Children's Librarian Tina Aubin shows off the "Libraries Rock" poster, this reading program's theme. Young readers can earn treats from local businesses by reading this summer.

Reading is truly a treat this summer

BY OLIVIA RICHMAN

PUTNAM — Last Saturday was the first day to sign up for the Summer Reading Program at Putnam Public Library. And to celebrate the program's musical theme, "Libraries Rock," the library invited June Bug Saddle to perform on June 16 for the kids who attended the program's kick-off.

"The kids loved it," said Children's Librarian Tina Aubin. "They were dancing around. They really enjoyed it. They were very interactive with the kids. One song, they asked the kids to provide them with words (adjectives, nouns) and then used them in a silly, fun song. Kids love that. Every time they heard their answer it was pretty exciting."

The Summer Reading Program at the library is for all ages.

The children's side of the library has two reading programs: For kids seven and younger, the children should read at least 15 minutes a day. Children older than seven should try to read 30 minutes a day. At the end of each week, when they complete their reading, they get a coupon to take to a local business to get a prize. Victoria's Station Cafe is offering a kid-size ice cream cone or cup of their "yummy homemade ice cream." Deary Brothers Mike's Stand also will be giving out a single scoop of ice cream. K's Sweet Spot will give out chocolate turtles. Subway of Putnam is offering a cookie. Wonderland Comics & Collectibles will give readers a comic book worth up to $5.

"The businesses are so important. So generous," said Aubin. "They have been KILLINGLY — Local artist Susan Rosenstone Larrow will have her up-close flower paintings featured as part of show "Flora & Fauna" at the Sprinkler Factory Gallery in Worcester, Mass. on July 7. Because of her vibrant stunning work Larrow was one of nine artists selected to be a part of the program.

"It's exciting," said the East Killingly resident. "It's always nice to have your work picked out and appreciated. To get a different audience to view it."

Larrow's work is also on display at the Silver Circle Art Gallery in downtown Putnam, where she rotates her displayed work depending on the season.

"I love that it's local," she said. "I really like what they've done with the place. I love having the connection with other local artists. It's really nice. For a while I was going there and painting for a day, meeting people who come into the gallery. It's a neat experience. I teach a painting class there when I get enough people to register."

Her most recent featured painting was taken from a photo she took while visiting friends in Rochester, N.Y. When her friend brought her out on Lake Ontario she couldn't help but take a ton of photos of the beauty around her. Then she came back and started painting the scenes in her studio.

Treasures from the attic at Brooklyn museum

BY OLIVIA RICHMAN NEWS STAFF WRITER

BROOKLYN — The Brooklyn Historical Museum is now open for the season, and it's the place to go if you are curious about how the Quiet Corner was in the 19th century, and how surprisingly similar we are now to the history that made us.

Every year, there is a different exhibit on display. And this summer it's "Treasures from Brooklyn's Attic," featuring a collection of objects – some from Brooklyn residents' attics – that tell stories of 19th century Brooklyn.

These items range from an exquisitely hand-sewn silk day dress from the Civil War-era, to a sturdy fork used refrigerators existed.

Mostly collected back in 2010 as part of the Brooklyn Historical Museum's 40th anniversary exhibit, said Curator Elaine Knowlton, since then they've been collecting more and more objects. They are donated from residents who find the historical pieces in their homes and at auctions.

One of these items was a portrait of a young girl holding a cat, circa 1835, found in a Brooklyn resident's attic. And to Knowlton, the portrait, which was found in the 80s and cleaned professionally, is the "highlight of the entire oxbibit" sionally, is the "highlight of the entire exhibit." "I am personally very interested in 19th century portraiture," she said. "My husband and I own an 18th century house across from the museum. And we work very hard to find portraits from that time period to decorate our home with."

The little girl in the portrait is wearing a fashionable dress of the day, a pearl necklace and a gold earring is visible. And, of course, she's holding a cat. And Knowlton and her husband love cats.

So what is the interest in this painting and other 19th century objects in the museum?

"We want to give a sense of how things were different – and in some cases similar – to today," said Knowlton. "It shows what it was like to live in the 19th century and early 20th century in Brooklyn. We are using these artifacts as a way to tell stories of the people who lived here."

For example, there is a piece from the Pierce Hatchery at Alder Brook Farm, which was very successful in the 1930s. A man had come into the museum a few days ago, said Knowlton, and when he saw the piece he told her that he actually had been the hatchery's superintendent. And when the owner unfortunately passed away from a heart attack he became the general manager.

And he was able to give some insight to what the business was like.

"Here in Northeast Connecticut," Knowlton, "there were a lot of poultry farms. Pierce was very supportive of other farmers. They would work for him, feeding and raising chicks. It's part of our history. It involves so many people in town.'

People are ous about things, said Knowlton. They find it informative and fun to visit the museum.

"If you want to know a little bit about a lot of different things," she said, "This is the place to visit."

The Brooklyn Historical Museum is open every Wednesday and Sunday from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. or by appointment, until Oct. 7. After that date, it will only be open by appointment. For more information, call (860) 774-7728.

The Quiet Corner Garden Club had seven local garden tours in the 1980s and 1990s. The garden club, which was founded 40 years ago, began with a few members, which then grew into a large club. The first plant sale fundraiser was held in 1978. The second year and there afterwards, the plant sale was open to the public. The garden club was instrumental in advancing the gardens at Roseland Cottage, the Palmer Arboretum, the Woodstock Historical Society, and Roseland Park. In 1986, the garden club donated crabapple trees to celebrate the 350th birthday of Connecticut. Many of its members today participate in local gardening projects, from beautification projects to vegetable gardens for the needy. In 1982, the garden club members started the tradition of making holiday wreaths to distribute to local public buildings.

The first garden tour was held in 1986. The last garden tour was held in 1999. It has been 20 years since the last garden tour. Names and club members have changed over the years but the love and enthusiasm of being in and among gardens remains the same. As Louis and James Bush-Brown said, "Gardening is a craft; a science, and an art. To practice it well requires the enthusiasm of the true amateur and the understanding of the true student."

QVCC offers new cybersecurity degree

DANIELSON — With organizations and companies regularly facing cyber threats and potential data breaches, the demand for cybersecurity experts is rapidly growing.

Quinebaug Valley Community College's new Associate's Degree in Cybersecurity provides the training needed for a career in this growing industry. The 60-credit program can be completed in two years with the goal of immediate employment. Students can also easily transfer to a bachelor's degree program at a four-year college or university.

Cybersecurity, also known as computer security or information technology security, is a field that covers the tools and systems used to monitor, mitigate, and prevent online threats. Cybersecurity professionals use innovative technology to combat hackers, cyberterrorists, network outages, and other technical problems that could compromise network security. Due to our growing reliance on webbased technology at home and in the workplace, this fast-paced profession has grown quickly over the past two decades.

Employment of information security analysts is projected to grow 28 percent from 2016 to 2026, much faster than the average for all occupations. Demand for information security analysts is expected to be very high, as these analysts will be needed to create innovative solutions to prevent hackers from stealing critical information or causing problems for computer networks.

According to Program Coordinator Chris Parden, there are currently over 4,000 unfilled cybersecurity job openings in Connecticut alone. By 2020, it is expected there will be 1.5 million jobs nationwide that will need to be filled.

Parden also says the curriculum aligns with and prepares students for numerous nationally recognized industry certifications such as ISC2's Systems Security Certified Practitioner and CompTIA's Security-plus certification. Cybersecurity certification qualifications are becoming the norm in many job descriptions as organizations seek quantifiable ways of measuring prospective employees' expertise. Many employers view these certifications as favorably as college degrees.

For more information about the Cybersecurity degree program, email Parden at cparden@qvcc.edu. For information on how to register, contact the Student Success Center at (860) 932-4020.

I'm from here

When asked, 'Where are you from,"? I answer: "From here..." and then pause for the second query, "No, where are you really from.". It isn't an existential question. Most of the "new" people I meet are from elsewhere and assume I am too. I like to answer that I am in fact very much from "here" and that my family has been in the same town for generations.

The last little bit is a cover up for what has always been a subtle feeling of embarrassment. It just isn't the American way or the way of successful people to stay in one place or return to where they began. The modern path is to move on for better jobs or a nicer climate. Other places offer more opportunities for new friends, career change, more choices in housing, cultural attractions or diver-Move on and leave behind the pesky challenges of aging relatives, old friendships and ingrained animosities and take on a better, more attractive identity. There is nothing wrong with self-reinvention. It is probably one of the deepest aspects of the American character, if there is such a thing, but some of us took a different path.

My husband and I moved back home before we really had much chance to get away. My father's doctor called me at our little apartment in upstate New York and told me I have to come home and take care of daddy. My father had emphysema, from decades of smoking. My brother lived nearby, but as the only daughter, it was expected that I would return and step up. I did. I'd like to say it was terribly difficult and sad, which it sometimes was, but not always. We built careers, although we had to commute. Made deep and lasting friendships and bought several homes. Later we oversaw the last years of my in-laws as well. It wasn't easy but it seemed right.

We like individual people and places. On a human scale we think locally. We have to juggle competing ideas, and that's one of the things that small town

An old friend reminded me recently of Edgar Lee Master's, Spoon River Anthology. In the poem all the speakers are dead and tell their stories from the point of view of "sleeping on the hill". They look at their small town and recount the diverse paths of human nature and ambition. The picture isn't especially positive, but it is familiar. Anyone who lives in one place long enough witnesses the passage of time and the unstoppable turnover of one generation to the next.

When we moved back home, we reconnected with old friends and made new ones. Now we are seeing many young professionals return to build their careers and lives here, too. There are medical doctors, attorneys, veterinarians, chefs, accountants, brokers, teachers, nurses, business people, pharmacists and so on. They could live anywhere but they chose to come home. Their children will know their grandparents. Their names, if not their faces, are familiar. They will make their way and add their energy to the community.

Most of the changes that I've witnessed in our area are good. On a superficial level, there are more restaurants, a small shopping center and better roads to help us leave. There are specialists in a variety of fields from medicine to artwork, yet the natural beauty of the area is as lovely as ever. As I drive by houses and remember who lived there long ago, or begin to tell too long a story about some half-forgotten incident, I feel the tug of time and think that after all, the choice to return is as challenging and as affirming as all the other human stories we read or experience.

Opinion and commentary from the Quiet Corner

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thompson reader against immigration policy

I am appalled at the current immigration policy of separating children from their parents at the border. This is inhumane and wrong. These people have suffered and struggled to arrive in what they hoped was a free country and a place from violence. Instead thev are treated as criminals, with no regard for the trauma to themselves and their children. Want to create future terrorists, this is a recipe for disaster, when these children grow up they will hate our country and what it has done to them and their parents. We need to allow them to enter the country as families and get them on a path to citizenship. The cost of maintaining these families in separate facilities must be staggering, money better spent on vetting these people and putting them on the path to United States citizenship.

Reader doesn't like Murphy story

I to have to agree with Mr. Stramas's disappointment with the interview. While I was not present for Sen. Murphy's talk

I did receive many complaints and emails as I am VP of the Danielson Veterans Coffeehouse, I set up all the speakers I make it perfectly clear to all politician's staff, under no circumstances do we allow politics to be discussed. All discussions are to be about veteran issues, new veteran legislation, pending veteran legislation and local veterans and updating their medals and honors. I was assured by many of his staff that he would follow our guidelines as have all politicians in the past. From the information I received, his talk went very well and he did follow our guidelines until it ended and he left the room and continued his political views outside the room. If the Senator wanted to do another interview, it should of been outside our building. To incorporate his Democratic political views such as "We've never had a President like this who knowingly lies virtually every hour of every day" was totally inacceptable and unprofessional and he should of known better. For the Villager Newspaper to pursue turning this into a political story, they were even more unprofessional in continuing this under the disguise of covering a speaker at the Coffeehouse. If they wanted to continue this discussion, it should of been outside on the street, away from our location. I personally am totally disgusted with both parties and their unprofessionalism.

TOM PANDOLFI DANIELSON VETERANS COFFEEHOUSE VP

(Editor's note: Reader is referring to a story in the June 1 edition of The Villager. Mr. Pandolfi is referring to Senator Murphy's comments in the story after a paragraph which reads: "Civil debate underpins democracy and Murphy wasn't shy about adding his voice to the current debate in Washington." — which clearly states the Senator is commenting on the politics of Washington, D.C., not Danielson,

Pet Owners Act is needed

I am writing today to support the Fairness to Pet Owners Act, currently making its way through congress. It has sponsors in both the House and Senate including our Senator Blumenthal. I second the opinion of Ky Tucker in last week's paper.

As a senior dog rescuer, I am keenly aware of the high cost of veterinary prescriptions, and have long fought the notion that the vet alone should be the dispenser of prescriptions. The argument that is used is that there are counterfeit items on the internet marketplace and the only way to assure purity is to buy from the vet. While this is certainly a valid point (especially for heartworm pre ventatives), at the end of the day, it needs to ultimately be the pet owner's decision as to where to purchase their pets' prescriptions. One of my senior dogs requires daily eye drops. The online price is half...HALF of the vet's price. While they are locked in to their supplier, I am not. Fortunately our vet is very understanding of the cost of rescuing seniors and is supportive of my need to buy this prod-

If the government considers pets as property (and they do), then the property owner should be able to decide where to purchase their pets' needs. This Act will ensure that we can.

> NATALIE LANGLOIS NAT PACK SENIORS WOODSTOCK

To my fellow Americans

Americans who support the President through all these hateful attacks are feeling somewhat assault-On Facebook their responses are frequently, "He's the President, get over SWEETNAM it!" In the interest of supplying his fans with arguments more suitable to a participatory democracy, let me offer these, arranged by issue: Yes he's starting trade wars, but trade wars are good things. Nobody gets killed and we all know wars are good for the economy. America doesn't need those so-called friends. We can stand on our own two feet. That's why we backed out of the Iran nuclear deal, the Paris climate accords, the Pacific trade agreements and NAFTA. It's time we had a tough negotiator chopping up agreements right and left, that'll get their attention. I still support him because he's doing just what he said he would do. He said he'd lower health insurance prices and he's doing that by getting rid of that requirement that everyone have insurance. I am young and healthy and shouldn't have to subsidize those sicker people. That was part of Obama Care and by getting rid of that he'll fulfill his campaign promise to get everybody covered. It's really very simple. When only people who need medical care are buying insurance the rates will go down.

We all worry about our personal information being stolen. How inspiring to have the first Prez who won't even give up his tax returns. His financial entanglements are nobody else's business.

Rolling back the tailpipe-emissions standards will make the dividends American for Automakers great again. That murky air is just coming from your neighbor's barbecue. Get over it.

The Border: This is another example of his incredible negotiating skills. After Mexico callously refused to pay for the border wall, Trump saw that Democrat Liberals are also refusing to pay for it, but here's the trick: Liberals are all bleeding-hearts, so by using these wetback kids as hostages, scenes of wailing children and frantic parents will make the Liberals come around. Brilliant, eh? Donald hasn't abandoned his family values.

Those picky New York legalists have only filed their lawsuit against the Trump foundation out of political hate. A great businessman like Trump knows that charity begins at home but doesn't have to go any further. Spending funds to get Trump elected certainly classifies as a charity, don't you think? Hillary's foundation gives its money to people who can't help her politically, sad, sad. A foundation for losers.

What a Victory, unprecedented, incredible, fantastic, in Korea. All we had to give up was some pretend military stuff with a tiny ally and Kim made us a solemn promise to do something, something else, something soon, with his nukes, real soon. The problem is solved. Sleep well.

After meeting him, Trump said that Kim loves his people. Trump understands that kind of loving your people.

We can look forward to that. And the tax bill! Some of you will get bonuses! Most of you didn't need to deduct your property taxes anyway. That deficit thing is just another Democratic fear mongering idea, like global warming. Republicans haven't worried about The National Debt for decades and look how well we're doing! Just invest that bonus in the stock market and in 30 years you won't even need the Social Security or Medicare that has to be cut to balance the budget. Because we must balance the budget, that's why we elect Republicans.

Emoluments? Shmoluments! Come on, now you're just inventing laws to accuse him of violating. Maybe we should indict Hillary for violating the supercalifragilisticexpialidocious statutes, eh?

I still support Trump because he's about the only one trying to bring our fractured country back together. In the middle of all that violence at the white supremacist march in Charlottesville caused by the Black Lives Matter people, Trump was the one who reminded us that there were good Nazis marching with the white supremacists. You liberals are so full of hate for everyone. Unbelievable.

I hope this Modest Proposal has been helpful.

Effects of the Bipartisan Budget Act

how it elects to be taxed. For example, a Limited Liability Company can be taxed as a partnership or as a corporation, depending upon the election. A partnership or Limited Liability Company may also opt out of partnership-level taxation under the Internal Revenue Code if specific requirements are met. The Bipartisan Budget Act of 2015 was passed as part of a larger budget bill. The mandatory effective date of the law was January 1, 2018. This law changed how tax liability of a business is handled after an audit. Previously, if a business' tax payments were audited, that audit would take place on the partner's tax return, the IRS would make the adjustment to the partnership return, and then any amounts owing would be collected from each partner with a separate notice of deficiency. Under the new law, following an audit, the IRS is able to collect taxes directly from the partnership or business, instead of noticing each partner individually.

There are tax rate and deduction implications to this change in tax collection, and I recommend that you consult your tax advisor, should your business be affected by an audit. There are also elections that your tax advisor can help you make to opt in or out of tax treatment.

Partnership Agreement or Operating Agreement should reviewed as to the role of the "Tax Matters Partner." In many agreements, one member or partner has been identified as the "Tax Matters Partner," who, under the prior law, had to be a partner or member, was authorized to speak for the business on tax matters, make necessary filings, attend audits, although the role was not exclusive; the other partners or members were able to take all these actions as well. The standard Tax Matters Partner provisions are now obsolete. Under the new law, the point person for the business is the "Partnership Representative." The new role of the Partnership Representative is more expansive than the prior role of tax matters partner. The Partnership Representative need not be a partner, he or she can bind all partners in an administrative or judicial proceeding, and the Partnership Representative must have an exclusive role in responding to audits and participating in judicial proceedings.

Reach out to your legal and tax advisors as to how the Bipartisan Budget Act of 2015 may affect your business entity and whether you need to amend the foundational documents of your business.

The old York House Saloon in Danielsonville

Bernie Mitchell has been inventorying a map drawer at the Killingly Historical and Genealogical Center and came across some additional information about Lincoln Park. which I wrote about in the April 20th column. The paper attached to a plot plan read as follows: "In 1906 A. H. Armington ran a grocery store in Danielson. He gave green stamps. When people had enough stamps they received one of the lots in Lincoln Park. The lots were small and the park never did get developed. There are 19 acres and the lots were 30 by 100 feet.

"In the 1970's Richard Regis bought the 19 acres from Adelaide Rainville, later sold (it) to Bob Huard. Ross Hutchins owned in back of the 19 acres. The long driveway was right of way for Hutchins. The house you can see on right after coming off Route 6, is probably where S. P. Davis' house was located." The map to which this write-up was attached was donated by Richard and Naomi Regis.

I received the most recent newsletter from the Dauphin-Middle Paxton Historical Society, from where I grew up in Pennsylvania. It features newspaper articles from This Month in Local History so I thought I'd do June extracts from our past. The following were taken from the June 5, 1851 Windham County Telegraph (one of the earlier local newspapers), and they give you an idea of some of the businesses that were growing up around the railroad depot, which according to the next ad was referred to as Danielsonville. (The railroad arrived in 1840).

Railroad House by E. Buckminster. "This house is situated opposite the Depot, and is consequently convenient of access to passengers by the cars, besides which the several lines of stages terminate at the Hotel. The subscriber offers the inducements of a quiet house, good lodgings, the best of 'feed' and reasonable prices to the traveling Public.'

Lawyers mentioned in that issue included Earl Martin, Elisha Carpenter, and Judge Backus.

Although this commercial area was only about a decade old, quite a variety of businesses was to be found. "Daniel E. Hill. Opposite the Depot Danielsonville. Comprising every variety and style of Garments to be found in the State. Broadcloths, Cassimeres,, and Vestings, always on hand, and is constantly manufacturing Clothing of every description.

Custom work made to order and perfect fits warranted." Keep in mind that the 1850's was still the era of the tailor and seamstress. "C. W. Knight. Dealer in all kinds of Fancy & Staple Dry Goods, Crockery and Glass Ware, Table Cutlery, Boots & shoes, Groceries and Family Provisions, Grain and Flour. First store east of Buckminster's Hotel." "Elisha Chamberlin House Builder, Carpenter, Joiner & Architect, is prepared to do all kinds of work in his line of business at the shortest notice. Also Sash & Door builder, near the Danielsonville Depot.

"J. B. Crandall, Dealer in all kinds of Medicines, Perfumery, Fancy Articles, etc. All kinds of paints and burning fluid. I had never heard of burning fluid so decided to check what it was. I found the following on a site entitled oldlampvalues.com/Burning_Fluid_ Lamp. "While manufactured in the same time period as whale oil lamps, burning fluid lamps were only in use for a relatively brief amount of time. Beginning with the first burning fluid fuel patent in 1830, burning fluid lamps flourished as a desirable alternative to whale oil lamps until the mainstream introduction of kerosene lamps in the 1860s. Burning fluid lamp fuel produced a brilliant white light without smoke or odor. However, because the burning fluid fuel was by nature a mixture of various flammable components, early versions of burning fluid fuel used in whale remedied by the introduction of specialized burning fluid lamps. These burning fluid lamps had a smaller reservoir (called a font in a lamp) to hold the burning fluid fuel so that less flammable gas could back up into the font. Original burning fluid lamps with original burning fluid burners are not common. Burning fluid lamps in good condition and with a desirable style are generally sold in the range of a few hundred to a few thousand dollars. Paired burning fluid lamps can be worth even more". The next time I visit the lighting exhibit at Old Sturbridge Village, I'll have to check to see if there is a burning fluid lamp.

"D. Arnold, Jr. Manufacturer and Dealer in Monuments, Grave Stones & tomb Tablets, also Counter and Table Tops of Italian and common Marble. West Killingly, near the Depot." Note that some individuals still referred to the area as West Killingly.

"Amasa Dowe, Watch maker and Jeweller, will attend to cleaning and repairing watches, clocks, music boxes, ring, pins, and all kinds of jewelry, at the store of T. Backus Jr. & Co., No. 3. Arcade. Also all kinds of Engraving." I'm sure many of you have fond memories of a much more recent Dowe's establishment that dealt with newspapers, magazines, cards, gifts, etc. Did you realize that a member of the family was here in the early years of Danielson's business district?

I didn't even get through all the businesses in June 1851 but that gives me material for another column.

Tips for retirement oil lamps sometimes exploded. This problem was

Retirement marks the start of a new phase of life when you no longer need to show up at the office every day. This begins your journey of what you have been saving and planning for. You may want to take this time to start a new hobby, try new experiences, or spend more time with family. Whatever your dreams may be, there will likely be many individuals in your life who look to you for help. Many retirees are sandwiched between aging parents who need care and children and grandchildren who require financial support.

It is important to make sure your own finances are stable before extending resources to others. And you may find that some of the best ways to help don't involve dollars. Here are some ways to lend a hand to family members during your retirement years without breaking the budget. Here are some tips to help you Live Well $\,$ in retirement.

Invest in yourself

Learning a new skill or taking on a new hobby can open up a whole new world to you. It can be both fun and inexpensive. For example, eating out every night on a fixed income may not be in the cards, but learning how to cook a new cuisine opens new dining options at little or no extra cost. And for many, it can be a highly rewarding experience.

There are countless library books and YouTube videos to help retirees get started with a new hobby. The options are endless. Sewing, gardening, woodworking, and painting are just a handful of the many fulfilling hobbies that retirees can learn.

A local craft store, for example, is a great place to start searching for a hobby. Craft stores typically offer beginner-level classes on a range of potential hobbies that you can check out for little to no cost. Meanwhile, websites like Groupon and Living Social often offer discounts on various classes and workshops that can allow a new retiree to inexpensively try a few hobbies and find one that fits.

Try something new Some retirees aren't yet ready to fully retire. However, with plenty of time and a secure source of income, retirees are in the position to pursue a passion that was inaccessible during their working years. They can start a business or get a job in an entirely new industry that can bring fulfillment along with some extra income.

Simply planning to start a business consumes a lot of time. It requires countless hours research and then more hours preparing a business plan and then carrying the vision. One option for a retiree is to pursue owning a franchise that has a proven business model in an area where the retiree has an interest.

There are many ways to lend a helping hand to family once you retire. You might have weekly dinners with them or offer to watch your grandchildren. Some other ways you can help is by contributing to a 529 plan. With college costs on the rise, one key way to assist grandchildren is to help fund their future years of education. You may opt to set up a 529 plan in your grandchild's name or contribute to a 529 plan your adult children have already established for your grandson

You may also consider setting up a family trust. To pass funds on to family members or future generations in a responsible way, a trust fund might be a wise option. You might want funds from the trust used to help cover medical expenses for a grandchild with a specific choose to have funds distributed for annual family trips.

Regarding things

Oh dear, where to Somehow we start? have to stifle Trump and the mean-spirited and stupid people who are poisoning the American culture, our values and our standing in the world. Regarding allies and trade. I greatly fear that America is starting on a course of isolationism, which will bring us down. We cannot survive as a nation going it alone. What kind of fool would intentionally insult, disgrace and blame our closest allies? What kind of idiot would intentionally start trade wars when there is no provocation? Isolationism arises out of stupid and unfounded fears and is a guaranteed losing proposition. Just consider the enormous wealth that North Korea's isolationism has brought them.

Regarding leadership, what Trump and the Republicans in Congress refuse to understand is that leadership and trust are hard won and easily lost. America has been the world things but Trump GUEST will not accept that COLUMN much of that is based on the cooper-STEPHEN ation and support of ETZEL our allies. If all our allies come together, they will leave us in the dust. It really won't take all that much to reduce us to a second-world country.

America has the largest economy, with many economic elements going well and a strong economic position in the world. There is no need at all for protectionism through This only results in blunt force trauma to the entire world economy. Where has the common sense idea of negotiation and cooperation gone? Oh yeah, that takes a lot more effort than assessing tariffs, so I conclude that, among other things, Trump is exceedingly Regarding Russia, Putin says he wants to meet with Trump and lauds Trump's remarks on bringing Russia back into the G-7. Once again I ask whose side is Trump on? Russia was kicked out for a good reason, viz., annexing the Crimea. They still have it so why reverse their ousting? Besides, Russia is not even among the top 10 world economies so why should they be in the G-7 at all?

Regarding North Korea, the situation is similar to Germany before World War II. Clement England's Atlee. Prime Minister, came back from a meeting with Hitler waving a document he said guaranteed "peace in our time." The agreement was simply appeasement, giving concessions while neither demanding nor enforcing any limits on Hitler. It didn't stop Hitler from doing he wanted. Trump's meeting with Kim has some obvious parallels.

Regarding immigration, any policy that is based on zero-tolerance is born out of simple minds needing simple answers. It precludes any human intervention or deeper assessment beyond deciding whether something is black or white. Classifying all immigrants as illegals and therefore justifying ripping families apart is simplistic, stupid and exceedingly cruel.

And regarding mature behavior, President Harry Truman had a sign on his desk that read on both sides - "The Buck Stops Here". He understood that the man at the top is responsible for everything that goes on in his administration. Our current President does everything he can, including unending lies, to blame everyone else for things that are criticized or go wrong. Much of the Good Old Days were not all that good and I do not wish to go back to them. But a sense of ethics and integrity at the top surely needs to be resurrected.

A Trust With Restrictions

When the person creating a trust has concerns about the spending habits of a beneficiary of that trust, a "spendthrift trust" may be created that provides an independent trustee with full authority to make decisions about how the trust's funds may be spent. The terms of the trust, which can be wide-ranging in possibilities, place the trustee in control of the trust property and of any benefit the beneficiary receives. The grantor must consider how much control to give to the trustee and describe the trustee's power in detail. The grantor must also decide how and when the trust will end, the status of the trust principal, if the beneficiary's circumstances change, and if special payouts are to be allowed. HINT: A spendthrift trust is useful when a grantor wishes to leave property or money to a beneficiary who has an addiction, is easily deceived or defrauded, or might easily fall into debt with creditors.

The process of establishing a spendthrift trust fund is identical to creating any other trust fund except the trust instrument must contain a spendthrift provision. Before you plan or administer an estate, you want to sit down with a lawyer, one who will really listen to your concerns.

Thompson Middle School leads health care drive

THOMPSON — Thompson Middle (TMS) School's 4-H Club held its second annual Health Care Drive recently. All collected items were donated to Thompson Ecumencial Empowerment Group (TEEG). TEEG requested that we focus our attention on toilet paper and the drive did that. The 4-H members made posters and fliers to advertise the drive. Next, during the week of the drive the 4-H members set up a table in the Tourtellotte Middle School foyer to collect the donated items. Many items were donated by the students and the faculty. All in all, a success for the 4-H Club and TEEG.

Pomfret Community School has Cultural Arts Week

— Pomfret Community School and the PCS-PTO recently held Cultural Arts Week. This year students traveled to South Africa. Under the guidance of our dedicated Cultural Arts Coordinator, Mr. Frank Aleman, the students and staff were immersed in a genuine and authentic experience. Since Mr. Aleman is a natural born South African citizen, he was able to speak extensively on the topics and he shared his firsthand knowledge with teachers, volunteer docents and students. We would like to thank the following volunteer docents for taking time out of their schedules to come into the classrooms and provide presentations; Alyson Aleman, Michelle Blain, Howie Bursen, Barbara Brezel, Jamie Davis Aleman, Marie Feanny-Aleman, Amanda Garza, Megan Haggett, Donna Hamilton, Candy Hernandez, Eric Kapitulik, Kayla Krause, Derik Kruger, Jennie Mix, Michelle Pike, Elisha Riendeau, Sally Rogers, Marisa Ryzdy, Martha Schultz, Elaine Sistare, Marlena Tedisky, Kristie Tyler, Erin Wilcox, Zoe Wilcox, Monique Wolanin and Jennifer York.

The South African Marketplace was held in the lobby of PCS on May 30. Students were able to see and touch some of Mr. Frank Aleman's personal collection of art, textiles, statues, jewelry and various unique items. Their visit also included an opportunity to make a wooden beaded bracelet, as well as enjoy a taste of sparkling apple juice and traditional cookies. The Silver Circle Art Center also participated and instructed the students on making worry stones. Thank you to the volunteers who worked at the Marketplace; Michelle Blain, Melanie Ferriera, Roxanne Genay, Michelle McCorkle-Milardo, Jennie Mix, Michelle Pike, Patty Wolchesky, Carrie Wolfe and John Xeller. Thank you to Mrs. Hollis Abram and the PCS-PTO Art Club for creating the stunning canvas murals depicting the South African flag and native wildlife. A special thank you for Mrs. Mary Archambault and the entire seventh grade class for making all of the display boards full of South African facts and educational topics. We appreciate your willingness to help and taking the initiative to contribute toward this school wide event. Mr. Brian Martel created a computerized animal footprint matching game and allowed students to take part in grade level competitions to determine the quickest print matchers. Thank you for your time, effort and enthusiasm. Thank you to Ms. Elaine Nelson for coordinating the school wide reading event which benefitted the South African charity, Students' Health and Welfare Centers Organization (SHAWCO).

On the last day of the Cultural Arts Week, the students got to experience the talents of Tsidii Leloka-Lupindo. She is a Broadway actress, vocalist and composer from South Africa and the Kingdom of Lesotho and is best known for originating the roll of Rakifi in the original Broadway production of Disney' stage musical, The Lion King. She entertained the students with her beautiful singing voice and knowledge of her homeland. Thanks go to The Arts for Learning CT organization in helping the school to contact Ms. Leloka-Lupindo.

The week would not be possible without the support of the Pomfret Community School staff, volunteers, PCS-PTO and most importantly, our Cultural Arts Coordinator, Mr. Frank Aleman. We are grateful for your countless hours of research, collecting materials, sharing your personal collection, history and experiences and spending the entire day stamping student passports at the Marketplace. Thank you for a wonderful trip to South Africa. We appreciate your dedication and wish all of you a wonderful summer and look forward to next year's Cultural Arts Week.

Working with acrylics, Larrow's pieces often depict flowers and landscapes. But they're more generally what she sees. They're from her travels, part of her life captured in paint. But sometimes they're also local.

Very local.

"My next painting is of my back garden. I grew some poppies," she said. "I'll be doing an overview of the garden, painting outside and up in the studio, which looks out over the garden."

A lot of her work features close-ups of flowers.

This unique take on nature formed over her time as an art teacher at Woodstock Academy and Killingly High. She was the head of their art departments for a total of 35 years.

Back then, she used to paint faces. People. But as she started teaching more about composition and design, the shapes and forms of flowers began to fill up the majority of her work. The color is what spoke to her most.

The color is what always spoke to her the loudest.

Even though she started her artistic journey in 5th grade as a pen and ink artist, she soon became confident with a brush.

"It's a great feel. The feel of the brush hitting the canvas, pushing the paint around. Adding texture... It's just a neat experience," said Larrow. "And when I'm not painting, or stop painting for whatever reason, there's something missing. I feel more complete when I get to do that."

She's been retired for 11 years now, and spends the majority of it taking photos of nature and painting what she sees.

"I just love working with color," she said. "My work is vivid. Brighter than real life. I just want people to see that the world is full of color."

Flexer advocates for shelters for violence victims

DANIELSON — With Connecticut domestic violence shelters operating at 122 percent capacity statewide and a critical need for solutions, State Senator Mae Flexer (D-Danielson) joined the $Connecticut \, Coalition \, Against \, Domestic \,$ Violence (CCADV) and the Connecticut Coalition to End Homelessness (CCEH) to announce on June 14 at the Capitol in Hartford the success of their unique and innovative partnership to house survivors of domestic violence facing homelessness.

Through this groundbreaking approach, recognized as a national model of collaboration, 73 households, including 28 single adults and 45 families, have been housed or begun the process of securing permanent housing during the first 18 months of the pro-

"The national collaborative housing model established by CCADV and CCEH is a critical step in promoting safety and stability for domestic violence survivors," Flexer said. "Survivors face numerous obstacles; equitable access to homeless housing resources should not be one of them. I applaud CCADV and CCEH for their efforts to address systemic barriers and improve outcomes for survivors and their families.'

Rather than competing for resources, we've combined our forces to serve clients in need of housing resources - including those who have survived domestic violence," said Lisa Tepper Bates, chief executive officer and executive director, CCEH. "This collaborative approach allows us to serve more clients in need, more effectively."

'We're proud to have created a model that other states look to as a way to safely and confidentially house domestic violence survivors and their children, offering needed stability at an often volatile time," said Karen Jarmoc, chief executive officer, CCADV. "Access to safe, affordable housing remains one of the biggest challenges facing survivors, but we're showing here in Connecticut that meaningful collaborations can assist in removing barriers." The National Network to End Domestic Violence and the National Alliance to End Homelessness have highlighted the Connecticut system as a promising approach, and a model for other states

"Having pioneered a nationally recognized system that is proven to both prevent and end homelessness, I'm proud of what we've accomplished. DOH will continue to partner with domestic violence agencies across the state," said Department of Housing Commissioner Evonne M. Klein. "The victims of domestic violence deserve access to support systems that will not only keep them safe, but also stably housed. Today's announcement shows that we are making meaningful strides to address this issue head on -which is a testament to all we can achieve when we work together."

Launched in January 2017 following consultation with state and federal funders, the protocol developed by CCADV and CCEH creates equitable access to federal and state homeless housing resources for domestic violence survivors in Connecticut. Homeless and domestic violence providers work together through the use of a de-identified form to confidentially add survivors to housing resource registries maintained in Connecticut's Housing Management Information System (HMIS), the database required for use by all programs funded by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

Competing federal mandates regarding the use of HMIS, which requires identifiable information, by HUD, and confidentiality requirements for all domestic violence survivors, under the federal Violence Against Women Act (VAWA), have traditionally prevented equitable access to homeless housing resources for domestic violence survivors. However, through the development of this innovative partnership and clear, consistent communication, homeless and domestic violence providers in Connecticut are now working together more efficiently and effectively to meet the needs of all Connecticut residents facing homelessness.

Domestic violence survivors are entered into housing registries and offered housing resources consistent with the prioritization of resources adopted by Connecticut's coordinated homelessness response system. Survivors are treated equitably with homeless clients. Housing providers expedite placement if a domestic violence survivor is deemed to be a "high risk priority" following a risk assess-

From the launch of this collaborative approach, domestic violence providers have referred 135 households to the homeless system for housing resources, including 60 single adults and 75 families with children. To date, providers have housed or matched to a resource and put on a path to permanent housing 73 households, including 28 single adults and 45 families.

This partnership offers a model for how domestic violence and homeless providers can and should work together. State and federal organizations including HUD, U.S. Department of Justice Office on Violence Against Women, CT Department of Housing, CT Department of Mental Health and Addiction Services, and the National Network to End Domestic Violence provided support in the development of this model.

Steinhauser to speak at vets coffeehouse

DANIELSON — The guest speaker at the Danielson Veterans Coffeehouse on Tuesday, June 26, is scheduled to be Ted Steinhauser. Ever wanted to test your physiological limits and realize the effects high altitudes have on your body while attempting a nearly 20,000 foot climb above sea level? Steinhauser will include a concise methodology for understanding Africa's environment and how to prepare for arguably one of the hardest (but also the most rewarding) challenges your body may endure. Steinhauser (Major, USMC — retired after 20 years on active duty during the height of the Cold War and Operation Desert Storm). An avid athlete and outdoorsman, Steinhauser has spent his lifetime running marathons, competing in ironman distance triathlons and even survived working in the Pentagon. But nothing punctuated his life more than successfully completing the challenge of climbing to the summit of Mount Kilimanjaro. The Danielson Veterans Coffeehouse is open to veterans only and is located at 185 Broad Street Danielson. The coffeehouse opens at 9 a.m. and the guest speaker program starts at 9:15 a.m.

Parker races at Thompson

THOMPSON — Joey Quarter Midgets, to Legends Cars. After a quick stop in the SK Modifieds, he seems to have now found his home in Late Models.

"I loved the SK Modified, my dad grew up racing modifieds, so it was almost a calling for me," Parker said. "That was kind of one of my goals in life, and in 2013, a good friend of my dad put me in the car for the season and we had a top five, which was really good for a rookie season.'

This season, Parker is competing in the Speedway Thompson Motorsports Park Late Model division, and has put forward some early season success. In the Icebreaker feature, Parker finished just outside the top 10, but on Military Appreciation night, Parker was able to grab sixth-place finish in the 25-lap feature.

"We want to finish every race, and I would love to win and run up front," Parker said. "We set our team goal to finish inside the top 10 in the point standings at the end of the year. We just need to stay out of trouble, and just keep doing what we are doing."

Parker did not finish in the top ten in the Late Model division feature on June 14 at Thompson Speedway.

Woodstock woman is 1st runner-up at Mrs. Connecticut event

BY OLIVIA RICHMAN NEWS STAFF WRITER

WOODSTOCK — Woodstock's Melissa Bellanceau journeyed to the Mrs. Connecticut America contest on May 19 at Foxwoods Resort in Mashantucket. An update: Bellanceau was awarded the prestigious First Runner Up medal, but even more importantly, she plans to continue her pageant and community outreach journeys. I spoke with Bellanceau about the exciting experience and get some insight into a world that not many people have access to. A world that Bellanceau is encouraging women - especially moms - to pursue.

How did you feel about being First Runner Up?

It was so exciting. First pageant I ever done. To be first runner up in a really deep pool of very talented, beautiful, accomplished women was more than I could have anticipated. It was so surreal.

How did it feel being in the Miss Connecticut pageant?

was really exhilarating, overwhelming, exciting, scary... What's kind of funny is that because Connecticut, New Jersey and Rhode Island are held together at Foxwoods they line you up by state, and then alphabetical by last name. I was the very first girl out for everything. And having never done it before...

That must have been so nervewracking.

The women who coordinated it walk you through hours of rehearsal. In some ways being the very first person really helped me. No time to second guess myself. It's a blessing in disguise.

I can see that. Less time to stand there, worrying. So you were practicing your answers to the interview portion with a coach. How was it to finally have the interview?

It was fascinating. I go into this ballroom. There's a panel of judges. You're by yourself. There's a chair in the middle of the room. Seven people just rapid-fire questions for three minutes.

What did they ask you about?

They asked me about my work and what I do. I'm Director of Advancement and Communications at Pomfret School. I talked about the amount of money I raised for the school over the last few years, which is $30 million. Talking about the importance of accessibility for a school like Pomfret and students who otherwise wouldn't be able to go.

an amazing accomplishment.

I told judges that I had eaten a scorpion in Beijing. I travel for work a lot. They asked about my favorite movie, which is Eat. Pray. Love.

That's awesome.

There were more serious things, like what I would do if I was Mrs. Connecticut and I talked about the need to empower women and girls. It's important that women have the opportunity to be their best selves and do what's important to them. I wanted to get that message out to other

I know you had to have a cause you supported.

I wanted to raise awareness to support teens who have parents struggling with drug addiction.

How did you feel about being able to discuss this important cause -

I was grateful for the platform and grateful for the opportunity. There was such a diverse panel of judges, to be able to talk about such important issues to folks who have ways to affect change in those areas... People involved in politics, public speaking, journalism... I was able to tell my story to an important audience.

How were the other portions of the pageant?

The only thing I thought about during Evening Gown was 'Don't trip. Don't trip.' Your husband gets to come with you on stage. I was pretty sure he was going to steal the show. The men get to wear suits. And he had a red paisley tie to match my dress. But it was really nice having him there for support and not feeling alone in a very vulnerable moment.

How did you feel about the athletic-wear portion? I know in our last interview, you discussed how important being healthy was to you.

I wore a one-piece swimsuit with a sarong. And that was just nerve wracking.

I can't even imagine.

There's no other word to describe that's very near to you - to the how it feels to walk into a room full of people with a bathing suit on. But you worked hard. You lead a healthy lifestyle. You just go out there and do your best.

You must have felt really great.

I felt most proud of myself, just being able to be confident. Healthy diet and exercise. Not crash dieting. I'm an avid runner and maintain a super healthy diet. I was surrounded by other people who were dedicated to a similar lifestyle and had a great perspective on it. It's great to be around so many likeminded people. And such a supportive audience. People know it's tough. The crowd was awesome and cheered for everybody.

Are you happy that you took part in the pageant?

I loved that I did it. Met amazing people. The woman who won Mrs. CT is from Woodbridge area. A second grade literacy specialist and really amazing lady in her 50s. Just such sweet and smart people, doing great things for their communities. Great stories about personal challenges and growth. I'm an advocate for anyone who wants to try it. Anyone who is inspired to do it. It's an awesome, awesome thing to do. To discover yourself. I learned so much about dedication and focus.

Will you be continuing pageantry?

I definitely want to continue talking about the importance of supporting teens with parents who struggle with drug addiction. But I want to empower women and girls to do what makes them shine. I'm not sure what the next step is for me, pageant-wise. But Runners Up can compete in a national contest in July, and they take 51 delegates to Vegas for nationals in August.

That's amazing. Can we vote?

There will be a vote over the summer. It's $2 per vote. The money supports Victoria's Votes, which is a charity that supports people with drug addictions. It aligns with my personal philosophy.

While the voting is not up yet, make sure to follow Miss Connecticut America Pageant and Melissa Perkins Bellanceau on Facebook to find out when voting opens.

Tri-Town runs past New London

BY CHARLIE LENTZ VILLAGER EDITOR

THOMPSON — Zack Cutler intends to use his cleats as much as his bat and glove this season. Speed was a distinct weapon for Tri-Town against New London last Sunday in an American Legion Senior Division game. All the way from second base, Cutler made a daring dash for home on a wild pitch to punctuate Tri-Town's 6-0 victory at Tourtellotte Memorial's baseball field.

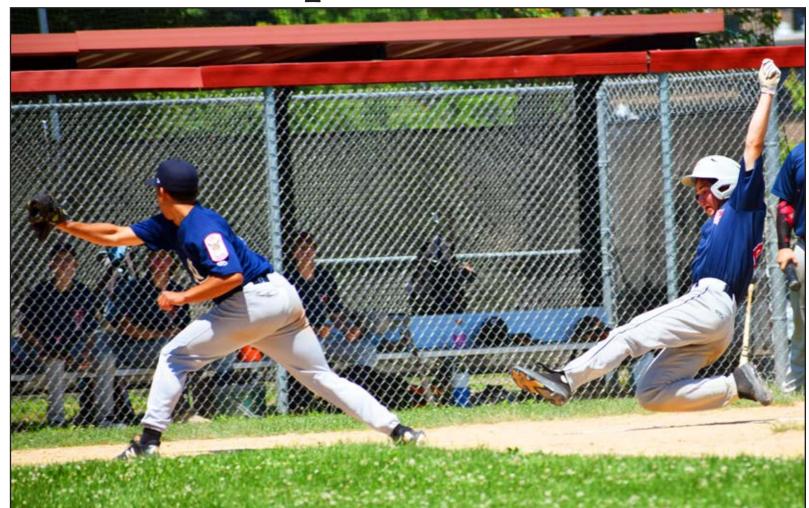

"I saw the catcher (Thomas Brown) kind of just trotting back to the ball and the pitcher (Robert Parra) wasn't at the plate yet," Cutler said. "I don't think anyone from their dugout was yelling."

So Cutler didn't settle for third base on the wild pitch and kept on motoring toward home plate.

"I took a run around third and I just didn't stop," said Cutler, who finished 2-for-3 at the plate.

Cutler scored easily, plating Tri-Town's fifth run in the bottom of the fourth inning en route to the team's victory. The win lifted Tri-Town's record to 4-2 and dropped New London's record to University. He graduated from Putnam High School in 2017. Assertive base running will be a key component of Tri-Town's arsenal.

"It's huge. Last year we weren't aggressive at all and that killed us," Cutler said. "This year we mercy-ruled Jewett City first game (a 10-0 victory on June 12) and aggressive running was definitely a huge part of that. It's definitely something that we're going to have to improve on a little bit but we're getting there."

Coach Jason Akana wholeheartedly endorsed Cutler's daring dash from second base on the wild pitch in the fourth inning.

"He rounded third base

sions, it forces them to make throwing mistakes," Akana said. "It's that additional pressure that gets put on them when you're taking extra bases and they know they've got to get it there quickly they just rush everything."

Luke Mathewson earned the shutout over New London. He allowed three hits over seven innings, struck out five and walked none. The win lifted Mathewson's record to 2-0 and he has not allowed a run over 12 innings of work through last Sunday's game.

"When I pitch every time I want to go the complete game, want to get the shutout, want to get all the outs but that's not exactly reasonable all the time. But I've just got to go in and do what I can for the team" said Mathewson, who helped his own cause by going 2-for-3 at the plate with one RBI and one run.

Tri-Town staked Mathewson to an early lead with a four-run rally in the first inning.

"Especially in this hot weather. I'm not as nervous on the mound when we're up by four in the first inning then we're up by six in the fourth," Mathewson said. "It allows me to just go out and pitch. I don't have to stress as hard on the mound.'

Coach Akana said Mathewson has been stellar through his first two starts. "Luke is a workhorse. He pounds the strike zone. He makes tough pitches. He hits his spots. He's got great confidence when he takes the mound," Akana said. "He gets the ball and you know you're going to get the best from him."

The four-run first-inning helped.

'Jumping out early and the way he pitched really shut them down and allowed us to build a little bit more," Akana said.

For Tri-Town, Kobe Akana went 1-for-3 and scored one run. Mitchel Barylski finished 1-for-3 with a two-run single. Scott Davagian went 1-for-3 with an RBI-single. Robert Parra took the complete-game loss for New London, tossing six innings, allowing eight hits and six runs, five earned, striking out two, walking one and hitting two batters. Connor McCrea doubled for New London.

Tri-Town's roster includes players from Killingly High, Tourtellotte Memorial, Woodstock Academy, and Putnam High. Putnam's graduation ceremony was scheduled for Thursday, June 21, and it was the last local high school to complete commencement exercises. Coach Akana said he was glad commencement exercises were coming to an end because there will be no more distractions. The win over New London on Sunday followed a doubleheader split with New London last Saturday, June 16.

"We're finally have everybody here and collectively as a team we're all going in the same direction." Akana said. "One game at a time. The four top teams (in Zone 6) make the state tournament. New London, historically, has been one of those top four teams so this (three-game series win) was big.'

Tri-Town is next scheduled to travel to Ledyard-Pawcatuck for doubleheader on Saturday, June 23. Tri-Town returns home to play host to Ledyard-Pawcatuck on Sunday, June 24, with the first pitch scheduled for 11 a.m. at Tourtellotte Memorial. Coach Akana said the Townies will make good use of their bats and gloves this season — but they also intend to give their cleats a workout.

"It's going to be huge. We're still making mistakes on the bases. We've got to tighten that up a bit. Still got to get better. There's a lot of stuff we need to improve on," Akana said. "But we're heading in the right direction. The kids are being involved in that process, individually trying to get better and then collectively as a team trying to get bet-

Houle returns for Rockford Peaches anniversary

BY VALENTINE IAMARTINO

The All-American Girls Professional Baseball League made its debut on May 30, 1943 — and the Rockford Peaches played their first game at Beyer Stadium in Rockford, Illinois. As history would tell, chewing gum magnate Philip K. Wrigley envisioned placing women's softball teams in major league ballparks throughout the United

Because of World War II the 1943 Major League Baseball season saw a loss of key players from most teams to the armed forces. Baseball continued because of its morale value but travel was curtailed and game times were altered. Teams often scheduled early-morning games because many prospective fans worked night shifts to help the war effort.

As women fulfilled the roles of men in the workforce while so many men were away, Wrigley felt they could also do the same on the ballfield. With the popularity of both men and women's competition on the rise throughout the United States and Canada, especially in the areas of Chicago and Los Angeles where he owned fields, Wrigley used his financial prowess to start the women's league and motivate women in the war-era workforce to come out and play baseball.

Just three weeks ago, on May 30, the Rockford Peaches — one of the four original professional women's baseball teams — celebrated its 75th Anniversary. North Grosvenordale's Shirley Houle, 85, returned for the celebration. Houle, the mother of Thompson's Valentine Iamartino, is an Illinois native. She was born in the farming community of Pecatonica, raised in Byron and has ancestral ties to the Illinois towns of Rock Falls, Sterling and Chicago.

In the summer of 1949 Houle and her younger sister, Nellene, joined the local Bittner Bakery Girl's (1945-1953) baseball/softball team, after an older sister, Joan, was with the team under coach and mentor, Harold Yost. Yost was an excellent ball player and Rockford resident. Although the girls originally began playing softball, the Byron team switched to hardball after the 1948 season when the popularity of girl's professional teams were on the rise. With that rise in popularity, and most likely Coach Yost's Rockford connection, came the opportunity for Bittner's Bakery girls to practice and play against the noted Rockford Peaches. As a versatile player taking at shortstop, second base or third base, Houle recalled the time spent playing ball with Bittner's quite vividly. As a young girl, Iamartino remembered her mother making note of that time of her life, particularly when she would play catch with Iamartino and her sister. Both daughters became standouts in the game. Iamartino attended Marianapolis Prep and then headed out to Whittier College in California on scholarship to play Division III softball. Iamartiono's sister, Eva, was a standout for Tourtellotte Memorial High School, Becker College and several area

tion in May. The accolades bestowed on the women, ranging in age 85 to 92, made her realize the women's pioneers did something big — and how instrumental these women were to the start of softball as we know it today in the professional, collegiate and recreational ranks. They played such significant roles as contributors to the genesis of organized women's sports as well as female rights. Oftentimes we take those that have gone before us for granted. It is only when we stop and reflect that we are able to value and appreciate what was done for us.

To make the May event even more special was the presence of Megan Cavanaugh, the Los Angeles actress who played the slouchy, frowny Maria Hooch in the 1992 film "A League of Their Own". In that movie Hooch played alongside Madonna, Rosie O'Donnell, Geena Davis and Tom Hanks. Cavanaugh was in attendance for all the weekend festivities, including the gala, celebrity softball game. She was extremely gracious and accommodating to the honorees, their families, local residents and fans.

The day was spent on the grass at Beyer Field — the original ballfield the Peaches played on and now fully restored and home of the Rockford Starfires. It's been said that there is "no crying in baseball" but a few tears were shed from the sidelines among multiple generations of baseball women.

A special Father's Day for Tri-Town coach

BY CHARLIE LENTZ VILLAGER EDITOR

THOMPSON — Tri-Town American Legion coach Jason Akana gazed out of the dugout last Sunday and saw the best gift he could ask for on Father's Day. His sons — Kobe and Brayden — were stationed at shortstop and second base, respectively.

"This is a dream come true. You've got two of your boys playing up at the Seniors level. Both contributing to what we're trying to do here and being real leaders," Akana said. "It's real special to watch that."

Jason played high school baseball a stone's throw from Sunday's game, at Tourtellotte Memorial's old ballfield just down road behind the high school. The coach graduated from Tourtellotte Memorial in 1991 and when he thought back to his high-school days it was a bit surreal to fast forward 27 years and see his sons playing for him on the ballfield.

Kobe bats leadoff and plays at shortstop or Tri-Town. He just graduated from Holy Name High School in Worcester, Mass., and intends to play next season for Merrimack College in North Andover, Mass. Kobe went 1-for-3 and scored a run for Tri-Town in its 6-0 win over New London last Sunday. He said there's no extra stress being the coach's son.

"I don't really see it as putting pressure on myself. I see my father as just another coach. And I've just got to go out and perform the same way as I would for anybody else," said Kobe, 17. "Sometimes I feel like I've got to produce more and I have to be on my game more often than everyone else but other than that I just play my game."

Brayden, 14, just finished eighth grade at Thompson Middle School and said he will be enrolling as a freshman at Holy Name High School this fall. Brayden played second base last Sunday and laid down a sacrifice bunt in the fourth inning that advanced two baserunners and helped aid a tworun rally. He was the youngest player in Tri-Town's Senior Division lineup last Sunday and didn't take his roster spot lightly on his father's ballclub.

"I'm on his team and I feel honored to be a part of it with all of the seniors and be a part of the win we just got today,"

Brayden said.
Jason's Father's Day gift was much better than a tie, or a coffee mug. He watched his boys contribute to a 6-0 win over New London at Tourtellotte Memorial's field. Just a stone's throw — and 27 years — from some distant memories.

"Extra special. I couldn't have imagined coaching them. It's come full circle. It really has," Jason said. "And we just took a series from New London. This is a great group of guys and I'm really enjoying my time here with them."

OBITUARIES

Bernard A. MacDonald

Bernard Α. MacDonald passed away June 13, 2018. He lived in Brooklyn for 50 years with his wife, Elinor (Batterson) and raised Stephen and Sara there. Ann Born in Lowell, Massachusetts in 1925, Bernie grew up in Somerville with his parents and older brother Somerled, who emigrated from Canada. Three oldest children, all daughters, were lost in infancy and childhood. His father had been a school teacher and legislator in Prince Edward Island and became a salesman in Boston.

Bernie changed his name from Angus on his birth certificate when he joined the Navy in January 1942 after Pearl Harbor and changed his birth date. He turned 17 in boot camp and shipped out to the North Atlantic on the USS Matagorda carrying a copy of Milton's Paradise Lost. He served in the South Pacific on the USS Bataan and was wounded during a kamikaze attack. He landed in Japan with the first occupying force after the Japanese surrender. His brother Somerled served in the Navy in WWII also. The once ran into each other in a South American bar on shore leave and they remained close until Somerled's death in 2006.

Bernie received a Bachelors in 1946 and Masters in 1952 from Boston University, and his PhD in English Literature from UConn in 1976. He taught at the Hatch Prep School, The Thomas School in Connecticut and he traveled the country for the Baldridge Reading Services, based in Greenwich. He met his wife Elinor in 1958 in Wisconsin while both worked for Baldridge. Six months later they were married and living in Beverly Hills, California. They settled in Brooklyn, in 1969. Bernie taught American literature at Eastern Connecticut State University in Willimantic and Elinor taught psychology at Quinnebaug Valley Community College in Danielson. He and Elinor also taught in the local Brooklyn Town Jail.

The family spent every summer in Rock Barra, Prince Edward Island, Canada. He loved spending the entire summer there with a specific area of study planned and boxes of books packed in the car. One summer he read Baudelaire in French, teaching himself French along the way. One of his last projects, before he became ill in 2016, was reading Ancient Greek poetry, with a Greek dictionary at hand.

He loved literature and music, listening to the Metropolitan Opera live radio broadcast on Sundays. He loved the Red Sox, theater and talking with friends about everything from politics to poetry. He was a member of the Failed Poets Club (FPC) for many years. They shared written and artistic work, providing criticism to each other. He said once that he never gave up anything to raise his children. He was true to himself and his love of learning. He delighted in his children's endeavors as they went into the world, providing a sounding board and support when needed. A friend said he was like a fine wine, he got sweeter as he got older. He was radically egalitarian and a feminist. He hated hubris and did not suffer fools. Bernie was not afraid to say what he thought, even if others would not agree. He was monstrously intelligent but was never condescending, treating all with respect and dignity.

The family would like to thank the staff at Pierce Memorial Baptist Home who cared for Bernie for the last two years. They are indebted to every staff member for their skilled and gentle care. He will be missed for his intelligent blue eyes and his humor. He leaves behind his wife of 60 years, Elinor of Brooklyn; his son, Stephen A. (Karen Bate) of Arlington, Virginia and his daughter A. Sara (Rob Barnett) of Summit, New Jersey; grandchildren Catherine (Thomas Nash) of Richmond, Virginia, Amanda of Austin, Texas; Julia Barnett of Harvey Cedars, New Jersey; Dylan Barnett and Jessie of Summit, New Jersey. In lieu of flowers, the family asks that you send donations in Bernie's name to PEN America supporting their mission to celebrate creative expression and defend the liberties that make it possible. https://pen.org/donate/

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Level: Advanced

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

WHAT OUR CUSTOMERS ARE SAYING

I can't say enough great things about the staff at Imperial especially Bruce, Ahmad and Firas. From the moment I walked in I was treated like I was the only one there and their full attention was working with me. When I was ready to give up they were there walking me through the process and helped me out above and beyond their job description I'm sure. They were respectful and fully engaged in helping me find a vehicle and I couldn't be happier. - cheryl1068 | JUNE 8, 2018
