Thompson receives CIF funding for downtown

BY JASON BLEAU
VILLAGER CORRESPONDENT

THOMPSON — The Town of Thompson received tremendous news in late September, with the Department of Economic and Community Development (DECD) expected to award the town more than $4 million for revitalization efforts in its downtown district.

The announcement was made by Sen. Jeff Gordon, who released a statement congratulating Thompson on an expected award of $4,047,484 from the state's Community Investment Fund 2030 (CIF) to support the town's ongoing "Re-Weaving the Fabric of North Grosvenordale" project, a three-phase initiative to revitalize Thompson's historic downtown hub. The CIF funding was just a portion of the $175 million being presented to applicants from across the state.

"This is fantastic news for the residents of Thompson and our region. I have been working in a bipartisan way to deliver this funding to the town and spur its economic development. Thank you to Governor (Ned) Lamont and Commissioner Daniel O'Keefe for supporting our rural community. Also, thank you to the town leaders and town staff for working on, and putting forward KILLINGLY — Killingly taxpayers will have the opportunity to weigh in on a funding proposal that could determine the use of remaining ARPA funds before the end of the calendar year. In September the Town Council agreed to bring forth the use of up to $1.6 million in American Rescue Plan Funds to offset some of the cost of the renovation of the old high school on Westfield Avenue.

Final approval received for grant to start Congregational Church repairs

THOMPSON — The Congregational Church of Thompson, Inc. has received final approval for a $500,000 grant from the Historic Preservation Fund, administered by the National Park Service, Department of the Interior. This allows the church to move forward with final plans, and review to start repairing the historic and beloved building on Thompson Hill. This is part of the overall funding which is expected to require $2.4 million. This represents Phase I of the repairs which are expected to begin in early Spring of 2025.

If you have any questions or concerns about this grant, please send an email to office@thompsnuc.org or call the office at 860-923-2431.

This grant was approved due to the historic significance of the church, the importance to Thompson, and the potential for reuse of the building to support the community. Importantly, the tireless efforts of Senator Blumenthal (CT) and Senator Murphy (CT), and their staffs made this a reality.

Bruce Hall, Board Member responsible for the church rebuilding, stated, "We are finally to the point for work to begin in 2025. I can say with confidence that we will start repairing the church, and with the continued generosity of the community and the State and Federal governments we will move on to additional phases in the future. We thank the Senators and their staffs for the support to make this a reality."

Thompson Congregational Church was started in 1728, and will celebrate its 300-year anniversary in just a few years. The current church building was constructed in 1856, and are also the owners of the historic town common. The fire in December of 2016 largely destroyed the interior of the sanctuary building. The church has continued online church services and community service projects virtually and occasionally in-person since the fire through today. The Rev. Shannon Wall has been our interim pastor for the past three years and continues to be a blessing to the congregation.

Funds are still needed for this project, as the cost could be as much as $2.4 million for all four phases. To make a tax-deductible donation please send it to the following address. Funds donated will only be used for the rebuild and not for ongoing operations of the church. A statement of donations will be mailed to you in January 2025 for the tax deduction:

Empty Bowls continues tradition of fighting food insecurity

BY JASON BLEAU

THOMPSON — For the second consecutive year, TEEG played host to the annual Empty Bowls fundraiser on Sept. 21, helping raise money to support ending hunger in the quiet corner.

Empty Bowls is approaching its 20th year in the Quiet Corner as part of a national initiative to help food related charities and non-profits. The event has taken many forms but in 2023 returned to a stand-alone meal with TEEG, a Thompson-based non-profit that operates food security programs in Thompson, Pomfret, and Woodstock, as its host site. The agency welcomed the event once again on a damp Saturday, Sept. 21 where participants could enjoy soup and side dishes made and donated by local eateries while Sawmill Pottery of Putnam continued the tradition of donating handmade bowls. Ticketholders got to keep at the end of the day. Dot Burnworth, owner of Sawmill Pottery and a coordinator of the event, explained that partnering with TEEG has brought new life to the event.

"I have known about TEEG for many years, but until now have never been involved with them personally. I have been so impressed over the past two years, not only with the multitude of programs and services they offer, but also with how their staff operates. It truly feels like the staff are happy to be at work every day. The pride for what they are providing and their dedication to the community is evident and palpable. Additionally, until we began partnering with TEEG, we never held the dinner at the actual site of operations. Hosting the dinner right on site, where diners can walk through the market and the program rooms, allows for folks to gain a deeper understanding of how their participation in this important event will support food insecurity locally," said Burnworth.

Carl Asikainen TEEG's incoming Executive Director, complimented the event as not only a way to share TEEG's operations with supporters firsthand, but also a fantastic way to bring businesses together to help put an end to hunger in Northeastern Connecticut.

"Beyond the knowledge sharing about the depth of the problem of food insecurity with attendees, this is an opportunity to directly fund our work at TEEG that shapes what is offered through all of our feeding services," said Asikainen. "We are reliant on local farmers and gardeners for fresh foods when in season and our institutional supporters like the Connecticut Foodshare and our local Putnam Walmart, but we are confronted with food needs beyond these offerings. Some foods just do not get donated like dairy products or frozen vegetables, for example. Private monies with no restriction allow us to buy what is most in demand yet not donated. We work with our other food pantries and feeding sites in this region to share foods, strategize and in this sense Empty Bowls not only lifts us up

Tiffany Alvarado earns Westview's Employee of the Month Award

DAYVILLE — Tiffany Alvarado earned Westview's Employee of the Month recognition this September.

Alvarado has worked at Westview for the past five years in a variety of roles. She began her tenure in the Dietary Department of Country Living at Westview Commons on a per-diem basis, then accepted a part-time role, and eventually rose to the full-time position she now holds. In this capacity, she provides residents with their custom food orders and provides leadership to her colleagues in The Great Room during food service. Additionally, she works alongside her colleagues in Westview Commons' Dietary Department and Hospitality Team in-between meals to ensure that settings are properly prepared, restocking various dining room staples and food items, and rearranging the tables and chairs to make space for the many forms of activity and entertainment that

"It's wonderful that Tiffany is also going to be a part of our front-of-house staff in the main entrance office. I know she will bring her great personality and professionalism to that role—just as she has done as a server," Panteleakos said. "Congratulations to Tiffany!"

Audubon Society to host screening of owl documentary

POMFRET — "The Fledgling 4," an entertaining and informative nature documentary about Barred Owls, will be screened at The Connecticut Audubon Society (CAS) Center at Pomfret on Thursday, Oct. 10 at 6:30 p.m. The film's producer, Joe Gowac, will join us for the evening. He is a wildlife videographer, photographer, and second grade teacher from East Hampton. In March of this year, Joe discovered a Barred Owl nest site in the woods near him. He proceeded to go there for 100 consecutive days, documenting the daily existence and antics of the owl family.

Following the film, the floor will be open for discussion. Joe will answer questions including those about the owls' behaviors and his wildlife film editing techniques. Joe hopes to have copies of "Flaco's Journey," a just published children's book he helped write. Flaco was a European Eagle-Owl, not native to the United States, which escaped from the Central Park Zoo in 2023, when his cage was vandalized. He flew free and survived in New York City for about a year.

On Sunday, Oct. 20 at 2 p.m., the topic will be bats, the only mammal capable of true flight. Maureen Heidtmann, one of only three licensed wildlife rehabilitators in Connecticut specializing in caring for bats, operates WingHand Rehab and Education. She will provide an overview of bats of the world and then discuss the nine species that occur in our state, grouped as cave bats (six species) and tree bats (three species). All species but the big brown bat are state listed as endangered, threatened, or of special concern. Maureen will discuss the many roles bats play in ensuring a healthy planet as well as the perils they face as they struggle to survive. She will also discuss gardening for bats and how to make your property more attractive to these amazingly resilient creatures.

Heidtmann, a former librarian, will have copies of her 2019 book, "Bats, Brownies & Banana Bread: The Library Bats Bakery (and More) Recipe Book." The recipes use ingredients that are available thanks to the environmental contributions of bats -- pollination, seed dispersal, and insect control. Some of the recipes are simple enough for kids to prepare with an adult, but some are fairly complex.

Heidtmann says, "While the book is for all ages, kids will love the illustrations and the bat facts on every page."

The Center at Pomfret's handcrafted bat houses will also be available for purchase. For both programs, registration is appreciated but not required. Adult admission is $5 for CAS members; $10 for non-members.

CAS also has several upcoming field opportunities for learning more about two other owl species. On Saturday, Oct. 19 at 7 p.m., Andy Rzeznikiewicz, CAS land manager, will lead a hike to search for Eastern Screech Owls. On Saturday, Oct. 26 and Friday, Nov. 1 at 7 p.m. and on Saturday, Nov. 9 at 6 p.m., he will band migrating Saw-whet Owls. All of Andy's programs require registration. For additional information, including pricing and registration, please call the Center or visit its website (ctaudubon.org/Pomfret).

dinners together as often as possible to cherish their bond and have a few laughs around the table. Alvarado was born and raised in Brooklyn, N.Y. and graduated from The High School for Enterprise, Business, and Technology there. Don't believe everything you hear Election season is upon us, and with it comes the barrage of campaign ads, glossy fliers, and endless political chatter. While these tools are designed to catch our attention, it's crucial to remember that not everything we hear or see in campaign materials is the truth. Smear campaigns are the dark side of politics—filled with half-truths, cherry-picked data, and sometimes outright lies meant to sway our opinions.

It's easy to get caught up in the sound bites and headlines, but it's our responsibility as voters to dig deeper. Before you decide on a candidate, do your own research. Look beyond the fliers in your mailbox and the dramatic ads on TV. Seek out multiple sources of information, read up on the issues, and fact-check statements. Use reliable, unbiased resources to get a clearer picture of where each candidate truly stands. Be an informed voter.

Remember, the most genuine candidates are the ones who show up to serve their communities and work for what's best for all of us, not just to win votes. These candidates can be found at every level of government, but they may not always be the loudest or flashiest. By doing your own homework and looking for those who prioritize the well-being of their fellow Americans over party politics or personal gain, you can cast an informed vote that reflects your values. So, don't just take campaign ads at face value—take the time to research and choose the candidate who is truly committed to making a difference.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

It's a no-brainer for me too

To the Editor:
 There have been 1,096 mass shootings in America from 2022 to the present day. More than 44,000 people have died in those 33 months. Our collective solution has been to offer up the tepid sentiment of "thoughts and prayers." It has not helped.

Between 2000 and 2022, there have been 1,375 school shootings at public and private elementary and secondary schools in the United States. "Shooter preparedness" has become a sobering reality. Lockdown drills have become the way schools deal with a threat from outside the school. My son teaches at an elementary school. He says the children know that a lockdown means "something bad is going to happen." His students are 7-11 years old.

A PBS NewsHour, NPR and Marist Poll, taken in 2019, verified that "most Americans support these four types of gun legislation: more funding for mental health screening and treatment; mandatory background checks and licensing for gun purchases; passage of a national "red flag" law; and giving a judge authority to order the removal of a gun from a person who poses a risk to themselves or others." Kamala Harris's crime and gun policies include the same points, as well as repeal of a federal law that shields gun manufacturers from liability.

It has been 22 years since the tragedy at the Sandy Hook Elementary School in Newtown. On that December day, 20 first graders, only six years old, and 6 teachers lost their life in a senseless attack. This year, the survivors of Sandy Hook are 18. This will be the first presidential election they can participate in. During a recent interview, Lily Wasilnak, a Sandy Hook survivor and new voter, stated, "It's a no-brainer for me." She will be voting for Kamala Harris and Tim Walz.

As will I.

Our heroes

To the Editor:
 We would like to thank the Community Fire Co. for prompt service we received on Aug. 20 due to a smoke detector going off at our home. First Assistant Chief Evan Faucher and his crew came to our home and promptly addressed the situation.

Please support our departments because you never know when you may need them. In our eyes, they are our heroes.

Thank you so much.

Greedflation

To the Editor:
 Monday, Sept. 23: on "60 Minutes" last night, an interesting story concerning 'greedflation' and how it is affecting this country.

With the limited competition in the grocery business and the growing monopolies in the business world, more stores are owned by the same companies under different names, so limiting the need for lowering prices. This means they keep the prices at a high level due to the fact there is little to no competition, hence a grocery monopoly.

Same goes with Walmart — three of the five richest people in the country are Waltons, the family that owns Walmart. Amazon, which sucks up all small companies, therefore making it the only place to go to, even if they deliver fast and mostly free. How is that possible?

The head of the Federal Trade Commission told "60 Minutes" the heads of many corporations saying that they can make more money without lowering prices due to the fact Americans have grown accustomed to higher prices. Easy to make record profits. In 2017, they received tax cuts, and in turn they do what they always do, they pass the money down to their employees by giving them raises, better and cheaper health care. No, they gave themselves bigger salaries and bigger benefits. Tough to manage your budget when all you have are hundreds of million dollars. Multiple homes in multiple states do cost money, and the taxes they have to pay. Life can be tough. Not counting the Range Rovers for the kids at private schools. Remember, "pork thy fellow American" is a slogan that many companies live by.

Tuesday, Sept. 24: just got a delivery of home fuel oil at $3 a gallon and purchased gas at $2.97 a gallon. I guess I should be happy; I hear though that home and auto insurance may go up 25 percent with the next bill. The health coverage has not gone up, but paying the DR's has more out of pocket expenses. Still got to pay the Public Benefit for my electricity bill.

Wednesday, Sept. 25: Listen to a smart financial guy on TV this morning, he was talking about the single biggest problem facing America in the future, and it was not immigration, not even close, he said. $34 trillion debt that America is running up and nobody, the two people running for President do not even mention it. He is a Conservative in the old way, does not like either candidate, Trump may be better for the economy but in good conscience he will not vote for him. Says his past behavior disqualifies him, his mocking of a Paralyzed New York Time reporter, the disdain he showed Sen. McCain, a true hero in his opinion, the 200 plus former people who served the ex-President say he is not suited or fit to serve another term and lastly, the ex-President's comments about veterans of WWII, Korean, Vietnam and others who have served and died for this country as "suckers." He is going to listen today when VP Harris speaks on her economic plan. He may not vote in the Presidential race. The markets open today at new all time highs. Hope and good will as opposed to hate and discord.

Thursday & Friday: Many young men went to fight in Korea and Vietnam to fend off and stop communism throughout the world. That meant fighting against Russia and China, etc. Now I am supposed to believe that Russian aggression does not mean anything to us. Isolationism does not work for America, without going long, look at Germany and the Rhineland to explain WWII. Hitler (Putin) never stop with one country. History may not repeat itself, but it sure rhymes.

Choose hope and moving forward, rather than the alternative.

To the Editor:
 In the Connecticut State House, a seat at the table is a really big deal. It's where the Majority party controls the agenda, where critical needs and outstanding ideas with sensible program budgets are proposed and discussed. Voters in State House District 52 (Woodstock, Union, Stafford and Somers) can send Democratic State Representative candidate Ethan Werstler to Hartford where Democrats are in the Majority. Our needs will be heard, thanks to Ethan having that important seat at the table as a member of the Majority party.

Ethan will be our eyes, ears and mouth. It has been far too long since these small towns elected a Majority party (Democrat) state rep. So if you are thinking these small towns are not getting their fair share of state support, you're right.

Ethan has a good understanding of how Hartford works. He believes small and rural towns often lose out on funding because they typically have Minority-party representation, which also means they are not often at the table when decisions are being made.

The state has a huge surplus and it's time to go after more state funding to help all towns pay for unfunded state mandates (Special Education funding, for or example, has a tremendous impact on local school budgets), as well as important needs throughout Woodstock, Union, Stafford and Somers. But electing a Minority party State Rep just doesn't get to that important seat at the table.

That's the reality of not having a Majority party State Rep. It's unfortunate for many people in the 52nd, and Ethan says he will contribute as a Majority rep if we elect him. I am hoping you see it my way and believe the majority party will deliver for us. He just needs a seat at the table.

Dauphinais supports parental rights and choice

To the Editor:
 My name is Amanda Martell, and I am a local firefighter and EMT in the town of Killingly. I endorse Anne Dauphinais for Connecticut State Representative in the 44th district because she believes in parental rights and freedom of choice. As a mom of two small children, keeping these rights is important. My husband and I are raising and caring for our kids. Being able to choose how we school them and making informed medical decisions that suit our family rights are supported by Anne.

The Post Office links us all together

I love my Post Office. I've liked almost every post office I've ever visited whether opening my box or dropping off a letter. Part of the attraction is that I love notes, magazines and newspapers. I'm not fond of bills or glossy fliers, but I like the weekly free shopping guide. This column appears in free newspapers that arrive through the mail. All that's required is occasionally filling out a postcard. My town has an excellent free monthly newspaper. I wouldn't know what is happening without the paper, which turns up in my post office box. Other towns are fortunate to have something similar.

Once, I saw a postmaster from another era line up all the postcards received that day to read them. I felt a bit embarrassed, as if I were catching him doing something wrong. He didn't bat an eye. I suppose the very nature of a postcard invites others to read it. Or perhaps it was really just a way to keep up to date with his clientele. The same man would accurately deposit a letter with the appropriate family when the address merely read: Mommy. He knew what children were at camp writing to their families.

A Post Office and the workers who staff it are the real gatekeepers of a community.

Their attitudes and competencies set the tone for the places they serve, even though they don't necessarily live in the towns where they work. When I was younger, the position of postmaster — a designation, not a gender — was one of very few political plums. The job, seemingly a life-long appointment, was thought to pay rather well, had a whiff of prestige and included managerial power. Mail carriers, who deliver to mail boxes with noisy vehicles or those who deliver from house-to-house on foot, know everyone in the community. Interaction with them has a certain mystic to it, especially in the eyes of children.

In third grade in West Hartford, my grandson was assigned the task of writing an essay about someone special in the community. He chose Ed, the postman. In pencil on white, lined paper, he listed Ed's qualities, including his friendliness. When he later shared it with Ed, the older man burst into tears. Neither will forget that moment. Shut-ins, especially during Covid saw mail delivery as a life line.

As a long-time post office patron, I've had some touching encounters. One day a woman, whom I didn't know, burst into tears as she opened her box. She had just lost her job. We hugged. Another day, it was a recent widow and once a man with a broken heart. Teenagers scream when their college acceptance letters arrive and I bump into people I haven't seen in years. Not everyone is friendly. A few want to get in and get out as fast as possible. Some seem to look for reasons to complain about the entire operation, but they are the minority. Most enjoy talking with the postal workers behind the counter, who really try to find the fastest, least expensive way to move the packages and the letters.

Founded in 1775 by the postal clause in the US Constitution, the institution is the butt of jokes, criticism, and threats to disband it, but what a loss that would be. It isn't perfect, but it works. The rural carriers who pull up to mailboxes dangling from posts and stop at elegant driveways offer the same level of service to everyone. The great web of the Post Office links us all together, a rare thing in today's world.

Are our voter rolls being cleaned up?

To the Editor:

I still feel that poll watchers are needed whenever the votes are being counted, especially in these “swing states,” because I certainly don’t want to hear the same horror stories and the resulting [nonsense] that happened in 2020. Another thing needed to be done is that states need to clean up their voter lists, as is required by law. The Republican Governor of Oklahoma’s cleanup drive swept off 97,065 deceased voters, 143,682 folks who’ve moved out of state (but left their voting rights behind), 5,607 convicted felons, 14,993 duplicate registrations (because one vote per citizen should be enough), and 194,962 inactive voters who were shown the door during an address verification process. The State Board of Elections in North Carolina shared that 747,000 names were dropped in the past 20 months due to ineligibility. (I wonder what our state is doing toward that effort?)

It’s been reported that the Oregon DMV has allowed a total of 1,259 non-citizens to be placed on the voting rolls, and that nine of them have already cast votes. The brain-washed will say that’s a small number in the grand scheme of things, but how is this allowed to happen, and is it happening elsewhere?

A judge in Indiana gave a criminal who strangled an 11 month old baby the right to have a sex change who is serving 55 years in prison paid by taxpayer money. Harris supports this, including illegal migrants who are detained so that they too can get taxpayer funding for sex changes. Also, Harris will not attend the Al Smith charity dinner Oct. 17, a New York Catholic charities fundraiser that has become a staple for presidential nominees in election years because she’d rather spend the time campaigning. It’s now being said that Harris is both anti-Catholic and the most anti-God politician ever. (Their words, not mine.)

voted against Republican Nancy Mace’s bill that would ensure undocumented immigrants convicted of sex offenses are deported or deemed inadmissible to the country. “The Violence Against Women by Illegal Aliens Act” passed in a 266-158 vote. Every Republican present voted for the bill, as did 51 Democrats, while 158 Democrats voted against it. The bill would include undocumented immigrants who have been convicted of, or admit to having committed, sex offenses, domestic violence, stalking, child abuse or violating a protection order. Does voting against a Violence Against Women Act mean that you hate women? But if Trump did, it would be, right?

With these anti-God and woman hating accusations, a new low of fear-mongering desperation has been reached, and because of the fear, the hate and the bias that’s what it’s come down to. Seeing that comparing a candidate to Hitler and Satan has already been used, is there anything left? When it’s come down to making a big deal about such pettiness like Trump buying popcorn and Harris working at McDonald’s, I’d say the well has gone dry. But then there’s continually parroting the left’s take on illegal crime, and mentioning lies, cult, Nazi, racism and misogyny over and over. (Yawn.) And did those echoing that Trump told 30,000 lies ever notice that when either Biden or Harris say something that could very well be a lie, it’s instead labeled as either a “mis-truth” or “false information” by the left’s lame-stream media?

I’m certainly not going to say “hooray” because of endorsements, or because some soothsayer or any poll is making predictions about the election’s outcome. We’ll know the results when the votes are counted, and we’ll all have to deal with its outcome. Later.

One reason to vote Trump over Harris, and it’s a big one

To the Editor:

The complete fraud, flip flopper for the election that is now running for president, one Kamala Harris, has an amazing record. Besides equating ICE to the KKK in hearings while a Senator from California, her and Dementia Joe have done an amazing job of changing the United States forever. Some sobering statistics from ICE:

Among illegal immigrants not in detention, there are 425,000 plus illegal immigrants who have criminal convictions. 222,000 plus have pending criminal charges. The ICE non detained docket has exploded to 7.4 million cases. Those include 62,000 plus with assault convictions. 14,000 plus with burglary convictions. 56,000 plus with drug convictions. 15,000 plus with sexual assault convictions. Thirteen thousand plus with homicide convictions.

There are an additional 1,845 with pending homicide charges. 42,000 plus with pending assault charges. As of July 21st, 2024, there were 662,566 non-citizens with criminal histories on ICE’s national docket. Furthermore, encounters with illegals jumped from around 500,000 per year for several previous years, with one outlier year of around one million, to a high of 3.3 million in 2023 after those two clowns removed all of the rules that the Trump administration had put in place to control it. Yes, Biden signed those orders, but Harris was totally on board with it all, confirmed by Joe himself.

The Democratic party wants to place this Biden administration border czar into the Oval office, even more astounding since Democrat voters did not get to choose her. Kamala Harris presided over this chaos and invasion of criminals into the US, now she wants to be president. We don’t even need to get into the flip flops, the lies, the word salads, or more appropriately, the word vomit and cackling that she emits instead of answering legitimate questions. This disgraceful endangerment of all Americans not protected by the Secret Service is more than enough to disqualify her from the office in my opinion. Send a clear message to those that offer such a ridiculous candidate for your consideration.

Unthinkable

To the Editor:

In an America not so long ago, about nine years ago, many, many aspects of political life that Donald Trump has normalized would have been unthinkable.

Back then, most would have never believed that a major party candidate would tell lie after lie, and then lie about his lies and be enthusiastically embraced by roughly one-third of Americans and nearly the entire Republican Party. Most would have heeded the warnings of an unprecedented number of actually conservative Republicans, former military brass, and half of his cabinet secretaries about the unfitnes of a candidate to serve and the danger that he poses to national security if elected.

Before 2015, no major party candidate would idolize brutal, murdering dictators from countries like Russia and China, praising their intelligence and their “strength,” and bragging that he had received “love letters” from the dictator of North Korea.

It was unimaginable that the GOP presidential nominee would side with authoritarian Russia in its unprovoked invasion of Ukraine and tell its dictator to do whatever the hell he wants to our NATO allies if that nominee deems their military budgets to be too small.

It would have been automatically disqualifying to denigrate brave American men and women who lost their lives defending their country, our country, as “losers” and “suckers.”

No normal American would have even entertained the idea that a major party would put up a presidential candidate found guilty of over thirty felonies and under indictment for scores of others. And most Americans would have never voted for such a candidate.

Very few would have believed that a candidate who openly demonizes human beings, calling them “vermin” à la Adolph Hitler, and using racist insults to refer to his opponent would have any chance of being elected President of the United States of America.

No one would have countenanced the thought that a former president, who actively plotted to overturn the will of the voters after decisively losing the 2020 election and who inspired a violent mob to attack the Capitol, severely injuring over one hundred law enforcement officers, could ever be elected to public office again.

And there’s zero chance that a sexual predator, adjudicated in a court of law to have raped a woman and repeatedly defamed her, would have been a formidable candidate for any national office, much less president.

It was unlikely that an addled, clownish man who can’t answer a policy question with any coherence and gives crazy, rambling speeches extolling Hannibal Lector, encouraging political violence, and obsessing about his crowd sizes and his beautiful body, a man who clearly doesn’t read widely and has no intellectual curiosity, would become the GOP nominee.

And it was unfathomable that a Republican candidate who picked a radical fascist running mate who openly advocates confiscating university endowments, limiting the voting rights of childless adults, firing all federal employees, and shutting down corporations that they disagree with politically, could be a viable candidate.

But that’s where we stand today. Hopefully, the overwhelming majority of voters will reject this putrid state of affairs and vote to return America to a time when our leaders were decent, valued facts over lies, respected the rule of law, and sowed unity instead of hatred, fear, cruelty, immorality, racism, misogyny, antisemitism, and xenophobia.

Veterans are fortunate to have Dauphinais representing them

To the Editor:

Born to and raised by a career military veteran, married to a veteran and with a veteran son,

State Rep. Anne Dauphinais understands the challenges military life brings to our veterans and their families. She has been an active supporter of the local Veterans Coffeehouse, which originated in Danielson. She participates in fundraising events and partners with the veterans to help supply local food pantries. And she has helped dozens of veterans with their issues.

When I first met Anne, I noted her active participation in ceremonial events which were held to honor veterans, and that she held local “town hall” meetings to speak and answer questions about the bills being passed in Hartford. Being available to the veterans as well as all of her constituents, Anne is representing District 44 by understanding the needs here and how decisions in Hartford may affect us all. As veterans, we are fortunate to have her, and I urge you to vote on Nov. 5 to keep her in office.

Considerations for long-term care planning

those without family nearby

If you’re single or don’t have family members living close by who could potentially provide care, long-term care planning takes on added importance. Some key considerations include:

Designating a health care proxy: Choose someone you trust to make medical decisions on your behalf if you become incapacitated. This could be a close friend, more distant relative, or even an attorney.

Creating an advance directive: Document your wishes for end-of-life care to ensure they are followed.

Building a support network: Cultivate relationships with friends, neighbors, and community members who could potentially assist with care needs.

Researching care options: Familiarize yourself with home care services, assisted living facilities, and nursing homes in your area so you know your options.

Considering long-term care insurance: Without a spouse or children to provide care, insurance can help cover professional care services.

Setting aside more savings: You may need to budget for higher out-of-pocket care costs without family assistance.

Exploring aging-in-place modifications: Look into home upgrades that could allow you to stay in your home longer if that’s your preference.

The key is to be proactive in planning for your care needs rather than leaving things to chance. Meet with a financial advisor and elder law attorney to discuss the best ways to protect your assets and ensure you’ll have the care you need as you age.

While long-term care planning involves considering some difficult “what-ifs,” having a strategy in place can provide invaluable peace of mind. You’ll know you’ve taken steps to protect your wealth, expand your care options, and maintain more control over your future.

Don’t put off this crucial planning - the sooner you start, the more options you’ll have available. At WHZ Strategic Wealth Advisors, we’re here to help ensure you have the best plan for long-term care and all your financial needs, giving you “Absolute Confidence. Unwavering Partnership. I always enjoy feedback from the columns, and always learn something so was very pleased to have Killingly Historical Society president Bernie Mitchell tell me that he had ridden on the Budd Car. He said Budd was the name of the company that built the car. Its official name was RDC---Railroad Diesel Car. It was self-propelled but did have a “driver.” Bernie said that when he was drafted in 1966, he was given a ticket to go on the Budd Car from Putnam to New Haven. It took a long time because “it was slow.” (conversation Sept. 25).

Peter McFarlin of Putnam kindly sent me copies of several pages from the diary of his cousin Dorothy MacInnes of Wright’s Crossing Road. They contain some very interesting notations about the Flood of 1955. It sounds as though people were trying to keep up with normal activities whenever possible. Friday, August 19 (1955) “Alas for our nice Fair and all else! A rain of cloud burst proportions began last night, for which I had to get up twice to empty pie pans I put in the wide chimneys (hearths). I went over at 11 to set up tables and the brooks were so “out.” I went to P. (Putnam) to get the money for change before the bridges went out. I got the money but couldn’t get back over the bridge. The River had risen so fast! So I went round by Dayville and got across, through a foot of muddy water. We filled our bathtubs, as I feared the power dam would go out, which it did at 2:30 p.m. Putnam has no waterworks now, no gas, no electricity and the magnesium works exploded and burned! So---back to the primitive! We played Scrabble by lamp light...

“Saturday, August 20. Spent the morning getting ready for the Fair, hurried home to a simple lunch and carted up 15 gal. water from the spring, putting the milk and butter in the spring house. Right after lunch, the electricity came on. Cheers for the CL&P! So we were able to serve creamed chicken, potato chips, tomato & cuke salad, coffee, ice cream. No hamburgers obtainable. Continue to served punch (?) and iced coffee until 10 p.m. for the dance, which was fun and the youngsters had a good time. The total take was $1100, not bad for conditions, as we were under martial law, and a soldier with a rifle stands at Overlock’s Corner and asks everyone’s name and errand before they can pass! We put the money in the church safe as it is impossible to go to Putnam to bank it. The bridges are gone, many houses, and the railroad tracks.”

The Thursday, Aug. 25 diary entry mentions assisting in flood relief, “ I went over and packed clothing for the flood sufferers...The dance money given to the flood sufferers.” The following day, Dorothy “continued to pack clothing for flood sufferers.” She was receiving letters from friends who lived is used in a way that benefits the town by offsetting even a small portion of the borrowing. She also confirmed that the Fiscal Subcommittee recommended the ARPA money be allocated for the project.

Town Council Chair Jason Anderson made sure to clarify that the ARPA money would not be an addition to the $27 million allocated for Westfield Avenue, but rather offset some of that price tag to help save the town money on interest.

“This was the original plan when we started talking about all the ARPA money and all the designations. Fiscal Subcommittee wanted to use whatever wasn’t spent, wanted to save a chunk of it to put towards the Westfield Avenue Project,” said Anderson.

The public hearing to address the ARPA money will be held during the Town Council’s next regular meeting on Oct. 8.

ects are finishing up and coming in under budget.

The $1.6 million maximum allocation would allow for any remaining funds, either unexpended or left over from previous projects, to be committed to the Westfield Avenue renovation.

“This is not going to expand the available funds for expenditure on this project. This is simply money that we’re not going to have to borrow. That’s what this does is reduce the overall borrowing package for this project,” Calorio said.

The Town Council has made it a regular practice to bring any ARPA funding request to the townspeople for public hearings before approval. Calorio noted that with the Dec. 31 deadline looming and no other projects in the pipeline that could complete planning and bidding in time to commit the rest of the money, the Westfield Avenue project is the perfect way to ensure the money

Main Street Gelato, Woodstock Creamery at Valleyside Farm, Bogey’s, and Deary Brothers, and bread donated by Soleil Bakery and Little River Bread Company with Leona’s Baking Company donated chocolate chip cookies. In total 171 bowls created by 30 to 40 potters from Sawmill Pottery were sold over the course of the day. Around 45 volunteers also helped with set up and preparation, serving, traffic, and other needs throughout the event and four local musicians provided music to entertain the crowd. A total number of funds raised was not available for this article.

Empty Bowls 2025 has already been scheduled for Saturday, Sept. 27 with ticket information set to be released in the summer as the event draws near.

The proposal was addressed during Town Manager Mary Calorio’s report on Sept. 10 where she explained that with ARPA money needs to be committed by the end of December. Killingly voters approved a $27.8 million renovation project in 2021 to transform the old high school at 79 Westfield Ave. into a new Community Center. The project bidding is already complete, and work is currently underway. Calorio said using the remaining ARPA money to help offset some of the project’s cost has long been a goal of the Town Council.

“From the very beginning the Town Council had indicated an interest in offsetting some of the overall borrowing of funds for the Westfield Avenue project and so this would allocate any remaining funds,” said Calorio, who noted that several ARPA-funded proj-

The 2024 donors to Empty Bowls consisted of soups from 85 Main, Anne Miller, ANYA, The Broken Crust, The Courthouse Bar and Grille, Grill 37, G-7 Catering, The Inn at Woodstock, The Metro Bistrot, Famous Franks Milltown Grille, New Boston Beef, Railside Tavern, Renee’s Catering, Tourtellotte Memorial High School, The Vanilla Bean, Woodstock Trading Post and Cathy Smith. Also donated was ice Cream from at a distance wanting to know if she was ok. On Saturday afternoon she continued to pack clothing and specifically mentioned those in Grosvenordale “which gets overlooked in the distribution, so the papers do not advertise it.”

Peter McFarlin clarified several points for me. The church which was holding the Fair was Christ Church in Pomfret. “Overlock’s (Corner) refers to Dr. Overlock who owned a large colonial standing on the corner of Rte 169 where the Vanilla Bean parking lot now is. It burned down in the 1970’s (??? About date from Peter).”

Selling antiques and collectibles

The antiques business has changed over the years with the internet creating new ways to sell antiques and collectibles. That said, some of the tried-and-true methods continue to provide good returns.

I've found that offering antiques and collectibles to a wide range of bidders at auction will yield the best results for more valuable items. Attorneys and estate personal representatives understand that consigning to a well-publicized auction is a way of doing their due diligence to ensure that either the estate or themselves are getting fair market value for their items. Many estate companies also consign top pieces to get the best results for their clients.

There are many different options for selling the belongings in an estate. Here are some things to consider when selling your personal property. Central Mass Auctions and many other local auction houses focus on antiques and collectibles. We handle a wide variety of antiques and collectibles, but I occasionally suggest another auction house for certain types of items.

Some people need to sell the contents of finely appointed homes with name brand furniture, the latest electronics, snowblowers, and other power equipment and don't have antiques. One option available to them is a traditional estate sale. An estate sale company prices the items prior to the sale. The sale is advertised and scheduled to run for a day or two (typically on a weekend). If it's organized by an estate sale company, they'll let their followers know the sale will be taking place and advertise elsewhere. With a big sale, potential buyers may line up at the door with only a limited number being admitted at a time. Buyers typically pay cash (some companies accept credit cards) and take the items home that day.

Sometimes a seller prefers an online auction at the estate. With an online auction, a sofa might be labeled lot # 1, end tables lot # 2, table lamps lot # 3, etc. The auction runs for several days. Bidders place bids until the auction end date and time. The winning bidders have a scheduled pick-up date, typically on a Saturday. Many online auction companies also offer shipping of items for winning bidders who live outside of the sale area.

ANTIQUES, COLLECTIBLES & ESTATES

There are times when there may not be enough items to run a sale at the site, but there are still different options available. It isn't as prevalent as it once was, but some companies still do entire estate buyouts. After the family has divided up an estate there may be just a few pieces of furniture left and a consignment shop could be an option. Donating remaining items helps local charities and may make you eligible for tax benefits. Sometimes things are of little to no value, and you may need a trash removal company or dumpster.

Selling a collection or estate contents can be a difficult process. Along with selling the more valuable items for clients, I try to offer them a roadmap for getting remaining items sold.

We have a major two session online auction taking place right now. Session I with historical and gambling memorabilia and a wide variety of other items ends on Oct. 22. Session II with art, gold and estate jewelry, sterling silver flatware and holloware, and coins ends on Oct. 23. Consider fall leaves a gift from nature

Put fall leaves to work in your landscape. This valuable resource makes a great mulch in planting beds, adds organic matter and nutrients to the soil, provides habitat for many beneficial insects, and is insulation for ground-dwelling queen bumblebees, toads, and more.

Leave any disease-free leaves in garden beds but pull them away from the trunks of trees and stems of shrubs. Mulch piles against trunks or stems create a moist environment that is more subject to rot and disease. It also provides a hiding place next to these plants for voles that feed on bark over winter.

Avoid thick layers of leaves, six or more inches deep, in garden beds. They can block sunlight and smother the plants below. Pull leaves off the crowns of perennials and move the excess leaves to gardens with little or no mulch.

Use your mower to recycle fall leaves that land on the lawn. As you mow the grass you'll shred the leaves into smaller pieces. If they are the size of a quarter or smaller your lawn will be fine. As these leaf pieces decompose, they add organic matter and nutrients to the soil.

When the lawn is overwhelmed with leaves burn a few extra calories and rake them into nearby planting beds. Whole leaves provide the best habitat for overwintering insects. Spread the leaves over the soil surface to help insulate the roots, conserve moisture, suppress weeds, and improve the soil as it breaks down.

If your garden beds are already filled with leaves or this is not practical, attach the bagger to the mower to shred and collect the excess leaves on the lawn. Only use grass clippings collected from lawns and leaves not treated with a weed killer this fall.

Dig extra shredded leaves into vacant annual flower and vegetable gardens or incorporate them into the soil as you prepare new planting beds. They will break down over winter, improving the drainage in heavy clay soils and increasing the water-holding ability in fast-draining soils.

Bag shredded leaves you want to save for next season. Tuck them out of sight for winter under trees or around the foundation of your house for added insulation.

Create compost with fall leaves, plant-based kitchen scraps, and other landscape trimmings. Do not use meat, bones or dairy that can attract rodents, charcoal ash, and human, pet or bird droppings that may contain disease organisms. Avoid diseased and insect-infested plant debris, perennial weeds, and weeds gone to seed. These can survive in compost piles that don't produce sufficient heat to kill them and end up back in the garden in the compost.

Oak and large maple leaves make great mulches and additions to the compost pile but break down slowly. Shred them with your mower or leaf shredder first for quicker results.

You can compost black walnut, laurel, and eucalyptus leaves that contain chemicals toxic to other plants. Shred them first to speed decomposition and when they are fully decomposed the compost is safe to use in the garden.

As you begin putting the fall leaves to work in your landscape you will start considering them a gift, not a curse, from nature.

Synchronicity

Have you ever felt that no matter how hard you push, things won't work out? We all have goals—big dreams or small wins. Maybe it's starting a business, landing that dream job, or leaving early to catch the game.

Whatever it is, the harder we try sometimes, the more stressful it gets when things don't go as planned.

But what if the solution isn't to push harder? What if, instead of battling against every obstacle, you step back and let things unfold? There are two ways to get what you want: you can scheme and plot your way through or loosen your grip and let the pieces fall into place naturally.

Instead of battling every obstacle, what if the solution was something different—something called Synchronicity?

Take the guy who wants to leave work early for the big game. He spends the morning coughing, hinting that he's "a little off," and Googling fake illnesses to sell his story. By lunchtime, he's sneezing dramatically and whispering, "I think I'm contagious." But just as he's about to slip out, his boss drops a stack of reports on his desk. "I need these done before you go." Now, he's stuck working twice as hard because he tried too hard to force things.

Now, imagine someone else with the same goal, but instead of scheming, they're honest: "Hey, I've got tickets to the game. Any chance I can leave an hour early?" Maybe the boss says yes, maybe not. But, letting go can open the door to Synchronicity—when things align ideally it's like life is giving you a little nudge. Perhaps the boss is a fan and says, "No problem, I'm leaving early too!" Or an afternoon meeting gets canceled, and leaving is suddenly easy.

I first became intrigued by this idea of Synchronicity after listening to a lecture by physicist and ex-NASA scientist Tom Campbell.

He said, "When you stop trying to control life, the magic happens."

He made me realize that sometimes we get so caught up in forcing our plans to work out that we miss the unexpected opportunities when we just let go. When you step back and allow things to happen naturally, it's like the universe quietly whispers, "Relax, I've got this."

Campbell says, "When something does happen—a hurdle that pops up in front of you—that's okay. You deal with it and go on. Don't get upset with it... You'll find that things start happening just as you need them, just when you want them. You'll go from having nothing but hurdles to no hurdles at all—everything just starts to work well."

Think about that for a second. What if you trusted that things would work out instead of stressing and struggling to make everything perfect?

Campbell's point is simple: "When you realize that you don't have to control anything, you'll see that you don't need to control anything."

Maybe life isn't about pushing harder—it's about stepping back and letting the puzzle pieces fall into place on their own.

Imagine you're headed out to watch the big game and suddenly hit a major traffic jam. Your first instinct might be to freak out, curse your luck, and start weaving in and out of lanes to compensate for lost time. But what if there's a reason you're stuck? What if that traffic jam is working in your favor?

Later, you find that without the traffic jam, you would have ended up in the middle of a deadly five-car pileup just a few miles ahead. That frustration of being late could've actually saved your life.

When you stop fighting every obstacle and let things unfold, you might find that setbacks are Synchronicity in disguise, keeping you exactly where you need to be.

So, the next time life throws a wrench in your plans, take a deep breath and consider that maybe, just maybe, it's not a roadblock—it's a detour leading you somewhere better.

When you let go of control, life surprises you in ways you never imagined. Trust the process, embrace the unexpected, and remember that sometimes, not getting what you want might be life's way of giving you exactly what you need.

POSITIVELY SPEAKING

the applications to be considered for this funding. This project will provide key infrastructure improvements to public and outdoor facilities, increasing the vibrancy of the Thompson community. When this happens, everyone wins," said Gordon in his release.

According to Thompson Director of Planning and Development Tyra-Penn Gesek, three main activities were listed in the town's application for the CIF grant: the full depth reconstruction of Main Street and its related sidewalks, closing the funding gap on the renovation of 65 Main St., which is to be converted to a Small Business Support Center, and major improvements to Oscar Swanson Park across from Mill Town Grill and the unnamed monument at the northern intersection of Main Street and Route 12, both considered Veterans' memorial parks.

"These projects will substantially renovate infrastructure, green space and, of course, the town-owned building in the heart of Thompson's historic economic core," Penn-Gesek said. "The renovation of Main Street itself has been on the Town's list of hoped-for projects for many years; but the advanced state of disrepair of the existing road is beyond the capacity of the local DPW to properly address. The engineered plans, which were developed for the Town by Freeman Companies LLC, indicate that the cost to properly repair the road would be in the range of $3.3 million, so it would also be well beyond the funding capacity of the local budget. These improvements will 'close the loop' on our travel infrastructure for vehicles and pedestrians in the district in Thompson with the highest capacity for economic development. The facelift to the neighborhood that all three projects will provide will improve curb appeal and property values, with the ultimate goal of encouraging infill development of small, neighborhood scale businesses and high-quality, diverse housing options."

Thompson has already made many investments in improving downtown. In the last five years, a sidewalk project down Riverside Drive, a new outdoor patio outside of Mill Town Grill, and exterior renovations to the 65 Main facilities have all been either started or completed. This is in addition to utilizing vacated properties in new ways such as the transformation of Superior Bakery into a self-storage facility, plans for St. Joseph School to be renovated into apartments, and Triple Raven Brewing Company taking over vacant space at 27 Main St. The town has also continued its efforts to redevelop the historic River Mill. These projects in compliment to the grant funding show that Thompson is making great strides towards growing its economic base for a bright future.

"It is reasonable to take the position that a low-density town, which is 97 percent dependent on residential property taxes for its general revenues, cannot afford to undertake major improvements; however, that does not mean that the projects are not important, nor that the Town doesn't deserve to try to take on projects to set the table for future investment," said Penn-Gesek. "That is why State, Federal and private investment, in the form of grants, is so important. Although the CIF application showed funding 'leverage' in terms of past investment by the Town and other entities, no direct cash match was required in this program. The award of the $4.047 million shows that Thompson has a compelling story to tell about its own future potential."

Thompson recently completed the final session in a year-long series of informational meetings concerning the 65 Main project, which will now enter the more in-depth planning and implementation stages in the coming year. While that process is ongoing, Penn-Gesek assured that Thompson will continue to persist in its efforts to grow and enhance its economic future with the grant money being a significant boost to spearhead those efforts without having to consider additional cost to the local taxpayers.

Evelyn Virginia "Ginny" Oriola (Hoekman), 84, of Danielson, CT, beloved wife of Ralph Oriola, passed away peacefully on September 23, 2024, at her home, surrounded by her family. Born on August 25, 1940, in Cleveland, Ohio, she was the daughter of the late Evelyn Davis and Henry Hoekman. In addition to her husband of 57 years, Ginny is survived by her son Chris Oriola and his wife Nelia of West Hartford, CT; her daughter Karin Schmidt and her husband Bob of Jefferson, GA; and her daughter Susan Oriola of Jewett City, CT. She also leaves behind her cherished grandchildren, Kayla, Matthew, Ryan, and Michael as well as her brother Roland Hoekman and his wife Barbara of New Bern, NC. Ginny shared countless treasured memories with her extended family and friends.

Ginny attended Lutheran schools in Cleveland for twelve years, where she cultivated a passion for theater and piano. She earned her undergraduate degree at Eastern Nazarene College in Wollaston, MA, followed by a Master's in Education from Bridgewater State College and a second Master's in Counseling Psychology from Anna Maria College.

With a long and fulfilling career in education, Ginny served as an elementary school teacher, nursery school teacher, and dedicated 19 years as a middle school counselor at Killingly Intermediate School. She cherished her volunteer work with NAMI Connecticut, and her warm spirit and caring nature left a lasting impression on everyone she encountered.

An avid traveler, Ginny explored numerous destinations across the country and abroad, but she particularly loved spending summers in Falmouth, Cape Cod, enjoying precious time with family and friends at Old Silver Beach. Her love of music and theater was a central theme throughout her life; playing the piano brought her immense joy and enriched the lives of those around her. Her steadfast Lutheran faith was a source of strength throughout her life, guiding her through every step of her journey. She particularly enjoyed directing the junior choir at St. John's Lutheran Church. Her trust in God's grace and love provided her with comfort.

Ginny will forever remain in our hearts. We are deeply grateful for the incredible person she was and for the love and laughter she brought into our lives.
