However, selectmen are also working to resolve confusion over what members of the board will be called with the potential of bringing the matter back to voters to clarify language in the article.

The matter was brought to the table during the Board of Selectmen's Sept. 10 meeting where Board Chair Peter Lancette voiced his concern that the Fall Town Meeting without being properly worded or structured. Community Food Collaborative helps the food insecure STURBRIDGE - The Community Food Collaborative (CFC) is celebrating its seventh year and having a very busy and productive year. The garden operates under the guidance of a 10-member committee with Joe Coan serving as President of the CFC.

"When we started the garden seven years ago, it was much smaller. We have expanded several times and have learned a lot about working smarter," Coan admits. "Doing similar tasks each year teaches us what to expect. However, our best predictions can change with the weather so we are always learning."

While growing organic vegetables sounds pretty easy, there are always other important tasks that must be done to reach our goal of high quality organic produce.

Maintenance: Perhaps the largest task is garden maintenance. This year Robinson Tree Service generously donated their time and service to cut down several trees blocking sun from one corner of the garden. They shredded the trees and spread the mulch on the top and side of the garden. We also had all the wild growth around the fence of the garden pushed back 20 feet. A heavy weed fabric was put over the dirt and then a four-inch layer of crushed stone was spread on top of the fabric. We are hopeful this will protect us for a long time from the growth encroaching into the garden.

Irrigation: The expanded irrigation system was certainly needed this year with all the very hot and dry weather we had. It's time consuming when we first open the garden because we rotate crops each year and the irrigation system consists of over one thousand linear feet of dripline in the beds. The dripline needs to be arranged each year to accommodate the new plants with enough water for them to thrive. Arranging the dripline cannot be done before the garden is planted so it's a scramble to get the lines in place once Suzanne, our head gardener, and her helpers plant. Planting in the garden started this year on May 27; however, we had started seedlings elsewhere well in advance of actual in-ground planting. To say planting goes fast is a mis-statement when she actually planted 2,224 plants in the garden. This number includes the plants generously donated to us each year by an experienced gardener. Raised beds: We currently have 45 raised beds. Several of the beds were moved or resized somewhat this year to make it easier for the volunteers to reach everywhere in the bed without stepping inside the bed. This year we replaced 12 of the old beds with new ones made of the same accoya wood as the 10 replacement beds we installed last year. We will continue to replace the old beds each year until all have been replaced with the new wood that is guaranteed not to rot for 20 years.

Challenges: Besides the challenge of laying the dripline around all the plants each year, we had a few challenges with critters (large and small) who love what we grow. One species of small critter loved our tomatoes but only took one or two bites before moving on to the next tomato. A much larger critter jumped over the six-foot fence and loved our string beans. Perhaps we should find a volunteer to stay at the garden at night keeping watch for unwanted critters.

In spite of the work and challenges in growing a large garden, it has also been very rewarding. We have a lot to be

Local fairs and festivals roll on

BY KEVIN FLANDERS STAFF WRITER

REGION — With Halloween and the holiday season quickly approaching, central Massachusetts residents are encouraged to check out local fairs, festivals, and programs this fall.

Whether you're looking for Halloween decorations, Thanksgiving supplies, or Christmas gifts, area crafters, vendors, and event organizers have something for everyone.

In Brookfield, the 45th annual Apple Country Fair will take place on Saturday, Oct. 12, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The event will bring thousands of guests to the Brookfield Town Common for a day of fun and festivi-

Highlights will include fundraisers; dozens of crafters; food trucks; and the famous apple pie contest.

"Fairgoers can browse and buy hand-knit sweaters and blankets, carved wooden bowls and décor, beaded jewelry, specialty soaps and lotions, hand-crafted toys, locally-produced honey, and more," read a statement released by event organizers.

Proceeds from the event will benefit the Brookfield Community Club, a charitable organization that awards grants to enrich community life.

To learn more about the festival and how you can get involved, visit www.applecountryfair.com.

Meanwhile, central Massachusetts officials urge residents to think local this shopping season and support vendors at area festivals. As we look deeper into the fall, additional craft fairs will take place at Tantasqua Regional High School in Sturbridge (Nov. 9), Oxford High School (Dec. 7), and Auburn High School (Dec. 14).

Leicester High School will also host its holiday craft fair on Saturday, Dec. 7, from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

An array of local church fairs, festivals, and other programs will also take place this fall season. Guests are invited to enjoy the seventh annual Pumpkin Patch organized by Sturbridge Federated Church.

Running from Sept. 28 through Oct. 31, the Pumpkin Patch will be located between Town Hall and Joshua Hyde Library in Stur-

"Let everyone know the best place to get your autumn decorations is the Sturbridge Federated Church. Our high-quality pumpkins and gourds are grown by the Navajo Nation," read a statement released by organizers. "We also offer locally produced mums, hay bales, and cornstalks. Most of our proceeds support our ministries, including local and regional charities."

Weather permitting, the hours of operation for the Pumpkin Patch are: Monday through Friday (10:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.); Saturday (9 a.m. to 6 p.m.); and Sunday (11 a.m. to

Featured activities will include a pumpkin carving demonstration by a professional carver (Oct. 5); pumpkin stories for children (Oct. 12 and Oct. 26); Rock Voices singers; photos with a scarecrow (available daily); a corn hole toss activity (available daily); and pumpkin bowling (available daily).

Presentation pays tribute to Rachel Carson

BY GUS STEEVES CORRESPONDENT

CHARLTON — "Everyone has the right to secure his or her home from intrusion of another's poison."

That quote came from one of Rachel Carson's last public appearances, testifying before Congress when she was deathly ill with cancer in 1964. But its message is still relevant, maybe even more so, now, and retired professor Ellen Duzak brought that message to a Southbridge Garden Club talk in Charlton last week.

Duzak said Carson's message of humanity's ecological interdependence with other species was a new and sometimes controversial one in that era. Carson grew up during the heyday of what was called the "natural studies movement" of the early 1900s, and was raised a reformist Presbyterian, with her family believing in "fixing nature."

While her youthful education focused largely on what nature could do for humanity. "what she got from it was a biocentric idea." Carson started expressing that in print with four articles in St Nicholas magazine, a quite popular media source then, before she graduated high school in 1925. They helped her get into what was then the Pennsylvania College for Women (now Chatham University) as an English major, where she was praised for her writing.

But one of her advisors saw her interest in biology, and pushed her in that direction instead, leading to a master's in marine biology at Johns Hopkins despite the fact she'd "never seen the ocean." That changed rapidly. Before long, eight weeks in the "completely equal" (in terms of male-female and student-scientist) atmosphere of Woods Hole Marine Biology Lab (MBL) set Carson on the path that would make her famous and connect her with "the elite" of world biologists in that era. As Duzak noted, Carson would later send "the best minds in the world" 10-15 letters a day for both friendly correspondence and scholarly research.

"She ends up finding her voice and who she is at the MBL," she said.

Like most female scientists and other professionals of that era, Carson never married (women had to resign their jobs if they did). She got her feet wet professionally at the US Fisheries Division (now Fish & Wildlife) as one of the first two women hired there, writing "every pamphlet known to mankind." Her boss and friend told her "the government doesn't deserve this" and urged Carson to submit to the Atlantic. When she did, the magazine ran it with the comment that it would "fire the imagination of the layman."

Reading it prompted publisher Simon & Schuster to ask Carson to write them a book, which became "Under the Sea-Wind." Duzak said Carson wrote it on the Beaufort, N.C. seashore "because of the tides and the full moon," walking the beach at night with "a profound sense of awe." Her mother helped as her secretary, typing Carson's notes.

Upon publication, it got good reviews and "accolades," but the timing was awful. It came out just before the US entered World War II in 1941, so it sold poorly.

Duzak noted that kind of luck seemed common for Carson – "Something wonderful happens, and something terrible, and she always makes her peace with it." Part of that peace came from "creat[ing] an ecological social world as well as a professional world." She had to juggle her research in various places, caring for mom, siblings, nieces and a nephew, activism in Audubon and more. Her journeys took her all over the nation, with favorite sites including Parker River on Cape Ann, Boothbay Harbor, ME, a visit to Georges Bank on the Albatross III, and even a brief dive in one of the era's cumbersome diving suits at Key West.

They led to her second book "The Sea Around Us," which Duzak described as expressing the ocean as "a web of life, an ecological whole" and advocating for protecting it. That book also won awards and became "a runaway best-seller" because "people are looking for some big answers." A New York Times critic praised Carson as being "a physical scientist with literary genius."

Success enabled Carson to quite the Fisheries service and devote time to research and writing in 1952. Spending summers at Woods Hole and living in Southport, Maine, "she's in seventh heaven," Duzak said.

Over the next few years, Carson wrote "Edge of the Sea" (looking at how the coastline nurtures life), "A Sense of Wonder" (a child-focused book written largely for her nephew Roger) and Silent Spring (sparked by receiving letters about birds dying "as soon as they're spraying"). Duzak noted the latter's working title was "Man Against the Earth," with "Silent Spring" as a chapter title, but friends said the original title would be seen as "ugly and toxic" and urged her not to publish.

Of course, that's what it was about – the toxic effects of DDT. At that time, Duzak said, the common (chemical-company-promoted) idea was to kill all insects. When "Silent Spring" came out in 1962, Monsanto, DuPont, the USDA and others attacked her as "a communist and a subversive" and claimed "if you don't spray, crops will die and everyone will starve."

But Carson got support from various sources, including garden clubs, Sierra Club, President John Kennedy and Interior Secretary Stuart Udall. Those led to Congressional hearings and a CBS-TV interview in her home when she was so sick she had to be "propped up." It was seen by 15 million people.

The combination those efforts led to DDT being banned, the Clean Air and Clean Water acts being passed, and the creation of the Environmental Protection Agency over the next several years. Subsequent decades have seen the discovery of other toxins with widespread ecological impact, including endocrine disruptors, PFAS and microplastics. Environmental concern has largely gone mainstream, but also faces renewed corporate pressure against regulations and Supreme Court decisions undermining EPA authority to do so.

Carson didn't live long enough to see those happen, dying April 14, 1964. But, as Duzak concluded, "She's still with us today, guys. She's still with us."

SOUTHBRIDGE — Southbridge Water Department will start its semi-annual hydrant flushing program on Sunday, Sept. 29 at approximately 9 p.m. and continue during overnight hours for approximately six to eight weeks between the hours of 9 p.m. and 5 a.m. Flushing will start in the Westville area and continue easterly throughout the town.

The procedure will include the cleaning of the reservoir intake screens, flushing accumulated sediments from the water mains and testing the operation of each hydrant.

The Department requests that during this period customers check their water before washing clothes. Customers may also get accumulated sediments in their house laterals and experience some discolored water. This will clear after a brief run of water at the tap. Please contact the Southbridge Water Department at (508) 764-3207 if you have any questions or comments.

Bay Path Nursing students complete adult mental health First Aid training

CHARLTON — Research states that the overall suicide rate in the US has increased by 35 percent since 1999, and suicide is the 10th leading cause of death overall in the US. September is National Suicide Prevention Month and Bay Path practical nursing (PN) students are doing their share in learning. The PN class of 2025 learned the signs of suicide to prevent home or workplace-based tragedy.

Some members of the PN Class of 2025 completed the Blended Adult Mental Health First Aid (MHFA) training lead by Jammie Glenn, Project Director of the Shrewsbury Youth and Family Services, Inc. (www.SYFS-MA. org). The six-hour curriculum, completed in one full professional development day, gives the participant a threeyear certification upon completion. Gretheline Bolandrina, DHA, MSN Ed, RN, CRRN Academy Director at Bay Path Practical Nursing Academy has been working with the Shrewsbury Youth and Family Services for the PN students MHFA training for over five landrina said. years.

"We are blessed to have Jammie Glenn, the Project Director and the Shrewsbury Youth and Family Services for their continued provision of the MHFA training for the PN students!" said Bolandrina.

"It is important for our future nurses to have the skills and knowledge to identify and respond to signs of mental disorders and how to provide initial help and support," Bolandrina added.

MHFA trained individuals may assist someone experiencing a mental health or substance use-related crisis. In the MHFA course, the PN students learned risk factors and warning signs for mental health and addiction concerns, strategies for how to help in crisis and non-crisis situations and well as where to turn for help for both adult

Topics covered include depression, mood disorders, anxiety, trauma, psychosis, and substance use disorders. Participants learned how to apply the MHFA action plan in situations when someone is experiencing panic attacks, suicidal thoughts of behaviors, non-suicidal self-injury, acute psychosis (hallucinations or delusions), overdose or withdrawal from alcohol or drug use, and reactions to a traumatic event.

Staying united after the election: A call to remember what matters

Once the dust settles after the upcoming presidential election, it's important for all of us-no matter who we voted for-to remember that we are still neighbors, friends, and family. Elections have the power to highlight our differences, but they don't change the core of what really makes us a community. When the votes are counted and the debates subside, we must find our way back to what binds us: a shared commitment to the well-being of our families, our neighborhoods, and the place we call home.

While political divisions can feel sharp and personal, especially in today's climate, it's essential to remember that the most meaningful connections in our lives aren't determined by a vote. The person who will lend you a cup of sugar, help you shovel your driveway, or cheer for your kid's team on a chilly Saturday morning is your neighbor—not just a political identity. Whether we find ourselves celebrating or disappointed by the election's outcome, the morning after still requires us to move forward—together.

Our communities are built on cooperation and common ground, regardless of who holds office. We rely on each other in ways that go beyond politics. Schools still need teachers, businesses still need customers, and we all still need that feeling of connection with those around us. The conversations we have at the local coffee shop, at school pick-ups, or during community events are what truly shape the fabric of our daily lives. These moments, not political debates, are what sustain us.

This is not to say that the issues at stake in elections don't matter—they absolutely do. We must continue to advocate for what we believe in, speak our minds, and hold our leaders accountable. But it's also vital that we don't let the divisions of the political arena spill over into the personal relationships that hold our communities together. After all, when the election is over, we still share the same streets, parks, and grocery stores.

So, how do we move forward? First, by listening. Let's take the time to really hear one another, even when we disagree. Let's focus on finding common ground—there's often more of it than we realize. Whether it's addressing local issues, supporting a neighbor in need, or simply being kind to one another, we can all contribute to the healing and rebuilding process that follows every election.

Manifestation

Manifestation—does it truly work? For decades, this concept has captured significant attention, especially in the pages of popular self-help books like "The Secret" by Rhonda Byrne, "Think and Grow Rich" by Napoleon Hill, and "The Power of Now" by Eckhart Tolle. These works suggest that the mind can create reality, emphasizing positive thinking, visualization, and belief as the key.

So, what's the truth behind manifestation? Is it a genuine force or just another trend?

Looking through history, we find compelling examples of people who have manifested their desires remarkably. Jesus manifested bread and fish to feed thousands, turned water into wine, and raised Lazarus from the dead. How did He do it? He told us: 'Everything is possible for the one who believes' (Mark 9:23). This belief, central to Jesus' miracles, also applies to those who have shaped the world through their conviction.

Gandhi, through non-violent resistance, and Martin Luther King Jr., with his vision of equality, both relied on unwavering belief to drive their movements. Likewise, innovators like Elon Musk and Steve Jobs revolutionized industries by maintaining steadfast belief in their visions. They didn't just wish for success—they visualized it, believed in it, and worked relentlessly to bring it to reality.

There is a distinction between miraculous manifestations, such as Jesus multiplying bread, and the achievements of inventors and social activists. While one may seem instantaneous and the other a slower, deliberate process, both are rooted in the same fundamental principle: belief.

Whether miraculous or transformative, faith in the outcome drives these manifestations into reality.

A common thread among those who importance of assuming your desires are already fulfilled, even before they physically manifest. Whether it's modern self-

Positively SPEAKING

TOBY MOORE help gurus or ancient spiritual teachings, the principle remains the same: you must believe you have what you want before it arrives in your reality.

The central idea is that by aligning your thoughts, feelings, and beliefs with the desired outcome, you attract that outcome into your life.

This idea of belief has been central to Jesus' teachings, as mentioned above. He emphasized it again in Mark 11:23: 'Truly I tell you, if anyone says to this mountain, "Go, throw yourself into the sea," and does not doubt in their heart but believes that what they say will happen, it will be done for them.' Here, Jesus highlights the crucial role of unwavering belief in the process. It's not enough to ask for what you want-you must act as if it is already done.

The idea is clear: belief and emotional alignment with your desired outcome create the conditions for its realization.

So how does this apply in your life? Imagine you're aiming for a promotion at work. Instead of doubting or hoping, visualize yourself already in that role—feeling confident, acting as if the promotion is yours. The same goes for personal goals, like getting healthier. Instead of focusing on the obstacles, believe you're already living a healthier lifestyle, making choices aligned with that belief. The principle remains the same even in bigger dreams—starting a business, finding your dream home, or writing a book.

If you think success is inevitable, you'll naturally align your actions, mindset, and energy toward making that vision a reality. Belief becomes the foundation for your daily actions, driving you forward even when challenges arise.

So, does manifestation truly work? Well, it has great business leaders and teach manifestation techniques is the revolutionaries. You might attribute their success to luck or chance, but you can't deny that they believed with all their heart in their vision. That kind

What can insurance do for you?

FINANCIAL Focus

TREVOR NIELSEN

It's probably not on your calendar, but September is Life Insurance Awareness Month. And it's indeed a pretty good idea to be aware of what life insurance can do

Life insurance can help vou in two main ways. First, life insurance policies offer a death benefit that can assist your family if you're no longer around. And second, some types of life insurance offer the chance to build cash value, which can work for you during your lifetime.

Let's look at the death benefit first. If something were to happen to you, your life insurance proceeds could help your family meet at least three major needs:

Paying a mortgage - The biggest expense many families face is their monthly mortgage. If you weren't around, could your family continue paying the mortgage? Or would they have to move? With a sufficient life insurance death benefit, they could remain in their home, meeting the monthly mortgage payments, or perhaps pay off the loan entirely (although this might not be in their best financial Paying for education - If you have young children, you may already be saving for their college education — because you know college is expensive. Without your income, would college, or some other form of post-secondary education or training, still be realistic? Again, the proceeds from an insurance policy could make the difference.

Paying off debts - You might have a car loan, credit card debt or other financial obligations. If your surviving spouse is a joint account holder for these debts, they could still be liable for paying them off. But insurance proceeds could be used

All life insurance policies offer a death benefit. But permanent insurance, unlike term insurance, also offers the chance to build cash value — which can be a valuable supplement to your IRA and 401(k) or other retirement accounts.

A cash value policy such as whole life also can provide flexibility for changing financial needs or emergencies in retirement. And here's another key advantage: Because this type of policy provides fixed, guaranteed returns, it is not dependent on the performance of the financial markets and is thus insulated from the market downturns that can happen while you're retired. So, taking money from the cash value of your whole life policy may help you avoid selling investments that have temporarily declined in value.

Keep in mind, though, that the premiums for a cash value policy will generally be substantially higher than those for term insurance. That's why some people choose to "buy term and invest the difference" rather than purchase a permanent life policy with cash value. Whether this strategy is right for you depends on a few different factors, perhaps the most important of which is your ability and willingness to consistently invest the money you would have otherwise placed in a cash value policy.

In any case, should you choose cash value insurance, you generally have three ways to get at the money: withdrawals, loans or surrender of the policy. You'll want to weigh all the factors involved including taxes and the effect on the policy's death benefit — when deciding on how to access the cash value.

Life Insurance Awareness Month ends on Sept. 30. But your need for life insurance, and the potential benefits it provides, can last a lifetime.

TO THE EDITOR

2024 Presidential election begins and ends with the southern and northern borders

To the Editor:

Since the Biden/Harris Administration entered our White House in January 2021 and almost immediately opened our borders to give illegal aliens a revolving door to come into our country unvetted, our once beautiful nation has become a criminal war zone! It's estimated that at least 18 million illegals have crossed into our country! The corrupt Democrats are also flying them in, not for Humanitarian reasons, it's illegal votes! The Democrats know they cannot win this election unless they get illegals to cheat in this election, also.

Every state has become a border state with illegal alien criminals. They have murdered, raped, assaulted and stolen from Americans. They have taxed our schools, healthcare systems, housing, food services, police and fire departments, judicial system and government.

President Trump is the only candidate who has said, if elected, he will deport these illegal invaders from our country and restore peace once again! Harris, the Border Czar, will not!

The illegal alien invasion has led to inflation, higher food and fuel prices, and deaths of thousands of Americans due to the trafficking of Fentanyl across the open borders.

The Presidential choice is simple... vote Donald J. Trump to "Save America!"

Vote Stein/Ware

To the Editor:

Tired of your tax dollars going to fight wars in other countries? Tired of crumbling infrastructure? Tired of no federal money helping states and localities? Dump the duopoly and vote Green!

Worried about the Dem scare tactic that if you don't vote for them and their "no policy" policy, it is a vote for the other guy? Vote for something. The Stein Ware ticket promises accessible public education and taxes on all income to pay for that. Childcare should also be provided for parents who want to pursue education while their children are young (what a great model for the kids!). Equality for all in taxes and social security is a large part of the Stein / Ware platform so that equality for all can be in education and infra-

Clean water, air, and soil helps everyone! That is part of the platform also.

On Nov. 5, use your presidential vote to help people, peace, and planet!

Vote Stein/Ware! (In Massachusetts, the ballot says Stein/ Caballero-Roca, but it is the same as the national Stein / Ware presidential team!) Maureen Doyle

Tips for Planting Bulbs this Season

Following a long New England winter, few signs of spring are more welcome than the first sprouts of green popping up in a barren garden. The promise of a season of beautiful blooms, the tiny shoots are the gardeners reward of a past autumn spent preparing and planting.

Experts agree fall offers ideal conditions to plant perennials. In fact, autumn is the preferred time to plant spring blooming bulbs. The following is a beginner's guide to preparing, planning and planting bulbs now for a flourish of flowers come spring.

Choosing Choice Bulbs

If you are selecting bulbs in bulk, such as loose bulbs offered at discount garden centers, it's important to follow a few rules of thumb. Typically, big bulbs produce the largest blooms and may yield more flowers, therefore, it may be worth the cost to pay a bit more for good sized, healthy bulbs. However, if you are on a budget and have the time to wait, smaller bulbs will eventually increase in size and bloom each year.

When choosing a bulb, look for those that are firm and plump. Hold them in your palm and select bulbs that feel heavy for their size. Avoid bulbs with bruises, spots or signs of mold. And steer clear of soft, mushy and lightweight bulbs. Sprouting bulbs may indicate a bulb that has been in storage for a long time.

Planning a Flower

Garden A little thought and preparation go a long way in reaping the benefits of a successful spring and summer flower garden. planning you take time for in the fall will be apparent when the flower garden plantings burst with color and texture next year.

Know your flowers before you plan to plant. While most bulbs require an area where there is full sun, other varieties such as the iris and crocus enjoy some shade after blooming. For best results select a location in full sun or sun with morning shade only. Well drained soil is a requisite for flower bulbs. If you have poor soil, raised flower beds may be an effective alternative.

For best results, design your garden with pen and paper first, mapping out the size of the beds and the flowers to scale. Keep in mind color, texture and fragrance are all important factors when deciding on a particular flower garden plan. Plotting a garden plan is an exciting chore, and there are some basic rules that ensure a pleasant mix of color for a showy display. Notice how a clump of daffodils and tulips are much more eye appealing than a tidy row of the springtime flowers. The eye is drawn toward the burst of color when these flowers are in generous groups of plantings. Be sure to take an accurate bulb count of such large splashes of plantings. Your layout plan should also include using flower bulbs as accents in perennial beds, or to fill in rock gardens or as an interesting border to greenery. Be sure to plan for extra bulbs to fill in areas or to add as landscape accents.

For an interesting mix, merge short plants with tall specimens to give variety and depth as well as differing textures. And don't underestimate the power of fragrance. Nothing is more delightful than a pathway of floral scents welcoming visitors to your door!

You should also decide if you want to plan out every aspect of planting a semi formal garden, or if you choose instead to toss convention and bulbs to the wind, planting bulbs the natural way, thus creating a natural sprinkling of blooms.

Scaling plants to the bed is another important factor when plotting your plan. A simple rule to follow is to keep in mind the tallest plant in an island flower bed should have a mature height that is equal to about half the width of the bed. Place these plants in the center, so they can be viewed from all sides. Also remember to take into account plants that grow and expand quickly.

Color is another major consideration when planting your bulbs. If you want your garden to be a showcase all season, select a variety of bulbs that flower during early, middle and late spring and summer for a continuous burst of color.

Just as in the home, in the garden bed cool colors seem to recede and warm colors appear to come forward. To make a small garden area appear larger and spacious, plant more flowers in cool, light colors. As a general rule white goes a long way in a ga rden bed, but if you use a lot of white flowers in an area, consider adding a dramatic splash of bright red or bright pink or purple for visual contrast. And, remember, if you are growing flowers to cut and bring the blooms indoors, choose colors that will go with the well as harmonize with one another in the gar-

color. The ambiance of your outdoor living space is determined by color and your choices decide whether your garden flowers contrast complement each other which can result in either a subtle hue of color or a spectacular show of brilliant blooms.

For a bright, showy garden, eye catching bright reds, yellows, purples and whites take center stage in a flower bed. Such contrasting colors can be often be achieved with little effort simply by matching up opposite colors on the standard color wheel.

Planting Prep: Planting time varies depending on location, but here in the Northeast it ranges from September until as long as the soil can be worked, usually around the end of October.

Prepare your bed by making sure soil is properly fertilized. Be sure to dig out the soil to the proper depth. Loosen the soil and if you choose, add a bulb booster to the soil. Bulbs should be planted with pointed side up. Place them firmly, yet gently, into the ground. Cover the bulbs loosely with soil, water lightly and add a layer of mulch. . Typically, bulbs should be planted three times as deep as the bulb is wide. In sandy soils, you can plant a little deeper, and in heavy soils you can dig a slightly shallower hole. Bulbs should be spaced approximately a width twice the diameter of the bulb.

Note: Tulips should be planted one inch deeper then indicated if the soil is not too heavy and their location is permanent as deep rooting can prolong the effective life of the tulip bulb.

Strategies for adding native plants to your landscape

GARDEN Moments MELINDA MYERS

More and more gardeners are adding native plants to their landscapes. These plants provide more than beautiful flowers for us to enjoy. They also support pollinators and other beneficial insects, and provide food and shelter for songbirds, toads, and other wildlife.

addition, these plants help protect and improve our soil and manage stormwater. The plants slow stormwater runoff and help direct it into the soil through pathways created by their deep roots to the groundwater below. These deep roots also help break up compacted clay soils. Legumes like blue false indigo (Baptisia australis) that are hardy in zones 3 to 10 help add nitrogen to the soil while supporting a variety of pollinators.

Look to woodland native plants if you are gardening in the shade. Tall black cohosh (Actaea racemosa) grows four to six feet tall, has white flowers in summer, and is a host plant the Appalachian azure butterfly. The spring-blooming native columbine's (Aquilegia canadensis) red and yellow flowers provide food for hummingbirds and long-tongued insects. Wild ginger (Asarum

Perhaps you or members of your household have been reluctant to add these plants to your landscape. Some peo-your landscape one plant or garden at a time. As ways, make sure plants are aggressive and work best when given a lot of room to grow and spread. Others grow in clumps and slowly increase in size making them easier to include in smaller yards.

DCRSD responds to Georgia school shooting

DUDLEY/CHARLTON — Following the latest school shooting in the United States in early September the Dudley-Charlton Regional School District Superintendent is seeking to reassure local parents that they are prepared for such an incident if it were to ever occur on their campuses.

The nation was shaken by another school shooting in early September munity Meeting Room - Registration when a 14-year-old suspect opened fire at Apalachee High School in Winder, Ga. sparking more debate across the country about gun violence, school safety, and gun laws. With such events seemingly becoming a yearly occurthe most common chainmail weaves rence many school districts have taken it upon themselves to be proactive and implement training and response plans for if such an act were to take place. The Dudley-Charlton Regional School District was one of many to implement ALICE (Alert, Lockdown, Inform, Counter, Evacuate) Active Shooter Response Training and other measures in 2022 after the shooting in Uvalde, Texas and in the wake of this most recent incident Superintendent Steven Lamarche took the time to once again confirm the district's preparedness for such an event in the Dudley Charlton Regional School District.

"What I ask people to do with these tragic events, because it's what we do, is really kind of dive into them to try to understand the details of them. I know it's easy to apply to us because we're a school, but there are some unique circumstances that happen in all of these that we really dive into and try to understand so that we can ensure that we do have a safe learning environment for our students. Keep in mind the safety of our students, staff, and community is paramount to the work we do, and we are committed to taking every necessary measure to protect our learning environment," said Lamarche while addressing the Georgia shooting with the School Committee on Sept. 11. The district has made ALICE training an essential part of onboarding Community Meeting Room - No reg- staff and even worked with Nichols College on a counterterrorism training in 2022. School officials have also implemented emergency procedures and lock-down drills to ensure that students and staff respond safely and appropriately should such a situation occur. While the Dudley-Charlton Regional School District has not had to employ these strategies in an actual emergency, Superintendent Lamarche said he is confident they have a strong plan in place and a capable staff who will respond accordingly if the need arises. "We continue to work closely with authorities, which is great. We have a fun Halloween craft to bring home! a great working relationship with both police departments, both fire departments, and all emergency personnel, health agents, et cetera in our two communities. That has really been solidified over the past couple of years. We will continue to create safe spaces for all students, and staff in our community within our buildings. It is our responsibility to create an environment where students can focus their education without fear, and we will not compromise on that commitment. We are very lucky because we have staff that is very dedicated to our community and to our students," said

The Superintendent confirmed that all new staff attended ALICE trainternoon to practice your craft, learn ing prior to the start of the school year and that refresher trainings for all staff members will be conducted within the next month. Substitute educators are also being encouraged to take part in the training. The district will continue to conduct three active shooter drills each school year as well in coordination with first responders.

Mary M. Moore, 72

Sturbridge: Mary Martha (Corrigan) Moore, 72, of Blueberry passed peacefully in her home on Thursday, Sept. 19th, after a long illness. She leaves two children, Peter Moore and his wife Jessica Moore-Wilson of Tyngsboro, and Eliza Moore and her fiancé David Buckner of Warren, RI; her former husband, John Moore and his partner Michael Derry of Southbridge; her brother, James Corrigan and his wife Sandra Tyngsboro; her granddaughter, River Juliette Moore; and many beloved nieces, nephews, cousins, siblings-in-law, and friends. Martha was predeceased by her loyal dog, Harry. She was born in Lynn, the daughter of Paul W. and Mary P. (Quinn) Corrigan. She spent several years living in Oregon with John in the 1970s.

Martha was involved in the counterculture movement of the 1960s and 1970s, protesting peacefully for non-violence and tolerance. Her love for gardening bloomed while working at Weston Nurseries, where Martha also met her future husband. Though they did not stay married, John remained a dedicated co-parent and close lifelong friend. For many years, Martha owned her own business, Moore Garden and Landscape. Her knowledge of horticulture was unmatched, and she instilled a great love of nature in those around her. She especially loved heritage roses, the Shipwreck Rose 'Celsiana' being one of her favorites. In the winter, she led seasonal gingerbread and craft workshops. In later years, Martha worked for the Bridge of Central Mass. A gifted fiber and textile artist, Martha was a prolific knitter, always working with natural fibers to create exquisite sweaters, hats, shawls, and slippers. These and Martha's whimsical, meticulously hand-stitched quilts will warm her loved ones for generations. Martha was a charter member of the Quinebaug Valley Council for the Arts (now the Ruth Wells Center for the Arts), and taught classes there and at the Hitchcock Free Academy. She was also a member of the Southbridge Garden Club.

Compassion was Martha's greatest guide and she taught the importance of maintaining peace and stability in one's home and life. She remained spiritual, inspired by the tenets of loving-kindness taught by the Dalai Lama. Martha donated her body to the Harvard Medical School Anatomical Gift Program. According to Martha's wishes, there are no calling hours. A Celebration of Life will be held at a later date. In lieu of flowers, consider a donation to an organization that makes the world a nicer place for all

Tim Wohlhueter

Tim Wohlhueter, beloved son, brothhusband, father friend, passed peacefully at home in Wales, Massachusetts in the early hours of September 16. He is at peace. Tim loved coffee, cannoli, hiking, music festivals, dogs, especially Huckleberry, family and friends. Tim has always loved being outside. He worked at Old Sturbridge Village, to add native plants to the garden. When one plant dies look for a native plant to fill the void. Consider one with a similar growth habit, texture, and bloom time. Prairie dropseed (Sporobolus heterolepsis) is a North American native grass with a growth habit similar to ornamental fountain grass (Pennisetum) and it provides many more benefits. Hardy in zones 3 to 8, it has uniquely fragrant flowers in late summer, golden fall color, and seeds that look like gems when covered with ice in the winter. It is also a host plant for six different moths and butterflies. This elegant grass is at home in just about any style garden.

As you get to know the native plants of your region and gain experience adding them to your gardens you may decide to create gardens of all native plants. Look to nature for some winning combinations. Combine plants that look good together, have the same growing conditions, and are equally assertive. When aggressive plants are mixed in with timid plants, you end up with a garden of just one or two overly assertive plants.

As always, do your research first. Visit nearby nature centers and talk to others growing native plants to gather information and inspiration. As you gain success and confidence, you are sure to find creative ways to add these beauties to your landscape.

REGION Worcester County Sheriff's Office (WCSO) has now completed all requirements for re-accreditation through the American Correctional Association.

Worcester County Sheriff Lewis Evangelidis recently nounced that his department received a compliance score of 98.7 percent for its re-accreditation process.

For more than 150 years, the American Correctional Association (ACA) has promoted correctional effectiveness on a national level. The organization serves all individuals and groups, both public and private, that share a common goal of improving the justice system.

In April, the Worces-County Jail and House of Correction hosted a panel of ACA auditors who evaluated the facility on over standards. These include inmate safehealthcare, mental health resources, education, programming, officer training, staff safety, and facility administration.

"In an exit interview with on-site ACA auditors and WCSO administrative staff, the auditors praised the work of the Sheriff's Office," read a statement released by the WCSO. "The auditors mentioned that they regularly evaluate correctional facilities across the nation, but have seen few institutions that operate at the level of the Worcester County Sheriff's Office."

For Evangelidis and his team, the results are a testament to strong training, a dedicated staff, and a daily commitment to safety and high-quality services.

'The auditors' comments strongly affirmed the excellent quality of the work our staff does," Evangelidis said. "It is incredibly valuable to receive such a high level of praise from Remembering "the two most powerful words: I am...

BY GUS STEEVES CORRESPONDENT

WEBSTER — When you run into Scott Maloney, it sure doesn't look like he's dead.

But for a while 20 years ago, he was.

One night in September 2004, while a senior at Worcester's Becker College, Maloney did what college kids often do - went out drinking. When he came home that night, he found he'd locked his room keys inside, and thought he could climb in by way of the window.

He didn't make it.

"Every parent's worst nightmare is receiving that phone call," Maloney said of that night. "That call" was from the hospital telling his parents to come to the ER, where they were "told to say goodbye."

He'd fallen four stories and landed on his head, leaving him officially brain dead at age

But the doctors gave him long emergency surgery, and Maloney spent "weeks in a coma, months in a semi-coma," and even longer recovering the ability to talk, walk and perform other basic functions. He described that period as "the biggest challenges I've ever encountered."

Scott Maloney

Traumatic brain injuries (TBI) are extremely widespread, but seriously undercounted. According to the National Institutes of Health Web site (https://www.ncbi. nlm.nih.gov/books/ NBK580076/), multiple studies have found a huge range of TBI frequency, often due to the lack of consistent recording systems in various countries and the fact many minor TBIs never get diagnosed. One study from 2019

"estimated a TBI incidence of 939 per 100,000 population [globally], which included 55.9 million mild and 5.48 million severe TBIs annually. These estimates bitter," he recalled to a are far higher than any small audience at Gladother global estimates, ys Kelly Library last yet are unlikely to include falsely identified cases of people with TBI, and therefore provide some idea of the ity to motivate myself" extent of TBI under- and having a "great counting."

In the US, the Centers for Disease Control started tracking TBIs in 1989, that page states. "The center's most recent report provides information on TBI mortality in 2017, including an estimated 61,131 TBI deaths," the site states. "... Throughout this period, TBI death rates significantly higher for males than for females and were higher for American Indian/Alaska Native people than for other reported racial/ethnic groups. The leading causes of TBI death included motor vehicle crashes, falls, suicide, and homicide." That same year also saw just under 224,000 TBI hospitalizations. Of the total, 48 percent came from falls, as Maloney's did. The NIH data show a general trend of growing frequency as people get older, with a huge jump for those age 75-plus. (The lowest risks were for ages 5-14.)

Today. Malonev brings his experience to audiences in various forms as an effort to remind people to remember "you don't got to, you get to" do the basic tasks of life, something he almost didn't get the chance to do. The core message was to remember "the two most powerful words" - "I am..."

"The words you follow that with will dictate your future," he said, encouraging the audience to repeat after him positive thoughts about themselves. Many people experiencing loss (of personal skills, loved ones or many other things) tend to go down "a rabbit hole" of negative thinking, sometimes including suicidal thoughts. Maloney noted that's "a permanent solution to a temporary situation."

"If you see me, hear me, or feel my energy, you're still in the game."

Instead of going that way, "don't water weeds, fertilize the flowers," he said. "... The best way to fix problems" is to help others.

That can be as basic as approaching them with a smile. "There are over 7,000 languages, and a smile speaks them all," he said.

Recovery, though, also requires personal discipline, because "it's going to be harder before it gets easier," he learned. "... If you truly want something that's realistically attainable and you don't have discipline, you will feel regret."

He credited brother for pushing him to recover - sometimes literally, as in pushing his wheelchair into the YMCA pool for therapy sessions.

In Maloney's case, those trials have included PTSD and daily seizures, multiple medications, and other "consequences you can't charm your way out of," he said. One of them was a total change of career - he's now a TV reporter and speaker, but in high school and college, he wanted to be a cop.

thankful for. The garden is on land that is owned by the Federated Church and because we are all volunteers and donate everything we grow to feed the food-challenged, the Church lets us use the land for the garden at no cost, which is very generous. The garden is located behind the Sturbridge Town Hall lower parking lot and is connected to the Town Hall water supply which is provided to us at no cost. We have many sponsors and donors who admire what we do to help the food insecure and these sponsors and donors give to us very generously and some do it every year. While many contractors do work for us without charging us, we still have expenses for materials to run a garden this size. We would be remiss not to mention our great volunteers. We have many who come when they can and those who come on a regular basis. And we appreciate each one of them. They are dedicated, hard-working and offer great suggestions to us. We listened to our volunteers last year when they suggested volunteering during the morning hours, so we tried it. Our hours this year are 10-11:30 a.m. every Tuesday and Thursday and 9-10:30 a.m. every Sunday. The morning hours turned out well because so many families have challenges with work commutes, sports practice, games, etc. in the evenings making a commitment to work in the garden more difficult for them.

While the garden is still producing this summer, we don't have statistics yet for this year but in the 2023 season, produce grown and donated to the St. John Paul II Food Pantry in Southbridge served 737 Households with almost half that number being Seniors. We were also able to make 5 deliveries of fresh produce to Food Share in Southbridge. This year in 2024, we were also able to provide some fresh produce to St. John's and the Bridge Fridge. Total volunteer hours for last year (2023) in the garden were 740.

We welcome all comments and/suggestions sent to cfcgarden357@ gmail.com or visit our Facebook page at www. facebook.com/CFC-Gardens. We also welcome all volunteers. You can make new friends and have a lot of fun volunteering with us. No need to contact us first; just show up during one of our work sessions. We'd love to have you.

SELECTMEN

label they chose whether that's Selectman, Selectwoman, or Selectperson.

"We were referred to as members of the Select Board. That is written in the article. We did not do our due diligence or have time to review this article in the manner in which it was rushed in. That's why I'm asking for a review now, to have a name that identifies or represents gender neutrality but also preserves some of the heritage of the Board of Selectmen," Lancette said.

The conversation sparked some debate, specifically from Selectman Barbara Zurawski who questioned if the intent was to ignore the will of the voting public. Selectman David Singer helped settle some of the back-andforth acknowledging that Lancette's motion wasn't meant to challenge the will of the voters, but rather provide some clarity as to how members could be labeled. Singer proposed bringing the matter back to voters at another town meeting where the public could vote to clarify the language of the article and the expectations of the change.

Zurawski agreed with the compro-

"I'm fine with the amendment to it if people vote, but I'm not okay with going against the peoples' vote which was a majority to change the Select Board name," she said.

Lancette clarified and reiterated his intent was to honor the wishes of the voters while ensuring that the wording is clarified and that the true intent of the article was preserved.

"Our attempt is to be a more gender-neutral board, but we would like to incorporate some of our historic nameage [sic] in there and clarify what people are going to be called versus members of a board," he said.

Complicating the matter further was Town Administrator Andrew Golas' request to approach town counsel to determine what power the Board of Selectmen had to make changes to the proposal or if the matter absolutely had to go back to a town meeting for clarification. Golas said he felt having a different perspective could benefit the board going forward as they try to clarify the language appropriately.

HISTORY

lows and urns. Barnsky described that era as "more neo-Classical and not so rigid in Puritanical belief."

The local church started with Rev Caleb Rice, to whom the selectmen gave a cushion, 500 acres and 45 cords of wood per year. His church divided due to "a lot of infighting," spinning off a group called the New Light Church. The main church "still taxed them and took their stuff" for a while until the dispute was moderated by Moses Marcy, Barnsky said.

Marcy, a colonel in the colonial militia, was also one of the original proprietors from Medfield. He lived where Southbridge's Notre Dame Church now stands, became Sturbridge's first moderator, a selectman, and founded grist and lumber mills.

"He was always ready for more opportunity ... and worked his butt off serving the town," Barnsky said.

Generally, he said, the names and inscriptions are readable facing east, by design. Based in part on the Geneva Bible, Puritans believed Jesus's second coming would be from that direction, so buried their dead so they could sit up and see him, Barnsky said.

The cemetery was originally part of the 2,000-acre Saltonstall Farm. The original settlers here negotiated with that family for land to erect their meetinghouse and cemetery, dedicating them in 1734.

Barnsky noted most deaths were from disease, often before age five, and many families lost several kids that way. A few stones show their loss. One, for example, is for Abijah Smith, who died on his 17th birthday of measles; it reads, in part, "[God] in his wisdom thought to take away our only son."

Another was the twin deaths of William and Willis Johnson in 1813 of dysentry. Their stone bears a double tympanum, and he noted "So much emotion comes out of a stone like this."

In Sturbridge's early days, one of the founding clans, the Fiskes, lived on the hill now bearing their name. But they weren't here first; that honor goes to James Deneson, who lived on the hill bearing his name in what's now Southbridge.

"He couldn't afford a tent, so he found a cave," Barnsky said. "It was his until the wolf who owned the place came back to evict him."

Deneson's wife, Experience, came with him six months pregnant, and their child, also named Experience, was the first person born in Sturbridge. She ended up becoming a Wheelock and having six children; her last child died a few weeks old and now rests beside her in the Burying Ground. Her husband's stone bears an epitaph quite typical of that era – facing east it reads, in part, "Paradise is coming from right over there."

Legendarily, the Fiskes were cutting timber on their land one day. When they stopped, they heard cutting continuing and followed the sound to meet Deneson after "dropp[ing] some trees across the river" to get there, he said.

The cemetery's permanent denizens number several hundred. A few dozen were Revolutionary War veterans, including Gen Timothy Newell, Thomas Cheney, Capt Joseph Cheney, and Silas Marsh. Some, like Tom Cheney, didn't even live in Sturbridge (he was on the Dudley/Charlton line and trained Dudley militiamen).

"Why are they here? It makes me crazy," Barnsky admitted.

Many of the same families are scattered throughout the place, and many more were related to each other bearing different names. Barnsky said he found that knowing a woman's maiden name is often key to seeing the connections, since people went into business and other things with in-laws.

A good example is the Willard clan, which was related to the Fisk-William Willard (namesake of the road) was Henry Fiske's great grandson. William's father "wanted him to be a jeweler," but William rejected that and became an artist, cofounding the Mass Academy of Fine Arts. He was one of the pioneers in using photography for portraits; instead of having his clients sit for hours, he painted from their photos. One of those people was President Lincoln, and his portrait is now the penny.

Willard bought Newell's house in 1867 and hosted many travelers there. But today, all he has is a small stone, prompting Barnsky to remark, "How do we go from this very important person in the art world to that?"

Sometimes, Barnsky noted, the records are confusing because of variable spelling and the use of the same names across multiple generations.

The Fiskes were a notable example: Founder brothers Daniel and Henry Fiske both had sons with those names.

Henry's both died soon after birth, but he later reused the names for boys who survived. One of the latter (Henry) became deacon and a Revolutionary War veteran, and was "instrumental in the move from the original church to the New Light Church." He died in 1815, and his wife Sarah followed him the next day; they're buried with a stone bearing two

His life overlapped a different deacon, John Phillips, whom Barnsky dubbed "a tough old buzzard." When he died in 1865, he was 104. The previous year, he got his 79-year-old son to hook up the horses to an open carriage so he could go vote because Lincoln was on the ballot. Later, Harper's Magazine noted that Lincoln "wrote to express his gratitude for the compliment paid by a citizen so venerable."

of belief—so strong that it drives every action—is undeniably a common thread among those who achieve remarkable outcomes. So, is it luck, or is it the power of belief?

The line between the two may be thinner than we think.

The real question is: Are you willing to believe before vou see? As countless teachers and thinkers have encouraged, can you assume your wish is already fulfilled? Perhaps it's time to believe not only in the world around you but in your ability to shape it. What if the life you dream of is waiting on the other side of the limits you've created in your mind?

100 percent of Bay Path nursing students pass dementia care training

CHARLTON — One hundred percent of Bay Path Practical Nursing students, Class of 2025 passed their Dementia Care Training exams, according to training facilitator Professor Cheryl Cahill, MSN Ed, RN.

"Nurses are in high demand in Worcester County and across the state, and Bay Path Practical Nursing Academy is making it possible for practical nursing students to get educated, trained, certified and get to work as real-world-ready LPNs," stated Gretheline Bolandrina, DHA, MSN Ed, RN, CRRN, Academy Director.

Bay Path Practical Nursing Academy has been producing real-worldready LPNs since 2010. This year Bay Path Practical Nursing Academy has been ranked as #15 for Practical Nurs-

With data analyzed from calendar years 2011 through 2020. The ranking considered the NCLEX-PN pass rate among first-time test-takers at 90.2 percent and the average number of practical nursing students graduating annually at 23. Bay Path Practical Nursing program can be completed in ten months.

New cohorts begin every August with deadline for application by May 1. The program includes three terms with courses that equal 45 credits. Students earn credentials in mental health first aid, dementia care, stop the bleed, and domestic violence.

"Being a nursing assistant is not a requirement but is a great stepping-stone to a nursing career," according Bolandrina.

"Many of our successful graduates were certified as nursing assistants and many of our other graduates did not have a clinical background. It is common for our graduates to start the RN program quickly because they love learning, they love work and they want to do more in health care," added Bolandrina. "It is amazing to see our LPNs shine, succeed, and enthusiastically discover the fulfilment of their dream. When they are passionate about the work they do as LPNs, their nursing journey is inspiring. Nursing truly becomes a career, not a job."

DA's office visits Tantasqua

STURBRIDGE — As part of their robust community outreach program, members of the Worcester County District Attorney's Office recently visited students at Tantasqua Regional High School.

The DA's community outreach team attended the TRHS Back to School Night to share resources with students and families.

Among the highlights of the visit was the District Attorney's Hidden in Plain Sight display, which demonstrates how ordinary household objects can be used to conceal illicit substances. Students and families also obtained information on such topics as dating safety; social media safety; mental health awareness; prescription drug abuse; and avoiding excessive screen time.

Worcester County DA Joseph Early, Jr., and his team are thanked for their ongoing support of students through outreach programs. Each year, the DA's team discusses several additional topics with students across the county, including bullying prevention; cybersecurity; distracted driving; and preventing drug and alcohol abuse.
