boxcar. This steel is heavy and the work is specialized. The time taken to do this extra work will pay off for a long-lasting final product.

Greg Morissette from Trackside Restoration

has been the conductor of the heavy-duty structural steel framework of the project, and has volunteered endless hours to rehab the rusted body. With that specialized work behind them, Greg and the Boxcar Committee are ready for a helping hand from the community.

Every Saturday, starting on July 25, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. (weather permitting) volunteers are needed. If you have simply an hour or two, please lend a helping hand. Many hands together will make fast and fun work. No tools are necessary, just wear old clothes and plan on getting dirty. The rewards will be endless.

In addition to the physical help, Aspinock Historical Society needs a few very specific items to put the Boxcar back together again:

- Exterior steel door with window. To meet ADA requirements. Door openings shall provide a clear width of 32 inches minimum and a maximum of 48 inches. Clear openings of doorways with swinging doors shall be measured between the face of the door and the stop, with the door open 90 degrees.

- Single or double hung window, or possibly a sliding window. There are no more specifics, just a standard size and NO picture windows please.

Character is revealed in the toughest of times

We are living through unprecedented and uncharted times. A pandemic has seized our world, while social unrest and violence has swept into our major cities. Add to it all that it's an election year and everything that is happening has become politicized. It appears that the nation has never been more divided. It has put us on the edge and I'm witnessing people I know speaking and acting in ways I would have otherwise never imagined. How we respond to what's happening in our world is as important as the events themselves.

Respond to circumstances rather than reacting.

There is a difference. A response is thoughtful while a reaction is often "knee jerk" in nature. A response is measured, while a reaction is often the first thing that comes to mind and is usually emotional. When we calmly respond, it often disarms and relaxes others to do the same. Reactions are what we see playing out on our streets and in social media.

Relax. Take a breath. The world is not coming to an end. The truth is that cable news, and reactions to it, are playing out on social media and encouraging us to believe otherwise. Don't believe it. As bad as you may believe things are today, tomorrow the sun will rise and a new day will begin. Yes, take a breath and relax. A new day is coming.

Like the streets, Facebook can be dangerous territory. You may not get physically hit by a brick, but you can certainly suffer the loss of friendships and incite anger that dominates your life.

I rarely post anything on social media that is controversial. I use Facebook and other apps to keep up with friends and family, post my columns and news about my books. I'm a very casual social media user.

I've been following the Covid-19 issues with intense interest. The great mask debate rages on. For every medical professional that says masks are not helpful, there seems to be twenty-five that say they work. I ran across a picture that showed how the virus is spread and how masks can help. The best data I can find say that masks can reduce the spread of the virus by up to 65%. Nothings perfect. Certainly not a mask, but a 65 percent reduction is significant. We teach our kids to cough and sneeze into their arms. It's also not perfect but better than coughing into the open. If true, isn't a mask better than nothing?

So, I posted the graphic and commented, "I think this makes sense." I didn't expect the firestorm that quickly followed. The first comment from a friend began, "You of all people should know better ..." (an example of a reaction rather than a response). Then came the numerous comments about "constitutional rights" and the idea that the pandemic is actually a "plan-demic" and a government conspiracy.

A friend of mine who is a Doctor of 35 years posted a comment about the effectiveness of masks and a young nurse offensively offered him her nursing books, as if he was totally uninformed and she had all the answers. It devolved quickly into a raging mess.

I chose to respond rather than react. Trust me, I could have easily let my emotions rage but instead, I just deleted the post and went on with my day.

Yes, I was bothered and hurt by a few of the comments. But more than anything I watched in wonderment as rational and smart people so openly and purposefully began attacking others who disagreed. My response was to delete the posting and stop giving space for others to react in anger and immaturity. Once the post was gone, everything on my page normalized and I assume everyone else went on with their day.

I'm not smarter or better than anyone else, I just choose to respond rather than react. I choose to be positive and not add fuel to the fire of negativity. Some do the same thing, while the majority do not. To react or respond is a choice we make, just as being positive or negative, or pessimistic or optimistic. These choices determine our success and quality of our lives. And yes, these choices determine our happiness.

Last week, I said I'd never met a successful pessimist. I'll add to it this week by saying I've also never met a happy pessimist.

Want to avoid losing friends? Choose to respond rather than react. Want to be happy? Choose to become an optimist.

Tips to help your landscape beat the heat

Summer has arrived and for many so has the heat. High temperatures and dry conditions often lead to watering bans. This is not only hard on gardeners but also our gardens and lawns. Fortunately, there are ways to help plants thrive despite stressful growing conditions.

GARDEN

shredded leaves, evergreen needles, or shredded bark mulch over the soil in garden beds and around trees and shrubs. Mulching will conserve moisture, keep roots cool and moist, and suppress weeds. As the organic mulch decomposes, it adds nutrients and organic matter to the soil. All these benefits stem from one maintenance task.

Mow lawns high and often, removing no more than one third the total height of the grass. Taller grass produces deeper roots, making the lawn more drought tolerant and more resistant to insects, disease, and other environmental stresses.

Leave the grass clippings on the lawn. They add nitrogen, organic matter, and moisture to the soil. One season of clippings is equal to one fertilizer application. Every time you mow you are improving the soil and fertilizing the lawn.

Sharpen your mower blades to save time by boosting efficiency. And speaking of savings, your mower will consume 22 percent less fuel and your lawn will use up to 30% less water when your mower blades are sharp.

Use a low nitrogen, slow release fertilizer if your lawn and garden plants need a nutrient boost. These types of fertilizers release small amounts of nutrients over an extended period of time. The low level of nitrogen reduces the risk of damaging your already heat-stressed plants.

Remove weeds from garden beds and borders as soon as they appear. These "plants out of place" steal water and nutrients from your desirable garden plants. Plus, they can harbor insects and diseases that are harmful to your garden plants. Removing them before they flower and set seed means you will have hundreds of less weeds to pull next season.

Provide stressed plants with a bit of shade from the hot afternoon sun. Containers can be moved to a more suitable spot during heat waves. Add a bit of temporary shade to garden plants that are struggling to survive in the blazing hot sun. A strategically placed chair, lattice or umbrella may be all that is needed. As temperatures drop, you can move plants back in place and remove the temporary shade.

Use the shade to your advantage as well. Garden in the shady spots whenever possible or use a pop-up canopy to provide shade when needed. Always drink plenty of water, use sunscreen, and work during the cooler morning and evening hours.

Then take some time to enjoy your handiwork. Look at the progress that has been made as you sit back, relax, and enjoy your favorite beverage.

No one wants to be left behind

Who wants to be left behind? Not me. I took out an arrangement of silk flowers, fluffed them up and plunked them down on top of the bookshelf in my office. They are the only fake flowers I own, and while I have a somewhat uneasy relationship with them, they look good on camera and that was my aim. I want to stay in touch by seeing and being seen by others. The computer is the only way right now.

NANCY WEISS

I participate in several video meetings and a weekly church service. I want the background behind me to look good. When I watch the news, I study the commentators' rooms carefully. Some are disappointing. Almost everyone has the same Abraham Lincoln biography on their shelf. Most have boring framed citations on the wall. A few times I've spotted a cat in the background, but few other clues to their taste and possessions.

It's interesting to peek into someone else's home. It's even better to actually visit, which I miss right now. Sometimes the person we know in the outside world is far more interesting in their home. Sometimes our homes reflect us like a bathroom mirror. I've been to messy homes that were owned by people who were seemingly immaculate or tidy places where the denizens were chaotic at work but the opposite with their own things. Mostly, we reflect our personalities in our homes because we are so intertwined.

As a child, I went in and out of many homes. In a rural community, people never used the front door, except for weddings and funerals. Whether it was a grand property or a small farm, people pulled around to the back and knocked on the side or back door, if not announced in advance by a barrage of barking dogs and greeted on arrival by the homeowner. Back entrances held the promise of a basket of kittens, a collection of boots and gardening tools, and a unique smell, peculiar to that house. I can call up several residences with a remembered whiff.

I recently learned of the death of watercolor painter, Tom McCobb. Tom and his wife, Janet, operated a charming B&B in Pomfret for decades. Tom had an art gallery in the barn behind the house and painted scenes throughout the area and in Maine, where he spent part of each summer. Tom was a grab-the-gusto sort of man with a booming voice, strong opinions and real talent with a brush. I bought a number of his paintings as he captured scenes of the world I love. Some are of houses we both knew.

Cobbscroft, the house he and Janet shared, was decorated in vibrant colors with attractive draperies and slipcovers. Of course, they had dogs and paying guests and well as family and friends. Mixed with the smell of delicious breakfasts was oil paint, canvas and an afternoon cocktail. New owners added their own touches but each one leaves something behind.

I can't wait to visit people in their homes again. I'm eager to see old places and step into new ones. I've enjoyed wandering around private gardens and standing outside talking to friends, but settling into a soft couch or sitting down on a hard kitchen chair for a long visit is where I want to be.

From my computer screen, I check the view of my home office. The flower arrangement is okay. It looks as if I'm keeping up. But when our isolation ends, please – come to my house. Or better yet, invite me over.

Opinion and commentary from the Quiet Corner

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

My perspective on our political divide

To the Editor:
Our Political System is built on debate and compromise. Although we are a collection of very different individuals, our political system lumps us into two perspectives: Conservative and Liberal. Our ultimate goal is to achieve a better way of life for us and for our children, and to pass on a political system that ensures sound values and security. Each “side” gives a little to achieve what both can live with. Generally, our two major parties support different - and both valid - perspectives on how to achieve that goal. Loosely speaking, Republicans tend to favor state's rights, big business and ‘trickle down’ effects reaching workers, tax cuts, no handouts and increased military spending. Democrats tend to favor national policy, the workers and those unable to work, tax support to provide a safety net for the unfortunates and decreased military spending.

Discussion, debate, compromise allow us to come to workable, fair policies that improve our country's people and position in the world. This also requires good information, innovative thinking based not in emotion and instinct, but in scientific, well-proven fact.

But ultimately, we are a collection of individuals, so to lump all “the Democrats” and “the Republicans” together violates our individuality and the remarkable range of ideas/opinions in our world. Sadly, back in the 90s, then Speaker of the House, Newt Gingrich, began to push strong division between right and left, and since then it has become increasingly more difficult to find meaningful compromise between two valid points of view. Under our current Administration, this sense of separation has come to a new level.

We have so much to do so our children can thrive and have the same privileges, comforts and securities that we have. We can solve these problems by coming together, not by dividing. People in the world working together to better our world. Doesn't that sound good?

KAREN RYKER
WOODSTOCK

Blaming the victim

To the Editor:

In Gary W. Moore's July 17 Positively Speaking, he responds to an email regarding his claim that we are who, what, and where we find ourselves solely because of our decisions. The emailer challenged him by stating he had lost everything as “a victim of circumstances” beyond his control. Moore's response was to not resort to blaming others, advocating for a “pull yourself up by your bootstraps” philosophy.

Unfortunately, we are often unable to change our course as we'd like or live the life we hoped for; try as we may. Where we find ourselves is not simply the result of our decision making; circumstances beyond our control can significantly impact our life's trajectory moving us along a path we would not have selected. Infants and young children, for example, have no decision-making power, with their lives being in the hands of their caregivers. Where they live, go to school, their level of access to quality health care, who their family allows them to interact with, and more weighs in heavily on who they become. Another example is found in those enslaved by others. The current movement toward making reparations for the consequences of slavery in America acknowledges our responsibility for the negative impact upon them and their later generations.

Yes, it is true that we can accept our fate and make the best of it, even when it is never what we would have decided on if given the opportunity. I understand that it is in one's interest to try to overcome obstacles, and think positively. But, to believe that we are not subject to forces and conditions outside of our influence is naive. To preach to, and almost chastise, those who have been negatively impacted this way is akin to blaming the victim.

The beginnings of a police state?

To the Editor:
OK, It's starting. First, it was LaFayette Park, and now it's Portland. We're seeing the beginnings of a police state. Trump is sending in basically storm troopers in full camouflage and with no insignia into Portland to illegally detain peaceful demonstrators. It appears that these goons are from Homeland Security, U.S. Marshals Service, U.S. Customs and Border Protection and the Federal Protection Service. They are seizing people, taking them to unknown locations in unmarked cars, reading them their Miranda Rights and detaining them for hours. They are finally let go without being formally arrested or charged.

These demonstrators were doing nothing illegal, but their detainment is definitely illegal. Their First, Fourth, and Fifth Amendment Rights are being violated egregiously. Whatever the protestors may be doing that might be illegal are misdemeanors at best. Why is Trump using federal power to quell misdemeanors which are clearly the prevue of the local law enforcement? Why indeed. Trump is testing the waters to see just how much he can get away with in fostering a police state using Gestapo tactics of intimidation and fear mongering.

And Trump has already signaled the next step in Federal overreach. He and the RNC are contemplating organizing up to 50,000 people to oversee voting sites, particularly focusing on Democratic areas. It's not unreasonable to believe these could include camouflage-wearing taxpayer-funded rifle-toting border patrol agents aggressively checking papers of every voter in line in the guise of “securing against voter fraud.” It has been proven in many studies and many states that voter fraud is virtually non-existent. So the purpose of these poll checkers is clearly intimidation which constituts voter fraud in its own right.

And let's not forget the thousands of polling sites that have been taken down, mostly in Blue States or states where Republicans are facing hard elections.

All of this constitutes a terrifying abuse of power. Unless the states, municipalities, Congress and the DNC step up and exert their rights and powers, we are most likely to see the Republic torn apart in November.

And let's not forget that Trump is threatening to veto any stimulus bill unless there is a substantial reduction or elimination of the Payroll Tax. This tax pays for Social Security and Medicare. So why is Trump so hell-bent on destroying these functions? I haven't a clue. And he has not articulated any reasons either. All you Trumpers out there receiving SS and Medicare, aren't you worried about losing your benefits? Why follow this idiot who wants to ruin your retirement? The only people who benefit from cutting the Payroll Tax are the corporations and the wealthy. Why don't you Trumpers see the incredible damage this will do?

Also, let's not overlook what Trump is doing with the Center for Disease Control. In any new relief bill, he wants to cut CDC funding for testing and tracing. How incredibly stupid. But of course, this is because Trump is fixated on numbers -- as if screwing around with the numbers will alter reality. The CDC no longer is the report-to agency for Covid infections. These numbers are going into some black hole in the Administration to be manipulated and probably not reported at all. Fortunately, we have Johns Hopkins who is collecting this information and reporting it honestly.

Trump has developed a supporter base by appealing to their emotions. He uses inflammatory rhetoric and promises nothing of substance. Just keeps saying what's going to happen with no specifics given. He can't even articulate his agenda for a second term. Furthermore, he can't articulate anything. The following is something Trump recently said verbatim:

“So we have many exciting things that we'll be announcing over the next eight weeks, I would say? Things that nobody has even contemplated, thought about, thought possible, and things that we're gonna [sic] get done, we have gotten done, we started in most cases. But it's gonna be a very exciting eight weeks, a, uh, eight weeks like, I prob, I think Mike, we can honestly say, nobody's ever going to see eight weeks like we're gonna have. Because we really have.

“We have, uh, we're taking on immigration, we're taking on education, we're taking on so many aspects of things that uh, people were hopelessly tied up in knots in Congress, they can't, they've been working on some of these things for 25, 30 years, it wasn't happening. But, you'll see, uh, levels of detail, and you'll see levels of thought that a lot of people believed very strongly we didn't have in this country. We're gonna get things done, we're gonna get things done that they've wanted to see done for a long, long time. So I think we'll start sometime on Tuesday? We'll be discussing our one plan on suburbia, but that's one of many, many different plans, then we're going into the immigration, the world of immigration, the world of education.”

Can any of you make any sense of this? I can't. But this is typical of his rants and empty promises appealing to emotion with no specifics or facts at all. Wake up people. We have a moron as a President.

Finally, have you seen the pic of Trump in the Oval Office with cans of Goya products showing two thumbs up? This is a blatant violation of the Hatch Act which prohibits government employees shilling commercial products. Just another crime and an impeachable act.

He was a 26-year-old Welsh coal miner when God called him to do something very similar to what Daniel did centuries before. I should mention that many other believers had been praying similar prayers for years. But he was the vessel God chose to use in 1904.

His name was Evan Roberts. He was raised in a Calvinistic Methodist home. He worked in the coal mines with his father, then later worked for his uncle as a blacksmith. He was very devout and known to be a man of prayer. While studying for the ministry at Newcastle Emlyn he attended a service held by evangelist Seth Joshua and received the baptism of the Holy Spirit. He returned to his hometown, hoping for an opportunity to preach the gospel. His pastor did not let him preach on Sunday or at the Monday prayer meeting. So, Roberts just attended the prayer meetings and let God begin using him to minister extemporaneously. People responded to his ministry so well that he began ministering night after night, with people staying up until early in the morning.

Years of prayer had built up and, in God's time, there was an explosion of conversions, vibrant preaching and singing, and a manifestation of the Gifts of the Spirit. Over 30,000 people were said to have converted within a few month's time. Over the next year or so, it is estimated that 100,000 people made a commitment to Christ. Not only that, but five years later, 80 percent of the converts were still attending church.

The social changes in Wales were drastic. Bars were nearly empty, judges had no cases to prosecute, and policemen were laid off, for lack of work. Illegitimate births dropped 44 percent within a year. Some even claimed that since the miners cleaned up their language and stopped cursing, the horses slowed down and mining productivity declined.

This move of God was so exceptional that people began travelling from all over the world to Wales to see what was taking place. The Welsh revival had a direct influence on what would become the Asuza St. Revival in America. This revival was the beginning of the Pentecostal/Charismatic movement which has changed the Christian community.

Looking back at how it all started, some have pointed to a prayer that Roberts prayed as that young Bible student. Keep in mind that Roberts was devout, and God had stirred his faith in several ways. For example, he told several people that he had experienced visitations from the Holy Spirit where he saw “all Wales being lifted up to Heaven.” On another occasion he asked his roommate, who would later be his brother-in-law, if he believed that God could give them 100,000 souls. That lead to the now famous three-word prayer that he began to pray: “Lord bend us.” Those three words describe introspective prayer perfectly.

Can we sincerely pray those three words “Lord bend us?” Do we care enough about what he is doing to change what we are doing? Can we be introspective enough to let Him take things out of our hearts that don't align with what He is doing? If so, we can expect amazing results, even though we are in the middle of a world-wide pandemic.

The traits of a good investor – taking charge of your finances

The COVID-19 pandemic has had many effects on the whole world, but how has it changed your financial habits? Many people are finding they are spending less and saving more, but what is the next step? Maybe COVID has inspired you to set new goals, or changed the goals you might have already had. You can utilize investing as a way to grow your money, work toward achieving your financial life goals, and set yourself up for retirement. As we continue the conversation throughout July of mid-year planning, consider how you can take your finances to the next level.

Despite your level of investing experience, there are certain investor traits that can prove advantageous for anyone. Traits such as patience, willingness to confront and deal with mistakes, and recognizing when help is needed can benefit portfolio returns, particularly for a long-term investor. Even risk aversion, sometimes a problem for those who are concerned about their investing abilities, can be an advantage if it's applied wisely. Overall, understanding and expanding upon your own knowledge, risk tolerance, and patience can help you become a successful investor – and we're here to help you along the way.

Feel you aren't as knowledgeable as you should be about investing?

Chances are you're in good company. Plenty of people know less than they should but aren't willing to recognize or admit it; as a result, their portfolios suffer. Recognizing what you don't know can be an asset. Being willing to ask questions and understand some basics will serve you better than sticking your head in the sand.

Also, being a good investor doesn't mean you need to do all the work yourself. A financial professional can help you set a strategy, select specific investments, monitor performance, and make adjustments as circumstances dictate. There is no assurance that working with a financial professional will improve investment results.

If you're afraid to make decisions because you don't know a mutual fund from an exchange-traded fund, now is the time to begin exploring and learning! Your retirement plan at work might provide educational materials or assistance, and there are plenty of books, magazines, and websites that can help. Don't be afraid to talk to friends who may have similar questions, but do your own research, too. Take baby steps and learn as you go. You don't have to do everything at once; even a small step is better than none.

Finally, recognize that you're not alone. Others may have the same doubts as you about their investing abilities.

Are you risk averse in the right way?

When people feel unsure about their investing skills, they sometimes take the path of least resistance and invest very conservatively. In some cases, this can be helpful. For example, avoiding big risky bets that can single-handedly drag down a portfolio can sometimes lead to better risk-adjusted performance. However, this trait can also be a double-edged sword if you're investing far more conservatively than is appropriate for your goals and circumstances, either out of fear of making a mistake or from not being aware of how risks can be managed. Being unaware of how inflation can affect investment returns or how to balance various types of risks can leave you vulnerable to a shortfall in your retirement savings or other financial goals.

All investing involves risk, including the potential loss of principal, and there can be no guarantee that any investment strategy will be successful. But perhaps the biggest risk of all is not taking the steps needed to try to secure your financial future.

One strategy to mitigate risk is to set aside a cash cushion of three to six months' worth of expenses aside. This way, if your investments take a dip, you have a backup plan to make necessary purchases and payments in the meantime.

Can you be patient?

A portfolio is — or should be — a means to an end, not a competitive sport. It's a way to pursue your financial goals, rather than a measure of self-worth or a vehicle for bragging about how you “beat the market.”

Patience can also help you withstand market volatility. Many investors see a dip in the market and want to sell. However, having patience and confidence in the market can help you in the long-term. History is a good indicator of market performance and turnaround after an event like we are experiencing now. While this pandemic is different from other historical events we have experienced in recent history, the financial markets have maintained resiliency throughout other world events that have caused volatile markets.

Since 1950, when you look at all 13 bear market events, you see that for those who stayed in the markets saw during these significant downturns were rewarded with a return one, three, and five years later. While past performance is not a guarantee of future results, the historical returns of the markets shown here prove resiliency from past events.

Anyone can invest

If COVID has sparked better savings habits, you're tired of making sourdough bread, or you just have time to think about the retirement account that isn't going to create itself, mid-year is a good time to consider taking a few baby steps toward achieving your financial life goals. LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A history lesson

To the Editor:

I'd like to know what BLM is doing to help benefit their people? What is their plan to stop the violence in the streets and the killings of blacks by blacks? I feel that these are more than legitimate questions. I asked this on Facebook, and though I did not receive an answer; I was called a racist! Ah, the “r” word. And speaking of Facebook, my reply to a picture of a bunch of white looters was; “white trash sacks of garbage.” That response was cited as “hate speech” and resulted in a stint in facebook jail. Gee, and I thought I was telling it like it is. Recently, a 15 year old black girl was attacked by a mob of black youths and robbed of her sneakers. A group of black punks beat up and robbed a white restaurant manager in South Carolina. Also, four black teens attacked a pregnant black teen woman and kicked her child in the head, but what's worse is that you hear about shootings and this type of violence on an almost daily basis. Paint all the murals you want, raise all the awareness that you want, put signs on your lawn, but when will something be done to stop these senseless acts? Al Sharpton (a true tax cheat), wearing a dress shirt and tie, helped paint “black lives matter” on a street (another photo-op?), but I've never heard of him doing anything to condemn the violence, or donating any of his money toward the cause. I'd like to think (and hope) that the 220 million dollars donated from George Soros will be put to the proper use. Personally, I'd trust an unknown panhandler in the street before I'd put any faith in Soros, his actions or his motives. I agree that black lives matter, but so do blue lives, brown lives, white lives (and whatever other color I failed to mention) - and if you want to use the “r” word on me for saying that, or for anything else I've said in this letter - I could care less! Kudos by the way to the “Back the Blue” rally that was recently held in Killingly.

Now for a history lesson. Do you know who the «red shirts» (or the redshirts) were? The red shirts were a southern based white supremacist group that originated in 1875, and operated in the last years of, and after the end of the reconstruction era. The red shirts were democrats (does that surprise you?) and a group linked to, but better organized than the KKK, who opposed civil rights for black Americans. While sometimes engaging in violent acts of terrorism, they used intimidation and force against “freedmen” (blacks), republicans and non-democratic voters. Two of the more prominent figures involved with the red shirts were Wade Hampton (one of the largest slave owners in the southeast, and a former Governor of South Carolina and United States Senator) and Benjamin Tillman (also a former Governor of South Carolina and United States Senator) who coincidentally both have statues on the State House grounds. (More information about these men, and the history of the red shirts, can be found at Wikipedia.) I find it odd, though, that nobody (to my knowledge anyhow) has targeted those statues, but the ignorant, misguided miscreants have gone after those of Abraham Lincoln, U.S. Grant and the Virgin Mary. (And by the way, the desecrated statue of the Virgin Mary was in Boston, Mass., which was a monument to the veterans of World War II. So, whats going to be next, ban the wearing of red shirts? And, if ever I hear any of these democratic politicians suggest that we pay reparations for slavery, I'm going to ask if their check is in the mail.

Eastern Connecticut has a strong leader

To the Editor:

The people of Ashford, Chaplin, Coventry, Eastford, Ellington, Hampton, Pomfret, Stafford, Tolland, Union, and Woodstock have a strong leader who is working hard and fighting for them in the State Senate. His name is Dan Champagne, our State Senator from and for the 35th District.

Dan knows our towns. He cares about our communities. His wife and he have raised their family here in northeastern Connecticut.

We are experiencing challenging and uncertain times. It is reassuring to have Dan as our State Senator. Dan has shown himself very qualified to be the leader we need working tirelessly and strongly for us. Why change? We do not need to do so.

Unlike some people who talk about what they would do if in the Legislature, Dan has a great record of accomplishments in the Legislature as our State Senator. Dan has brought his years of experience as a good law enforcement officer and as a capable mayor of Vernon, helping all people, to what he does as a State Senator. Dan understands firsthand the difficult budgets our towns face and how to provide important municipal services to people. He knows well that what state government does and does not do with public policy and programs, as well as with its worsening financial situation, impacts upon the residents of our communities. Dan has been a champion of our schools, public infrastructure, businesses and the jobs they create, agriculture, health care, and the beautiful natural resources and character of northeastern Connecticut. Dan provides a much-needed stability of common sense and fiscal responsibility during these unprecedented times, including these times of increasing state taxes and fees.

Dan not only knows how to bring people together to get things done, but he also has been doing just that for many years. Dan knows that when we work together, not just despite our differences but also because of our different experiences, ideas, skills, and beliefs, we can achieve a lot of good things that stand the test of time. These troubling times do indeed demand a leader who shows up and shows us how to unite and to work toward common purposes as communities. We need this more than ever before. Dan Champagne is our State Senator doing this.

Dan Champagne continues to provide a positive and proactive way of doing things for your families, friends, and neighbors throughout the 35th Senate District. He continues to focus on issues important to you.

Dan is a friend of mine. I have seen him hard at work. As an elected official myself in Woodstock (Chair of the Planning & Zoning Commission), I appreciate and know the hard work required, the necessary understanding of issues, the inclusive working with people, and the dedicated effort to see things to completion (big and small things). I share Dan's work ethic and principles. Those who know Dan agree. If you have not yet met him, then when you do, you will agree as well.

Let's support Dan Champagne for re-election as our State Senator for Ashford, Chaplin, Coventry, Eastford, Ellington, Hampton, Pomfret, Stafford, Tolland, Union, and Woodstock. Let's re-elect Dan Champagne for a better and just future for all of us.

A Cumby's that stands apart

To the Editor:

I love our local Cumby's in Putnam. It's truly a unique place, even when compared to other Cumby's. The staff have an infectious pleasantness and sincere enthusiasm in their greetings to absolutely anyone who enters the store. Their welcomes and continued good natured interactions with customers permeates a vibe throughout the store and one feels immediately uplifted, especially in the morning. Don't get me wrong, I initially went for their coffee (great!), but most everything else in the store is a fast food nightmare of delicious but unhealthy comfort snacks, and I could easily make my coffee at home. It's the staff and the environment I go for, the camaraderie they've developed with all the customers reminding me of the theme from “Cheers” (“where everyone knows your name”). It's a great start to the day and I truly hope the staff there know how valuable they are. To start a day like that is priceless and healthy. They should sincerely put themselves up there with health service providers, what they provide is that valuable.

The other factor is their small size.

It offers an intimacy akin to a warm living space that the larger Cumby's miss and are much more antiseptic. I was afraid during the remodeling they would lose that intimacy but they haven't missed a beat. The talk of the town during that renovation was when they were going to reopen. The anticipation was great and offered a welcome respite and distraction from our national anxieties.

I didn't think they could get better, but their COVID response proved me wrong. This was a situation where their small intimacy could prove troublesome but their layout and staff modeling maintained safety and it kept the same quick flow. But again, even though the staff was asked to perform at a higher level (preparing your drinks) they did it with their usual sincere good humor. Again, I hope they know how valuable they are, the contribution they make to peoples lives is not minuscule at all. Especially in these troubled times, they are truly a “bridge over troubled waters.” Thanks, guys.

Resources for research

Although the Killingly Historical Center is closed to the public for research, if you are doing genealogical or historical research on Killingly, there are a number of resources available online. Those who have been researching a while are probably familiar with these, but I'll provide a quick summary for newer researchers.

Ellen D. Larned writes about the town and area from its early settlement to the 1830's and early 1840's and includes names of many early families in her History of Windham County, Connecticut (2 vol). Richard Bayles has edited a lengthy work of the same title. It covers events into the 1890's and is especially good for summaries of the history of 19th century mills and churches. It includes brief genealogical sketches. Allen B. Lincoln's A Modern History of Windham County, Connecticut takes the story to about 1920. Pliny LeRoy Harwood's History of Eastern Connecticut, 3 volumes, was published in 1931-1932. The Commemorative Biographical Record of Tolland and Windham Counties, published by Beers (circa 1903) includes detailed genealogical sketches. Miles of Millstreams, by Margaret M. Weaver and Geraldine & Raymond Wood, is a brief chronological history of Killingly published at the time of the Bicentennial. It is not available online, but copies appear on the Amazon site. The Barbour Collection of Connecticut Vital Records to about 1850, the Hale Cemetery Collection, and the findagrave website all are helpful online sources for local genealogical research.

The Killingly Public Library has online subscriptions to Ancestry and American Ancestors (New England Historic Genealogical Society) if you would like to access census records. APPOINTMENTS ARE NECESSARY TO USE KILLINGLY LIBRARY'S COMPUTERS. Facemasks are required.

Volunteers will continue to answer genealogical requests during this Pandemic. Research forms and information about fees for the Killingly Historical & Genealogical Society may be found at the website at the end of this article.

This week I thought I'd check the July 29, 1965 Windham County Transcript to see what made the headlines. If you were in the area at the time, you might recall the Killingly High School building on Westfield Avenue was under construction. The work had not been without difficulties. "Metal Workers Strike at New High School Over; Delays Schedule. J. Edgar Moe, chairman of the building committee of the new Killingly High School, has announced to the Transcript that the more than 25-day strike of the sheet metal workers union, which has retarded the completion of the new school, is now ended. It was feared, Mr. Moe said, that strike might prevent the contractor from completely finishing the school for the fall term as was originally planned... Now with the strike settled, Mr.

KILLINGLY AT 300

MARGARET WEAVER

Moe indicated that the classrooms, administrative offices, and most of the other rooms, with the possible exception of the auditorium and gymnasium, will be available for the September term as scheduled, depending however, on how soon the men get back to work...One year approximately has passed since the ground was first broken for the $3 million dollar building on Westfield Avenue, which will, upon completion, will be able to house 1,200 students, with a maximum capacity of several hundred above that figure." If you were a student who was headed to this new high school in 1965, it would be wonderful to have your memories. Please share them by emailing me or sending a letter to the Killingly Historical Center (addresses below).

"American Festival Slated to Place Accent on Youth. ..Slated for Saturday, August 7 (1965) on the grounds of the Danielson Federal Savings and Loan Association, according to Marge Gaffney, fine arts consultant for the association. This newest venture in the Danielson Federal's fine arts series is geared in theme to the Western Square Dance Festival program which is to take place in the evening, she said, with dance clubs from all over New England coming into the area for what is termed 'the first and largest Western dance festival ever held in this section of Eastern Connecticut... An antique bicycle exhibit, with ten of the models in the parade loaned by the Walter Sandholms is to be one of the outstanding attractions" (WCT July 29, 1965). Please share your memories if you participated in or recall this unusual event.

That issue of the Transcript contained a photo of some of the area residents who were headed to Europe. "Members of the Immaculate Retreat League who left Tuesday for European trip during which they will visit many countries and historical spots. They also look forward to an expected audience with the Holy Father in Rome on August 8. Officials of the League are (left to right in the photo) Mr. & Mrs. Theodore Billings, Mr. & Mrs. Raymond Aucoin, Mr. & Mrs. Michael Ben, and Mr. & Mrs. Sylvio Billings."

Movies being advertised in that paper included Mary Poppins, starring Julie Andrews and Dick Van Dyke at the Quinebaug Drive-In (Quinebaug Four Corners) and The Sandpiper with Elizabeth Taylor, Richard Burton, and Eva Marie Saint at the Parkway Drive-In on Route 12 in Plainfield. Ida Ransom reminded me that Mansfield Drive-in is still open in case you're eager for a night out. The Orpheum in Danielson was showing a double feature of James Bond movies---Sean Connery in both Dr. No and From Russia With Love. For an alternative form of entertainment during the summer of 1965, you could have headed to Wildwood Park at Alexander's Lake on Wednesday and Sunday nights for rollerskating (WCT July 29, 1965).

Do you remember Plaid Stamps? The A & P in Danielson was giving them away. Do any of you recall redeeming them for gifts? In central Pennsylvania we had S & H Green Stamps. I know my mother used them to buy my luggage when I went away to college.

The mail for the Historical Center is being checked. Please send your membership renewals to P.O. Box 265 Danielson, CT 06239.

Tips for effective remote learning

An increased reliance on virtual home instruction has many students rethinking their organizational strategies and daily school schedules. Learning at home is different from being in a traditional classroom environment, but with some effective strategies, students can persevere without missing a beat.

STICK TO A SCHEDULE

Many students are successful because they follow a schedule. The Center for Social and Emotional Foundations of Early Learning says that routines and schedules are important because they influence a child's emotional and cognitive development. Children feel secure with schedules, which may help them recognize what's expected of them.

When learning at home, students should strive to maintain as consistent a schedule as possible, including bed-times, wake times, hours devoted to learning, and time to get outside or engage in downtime activities.

CONNECT LIVE IF POSSIBLE

There are many free tools and resources available that enable teachers to provide live video lessons or to record them so students can watch them later. Similarly, social networking apps and virtual meeting programs enable students to connect digitally. This can be helpful for collaborative learning assignments or just to see a familiar face.

STICK TO TOOLS THAT WORK

Once students find apps or systems that work, they should stick with them, offers Khan Academy, an educational tutoring resource. There are many factors outside of one's control during virtual instruction, but maintaining consistency with tools and schedules is one way to feel more confident and secure.

CHECK STUDENT ACCOUNTS FREQUENTLY

Just like students, teachers may be learning as they go in regard to remote learning strategies. Students should be sure to check school email accounts or other places where teachers post assignments a few times per day so that they stay on top of all assignments and are aware of due dates.

REACH OUT TO INSTRUCTORS

Allegheny College suggests students contact their teachers if they are unsure of how to participate in remote learning environments. Ask questions about assignments, get clarification on key topics and be sure to tune into any remote chats or virtual “office hours.”

STAY IN TOUCH WITH GUIDANCE, IF NEEDED

Remote learning is a new experience for many students, and there may be certain struggles or road blocks. It can be easy to grow frustrated with equipment failures or lack of in-person interaction. Schools employ qualified therapists and guidance counselors who are just a click, call or email away if issues need to be talked through. Students should utilize all resources made available to them.

Virtual home instruction can be made even easier with some extra assistance and guidance.

The outbreak of the novel coronavirus COVID-19 left no aspect of life untouched, and education was no exception. The short-term effects of stay-at-home measures were felt immediately by millions of students across the globe. But there will be long-term effects, too, and one of the first such long-term dominoes to fall was the relaxation of SAT requirements for aspiring college students. As stay-at-home measures lasted longer than many people initially anticipated, high school students learned that SAT and SAT subject tests were being canceled. The Princeton Review® noted in late May that the College Board added a new test date for September after the June tests were canceled. However, many schools have dropped the SAT and ACT requirement for fall 2021 admissions. The University of California, which includes nine different schools in its system, suspended the requirement for students applying for fall 2021 in early April, and many schools followed suit in the ensuing months. As prospective high school seniors prepare for their final year of high school and begin thinking about where they want to apply for college, they should work with their guidance counselors to determine just what is required of them during the admissions process.

Take-out tips when dining at home

Although takeout has long been a convenience enjoyed by people around the world, in recent months takeout became a key way for many restaurants to stay afloat when the novel coronavirus COVID-19 forced many to close their facilities to customers.

Restaurants have been allowed to remain open, though they have been forced to change their business models. In a matter of weeks, establishments that were not accustomed to offering takeout quickly reimaged their operations to offer curbside pickup or delivery options. In turn, many communities promoted movements to help keep restaurants afloat, with some encouraging residents to participate in Takeout Thursdays to patronize struggling bars, restaurants and delis.

Takeout has always provided a respite from cooking meals at home, but it seems especially welcomed during the COVID-19 outbreak. Now more than ever, individuals and families could use a break from cooking three meals per day. When opting for takeout, consider these tasty tips.

Support small businesses. Independent restaurants could have a tougher time bouncing back from reduced sales and income than large restaurant chains. When seeking out food- and beverage-related businesses, lean heavily on mom-and-pop restaurants, many of which are pillars in their communities. These are the businesses whose owners may have children in your local schools or those who sponsor local sports leagues.

Investigate food safety. Inquire about the safety measures restaurants are taking to ensure food safety. Most restaurants and delivery services are enacting even more safety measures than are required by law. Keep in mind, however, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention has said, "There is no evidence to support transmission of COVID-19 associated with food." Simple handwashing after touching food packaging and your food or face may be sufficient.
