Putnam Science Academy dance team seeking new students

BY JASON BLEAU
VILLAGER CORRESPONDENT

PUTNAM — Putnam Science Academy has become a well-respected school over the years for the success of its academics and athletics programs. Now a new program is hoping to add to the school's reputation as the Putnam Science Academy Dance Team made its debut during the 2022/2023 school year.

The program is led by local dance instructor Javin Hammond, owner of Taylor Studios in Danielson and a former dancer for the WNBA, and held its first open house on March 1 to draw in prospective dancers for the team. The Dance Team is designed to help students seeking a future in dance as a sport and art enhance their skills and apply them in ways that complement the pride many have for Putnam Science Academy.

"The Dance Program gives kids the opportunity to get a private school education and do their high school credits, but also hone their craft and work on all of their dance skills during the day," Hammond said of the program. "Students will have the ability to dance and condition in all forms of dance including jazz, hip-hop, modern and contemporary. They'll be able to study all different styles and be a part of a team that will support all sports. We also want to get out in the community too and make appearances at parades and events and even get connected with the Bradley Playhouse to get these dancers from Putnam Science Academy into the community."

Frontier FiberOptic expansion coming to Killingly

BY JASON BLEAU
VILLAGER CORRESPONDENT

KILLINGLY — With Frontier in the midst of an expansion into Eastern Connecticut, townsfolk got a clearer picture of what the company's fiber network improvements will look like and how much the service will cost for those who choose to enroll.

Town Manager Mary Calorio provided an update to the Killingly Town Council in February following a meeting with Frontier in January. As Frontier rolls out fiber improvements statewide, Killingly is just one local community slated to receive the new and improved service which will create an extended fiber network allowing locals access to the company's line of services for internet and online connectivity. The fiber connection will work by connecting the company's central office to customer homes using a combination of neighborhood hubs and fiber terminals.

Calorio said the rollout will bring Frontier's service to all of Killingly and will include the installation of Fiber Distribution Hubs (FDH) on telephone poles in certain areas of the town. One of the major questions was the effects of the weather on these hubs which Calorio said would be minimal according to Frontier.

"There's really nothing in there that can get damaged by the rain or

Weiss, Hale & Zahansky's Leisl L. Cording featured in FORTUNE Magazine's "Five Star Wealth Managers Under 40"

were selected to receive the Five Star Wealth Manager1 award from Five Star Professional in 2022.

The Five Star Award is the largest and most widely published wealth manager award program in the financial services industry. This is the second Five Star Wealth Manager Award that Cording has earned, having also received the award in 2021, the first year she was eligible. Among all Connecticut wealth managers who were eligible, Cording was one of just 290 – or 10 percent of all candidates – to receive the award.

WHZ's Principals/Managing Partners Laurence Hale, AAMS, CRPS® and James Zahansky AWMA® were also named Five Star Wealth Managers in 2022, marking the ninth consecutive year that all WHZ advisors eligible for the award were selected to receive it.

For Cording, the distinction is especially impressive given her young age and the fact that only about 25 percent of wealth managers are women.

The FORTUNE article reads, in part, "What makes this group so unique is that they are already part of an exclusive group – they're all Five Star Wealth Managers. Winners of the Five Star Wealth Manager award have already been vetted by a third-party research process that includes 10 objective criteria. The set of award winners listed [here] has an additional distinction: they all satisfied those criteria and won the Five Star award at a young age."

For Cording, 2022 was undoubtedly a year of growth and achievement. She was promoted to senior vice president at WHZ in February 2022, just three years after joining the firm and a few months after earning her first Five Star Wealth Manager designation in the first year she was eligible.

"I was already thrilled to be selected as a Five Star Wealth Manager for the second year. To also now be featured in Fortune Magazine as being among those wealth managers under 40 to have achieved that is incredible and I'm honored," Cording said.

Cording says she loves watching her clients being empowered to achieve their goals and dreams as a result of the strategic financial plan she's helped them to create and maintain. She particularly enjoys working with women and others like herself who are in their late thirties and forties.

"I love helping clients work toward achieving their financial goals, which then allows them to achieve their life goals.

When you can help someone feel confident about their ability to accomplish their dreams that's always really rewarding," Cording says. "I find it especially rewarding when working with clients that I can identify with on a personal level. They maybe are new to being in a position of building wealth, like younger clients and women who perhaps didn't have the confidence or opportunity to build and manage their own wealth in the past."

The article appears in the February/March edition of FORTUNE and in the "FORTUNE Branded Content" section of its Web site at fortune.com.

The Five Star Wealth Manager awards are presented by Five Star Professional in partnership with Connecticut Magazine as a means to help consumers find outstanding wealth managers and investment professionals in their area. The award is given based on a rigorous, multifaceted research methodology, which incorporates input from peers and firm leaders along with standards for industry experience, education and professional designations, client retention rates, and a thorough review of regulatory history.

WHZ was founded in Pomfret, Connecticut in 2006 as a fiduciary, independent investment firm. Today the firm offers wealth management and customized financial planning services to individuals, families, business owners and executives, and not-for-profit institutions in 25 states from its offices in Pomfret and Tolland, and is a partner of Commonwealth Financial Network®, one of the largest privately-owned independent Registered Investment Advisor/broker-dealers in the United States. PUTNAM — Day Kimball Hospital is pleased to announce it has recently earned its sixth consecutive CNOR® Strong designation from the Competency & Credentialing Institute (CCI). The CNOR Strong designation is given to facilities having at least 50 percent of its operating room (OR) nursing staff CNOR certified, and provides programs that reward and recognize its certified nurses.

The Certified Perioperative Nurse (CNOR) credential is the only accredited certification for perioperative registered nurses. Earning the CNOR is a mark of distinction and demonstrates a commitment to upholding the highest standards in patient safety. Perioperative nurses pursue certification for a variety of reasons, including professional validation, personal accomplishment, and career advancement.

Receiving The CNOR® certification allows nurses to demonstrate their commitment to exceptional patient safety and adhere to current standards in their field of practice. It is an objective, measurable way of acknowledging the achievement of specialty knowledge beyond basic nursing preparation and RN licensure.

"It is an honor to receive CNOR® Strong designation once, but six years in a row is an incredible achievement," said Cheryl Petrarca, DKH Executive Director of Nursing and Director of Surgical Services. "I am extremely proud of our OR nurses for their commitment to nursing excellence. They have mastered the stan-

High school senior hoopster shooting for the stars

PUTNAM — On Tuesday, March 14, the stars will come out in Putnam. Although the day hasn't been predicted by local meteorologists, it has been guaranteed by Putnam Rotary Club President Melissa, "Missy" Meyers.

According to Meyers, March 14 is the date of the annual Putnam Rotary Club Ray Brousseau All Star Senior Basketball Shootout at the Putnam High School gymnasium. The event, featuring high school senior girls and boys basketball players, has been in existence for more than two decades and is the culminating game in the basketball careers for many players who have been on the hardwood for the past four years. Chairing the evening's festivities for the Putnam Rotary Club is member Jonathan Tremblay.

"I'm very excited about this year's game because the area has witnessed a large number of outstanding male and female players," said Tremblay. "The players are anxious to display their skills. It's always an entertaining evening and this year won't disappoint."

The games are held annually in memory of the late Raymond Brousseau, a local businessman who strongly supported local youth sports. Brousseau, who was a Putnam Rotarian for nearly five decades, served as the Club President and enjoyed 41 years of perfect attendance at the weekly meetings. Brousseau and his wife Violet endowed a significant scholarship to the Club. It's presented annually to a local graduating high school senior.

Tremblay noted that the girls' game is scheduled to tipoff promptly at 5:30 p.m. followed by the boys' game at approximately 7:30 p.m. In between contests and during the halftime of each game, the Club will hold the "shootout contest" that is open to any contestant. Anyone successfully making a foul shot, a shot from the top of the key and a half court shot will win $50 compliments of CorePlus Credit Union.

Players from area schools in the greater Northeastern Connecticut region have been invited. Invitations have gone out to Plainfield, Killingly, Ellis Tech, Griswold, Putnam Tourtelotte, Woodstock Academy, Marianopolis, Pomfret School, Parish Hill, Putnam Science Academy and Windham Tech. All Players will receive a game tee shirt and a memento of the game provided by sponsors, Archambault Insurance, Benpe Consulting, Centreville Bank, WINY Radio, The Woodstock Academy and The Byrnes Insurance Agency.

Projects approved for closed bakery, school in Thompson

BY JASON BLEAU
VILLAGER CORRESPONDENT

THOMPSON — A pair of project proposals were approved by the Thompson Planning and Zoning Commission on Monday, Feb. 27 that would bring new life to a pair of unused buildings along Main Street left vacant due to the closures of a pair of Thompson staples in recent years.

The first project involved the future of the Superior Bakery building at 72 Main St. and surrounding lots which was vacated in 2021 after the sudden closure that left over 90 employees seeking new jobs. Zachary LaBonte and Green Valley Self-Storage LLC are planning to revitalize the site as a climate-controlled storage rental facility containing 248 storage units of varying sizes.

"Basically, heating and cooling systems will be installed to maintain the temperature and relative humidity. There are floating docks on the side of the building where customers will have access to load into the building with moving trucks. We'll also be putting in a ramp so we can have foot traffic up into the building," LaBonte said during a public hearing.

The lower level of the facility will be offered to local businesses as office space while a nearby house included with the property sale will be demolished due to its deteriorating condition. Traffic in and out of the facility is expected to be much less than the bakery traffic.

The project was approved unanimously by the Planning and Zoning Commission with the stipulations that the site map be updated to include connections to catch basins and that hazardous trees be removed after a concerned resident brought the issue to the Commission's attention.

The second project was the conversion of the closed St. Joseph School into housing units. The applicants, Baystate Investment Fund, LLC, were represented by Attorney Ian Sullivan of St. Ongé & Brouillard who said the project will include the conversion of the school into 40 one-bedroom units. The property was previously owned by the Catholic Church but was put up for sale after St. Joseph's School announced its closure in 2020.

Attorney Sullivan, a Thompson resident himself, said the proposal will put the project back on the tax roll.

"The idea, essentially, is that we're going to take a property that's currently not on the tax roll and it back and give it new life. The impact is going to be fairly minimal on our school system given that they're single room and studio apartments. As a Thompson resident myself, I see this as

Superior Bakery in Thompson will be converted into a climate-controlled storage facility

St. Joseph's School in Thompson will be reused as housing

a beneficial project in my eyes," said Sullivan.

The project proposes no major exterior changes to the building other than some added lighting. At least one handicap accessible room and four affordable housing units are included in the project along with several electric vehicle charging stations. The Planning and Zoning Commission expressed concerns about the potential for lead and asbestos contamination which Sullivan addressed.

"We haven't done a lead test. There's been an asbestos test on the building. There is asbestos, so when we go to the design phase of the building some will be encapsulated with flooring, others will be removed, so that will be part of the process. Whatever the codes are, that's what we'll have to abide by," said Sullivan.

He further noted that lead testing would be conducted during this process as well.

Additional concerns brought up during the public hearing included traffic and sight lines along Reardon Road. The Commission voted to approve the proposal with the requirements to add to the sight lines and that the applicants seek approval from the Water Pollution Control Authority indicating that the sewer systems can handle the expected increased use.

Tourtellotte Student Spotlight: Dylan Johnson

N O R T H GROSVENORDALE — Each month, Tourtellotte Memorial High School's Student Spotlight program recognizes a student who has demonstrated outstanding achievement, character, leadership, attitude, and/or contributions to the school and community. March's Student Spotlight honoree is senior Dylan Johnson.

Dylan was nominated by Alex Nachtigall, Hanna LeClaire, Mrs. Steglitz, Mrs. Ouillette, and Ms. Sobanksi.

In Alex's nomination Of Dylan, Alex states, "Dylan is one of the most respectful people I know. He is also very funny with a good sense of humor. Lastly, Dylan is always willing to help you if you're struggling. Whether he knows the topic or not, he will make an effort to help."

Hanna adds, "I have known Dylan throughout my entire school experience; however, I have become much closer to him my senior year. Dylan has such a kind soul and a great sense of humor. He is very smart but he is nonchalant about it. Dylan is a part of many sports teams and clubs. He is very deserving of the Spotlight."

Several of the staff also nominated Dylan. Mrs. Steglitz says, "It has been an absolute pleasure to have Dylan in Spanish 3 this year. He is a positive influence in class and a genuinely nice person to be around. He is always committed to doing his best and he is diligent in his approach to learning. I enjoy having conversations with 'Dilly' as I enjoy his perspective. I wish him nothing but the best in his future. We are lucky to have him as a Tourtellotte Tiger."

Mrs. Ouillette adds, "When there was a request for a student to help tutor middle schoolers, Dylan stepped right up to the plate and did a great job. He has grown to be a kind and helpful young man that others can count on."

Finally, Ms. Sobanksi writes in her nomination, "Dylan is bright, dedicated, and humble. He is unafraid to ask questions when it will help him understand better and always willing to work hard. He is the first to step up to a challenge and also the first to thank someone who has helped him along the way. He has made Calc class a little more fun each day, whether it's his dedication to learning, his desire to help others whenever possible, or his sense of humor. He will truly be missed next year, and AP Calculus and family lunch will be very different without him."

Dylan consistently achieves honors in school while being highly involved in TMHS athletics including soccer, basketball, track, e-sports, and the recently formed FBLA bowling team.

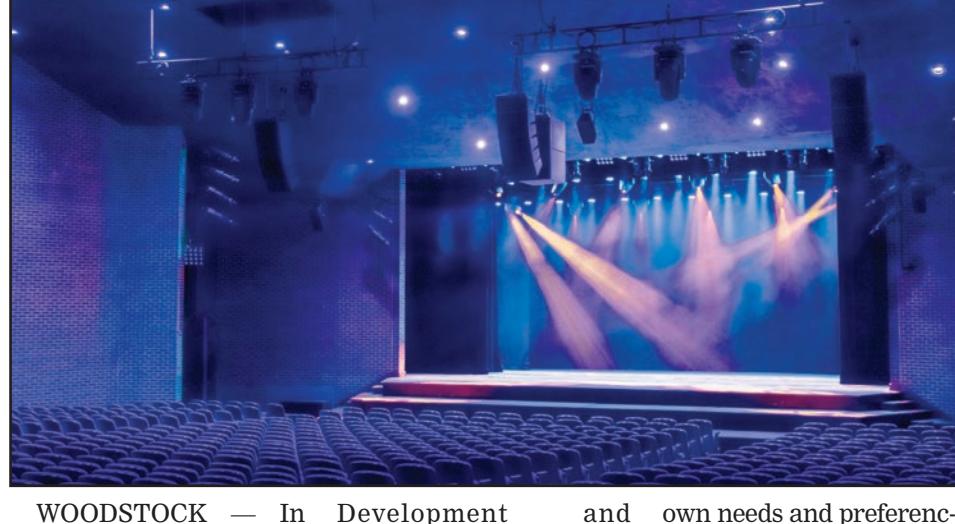

Dylan says, "I feel like my involvement in these activities has increased my sense of involvement with the community in my school. Also, through Project Graduation, I have been able to work for and with the community by participating in town wide trash clean up, bottles and cans collections, and Thompson Community Day."

When asked what motivates him, Dylan says, "I am motivated by the idea of working hard now so that life will be easier for me later. If the strain and effort that I have to apply to being successful makes the rest of my life easier, I would definitely choose to struggle now for the benefit of my future."

About his future, Dylan states, "I plan to go to school for Engineering." Finally, Dylan's message to his school and community is, "Be grateful for the opportunities provided to you. It may not seem like much but it could always be worse."

Loos Center for the Arts increases accessibility for hard of hearing with grant funding

WOODSTOCK — In December 2022, Loos Center for the Arts was awarded the Connecticut Cultural Fund Operating Support Grant of $24,400 from Connecticut Humanities, in partnership with Connecticut Office of the Arts, to increase accessibility options for its visitors. The funding was provided by the Connecticut State Department of Economic and Community Development and Connecticut Office of the Arts from the Connecticut State Legislature.

The grant was used to purchase and implement an assisted listening system for guests of Loos Center for the Arts who are hard of hearing. The system, which operates in conjunction with a free mobile app, allows visitors to adjust the tone and volume of the event, suitable to their own needs and preferences directly through their personal mobile device. Loos Center for the Arts also has mobile devices on-site with the app installed for those who do not own or have access to a mobile device during their visit.

"Providing accessibility options has been a priority for us since ownership of the building was transferred to The Woodstock Academy in 2017, beginning with the addition of accessible seating," said Eric Davidson, executive director of Loos Center for the Arts. "We're excited to add this system to our growing catalog of accessible options to ensure that all our visitors have an inclusive experience and equitable access to the arts."

The system was implemented at Loos Center for the Arts for the first time in February 2023, where visitors reported having a positive, customized listening experience and look forward to using it again.

"We are very thankful for the generosity of CT Humanities and CT Office of the Arts and for their support of our commitment to the arts and diversity, equity, and inclusion," said Davidson.

New nonprofit looks to establish therapeutic horseback riding center

WOODSTOCK — Flying Free Therapeutic Riding Center is galloping toward their fundraising goal. FFCR is a new 501 (c)(3) nonprofit organization specializing in therapeutic horseback riding lessons for individuals with special needs. These lessons provide several physical, mental and emotional benefits to participants. The program that they were formerly affiliated with ended without notice after 20 years in September of 2022, leaving clients without their much needed equine therapy. They are raising funds to secure a new long-term location for their therapeutic riding center in northeast Connecticut. Thirty-two individuals with special needs are now in a holding pattern. To continue with their program, FFCR needs to raise a total of $75,000 and find a location by summer 2023. They have raised $45,000 since September but need further support to meet their goal.

Their specially trained herd of horses and ponies is currently staying in temporary stabling to remain available for future lessons. FFCR risks having to send the herd back to their owners if the fundraising goal is not met, likely ending their participation in the program. Therapy horses and ponies are very difficult to find, and it would take years for FFCR to recreate the dynamic that this herd offers.

They are hosting the First Annual Gala Saturday May 6, 4:30 – 9 p.m. at The Barn at Roseland Park Woodstock a beautiful location with Cocktails, Dinner, Raffle & Silent Auction Offerings, and Dancing – for more details including purchasing tickets, a sponsorship or donating raffle baskets please visit us at Flying Free Therapeutic Riding Center.

FFCR welcomes and appreciates donations of any size. For more information and to learn how to donate, find FFCR online at flyingfreetherapeuticriding.org or on Facebook.

Killingly High senior Jack Richardson became the school's first two-time New England Regional Wrestling champion on Saturday, March 4, in Providence, R.I.

Richardson, wrestling in the 152-pound weight class, defeated Jason Hood from Rhode Island's Ponaganset High School, in double overtime. Richardson won the 152-pound New England Regional championship last year as well.

Kaden Ware, Richardson's classmate at Killingly, finished fourth at the New England Regional in the 132-pound weight class. Ware finished fourth in this same tournament last year, when he wrestled in the 126-pound weight class.

Richardson (45-0) beat state champions from Massachusetts, Maine and Rhode Island to win the New England title. He beat Drew McGourty of Braintree, Mass., in the quarterfinals, 4-0. In the semifinals, he outlasted Derek Cote of Noble, Maine, 4-0 and in the finals, he outlasted Hood, 3-1 in double overtime.

Gerry deSimas, Jr., editor and founder of Connecticut Wrestling Online (www.ctwrestling.com) described Richardson's final against Hood like this:

"The championship match was tied at 1-1 thanks to a pair of escapes by each wrestler. Richardson had a few opportunities for a take-down but Hood's defense was up to the task."

With 22 seconds left in the first two-minute

OT session, Hood's right knee buckled and he fell to his knees on the mat. Instead of tackling him for the match-winning takedown, Richardson showed exceptional sportsmanship and stepped back, looking to the referee and pointing at Hood.

The match went to a second overtime and two 30 second sessions. In the first session, Richardson rode Hood, who could not escape. In the second OT session, Richardson was able to escape to get the win."

Prior to the final-round matches at the New England Regional tournament, Killingly wrestling coach Rich Bowen was recognized for his recent induction into the New England Wrestling Hall of Fame.

Gymnastics

Woodstock Academy sophomore Olivia Aleman very nearly became the Centaurs' second consecutive Connecticut Interscholastic Athletic Conference (CIAC) State Open individual champion, on Saturday, March 4, in New Milford.

Aleman finished with a 37.7 All-Around total, just five one hundredths of a point behind Fairfield Warde's Emma C. Johnson, who finished with a 37.75.

Aleman finished tied for first with Plainfield's Brenna Johnson in the floor exercise with a 9.6. She was third in both the vault (9.45) and bars (9.2) and fourth on the beam (9.45). For her efforts, Aleman qualified for the New England Gymnastics championship, which will be held at Pinkerton Academy in Derry, N.H., on Saturday, March 11. Centaurs' freshman Julia Kerr also qualified to compete at the New England championship.

Woodstock Academy finished fourth as a team as a result of its 135.325 point total.

Girls' Basketball
Berlin High freshman Brooke Walker scored 11 of her team-high 13 points in the fourth quarter to lead the 18th-seeded Redcoats to a come-from-behind 47-39 victory over host Killingly High, the No. 15 seed, in the first round of the Connecticut Class MM Tournament, on Monday, Feb. 27.

Killingly (12-10) trailed, 20-16, at halftime but out-scored Berlin 14-9 in the third quarter to take a 30-29 lead into the fourth quarter.

Walker scored six of her fourth quarter points on three offensive rebound put-back baskets, and five from the free throw line, where she was 5-for-5 in the period.

Junior Molly Crabtree led Killingly in scoring against the Redcoats with 13 points. She also finished the game with three assists and three steals.

Junior Laura Farquhar added six points and three steals and sophomore Ariahna Headen pulled down 11 rebounds.

Killingly (17-6) was led by senior Yianni Baribeau and sophomore Johnny Kazantzis, who each scored 22 points and senior Tom Dreibholz who added 12 points and grabbed 10 rebounds.

Indoor Track

Woodstock Academy senior Jared Eaton, thanks to a personal-best throw of 50 feet, 2 1/2 inches, placed 14th in the shot put at the New England Indoor Track championship, held at the Reggie Lewis Center in Boston on Saturday, March 4.

Winner helps win game for East Windsor against game Ellis Tech squad

BY KEN POWERS
SPORTS CORRESPONDENT

DANIELSON — Bailey Winner — yes, that is her real last name — poured in a game-high 30 points to lead East Windsor past Ellis Tech, 44-39, in a Connecticut Class S Tournament first-round game on Wednesday March 1.

With the win 24th-seeded East Windsor (9-12) advanced to the second round of the tournament, where it faced eighth-seeded Coventry, on Friday, March 3, where they lost, 48-41. Ellis Tech, the No. 9 seed, finished its season 15-9.

Winner, a 5-foot-8 sophomore guard, led the Panthers to a 13-12 first quarter lead by scoring all of East Windsor's points in the first eight minutes. Six came off a pair of 3-pointers, another six on drives to the basket, and a free throw.

The Golden Eagles kept pace with Winner, err, the Panthers, on four points by Kiara Cartier (10 points), a 3-pointer by Sadie Murray, three points by Kylie Damble (a team-high 12 points), and an in-low post basket by Rose Lopez.

East Windsor led, 19-15, with five minutes to play in the second quarter when Ellis Tech started to get untracked.

"In the second quarter we really tried to go at (Winner). We made a defensive adjustment between periods; I had Kylie dropping back on a lot of (Winner's) drives into the paint," Ellis Tech coach John Murdock said. "I give all the credit to East Windsor, they did a great job, but my girls, they played their hearts out. This season has been a fun ride for us."

The Golden Eagles closed the quarter with a 9-4 run, to lead, 24-23, at halftime. Cartier hit her first of two 3-pointers to pull Ellis Tech to within a point, 19-18, with 4:34 to play in the period. After Winner and teammate Nohely Santana (11 points) pushed the Panthers lead to 23-18, with 3:37 to play, the Golden Eagles scored three straight baskets — two layups by Brooke Montecalvo (10 points) and an offensive rebound and put-back basket by Damble with 14.9 seconds left before halftime.

The Panthers opened the third quarter with a 9-1 run — finished off by a Winner layup with 1:42 remaining in the period — to lead 32-26. Ellis Tech cut the lead in half, to 32-29 with 1:02 left in the quarter, thanks to Montecalvo's second 3-pointer of the game, on a bank shot from the apex of the arc, above the free-throw line.

The Golden Eagles used a 6-3 spurt in the first 3:50 of the fourth quarter to tie the game, 35-35. Damble hit a foul-line jumper and a free throw and Cartier canned her second 3-pointer of the game, from the right side. Forty-eight seconds later, after a Winner drive and a Santana right-side trey, the Panthers led, 40-35.

Ellis Tech, a team which obviously doesn't understand the meaning of the word quit, scrambled back to within a point of tying the game, 40-39, with 37.7 seconds to play, on two pairs of free throws — one by Lopez and one by Damble.

Winner sealed the victory for the winners by going 4-for-4 from the free throw line in the final 29.9 seconds. Winner finished the game almost as hot as she started it, with eight fourth-quarter points, which included a 6-for-6 effort from the foul line.

Damble, the heart and soul of the Golden Eagles, had to work very hard for each one of the dozen points she scored. It was clear Panthers' coach Bari Winner was not going to let Damble beat his team; some other Ellis Tech player or players were going to have to do it.

"They did a good job on Kylie, but Kylie, used correctly, can be a very good decoy at the same time," Murdock said. "Kylie has been double-, triple- and even quadruple-teamed this year — she's seen it all — and she still worked hard tonight."

The Golden Eagles hit five 3-pointers against East Windsor; two each by Montecalvo and Cartier, and one by Murray.

"It was awesome to see the way we shot the ball tonight, our guards especially," Murdock said. "This was our best shooting night of the season. That was really nice to see."

Murdock, to be sure, was disappointed by the loss and the premature end of what he hoped was a long run in the state tournament, but he was also thrilled by the season his players turned in.

"This season has just been a whirlwind; it's been an awesome ride," Murdock said. "The whole school community has embraced us. It's been an awesome feeling. We have literally been the talk of Northeastern Connecticut. These girls have nothing to be ashamed of. It's an exciting time for the program. Our future's bright."

Things aren't always what they seem

We see it on Facebook, and other social media accounts — seemingly happy people carrying on about their lives without a care in the world. As we scroll, we tend to pass judgements on what is in reality, a blip in the lives of those who's photos we are currently looking at. A mere moment, that perhaps lasted less than a second, is captured, and in that moment, we feel that we are free to make a distinction on what that individual is going through in the moments and days prior, or what they may be feeling like in the moments just after. Don't do that.

The best way to find out how a friend, co-worker or family member is, is to simply ask them. With the past year being what it was, mental health issues and rates of suicide are sky rocketing. Is this really a time to pass judgement? Or is this an opportunity to lift those up around us and to make sure that we're all hanging in there?

As humans, some of us can handle any given situation with more grit than others. Some can carry on for just so long until it just becomes too much. Those that have that grit, are those who have the ability to extend their hand, tell someone that they will be ok and that they are not alone. Support for a person overwhelmed, depressed or anxious is paramount to their well being. Sure, it feels good to act tough, and announce that X, Y, or Z doesn't bother you, but the world is not all about you and it never will be. Be kind, it just feels better.

When a person breaks their leg and can temporarily no longer work, they are sent flowers, offered encouraging words of support, given sick time and sent home with casseroles. If a person with a mental health condition takes time off to regroup and to seek the help and therapy that they need to live, it becomes an issue. Because you can't SEE the injury. What you might see is a smile that lasted a split second, and you pass judgement — 'Oh, they aren't really sick.' Guess what? You are wrong. Make no mistake, we all go through challenging times, that doesn't mean that we all handle them in the same way.

Discrimination against a person with any health issue, whether it be physical or mental, is illegal. Furthermore, it's morally wrong. Do we really want to be a society that has stopped supporting one another? We vote no. When we see a neighbor plow the driveway of the house down the street, or three neighbors pulling a stranger's car out of a ditch, we are reminded of how at our cores, we are all kind.

Take note — mental illness is not a character defect. There are many reasons a person may develop an issue, whether it's temporary, brought on by stress, illness or whether it's genetic. Some anxiety may resurface as an adult, due to childhood trauma. Either way, we don't know unless we know.

When people don't understand mental illness, they tend to behave prejudice against those who admit they have an issue. Those people are often treated as though they don't have a real health issue and are then discriminated against. This leads to shame in the person who openly admits that they need help, and so the stigma surrounding mental health is born.

Many workplaces have excellent support systems in place for employees who need help, these to include police and fire departments. These places are to be commended for looking out for one another.

Here are ways to decrease the stigma, be in the know and help your neighbors.

Educate yourself, be aware of your attitude towards those who confide in you, pay attention to your judgements and choose your words carefully. When you do educate yourself, spread the word.

Treat those around you with respect and offer encouragement, or a slice of pizza, anything goes. We say it often, take care of each other, now more than ever.

Being kind is pretty darn easy.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Discrimination in healthcare is unacceptable

To the Editor:

It is so very important that this publication chooses to print letters opposing the acquisition of DKH Healthcare by the Catholic system called Covenant. The voices of the many who are so concerned about our community and the healthcare services that will or will not be available must be heard. Thus, this letter to share, again, my deep concern about one religion's faith principles and practices being forced upon all who seek healthcare services in the DKH system.

Others have eloquently spoken about the effects upon certain parts of healthcare, reproductive health, gender affirming care and respect for end-of-life wishes being compromised by the Ethical and Religious Directives (ERDs) which govern all Catholic healthcare networks. The DKH administration's retort to the concerns is apparently ... if you don't accept these restrictions, you will not have a healthcare system locally at all. While my understanding is that there are alternatives which need to be explored, the basic issue of rightness and wrongness is being totally avoided.

The Catholic religion is discriminatory in nearly every way. Only men are able to receive all of the sacraments administered by Catholicism. The basic right of full participation in the religion is therefore denied to more than half the population. In 2023, in the United States — not Iran or Iraq — this is the case? In my mind, this is simply wrong. I personally asked the current DKH hospital administrator if he would sanction DKH joining forces with an organization that held as one of its basic tenets that only white people could fully participate even if it could guarantee full solvency. His response of absolutely not was quick and certain. Why, then, is discrimination against women acceptable?

It is also true that the Catholic religion actively discriminates against everyone who is not cisgendered heterosexual. Again, this year, in the US, this is acceptable? It is not! And therefore, the acquisition of the DKH healthcare system by Covenant is unacceptable.

Murder or love, or both

To the Editor:

When 76-year-old Ellen Gilland shot and killed her 77-year-old husband in his hospital bed at a Florida hospital recently, many older citizens thought more deeply about "End of Life" laws, to provide "Death with Dignity."

Obviously, you may come down on one side or the other of the right or wrong in her situation, but many of Florida's older citizens sympathize with Ellen's plight.

The couple had spoken about the husband's terminal condition for some months. Neither wanting to rush the issue, but knowing that if the husband took a turn for the worse, he did not want to suffer helplessly in a hospital bed. They hoped to be able to be at home with sufficient medication to cause death, but due to restrictions around end of life, medication was not available; they were in a religious hospital.

At the end, he languished in his hospital bed, too weak to use the gun he had asked her to bring. He pleaded with her to shoot him in the head and end his suffering, and she did what he asked.

Often referred to as mercy killing, they go on more than we realize. Less public, usually not by firearms, but accomplished by saving up enough medication to determine for one's self, when it is time to relieve the suffering and die peacefully. Most often, the death is thought of as simply a result of the illness, and no one is the wiser.

Watching the suffering of the loved ones at the patient's bedside may be the greatest pain the patient suffers. Not different when a child is injured, the anguish of the parents may be overwhelming. The patient's realization that loved ones watching the struggle is causing a great deal of pain to others. Watching the patient struggle, sometimes for months, keeps loved ones in constant anguish and despair.

The real problem is that few states have laws that give the patient the right to determine when to die, and this is made worse by choosing the wrong hospital. Catholic hospitals, for instance, strictly adhere to ethical and religious directives. These directives will be applied to all patients and restrict the medical judgment of all physicians and staff regardless of the patient's beliefs. The patient's directive cannot override the Catholic idea that any act or omission which causes death is prohibited. As the day draws near, the hospital one chooses may be very important. Let's keep religious regulations out of healthcare.

Antique duck decoys

Antique wooden duck decoys became popular collectibles beginning in the 1950s and 1960s and continue to increase in popularity. Collectors compete with institutional buyers at auction for some of the best examples. Duck decoys are featured in many museums including the Havre De Grace Decoy Museum in Maryland, the Core Sound Waterfowl Museum in North Carolina and the Shelburne Museum in Vermont.

Duck decoys have a long history. The Las Vegas Review-Journal reported that the oldest known duck decoys were discovered in 1912 inside of Lovelock Cave in Lovelock, Nevada. The decoys were used by the Northern Paiutes and date back to 400 BC to 100 AD.

The Smithsonian reported that duck meat was a delicacy in the late 1800s and 1900s. Hunters learned how to make their own duck decoys from Native Americans, who made them out of reeds. Duck hunting became popular and celebrities and presidents joined duck hunt clubs.

Club members wanted more realistic decoys, so they started having their own made. The decoys turned into an artform and there are many carvers still producing high quality decoys today.

The auction site invaluable.com lists the following factors in determining duck decoy value:

Maker
Region
Decoy species
Condition
Scarcity
Strength of maker attribution
Size

The "strength of maker attribution" refers to the provenance of the decoy. It's unlikely that you'll find a maker name for an older duck. The more evidence showing it was made by a particular maker, the more likely buyers will feel comfortable buying it and the higher the value will be. Shore bird hunting was outlawed in 1928, so these decoys are more valuable. Wood quality varied by location, making region an important factor. Scarce decoys and larger sized ones also are more valuable.

Here are some examples of decoys that brought high prices at auction. A Surace Cobb Black Duck Decoy by Nathan F. Cobb, Jr. of Cobb Island, Va. sold for $36,000 in February 2021. An early Humpback Black Duck Decoy by The Ward Brothers of Crisfield, Maryland brought $75,000 in 2023. Painted Greater Yellowlegs by William Bowman of Lawrence, Long Island went for $78,000 in 2007. A Canvasback Hen by Elmer Crowell of East Harwich, Mass. sold for $79,000 in 2008. A Ruddy Turnstone by John Diley of Quogue, Long Island, N.Y. reached $85,000 in 2013. A Widgeon Drake by Joseph Lincoln of Accord, Mass. (a section of Norwell) brought $97,750 in 2014. A Massachusetts carver's decoy set a record in 2007. An exceptional and rare red-breasted merganser hen by Lothrop Holmes of Kingston, Mass. sold for $856,000, providing the consignor with a substantial nest-egg.

We will be offering duck decoys from two local estates in one of our upcoming spring auctions. Our next auction is another online auction (session 7) of model trains, diecast cars and other toys from a West Boylston estate. Our Beacon Street, Boston online estate will also begin this month. We are accepting consignments for our major spring online auction. Please visit our website <https://centralmassauctions.com> for links to upcoming events.

Personality matters

Remember describing a friend as "having a great personality?" It was a way to gloss over qualities that at that time were ranked as negatives, often related to personal appearance. As a society, we have made progress in how we regard other people and accept them, or I hope we have. One of the many fine qualities I observe in "younger generations" is their openness to differences, their willingness to find what is good and likeable in others.

Personality matters, but it isn't an alternative to anything else. It is part of the whole package of being a person. Personality tests are everywhere.

They are interesting, perhaps instructive, possibly useful, possibly not.

Ask anyone their zodiac sign and they probably know it. Horoscopes aren't as common as they once were, but who can resist reading one if it pops up. The readings are a tantalizing mix of good news and bad. The traits are based on something we can't undo, our birth month, so we are not responsible for what happens. I like being a Libra as the symbol is scales. I assume I'm inclined to fairness and justice just because I was born in October. Of course, this is a shaky proposition.

My father liked to say people were made of earth, air, fire and water. This idea was linked to Socrates. My father employed a number of people over the years. He knew that every one of them, regardless of their circumstances, liked to talk about themselves and their tendencies. It was a form of personality assignment.

In reading about the history of personality tests, I recalled that Freud and Jung determined that people fell into various types. I didn't know that Woolworth developed the first personality test that was used in the army. It tried to determine who would suffer from shell shock.

In the 1990's, Meyers-Briggs Tests were everywhere. It was based on 16 personality types. The results were condensed into four letters that covered traits useful in the workforce. I took the test at least twice over a decade and was both intrigued and surprised when the results came out the same.

My husband became interested in the Enneagram, which focuses on 9 personality types. The test goes back to a 4th century Christian mystic. It became popular in the past thirty years and as with the other tests, is based on a series of questions that lead to a score ranging from type 1, a reformer, perfectionist, to type 9, a peacemaker mediator. There follows 11 more refinements and patterns as to which types are associated with other traits. It is elaborate, but fascinating and takes time to even scratch the surface.

A friend who trained at an Ivy League school some years ago studied Rorschach tests. By looking at inkblots and describing them, a person revealed certain aspects of their personality. The test may have fallen out of favor over time, but it was once used extensively.

Career testing and aptitude testing help us open our minds to things we could pursue that we may not know about or ever consider without a nudge. It's easy to fall into a path because it is familiar, but potentially far more satisfying to broad the scope and do something quite different.

Give me a free test and I'll take it. No matter age, circumstances or interests, there is always room for growth and time to gamble on something new. Our personalities are part of who we are, but now that I know I'm a 7 on the Enneagram, I also know I'm an enthusiast.

What to do when your income reaches six figures

Reaching six figures is no easy feat. If you're one of the hard-working few who has made it to this milestone, give yourself a pat on the back. But before you go reaching for a bottle of champagne or calling a Ferrari dealer, you should put together a strategy for your new level of income. It's the smart move to maximize your new financial reality, as well as your chances of achieving your financial and lifestyle goals for the future.

There is no one-size-fits-all strategy for maximizing your new six-figure income. Every person is different, and some suggestions may mean more to you than others. But there are tried-and-true methods that can point you in the right direction when it comes to your financial health.

Review your budget

Now that you're making six figures, you may be tempted to never look at your budget again. Resist this temptation – for many, it takes intentional effort to avoid letting expenses rise to meet income. And, as you're probably already aware if you've only just crossed the six-figure threshold, that amount of money doesn't go as far as it once did. So go back over your budget to make sure your spending is in line with your goals. Feel free to adjust your line items to match any new priorities without going overboard. Careful planning will let you know if you are on track with your goals and how much you are allowed to spend on that must-have splurge item you found on Instagram. Your renewed budget will set you up nicely to build toward new goals, knowing that your day-to-day expenses are covered.¹

Target unproductive debt

Not all debt is bad, as much of it helps you both financially and in terms of your quality of life (student loans or a mortgage, for example). But certain types of debt, like credit cards and personal loans, are burdens you don't want to carry around forever. Set a goal to eliminate your unproductive debt and free up more of your financial resources for more important things. Each penny you save can go toward retirement and other investment opportunities.

Build your nest egg

Life is full of the unexpected. Plan for it by setting aside a nest egg, or enough liquid money to cover six to twelve months of your life at your new income level. This reserve will help shield you from possible disasters like job loss, a serious injury or illness, or divorce.

Maximize your 401(k)

Start planning for your retirement if you haven't already. Contributing to your 401(k) is a smart, easy way to put away funds for your golden years. Shooting for 15 percent is a good rule, but reach even higher if you find yourself in a good position. Aim for the maximum limit of $20,500 if you are under 50 or $27,000 if you are above.

That may sound like a lot, but let's take a look at the "under 50" number as an example. That breaks down to about $394 per week. If you're making $100,000, that means you'd be putting about 20 percent of your gross weekly salary toward savings, which fits right in with the 50/30/20 rule. (Check out our blog at whzwealth.com/blog if you aren't familiar with that rule.)

Move forward confidently

Restructuring your budget, eliminating your unproductive debt, creating a substantial nest egg, and maximizing your retirement savings vehicles like your 401(k) should see you move into a much more comfortable place in life. A six-figure income combined with some strategic financial planning and an ongoing commitment to that plan can help you stop working for your money and start having your money work for you.

Creating that plan can bring up a lot of questions and there are some complicated matters to consider such as taxes and how best to save for multiple priorities at once. That's where a trusted financial planner can make all the difference.

We act as fiduciary financial planners for our clients, meaning we partner with them to create a strategic financial plan based on their individual goals and with their best financial interests at heart. We do this using our strategic Plan Well, Invest Well, Live Well™ process. Get in touch for a no-obligation consultation to see how your new six-figure salary can take you in achieving your goals for today and all the days to come. S ince March is Women's History Month, I thought

I'd pay tribute to some of the earliest women to settle in Northeastern Connecticut in the early 1700's. Let these two pioneers remind you of all the hardships women faced and sacrifices that the first white women in the area made. Can you image what it would have been like to leave an established community, your family, your friends, your church, your home and belongings and trek through the wilderness with the bare essentials to help begin a new settlement? Most women would have had to follow their husband's decision -- "to obey him." In that respect one early woman was unique for she was a wealthy widow so had much more say in what she would do. In her Historic Gleanings of Windham County Connecticut Ellen D. Larned wrote, "Mrs. Esther Grosvenor, of Pomfret, comes down to us as a very distinct personality. Her husband, Mr. John Grosvenor, having died soon after completing negotiations for the Mashamoquet Purchase, Mrs. Grosvenor was much more concerned with business interests than most women of her day. Her name stands first on the list of those receiving allotments of the Purchase, and she was naturally very prominent in division and distribution of the large estate. Born in England, she brought with her a strength of constitution and a dignity of character. (The story was passed on that) a troublesome squaw once invaded her kitchen, demanding immediate supply of food, and even attempting to snatch the boiling meat from the kettle. Mrs. Grosvenor held her back with her broomstick till her son Ebenezer came to the rescue with more effective weapon. Like other women of superior station she was very helpful in care of the sick, and was viewed as a mother by the whole community. She retained to old age her vigor and habit of authority, and insisted upon walking to attend church service till within a short time of her decease." (p. 56).

Esther Grosvenor was born ca. 1651 and died June 15, 1731 in Pomfret, Connecticut. She is buried in Pomfret's South Cemetery. (Findagrave; Ancestry.com).

I have a special interest in the second woman whom I mention since she and her husband were the first settlers of my property. Mary (Howland) Allyn, of Barnstable and Middleborough, Massachusetts, was the granddaughter of John Howland of the Mayflower. In fact, I consider it only by the grace of God that he made it to New England for he fell overboard from the ship but fortunately was rescued. Mary's husband, John Allyn was a wealthy individual who had inherited much valuable property from his father Thomas. Born about 1652, Mary was in her early fifties in 1704 when her husband, her sons Thomas and Jabez and probably daughter Hannah moved to the east side of the Quinebaug River with the nearest settlement being Woodstock (Massachusetts) on the western side of the river. Lynn LaBerge and I were discussing these early settlers, and she commented that perhaps the men came first and built a small house before Mary came.

I know in her "History of Windham County Connecticut," Ellen Larned mentioned that is what happened in the planting of New Roxbury, now Woodstock. It would have made the most sense.

In 1705, John, concerned for his well-being and Mary's in their old age, deeded 1410 acres to sons Jabez and Thomas with the stipulation they care for the parents. The young men also were "given two yoke of oxen, a five year old steer, 20 sheep, a cart and wheels, utensils for husbandry and bedding and utensils for the house which are now in their possession."

Don't depend on others to validate you

After years of taking acting classes, I learned something interesting from one of my teachers: begging for approval from the director is a big no-no.

Many new actors are in a state of constant worry about whether or not their performance will be well-received. But my teacher emphasized that a film or theater director has no time to indulge and reassure every actor.

Instead, my teacher taught us that if the director says nothing, they are satisfied with our performance.

It's tempting to seek validation from the director, but it's unnecessary. If they don't criticize your performance or give you notes, move on to the next scene.

Experts say that validation-seeking behavior stems from low self-esteem.

Some are addicted to it. They cannot function unless someone tells them how great they are.

I've always been fascinated by the world of startups, especially in the tech industry. A close friend of mine is a founder of a tech startup looking to revolutionize the way we use blockchain, and while she loves what she does, her coworker is ruining the experience for her.

This coworker is utterly addicted to verbal validation and recognition from the company's founders and everyone else. If he doesn't receive constant praise, he becomes depressed; Even worse, if someone criticizes him, he completely unravels.

She cannot just focus on her duties; she must also take on the daily task of building him up and managing his emotions. It's incredibly exhausting for her and negatively impacts her mental health.

Essentially, he's letting others dictate his self-worth.

I know it's hard to believe, but not everyone will like you, and not everyone jumps for joy when you walk into a room.

We all need validation, but sometimes we need to learn to validate ourselves; our true self-worth comes from within.

When I began writing this column, putting my opinions out there for the world to see was unnerving, and sometimes I get negative feedback!

I listen to the feedback with an open mind, but I also realize that no matter what I do, some people aren't going to like what I have to say. Ultimately, my sense of validation comes from within. I cannot let outside opinions bring me down or define my worth.

Mark Twain said, "A person cannot be comfortable without their own approval."

If you always do your best, practicing self-validation is much easier because you can compare yourself to how you were yesterday rather than comparing yourself to someone else. If you're making progress, you will feel good about yourself.

I've spent years building my business and learned that no matter how hard I try, I'll never be able to please everyone. The whole point of my business is to solve problems for filmmakers, and for the most part, the response has been overwhelmingly positive.

Filmmakers worldwide have enthusiastically uploaded their films and expressed excitement for what we're trying to create. But occasionally, I come across someone who despises what I'm doing.

These individuals will attack me on social media and make a big scene about how much they hate what I'm doing and expect us to fail.

If I let their negativity and criticism get to me, I'd never be able to follow the dream in my heart. It's important to remember that not everyone will love what you're doing.

Eleanor Roosevelt said, "Do what you feel in your heart to be right, for you will be criticized anyway."

Your self-worth should come from within, not from the opinions of others.

Whatever dream you're trying to pursue, it's essential to understand that As long as you stay true to yourself and follow your passion, the rest will fall into place.

Many of the most incredible people in history were criticized and attacked by the majority, but they stayed true to their vision and changed the world. So don't be afraid to go against the grain and be true to yourself, even if it means standing alone.

Next time you're feeling needy, remember that you don't need the validation of others to follow your destiny. Trust yourself. Measure your progress by how far you have come, not by how far you have to go compared to others.

Pain relief found in the garden

Look to the garden, farmer's market, or refrigerator next time you are battling sore muscles, indigestion, and headaches. These five foods fresh from the garden contain powerful pain-relieving and anti-inflammatory properties.

Mint

Infuse mint into your tea or ice water to refresh and rejuvenate. It also helps relieve headaches and general aches and pain. Grow this vigorous perennial herb in a container so it won't overtake your other plants. And at the end of the season, root a few cuttings to start new plants to grow indoors. All you need are a sunny window, quality potting mix, and regular watering.

Hot peppers

Capsaicin, the spicy element in chili, jalapeño, habanero, and cayenne peppers, is a great pain-fighting tool and is often used in topical creams to help treat backaches, arthritis, and muscle pain. Plant hot peppers after the soil and air warm, at the same time you are planting sweet peppers and tomatoes. They are ready to harvest when they are fully colored. Purchase extra hot peppers to dry and enjoy year-round.

Cherries

Manage muscle pain and inflammation with sour cherries. They are loaded with disease-fighting chemicals and antioxidants and help fight inflammation and relieve pain. Purchase plenty of cherries to juice, dry, and preserve so you can enjoy their health benefits all year long. And consider planting a sour cherry tree in your backyard.

Montmorency is the most popular sour cherry needing only 700 hours of air temperatures between 34 and 45 degrees to initiate flowering for fruit development. New hardier dwarf introductions from the University of Saskatchewan can be grown in colder regions including zone 2. Although it takes several years for cherry plants to start producing fruit, you'll enjoy watching your tree grow into maturity and bear its first crop. Just make sure to cover the plants with netting so the birds don't eat your harvest.

Ginger

Ginger helps reduce inflammation and combat migraines, muscle pain, arthritis, and post-workout or post-gardening soreness. All this plus it helps fight nausea. Although it's a tropical plant you can find plants or rhizomes (the part you eat) online. Or join other enthusiastic gardeners who have had success rooting the rhizomes they purchased at the grocery store to start new plants. Grow your ginger in a pot outdoors or sunny window alongside your other indoor plants.

Sage

Sage tea has long been used to soothe scratchy and irritated throats and showed positive results in a 2006 clinical trial. Harvest a few sage leaves, add hot water, and brew a bit of sore throat relief. Grow this herb in the garden or a container. It thrives in a sunny spot with well-drained soil. Harvest leaves as needed throughout the season. Regular harvesting encourages more growth for future harvests. You can remove as much as one-third of the plant at one time for preservation.

So next time you're feeling a bit of pain, pass dancing is a passion and that she knew it would be a popular addition to the Academy. She is fully embracing the opportunity to bring the sport to a new generation.

"These students train vigorously and challenge their bodies every day. Some of them study more hours than they see their parents. I knew the Academy prior to this as a private school that had high level sports in all areas, but I realized they didn't have a dance program and they thought it would be an attractive addition to get a new wave of girls and boys that want to come in and prepare for college at a high level," Hammond said.

The Putnam Science Academy is currently seeking new additions to the Dance Team. Interested students can contact Javin Hammond directly at jhammond@putnamsience.org. The team also manages an Instagram account, @dance_psa, where they post about their competitions and upcoming events.

them a 3-2 loss — and then celebrated wildly on the Centaurs' home ice — they were heartbroken and disappointed.

On Saturday, March 4, almost a year removed from that anguish-inducing loss, Woodstock Academy, riding a 12-game winning streak, made sure history did not repeat itself, defeating Eastern Conn., 5-1, before an overflow crowd at the Jahn Rink.

"Last year we came into this game believing we were vastly superior and that we were going to easily win the game," said Woodstock Academy first-year coach Mark Smolak, an assistant on last year's team. "Eastern Connecticut came out and punched us hard in the mouth twice pretty quickly and we couldn't get back. So, the (pre-game) message was, 'guys, you need to remember that feeling from last year.'"

Centaurs' senior forward Max Larkin remembered.

"I remember, and everyone else remembers, too, those guys skating straight to our student section last year and showing them the trophy and waving that banner right in front of our student section, right in front of our families," Larkin said. "That wasn't going to slide this year. In the locker room before the game Jacob Jurnovoy and I told the guys we had unfinished business with this team."

Larkin gave 20-1 Woodstock Academy a

1-0 lead at the 12:43 mark of the first period, scoring on a hard shot from just inside the blue line. The shot, rising as it neared the goal, whistled over Eagles' goalie Cam McCollum's right shoulder.

"Donny (Sousa) made a super sick move as he came across the middle, putting the puck through one of their kid's legs, but he got taken out with the body from that kid," Larkin said, explaining the goal. "I picked up the puck and I saw (McCollum) give me a wide-open space, blocker side, so I just leaned into it and fired the puck, and it was bar down — the puck hit the cross bar and went straight down into the net. What a great feeling."

Smolak said he wasn't surprised by Larkin's accurate long-range goal.

"Max has the hardest shot on the team," Smolak said. "I've been telling him, 'you've got to take the puck to the middle of the ice; it gives you more options. And when you release it, you've got to get it off quick.' When Max does that, he's a very dangerous player."

Eastern Conn. (7-14) tied the game, 1-1, at the 7:53 mark of the second period, but the Centaurs re-took the lead, 2-1, on a power-play goal by Sousa with 29.6 seconds remaining in regulation.

"Ian (Sherman) took a shot from the right side and I got the rebound right out in front and passed it over to Donny," said Woodstock Academy center Noah Sampson, who had a pair of assists in the victory.

it past McCollum on the short side, the puck — somehow — sneaking into the goal between the post and McCollum's oversized leg pad.

The Centaurs extended their lead to 3-1 on an unassisted goal by Maxx Corradi with 11:57 remaining in regulation.

Corradi, who has scored a team-best 36 goals, took a shot from about 20 feet out that was stopped by McCollum, but Corradi skated in, picked up the rebound and shot a second time. His second shot deflected off McCollum's pads and bounced into the net.

Corradi, off an assist from Sampson, and Sousa both scored empty-net goals in the final minute of regulation to account for the 5-1 final.

"We were all on a mission this year," Sampson said. "We all wanted to get back to this game and win it, but Max and Jacob were very locked in about winning this game from Day 1. They wanted revenge."

Woodstock Academy beat Eastern Conn. twice in the regular season — 3-0 in its season-opener on Wednesday, Dec. 14, and 6-2 on Friday, Feb. 24 — but the March 4 victory was the one Jurnovoy wanted the most.

"Ever since we came off the ice last year after losing this game (the Nutmeg Conference Tournament championship) we wanted to face them again in this game and win it, and we did," Jurnovoy said. "We definitely had unfinished business with this team. We wanted to finish off that unfinished business, and we did."

Jurnovoy was happy Woodstock Academy defeated Eastern Conn. in the Nutmeg Conference Tournament final, but he's not satisfied.

"The small goal was winning this game, but eventually we want to play for the championship, for the state title," said Jurnovoy, the Centaurs' team captain. "We're definitely still a work in progress."

Second-seeded Woodstock Academy put its 13-game winning streak on the line on Tuesday, March 7, when it hosted fifteenth-seeded Glastonbury (7-12-1) on Tuesday, March 7 (after press time) at the Jahn Ice Rink in the first round of the Connecticut Division II Boys' Hockey Tournament. The Centaurs defeated Glastonbury, 3-1, at the Jahn Rink on Saturday, Feb. 18.
