BY GUS STEEVES

SOUTHBRIDGE — On July 23, the Planning Board discussed the new Housing Production Plan for nearly 90 minutes before opting to delay a formal vote on it, pending resolution of legal issues surrounding the 39 Elm Street project.

Although the members generally agreed that the plan was aimed at making Southbridge eligible

Sturbridge selectmen con- sider plantings, police and home rule bill

STURBRIDGE — The Board of Selectmen revisited town beautification at its July 21 meeting, with landscape designer Joe Coan summarizing where things stand.

He noted his team has planted 97 trees, shrubs and perennials in various locations, and still has about $2000 in planting costs remaining. Most of the work's been in a few locations – around the welcome sign, the DPW plow and along Main Street to Route 20 – with plants intended to flower at various times of the season.

“There's a fair amount more going in there,” but he had the contractor delay planting due to recent heat, Coan said.

The sign site was of particular interest to board members, with Coan noted the state “is fairly strict about what they'll allow” to ensure sight lines aren't blocked for drivers. “...There was

Charlton to add new patrolman without budget increase

BY JASON BLEAU
CORRESPONDENT

CHARLTON — The Charlton Police Department will soon add a new patrolman to its ranks after the Select Board approved the new hire without the need for adjustments to the town's budget.

Police Chief Daniel Dowd approached Select Board members on July 8 to seek support for the position which he argued would allow the department more wiggle room in terms of personnel. Selectmen approved the request unanimously after it was confirmed that the position could be funded from within the existing department budget and revenues. The ask was also previously approved by the town's Finance Committee.

Dowd explained that the new patrolman will save the town money on station coverage which will prove to be a cost saving for the community.

“One of the biggest problems that I have typically is when I train people or somebody is out of work for whatever reason often times it indicates that I have to pay overtime so having an extra body kind of fills some of those voids that are created,” said the Chief.

The addition of a patrolman did not require a town meeting vote as the funding is being made available through cost savings and existing department finances. While normally a hire like this would require an adjustment to the budget or the approval of utilizing free cash at a fall town meeting, Dowd told selectmen he has already freed up the money to pay for the patrolman in-house.

“We had some savings. We were able to apply some of the funds for capital items that we were looking for next year that we did a little early. I have some money possibly coming in for asset forfeiture that will help me offset some costs in the future. I'm not looking for any money. I'm doing it within my existing budget,” the Chief stated.

It was argued that adding the new patrolman could also provide more service to the community that, in turn, could help increase revenue to the town.

The department already has quality candidates in mind after several interviews in the past although a specific hire was not named during the July 8 meeting. New officers are traditionally introduced during the Select Board's monthly meetings, the next scheduled for Aug. 12.

Cornerstone Bank announces merger with Athol Savings Bank, expanding footprint in Worcester County and North Central MA

WORCESTER — Cornerstone Bank, a subsidiary of PeoplesBancorp, MHC, and Athol Savings Bank announced today the execution of a merger agreement, pursuant to which Athol Savings Bank (“ASB”) will merge with and into Cornerstone Bank, which will expand Cornerstone into a new and vibrant region in north central Massachusetts. As part of the merger, ASB will operate as a division of Cornerstone Bank, maintaining its name and five branch locations. This strategic move allows Cornerstone Bank to bring its full suite of digital banking services and customer-focused innovations to an expanded clientele, while preserving the trusted local brand that ASB has built.

“This is an incredibly exciting time for us,” said Todd Tallman, CEO of Cornerstone Bank. “We are growing. Athol Savings Bank has a great team, and its mission, values and commitment to mutuality align seamlessly with ours. This move will strengthen our ability to serve our communities while preserving our focus on customer service. Our combined scale will make us more efficient, expand product offerings and improve customer service through shared resources and technology. In today’s industry, scale matters.”

ASB’s strong financial performance and customer-first approach align well with Cornerstone’s commitment to growth and innovation. Customers can expect the same seamless, local service with even better technology and improved access to financial planning tools on a robust digital platform, elevating their overall banking experience. Further, as a combined organization, it will allow for enhanced commitment to charitable giving, community involvement and volunteerism in the North Quabbin region.

ASB staff will be retained and fully supported throughout the transition, with significant focus made to ensure continuity in roles by offering the same or similar positions. This collaboration is rooted in growth, not reduction.

In a key leadership transition, Daniel J. Zona, the current President and Chief Executive Officer of ASB, will assume the role of President of Cornerstone Bank, succeeding Randal

Girl Scouts of Central and Western MA honors local members of 2025 Gold Award Girl Scout Class

HOLYOKE — Girl Scouts of Central and Western Massachusetts proudly recognizes the twenty-one members of the 2025 Girl Scout Gold Award class who earned the highest award in Girl Scouting, the Gold Award. Twenty-one teen world-changers in central and western Massachusetts who invested nearly seventeen hundred hours creating lasting impact on issues important to them.

Gold Award Girl Scouts become innovative problem-solvers, empathetic leaders, confident public speakers, and focused project managers. They learn resourcefulness, tenacity, and decision-making skills, giving them an edge personally and professionally. As they take action to transform their communities, Gold Award Girl Scouts gain tangible skills and prove they're the leaders our world needs.

The 2025 Gold Award Girl Scout class identified issues in their communities, took action, and found or created solutions to earn their Gold Awards, addressing real-life problems such as access to menstrual hygiene products, neurodivergence awareness, animal welfare, environmental sustainability, mental and physical well-being, and mapping a whole town for a rural fire department.

"Earning the Gold Award is a distinguished honor that sets Gold Award Girl Scouts apart from their peers," said Theresa Lynn, CEO of Girl Scouts of Central and Western Massachusetts. "We're proud to recognize 21 outstanding young women this year whose efforts demonstrate the leadership, problem-solving, and commitment to community that the Gold Award represents. Their work makes a lasting impact and shows they are exactly the kind of leaders our world needs."

According to recent research, Gold Award Girl Scouts are more likely to fill leadership roles at work and in their personal lives and are more civically engaged than their non-Girl Scout peers. Eighty-seven percent (87 percent) of Gold Award Girl Scouts agree that earning their Gold Award gave them skills that help them succeed professionally.

Opacum Land Trust acquires 28 acres for permanent conservation

MONSON — Opacum Land Trust is pleased to announce the acquisition of 28 acres of forestland that will be permanently protected as the Grace M. and Robert S. Fay Woods. The property, located on East Hill Rd in Monson, adds to more than 13,000 acres of nearly contiguous protected lands in this area at the intersection of Monson, Brimfield, and Wales.

The newly conserved property sits less than a quarter-mile from both the Brimfield State Forest and Conant Brook Dam conservation area, creating an expanded corridor of protected habitat for wildlife and recreational opportunities for the public. It also holds historical significance as the former site of the Munn District schoolhouse, whose foundation can still be seen on the property.

The land was purchased through a generous memorial donation from Candace and Richard Erickson of Wilbraham in memory of Candace's parents, Grace M. and Robert S. Fay. The Fay family maintained deep roots in Monson for six generations, and both Grace and Robert were active community volunteers and founding members of the Monson Historical Society.

"You can volunteer and give back while you are alive, but very quickly people forget who you were and what you did," said Candace. "Conserving a property in my parents' names is a way to keep their memory alive while giving back to the community that they loved."

The property, which consists of forest, wetlands, and vernal pools with rocky outcrops and beautiful stone walls, reminds Candace of the forests that she played in as a child growing up in Monson.

Their participation in this project reflects the Erickson's commitment to environmental stewardship and community service.

"Rick and I believe that land conservation is very important," Candace noted, "and my parents taught me that if you can give back, you should."

The Grace M. and Robert S. Fay Woods will be managed by Opacum Land Trust. Opacum plans to open the property to the public once a parking area and trails are constructed. Opacum Land Trust works to protect the land, water, and wildlife of south-central Massachusetts through land conservation, stewardship, and education. To date, the organization has protected more than 4,000 acres across the region. To learn more or to make a donation to support OLT's work, visit www.OpacumLT.org.

Charlton Public Library presents “Exploring the Bay Path” Aug. 7

CHARLTON — Join Don Duffy for his presentation on the Bay Path, a fascinating tidbit of local history. Some people have heard of the path itself and many know of Bay Path University in Longmeadow or Bay Path Vocational School in Charlton. Few understand the local significance of the Bay Path and its course through Monson, Brimfield, Sturbridge, and the surrounding area.

Native Americans needed to move about from the rich soils of the Connecticut River Valley to central woodlands filled with game and to the abundant fish and shellfish at the coast. According to Levi Badger Chase, who authored The Bay Path and Along The Way, these paths were "narrow but deeply worn. They traveled in single file." Looking at the maps, the path went up hills with strategic vantage points (Steerage Rock, Brimfield) and connected valuable resources like ponds and rivers along the way. One very important stop: Tantiusques, the lead (graphite) mine in Sturbridge.

Interestingly enough, when settlers moved into the area, their method of travel differed from theirs. While the Bay Path must have been a key way of them moving westward and finding resources, the path itself changed in appearance and in some cases, the route. So wherein lies the great Bay Path? Come see what Don has discovered as he explores the Bay Path.

This program is sponsored by the Friends of the Charlton Public Library.

Registration is appreciated but not required and can be done by visiting our Web site/event calendar at charltonlibrary.org.

Charlton Public Library is located at 40 Main St. Additional parking is available at the Town Hall and Elementary School.

Bay Path graduate, mother of four triumphs in nursing journey

SPRINGFIELD — Against all odds, Gorret Rusoke has accomplished what many would consider impossible. A mother of four, wife, and full-time healthcare worker, Rusoke has officially completed her Practical Nursing certificate from Bay Path Regional Vocational Technical High School’s Practical Nursing Academy – an achievement fueled by grit, sacrifice, and unwavering purpose.

“I never thought I would find myself going back to school in my 30s,” said Rusoke, reflecting on her journey. “But deep inside, I knew I had more to give to my community, my family, and myself.”

Originally from Uganda, Rusoke came to the U.S. with a background in education and a passion for service. Her decision to pursue nursing solidified during the COVID-19 pandemic, watching nurses across the globe serve tirelessly with courage and compassion. That inspiration sparked a calling she could no longer ignore.

What followed was a grueling yet rewarding road filled with sleepless nights, long commutes, and juggling family responsibilities with academic rigor. She often drove more than two hours spite exhaustion, she would press on—studying into the early hours, preparing lunches, helping with homework, and then waking up to do it all over again.

“There were moments I felt selfish for skipping family events so I could rest or study,” Rusoke shared. “But clinical days reminded me why I started—to serve and care for people. That purpose carried me through.”

Rusoke’s clinical placements included Vibra Hospital, UMass Memorial Health, and several rehabilitation centers, where she quickly gained praise for her compassionate care and natural leadership. She excelled in areas like wound care, medication administration, and patient assessments—all while speaking four languages: English, Luganda, Kiswahili, and Rutooro.

Her efforts didn’t go unnoticed. At graduation, she received both the Academic Excellence Award and the Clinical Excellence Award, alongside her induction into the National Technical Honor Society and participation in the school’s Mock Code Team.

In her words, the journey would not have been possible without the strong support around her. She expressed heartfelt thanks to the faculty and staff of Bay Path Nursing Academy—particularly Director Dr. Bolandrina Gretheline and Executive Assistant Donna—as well as her close-knit group of nursing school friends: Louise, Delene, Elizabeth, Flory, and Chali.

“They were my study partners and second family,” she said. “We built lifelong friendships that withstood every challenge.”

Rusoke is currently serving as a Direct Care Professional at the Mental Health Association in Chicopee, and previously worked at The Reserve in East Longmeadow and the Cooperative for Human Services in Lexington. Her next goal? To continue making a difference in patients’ lives with empathy, integrity, and love.

“I aspire to be the kind of nurse who makes an impact—who patients remember not just for their skill, but for how they made them feel. This is only the beginning,” Rusoke said.

As Gorret Rusoke steps into the next chapter of her career, she embodies the heart of modern nursing: resilient, compassionate, and deeply human.

The soundtrack of our lives

You’re driving home late one night, tired but wired, and then it happens. That one song — your song — comes on the radio. Maybe it’s Whitney, or Nirvana, or A Tribe Called Quest, or that one-hit wonder from your senior year. Suddenly, you’re not in traffic anymore. You’re back in your first car; windows down, summer air thick with possibility. You’re 16, or 18, or 21, and for a moment, you feel it all again. That moment is science.

According to neuroscience research, the music we listened to in our adolescence and early adulthood (roughly ages 12 to 25) gets deeply embedded in our emotional memory, thanks to the way our brains are wired during those formative years. It’s a phenomenon sometimes referred to as the “reminiscence bump” a window of time where memories are more vivid, and experiences (especially those connected to emotion and identity) leave a lasting imprint.

When music enters the scene during that stretch of life, when you’re first falling in love, figuring out who you are, and building your independence it becomes more than just background noise. It becomes part of your personal identity. So, decades later, when you hear that track again, it doesn’t just spark a memory, it lights up the emotional centers of your brain, releasing dopamine, triggering nostalgia, and often bringing comfort and joy.

Nostalgia gets a bad rap, like it’s some kind of wistful indulgence. But it’s actually good for you. Studies show that nostalgic experiences (including music-based ones) can increase feelings of connection, meaning, and optimism. They act as a psychological time machine, reminding you of who you’ve been and helping you reconnect to the parts of yourself that still matter.

Your favorite music from your youth isn’t just “old school.” It’s a form of self-preservation. A reminder of your wildness. Your hope.

So, when you hit play on that mixtape in your mind, know this: you are not stuck in the past. You are drawing strength from it.

Letters to the Editor must include the author’s name, address, and a daytime phone number for purposes of verification in order to be considered for publication. OPINION

Human psychology

Sometimes there comes a moment when you realize life isn't just happening to you. You're interpreting it and reacting to it. You've been living inside a story your past wrote for you—before you knew you were the one telling it.

That's not your fault. It's your default. But the moment you see it—you can change everything.

Modern psychology has shown us that the brain is less a camera and more a courtroom—building stories, assigning blame, rewriting memory, all in service of keeping your ego comfortable or your fear pacified.

Psychologists like Daniel Kahneman and Amos Tversky spent decades studying how we form judgments, and their research uncovered a gallery of mental shortcuts—cognitive biases, emotional filters, and distorted beliefs that make us feel right, even when we're not. But often, what feels true is just what feels familiar.

And once you begin to see the stories you're telling yourself, something else becomes clear: there are parts of your life you won't even narrate. Things you won't face. Conversations you won't have. Feelings you won't feel. You tell yourself it's not the right time, that it's not a big deal, that you'll deal with it later. But in truth—what you avoid ends up shaping you more than what you confront.

Avoidance feels like relief. At first. You push something away—pain, responsibility, vulnerability—and for a moment, your body thanks you. The pressure drops. But behind that false peace, something dangerous grows. Each time you dodge discomfort, you quietly teach your nervous system that the discomfort was too much—that the fear must be obeyed.

POSITIVELY SPEAKING

Psychological studies on exposure therapy conducted by Joseph Wolpe and later David Barlow show again and again: the only way to reduce fear is to face it. The only way to weaken shame is to bring it into the light.

Healing doesn't come from feeling safe all the time. Success doesn't come from playing small. Growth begins when you learn to walk toward what makes you uncomfortable—on purpose.

And what we avoid doesn't just shape our behavior—it quietly shapes who we become. Because here's the deeper truth: you are not who you think you are. You are who you practice being.

Identity isn't fixed. It's not a core you discover—it's a pattern you reinforce. You are a feedback loop of habits, emotional reactions, routines, roles, and stories you tell yourself. What you repeat becomes familiar. What becomes familiar becomes comfortable. And what becomes comfortable becomes "me."

Psychologists and behavioral scientists have long known that we don't rise to our highest beliefs—we fall to our most repeated actions. You may wish to be bold, steady, at peace—but wishing doesn't shape

you. Repetition does.

The research on neuroplasticity, from pioneers like Donald Hebb and Carol Dweck, confirms: your brain reshapes itself based on what you do consistently, not what you hope is true.

So if you want to change your life, stop asking, "Who am I?" Start asking, "What do I repeat?" The real "you" isn't found in your reflection. It's built in your rituals.

Even the strongest habits can fall apart when emotions hit. You might know what to do—but then emotion clouds your thinking. Emotions don't care how much you've practiced—they test whether you can stay present when it counts.

To see yourself clearly—not as a fixed identity, but as a living pattern. Not as a passenger, but as the narrator holding the script. Yes, your brain plays tricks. Yes, fear wants the wheel. But you are not at the mercy of old wiring. You are the architect of what comes next.

Take the pause. Challenge the thought. Face the thing. Move, even when you tremble. Speak the better story, even if your voice shakes at first.

You don't need to be perfect. You need to be present. You don't need to know who you are. You need to start becoming who you were meant to be—on purpose.

Life isn't asking you to get it all right.

It's asking you to participate, to show up, to choose the next true step. And repeat it, until it becomes you.

You have an estate plan — whether you know it or not

NIELSEN

Think estate planning is only for the wealthy or elderly? Think again. If you own anything — a home, a car, a savings account, even a pet — you already have an estate plan. The only question is: Did you create it, or will your state do it for you?

When someone passes away without an estate plan, state laws take over, deciding who gets what and when. This legal process may not reflect your wishes. That's why taking control of your assets through a personal estate plan should be a top priority.

At its core, estate planning is about clarifying your wishes and making things easier for your heirs. It ensures your assets are distributed according to your preferences, designates who will make decisions on your behalf if you can't and provides guidance for your care in a medical crisis. Most plans include four key components:

1. A Will – This document outlines how your assets should be distributed after your death and names an executor to oversee the process in probate court. It can also designate guardians for minor children. Keep in mind that a will doesn't cover everything — certain transfer on death (TOD) accounts and jointly held property may bypass your will entirely.
2. Power of Attorney – If you become incapacitated, you'll want someone you trust to be able to make decisions on your behalf. A durable power of attorney designates such a person, helping to ensure your bills are paid, your business continues (if you have one) and your wishes are honored.
3. Health Care Directive – Sometimes called a living will, this document spells out your preferences for medical treatment if you're unable to speak for yourself. It can also designate someone to make health care decisions for you.
4. Beneficiary Designations – Accounts like 401(k)s, IRAs, and life insurance policies transfer directly to the people you name, regardless of what your will says. It's essential to review these beneficiary designations regularly, especially after significant life events such as marriage, divorce, death of a spouse or the birth of a child.

One common myth is that a will is all you need. But wills only take effect after death; they don't help if you're alive but unable to make decisions. Another misconception is that estate planning is only for the wealthy. In truth, planning is about more than money — it's about making things easier for the people you love during difficult times.

An effective estate plan can prevent costly legal battles, reduce confusion and give your loved ones a clear roadmap to follow. It also allows you to leave a legacy that reflects your values and priorities.

As your life changes, your estate plan should change along with it. Review your documents every few years or after major life events. It's often a good idea to seek help with such reviews. Your financial advisor or attorney can guide you through the process, ensuring your plan fits your unique circumstances.

In the end, estate planning isn't just about planning for what happens when you are gone. It's about feeling confident, knowing that what matters most — your family, your purpose, your legacy — is protected.

Gathering ideas for next year’s garden

MYERS

Summer is a time when many gardeners begin making plans for new additions to next year’s gardens. You may already be doing ongoing evaluations of your own plantings and may want to include tours of others’ gardens.

A walk around your neighborhood can provide inspiration and a chance to observe plants thriving in the same or similar conditions that exist in your landscape. Local garden tours allow you to take a closer look at both front and backyard gardens filled with plants, garden art and more.

Whether you tour alone or with a group of friends, it is a great opportunity to meet the gardener, gather ideas, exchange gardening secrets, and get inspired. Many of the garden tours are sponsored by garden clubs, libraries, beautification groups and other similar organizations. The proceeds from the event usually support a worthy cause in the community. You’ll find local garden tours promoted online, in local publications, garden centers, botanical gardens and other similar venues.

The Garden Conservancy’s Open Days program is a one-of-a-kind private garden tour. Participating gardens are located around the country in small and large lots that feature a variety of styles, plants and features. All you need is a little time and a ticket to participate in the self-guided garden tours. A listing of the Open Days gardens, their location and dates for each garden is listed on their website.

Visit your local or nearby public botanic gardens and arboreta. They feature plants in gardens and natural settings with similar growing conditions to nearby home gardens. They often feature new and unique varieties, traditional favorites and garden designs, providing inspiration to all who visit.

All-America Selections’ (AAS) Display Gardens are another valuable resource for gardeners. AAS is a non-profit organization that trials and evaluates plants for outstanding qualities suitable for the home garden. They have been helping gardeners grow award-winning flowers and vegetables since 1932.

New never-before-sold plant varieties bred for home gardens are planted, observed and evaluated at various trial gardens throughout North America. Trial gardens are located at public gardens, seed companies, or universities. The potential plant introduction is observed and its performance evaluated throughout the growing season. Volunteer judges rate the plants on improvements in characteristics such as aesthetics, performance and productivity as well as pest and disease tolerance. A plant must have significantly improved qualities to be considered for an AAS award.

Display gardens feature the newest AAS winners in a well-maintained setting where you can view the winners. There are nearly 200 display gardens in the United States and Canada located in public botanic gardens and arboreta, municipality gardens, garden retailers, university gardens and more. Some locations also offer related educational opportunities, open houses or field days during the growing season.

Take some time to enjoy and evaluate your gardens. Then set aside some time to visit local gardens for ideas and inspiration.

Cherry tomatoes are plentiful right now, but slicing each little tomato individually and coralling them on the cutting board can be a challenge. This reader’s tip cuts the chore down to size!

Fill a plastic lid with cherry tomatoes (I use a Cool Whip cover). Place a second cover, flat side down on top. Using a serrated knife, cut between the lids. Voila! All are cut in half in mere seconds.

This reader shares a recipe from her childhood – and best of all, it uses no eggs!

My favorite cake, called “big wacky cake,” is one that I’ve been making since I was a child:
Ingredients: ¾ cup butter (1 ½ sticks) or oil; 2 cups granulated sugar; 3 cups all purpose flour; 6 tablespoons cocoa powder; 2 teaspoons baking soda; 1 teaspoon salt; 2 tablespoons vinegar (plain white); 2 cups warm water.

Directions: Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Spray (or grease with butter) a 13” x 9” pan. Combine butter and sugar; blend well. Sift dry ingredients together; and add to butter mixture.

Mix vinegar and water together and add to above. Mix until well blended, but do not overbeat. Bake for 45-60 minutes. Frost as desired, then enjoy!

CHARLTON — Although Sunday's morning rain and afternoon drizzle definitely dampened turnout, the most stalwart still showed up to Charlton's annual Blueberry Festival anyway, with a soundtrack of classic rock covers by Phoenix.

The vendors who made it ranged from those marketing farm products to glass art, textiles to 3D-printed dragons and more, alongside social services and home repairs. And, of course, blueberries in various forms, plus a few food trucks, if that wasn't enough.

SOUTHBRIDGE — If you think someone's got a big head, it's probably not as big as Farmer Gregor's. Gregor is one of John McDonough's "Pumpernickel Puppets," and his tale of being flummoxed by Peter Rabbit was the centerpiece of McDonough's show at the library last week.

Afterward, McDonough introduced his mostly young crowd to a little of the stagecraft of puppetry, showing how his various puppets – from a water-spraying fish to a dancing rabbit – work.

Master Masons gather for pig roast

BY BRO. JIMMY FALZONE
QUINEBAUG MASONIC LODGE

OXFORD — On Saturday, July 26, the Oxford Masonic Lodge parking lot was packed with Master Masons, their family and friends from the 24th Masonic District. Brother Fred Aubin Jr., from the Oxford Masonic Lodge, and Brother Clay Tull from the Quinebaug Masonic Lodge in Southbridge hosted this family fun event.

Brother Fred Aubin of Oxford, with the help of his sons and friends, along with Brother Clay Tull of Southbridge, started cooking the pig on Friday night at 11 p.m. The pig that they were roasting was about 120lbs and took about 15 hours to fully cook. There were cornhole games set up for the kids and adults to have fun. The pig that they were roasting sent an aroma in the air, and it was driving people crazy because it smelled so good. Also served were cooked pork butts, BBQ Chicken, corn on the cob, pasta salad, potato salad, corn bread, Cole slaw, baked beans and much more.

Money raised at this great event will go towards the Lodges' needs and scholarship funds. It was great to see and hear people laughing. Children were running around laughing and having fun throwing water balloons at each other. Most of all the comradery and fellowship that Freemasonry is all about talking to other Brethrens, family and friends. If you would like more information about Freemasonry, go to www.massfreemasonry.org to find a lodge nearest you.

Fall River tragedy prompts demands for improved fire safety

BY KEVIN FLANDERS
STAFF WRITER

REGION — In response to last month’s deadly fire at a Fall River assisted living residence, state leaders have announced steps to enhance the safety of residents living in facilities across the Commonwealth.

A July 13 fire at Gabriel House, an assisted living residence (ALR) in Fall River, left 10 residents dead and dozens injured.

Firefighters and residents were among the injured, according to State Fire Marshal Jon Davine.

“What happened in Fall River is a horrible tragedy. Our hearts are with the families who lost loved ones and the first responders who saved so many others,” said Gov. Maura Healey. “This is a moment to make sure that every assisted living residence is prepared to respond to emergencies and to protect the safety of their residents.”

On July 21, the state’s Executive Office of Aging and Independence – the agency tasked with ensuring that ALRs are in compliance with state regulations – launched a statewide initiative to ensure that all 273 ALRs across Massachusetts are prepared to protect residents during emergencies.

As part of the initiative, all ALRs must issue a letter to residents and families outlining fire safety protocols, evacuation procedures, and key points of contact for questions or concerns following an emergency.

Additionally, ALRs have been directed to ensure that evacuation instructions and exit routes are posted inside each resident’s unit, as well as in common areas.

Furthermore, state officials will distribute a fire safety assessment survey that all ALRs must complete, reaffirming compliance with fire safety requirements such as sprinkler systems, fire drills, evacuation protocols, and maintenance of fire-rated doors and walls.

Providers will also report information on key systems within their buildings to help prioritize oversight.

Additionally, ALRs must submit a site-specific emergency preparedness plan to state officials.

“We are engaging every assisted living provider in this process. By requiring clear communication with residents and detailed reporting to the state, we are making sure resident safety is front and center – today and every day,” said Office of Aging and Independence Secretary Robin Lipson. “Our entire team is committed to strengthening emergency readiness and improving standards across the assisted living sector in Massachusetts.”

While state leaders commend providers for steps already taken to ensure safety, they insist that more can be done statewide.

“These immediate actions underscore our administration’s commitment to protecting our vulnerable populations. We are working closely with providers, local officials, and families to put safety first and provide the peace of mind that residents deserve,” said Massachusetts Health and Human Services Secretary Kiame Mahaniah.

The Office of Aging and Independence is also in the process of finalizing proposed amendments to strengthen regulatory requirements for ALRs.

The investigation into the cause of the Gabriel House fire is being conducted by the Bristol County District Attorney’s Office, State Police detectives, the Fall River Fire Department, Fall River Police Department, and the State Police Fire Investigation Unit assigned to the State Fire Marshal’s office.

“Investigators identified an oxygen concentrator and numerous smoking materials in the room of origin,” read a statement released by the state’s Department of Fire Services. “They developed hypotheses by which either of these could have ignited a fire, but were unable to test them. Tragically, the occupant of this room was among those who lost their lives on July 13, and investigators could not obtain an account of the fire in its beginning stages.”

Officials brace for peak mosquito-borne illness season

BY KEVIN FLANDERS
STAFF WRITER

REGION — As we approach the peak season for West Nile virus (WNV) and Eastern Equine Encephalitis (EEE), area residents are urged to take precautions to avoid mosquito bites.

Last month, the Massachusetts Department of Public Health (DPH) announced the first confirmed animal case of WNV in 2025. A goat was exposed to WNV in Lunenburg in Worcester County, officials said.

“With this evidence of an animal infected with West Nile virus, we know that there are the right conditions and enough disease circulating to result in a human infection,” said Public Health Commissioner Robbie Goldstein. “The elevated temperatures, combined with high humidity, increase mosquito activity.”

WNV and EEE are both spread to humans through the bite of an infected mosquito. Last year, due to excessive rainfall, saw several local communities placed at elevated risk for human infections.

While EEE can infect people of all ages, individuals under 15 years of age or over 50 are at greatest risk for serious illness. Symptoms of EEE include high fever, muscle pain, headaches, and seizures. Symptoms can occur up to two weeks after a person is bitten by an infected mosquito.

WNV can cause fever, headaches, and rashes. The illness can sometimes be serious or fatal.

Thus far, there have been no human cases of WNV detected in Massachusetts. There were 19 human cases of WNV recorded in 2024.

One of the best ways to protect your family against mosquitoes is to avoid outdoor activities during peak mosquito hours from dusk to dawn. If you must be outside during these hours, be sure to apply insect repellent and maximize clothing coverage of exposed skin.

Residents can also reduce the number of mosquitoes around their homes by draining sources of standing water. Mosquitoes often lay their eggs in small pools, wheelbarrows, rain gutters, and drains. Residents are advised to frequently empty flowerpots and wading pools, in addition to changing the water in birdbaths daily.

It is also important to make sure that window and door screens fit tightly. Screens with holes or openings should be replaced, officials said.

Local officials will post additional resources and updates on conditions within respective communities throughout the late summer and fall months.

Residents are also urged to take steps to protect their pets from mosquitoes.

“Animals that live outdoors are at somewhat higher risk from arboviruses than humans who spend more time indoors,” said State Epidemiologist Dr. Catherine Brown. “But the weather this summer is creating the opportunity for it to be a busy WNV season, and it is important to take steps to prevent mosquito bites.”

Additional information about EEE and WNV, as well as reports of current and historical virus activity in Massachusetts, can be found by visiting www.mass.gov.

QCC SUCCESS Scholar proves there’s no one way to learn

WORCESTER — Local student Matthew Cronin is redefining success by turning personal obstacles into opportunities, thanks in part to the SUCCESS Scholars program at Quinsigamond Community College.

Cronin is part of QCC’s SUCCESS Scholars program, a state-funded initiative that provides support for students facing systemic barriers. Since starting at QCC in the fall of 2023, Cronin has made the Dean’s List and is a member of Phi Theta Kappa Honor Society. Cronin cited the SUCCESS program as a factor in his impressive academic performance.

“I used to struggle in school and people in my life told me I couldn’t do it,” Cronin shared. “Now, I’m using my disabilities as a superpower.”

Growing up, Cronin’s learning disabilities, including ADHD and auditory processing disorder, weren’t properly addressed, which led to academic difficulties. After high school, he completed a small amount of training and worked in medical billing but desired a more fulfilling career.

Encouraged by staff at Genesis Clubhouse, a vocational and rehabilitation program for individuals who live with mental illness, Cronin applied to QCC. What might have previously been out of financial reach became affordable to Cronin thanks to the implementation of MassReconnect, the state-funded program covering community college tuition and fees for students over 25 who haven’t received a bachelor’s degree.

Once enrolled at QCC, Cronin began meeting with a SUCCESS advisor. The program utilizes a case management approach focused on building relationships with students. The SUCCESS advisor serves as a main contact to guide students through college processes and expectations, navigate challenges and connect them with key supports.

“Matthew’s journey is a powerful reminder of the transformative impact of access, support and belonging. Programs like SUCCESS Scholars and MassReconnect are not just helping students stay in college — they’re empowering students like Matthew to thrive, lead and inspire others along the way,” said Associate Vice President of Academic Affairs Kevin Li.

In this newfound supportive environment, Cronin was able to explore his passions and joined the human services and deaf studies programs. Currently, Cronin is pursuing the path to become a social worker and an advocate, translating personal experiences into meaningful change. He is also interested in entrepreneurship and inspirational speaking.

“Matthew is such a good example of how to advocate for yourself and effectively utilize resources,” said SUCCESS Scholars Academic Advisor Mallory Dutton. “Once he got his feet firmly on the ground in college, his first instinct was to help other people see that this is possible for them too.”

Cronin also recognized other QCC supports, such as the Student Accessibility Services (SAS) department, which has been instrumental to his achievements. SAS academic coaches have helped Cronin develop personalized strategies addressing time management and learning techniques. This, combined with his work in the SUCCESS Scholars program, has transformed his approach to education.

for grants and would serve as a “guidance tool” for future work, “putting everything in one place,” (in Mike Loin’s phrasing), they also agreed that approving it now “would be detrimental to the town’s position” in that possible legal battle (in Mike Colognesi’s phrasing).

They didn’t say when they might bring it up for a vote, but did recommend it go to the Town Council for a presentation by CMRPC’s Emily Glaubitz, the project’s consultant.

“This is an overview for the whole town,” Loin said, noting some aspects aren’t for the board to do. “We can say anything we want. Until we pass a zoning ordinance, it can’t be built anyway.”

General agreement did not mean board members liked everything in the lengthy plan – for example, its recommendation to widen mixed use. They said they think that should not be all over town, only in certain zones. It’s now allowed downtown by permit, and is the subject of the 39 Elm dispute.

Colognesi noted, “The reality is that none of those buildings downtown are going to have anything but residential units above the first floor” because of building code elevator requirements.

What that housing might look like is still in limbo. Members cited both condo-style and apartment-style arrangements that worked, with Loin noting the key issue is having “a landlord who cares.”

Despite that, several members recalled when upper levels had dentist offices and other local services years ago. There was also some talk of the Blanchard Theater (long vacant above what was Zoe’s Pizza) and how other communities have found funds to renovate such theaters.

While they also liked the idea of having “cottage” and similar “tiny home” developments by special permit, they didn’t like the idea of having them interspersed with other housing as “infill” development. Among the issues to address would be water and sewer; members noted bringing those to outlying areas would probably kill projects, but there are examples of home/condo associations having centralized well/septic systems (as at Kelly Road, Sturbridge). There are, however, some parts of town with water and sewer that aren’t developed that might be suitable for such projects, they noted.

What seemed more troubling to them were the recommendations that involved financing. Sandy Acly questioned providing funds to help homeowners build accessory dwelling units, although she said she liked the idea of offering standard plans they could use.

Loin said he thought a suggestion advocating for more deed-restricted units would prove “so hard” to do, although he supported the idea of having interns identify potential sites for affordable housing. Regarding a related issue – helping residents get housing aid – he noted that would essentially mean “creating an agency or an office to do that.” He predicted helping some renters and owners pay housing costs “will get a little kick-back (by context, he meant pushback) ... because the people who can afford it are going to say ‘Why am I financing somebody else to live?’” Another proposal, to look into “creative models for home ownership,” would also require such an office or be run out of the town manager’s office, he noted.

Acly said a proposal to create a community development corporation was already tried, “but nobody wanted to participate.”

never a scenario where you could plant the entire island.”

That was sparked by Mary Dowling saying she’d expected to see “clusters of landscaping” there and elsewhere. She’d like to see the town “adopt other areas” along Route 20, some that aren’t being done, and some that are already adopted.

She also asked for a detailed list of what’s been purchased with the $25,000 the town allocated to this work. (Coan said he has it.)

Chair Jamie Goodwin described it as “patent absurdity” that the town would have to “adopt an area to clean it up.”

After that, the board briefly discussed an out-of-town issue. The recently received a letter seeking support from Oakham residents who are opposing a proposed battery storage/disposal site in that town.

Noting the site’s proximity to the Quabbin watershed, Goodwin said, “That’s the dumbest thing I’ve ever heard.”

Town Administrator Robin Grimm said they’re asking for help in passing HD 4557, a bill that would require local home rule support for such projects before companies or the state can build them and require at least one local public hearing. The short bill’s text is actually a little confusing – it says the authority would lie with the “elected city council, selectboard or other legislative body” in a town. (In most towns the “legislative body” is Town Meeting, but that’s not cited.)

According to the Legislature’s website, that bill was sent to the Rules Committee back in April. So far, several area representatives have signed on, including John Marsi, Don Berthiaume and Joe McKenna, but not Todd Smola. It was filed by Kelly Pease.

Returning to Sturbridge affairs, the board heard the regular reports for the Building and Police departments. The latter led into hiring three new full-time officers – two with lengthy experience (Edward Page, with 27 years, most recently in Wales; and Richard Tracy, Sr., with 23 years as a postal inspector) and one newcomer (Domenic Barasso) – to replace several who resigned. It also approved an $8000 contract to “hydrorake” the weeds out of the town’s swim area after the season concludes.

ally. Seventy-two percent (72%) said earning their Gold Award helped them get a scholarship. Changing the world doesn’t end when a Girl Scout earns her Gold Award. Ninety-nine percent (99%) of Gold Award Girl Scout alums take on leadership roles in their everyday lives.

The teens were honored at the Girl

Scout Gold Award and Silver Award Ceremony on June 18 at Mechanics Hall in Worcester. Among them was Avery Adams of Fiskdale.

Adams earned her Gold Award by founding the Neurodivergent Alliance at Tantasqua Regional High School, a club that provides a supportive, inclusive space for neurodivergent students and those interested in learning more about neurodiversity. Inspired by her own experiences with autism and anxiety, Avery created monthly meetings focused on education, connection, and creativity—featuring discussions, presentations, and activities. The club has become a recognized part of the school community, averaging 18 participants and engaging in school-wide events. To ensure the club’s sustainability, Adams established an executive board with ongoing elections and connected the group to the National Neurodivergent Alliance for continued collaboration and resources.

MANCHESTER, New Hampshire — Saint Anselm College student Samantha McGlinchy from Brimfield, a Politics major and in the class of 2028, has been accepted into the Kevin B. Harrington New Hampshire Institute of Politics (NHIOP) Ambassador Program for the 2025-2026 academic year.

The Kevin B. Harrington NHIOP Student Ambassador Program is a competitive program that offers

Pamela Facteau, LPN, becomes first NCLEX-PN success for her class

CHARLTON — With determination, heart, and skill, Pamela Facteau of Sturbridge has become the first in her class to pass the NCLEX-PN on her first attempt—a proud and inspirational milestone for both Pamela and the Bay Path Practical Nursing Academy.

Now officially Pamela Facteau, LPN, she brings a unique blend of compassion, clinical excellence, and entrepreneurial vision. In addition to her nursing accomplishments, Pamela holds numerous certifications that reflect her commitment to safety, mental health, and community care: Certified in Dementia Care, Certified in Mental Health First Aid, Certified in Stop The Bleed, Certified in Domestic Violence Training, and Narcan Training.

Her dedication has also earned her the Random Act of Kindness (RAK) Award. She was a member of the UNICEF Club and a participant in Summer Workshop II.

Pamela is also the founder of LYFT Facial Rejuvenation, a wellness-based aesthetic practice that blends artistry with science. Her mission: to help people feel confident, cared for, and renewed. Learn more at the Web site: www.lyftrejuvenation.com or Facebook: LYFT Facial Rejuvenation.

When asked about the strengths of Bay Path Practical Nursing Academy, Fecteau shared, “Available resources were there, and post-exam reviews were helpful.”

Pamela credits her journey to the support and mentorship she received from Advisor Barbara Martel, BSN, RN of Sturbridge, Mentor Vanessa Gachagua, LPN of Southbridge from the PN Class of 2024, and the Practical Nursing Faculty & staff, all of whom played pivotal roles in her development as a nurse.

In a personal message to Dr. Gretheline Bolandrina, DHA, MSN Ed, RN, CRRN, Academy Director, Fecteau shared the heart behind her success:

“Hi Dr. Bolandrina, Thank you so much. Completing nursing school has been one of the most intense and transformative journeys of my life. Balancing the demands of a rigorous and accelerated program while simultaneously running my aesthetic business required unwavering determination, discipline, and resiliience. My passion for aesthetics and the love I have for my clients have always been the driving force behind everything I do. It was that same passion that fueled my strength to persevere—even during the most challenging moments.

“The commitment I made to myself and to my future was clear: I would not only finish nursing school, but I would do so with integrity, focus, and excellence. Passing the NCLEX on my first attempt is a milestone that means more to me than words can express. It symbolizes every late night, every sacrifice, and every moment of pushing forward when it would’ve been easier to stop.

I am beyond proud of this achievement and incredibly excited for what the future holds. With my nursing education and clinical training now complete, I am more equipped than ever to provide safe, evidence-based, and compassionate care within my aesthetic practice. I look forward to combining my medical knowledge with my artistic passion to deliver the highest level of care and results to my clients.

“This is only the beginning, and I remain fully committed to lifelong learning and professional growth to be the best provider I can be.”

Pamela’s story is a testament to what can be achieved through perseverance, purpose, and passion. Her success is a beacon for her classmates and a proud moment for the entire Bay Path community.
