Oxford's Alfred Beland named Grand Marshal of Memorial Day parade

Alfred Beland

OXFORD — Memorial Day will be observed on May 27, the last Monday in the month of May. On that day, the aging veterans will visit the decorated cemeteries throughout the towns of Webster and Dudley. The old soldiers will pay their respects, while silently remembering the defenders of our Country.

Alfred Beland, Grand Marshal, will be at the forefront of the marchers. He is a native of neighboring Oxford and a resident of Webster. He is a six-year veteran of the USAF. The Beland family lived on Main Street in Oxford. Al's father, Lorenzo, was a Guardsman, Mechanic, Policeman and a Canadian immigrant, and mother Gertrude was a Worcester girl and a stay at home mom.

Al, who was sometimes called 'Freddie,' attended Oxford Grammar School before transferring to Worcester Boys Trade for four years of Vocational Training. It was during those years that Al and Lorenzo built a couple of 'Rods' and founded the 'HOT HEADS' Car Club. The organization remains active to this day. After graduation from vocational school, Al continued his education attending evening classes at Central N.E. College while working at Woodbury Engraving Company. Al, hungry for knowledge, saw an opportunity in 1958. He enlisted in the United States Air Force, opting for the 4 year 'hitch' beginning with basic training at Lackland AFB in San Antonio, Texas.

Because of his vocational experience and his high aptitude test scores, Al's specialty would be Aircraft Engine Repair and Maintenance. Airman Beland's orders were to begin training in southwest Michigan at the re-activated Kincheloe AFB, an F102 Fighter Base. He continued taking extra courses during his off-duty hours.

After Airman Beland completed his training on Repair and Maintenance in Michigan he hopped on a flight to Spain, settling in at Zaragoza, a Spanish facility used by the United States as part of the Madrid Pact. Al was getting pretty familiar with the F-102's of the Red Devil Squadron while fulfilling his obligation to NATO, and the USAF.

Immediately after a personal tragedy back home, Al was transferred to Westover Field where he accepted a

Two vie for selectman's seat in Webster

BY GUS STEEVES
CORRESPONDENT

WEBSTER — A one-year selectmen's race and several empty seats highlight this year's local election next Tuesday, May 7.

The only race on the ballot is between the well-connected and long-involved Elaine Davies and youthful newcomer Kaitlin Morin to fill what's left of Lisa Kontoes' term.

Kaitlin Morin, 26, has lived in town since January, but has worked in several town governments around the region over the last several years. To her, a primary motive for running is to help update "policy to deliver solutions ... in a constantly evolving computerized world." At least as important is to "get more young people involved in government," she said, noting most boards have few young members now.

That idea sprang in part from her Anna Maria graduate school project, which looked at voter participation in Oxford and Webster over the last 10 years. She said she found "mainly what you'd consider the senior population going out and voting," but not too many young people. She later described it as seeing "the same names over and over" in the register of town office-holders.

To encourage youth participation, Morin said she's trying to get Bartlett and Bay Path seniors to register (they can legally at 16 and 17), feeling that puts them "way ahead of the game" when they hit voting age at 18.

Beyond that, she sees "enhanc[ing] local business" as a key goal, believing that community events are the way to do that. Morin would like to emulate Putnam in that regard, with "taste of the town" events and other things that close down Main Street for a day occasionally. She noted the various murals already show "Main Street has come a long way."

She'd promote such changes by incorporating them into the Master Plan and adding those things to the town administrator's goals (for the most part, they already are).

"I've received a lot of criticism based solely on my age," she said. While she admits "I don't have the life experience" some others have, she argues she has the education and public-government experience to do the job.

"I want to keep the momentum going," Morin added. "This is not just a career for me. It's my passion, my bread and butter."

Elaine Davies, Davies, by contrast, grew up in town and is Landlords reject proposed housing regulations

BY JASON BLEAU
CORRESPONDENT

DUDLEY — The Dudley Board of Health continued discussions concerning potential new housing regulations involving rental properties during a public hearing on April 16, where a room filled with landlords and tenants spoke against the initial proposals.

The hearing followed up a discussion from earlier in the year where Health Agent Patrick Hannon recommended new inspections and related fees for properties in Dudley which he said would better protect both the landlords and the tenants by documenting the conditions of the homes before and after being occupied. His recommendation came after the discovery of illegal heating accommodations in a multi-unit building which Hannon referenced once again during the April 16 hearing. Hannon also noted situations he has seen in other communities where a tenant would damage property to report their landlord and avoid paying rent. The proposed regulation would provide documentation on the town level that would confirm the living conditions of the unit preventing landlords from bringing tenants into negative situations and tenants from improperly accusing the landlord of failure to maintain the building.

Hannon described these intentions behind the proposed regulation and explained the concept would include a $100 fee for registration and additional $100 fees for fall and spring inspections respectively for any non-owner-occupied rental property of two or more units. Any owner-occupied unit would not be held to these requirements. Hannon also showed a willingness to eliminate the spring inspections from the proposal. Overall, Hannon felt the regulations would be a positive for the town.

"There's a reason to have a local code that's minimal, that requires a couple of inspections. I felt that (there should be) inspections for pre-heating season, to get in there and show that the heating is in good condition, the oil tank is not leaking, we know who is paying for the heat and that's been clearly decided. We won't be going out at 6 o'clock in the morning and 5 o'clock at night on holidays because someone has no heat, and the landlord says they're not responsible and the tenant says they're not responsible. We will already know," said Hannon.

While the full Board of Health was not present for the meeting, the members that were on hand pro-

Oxford Finance Committee offers glimpse at how schools are funded

BY GUS STEEVES
CORRESPONDENT

OXFORD — The Finance Committee gave the town detailed look at how school financing works last week, although almost all of those who attended were already town officials.

Speaker Brian Allen spent 31 years in municipal and school finance, mostly in Worcester. He started in 1994, when the Education Reform Act was being implemented. He's seen what's known as Chapter 70 from both sides, and has taught it for several years at Worcester State.

In a number-heavy presentation, Allen noted the state's formula for providing school aid is complex and still has some issues. The legislature tried to fix some of them with 2019's Student Opportunity Act, which is phasing in increased funding from both state and local sources until 2027.

State aid is based on what's called the foundation budget calculation, with specific base dollar figures assigned to kids in 13 enrollment categories based on age — pre-K and K, elementary school (grades 1-5), middle school (6-8) and high school (9-12), with extra for in-district tech schools (regional tech schools get their own calculation). Beyond that, "incrementals" are added for five levels of English learners, three categories of low-income, and special education. The latter is assumed to be 1 percent of the student body, but many districts have more, so he noted "the state didn't go far enough in addressing special ed costs in the [Act]."

The total number of students includes all kids of school age in the district as of Oct 1 of the previous school year, excluding vocational students. For Oxford, that means September 2024's numbers are based on 1,569 kids — 1,466 in the public schools, 20 in charters, and 75 choosing-out to other public systems. The funding ranges hugely; he picked grade four as an example, noting the foundation budget amount differs from $9,806 to $19,348 per student depending on the factors noted above.

Later, Allen noted two districts with very close enrollment figures (Oxford's 1,569 and Masconomet's 1,576) can have very different state aid. Oxford gets $23.9 million, but Masconomet (in Boxford) gets $21 million.

How that's funded is a calculation called the "combined effort yield [CEY]," based on the town's property values and income, plus a municipal revenue growth factor and, for a very few towns, a wage-adjustment factor. This CEY maxes out at

Nationally recognized agent hosts lunch for local first responders

WEBSTER — It was a fun-filled week of hosting “lunch and learn” opportunities for Homes for Heroes affiliate agent Diane Casey-Luong and her team. While Casey-Luong is a top producer at RE/MAX Vision, she was also recently named the Number One affiliate agent in Massachusetts for the Homes for Heroes Program and was also recognized as the Number Nine agent in the country.

Homes for Heroes is a nationwide real estate incentive program that rewards individuals who work in the following occupational categories: Healthcare, Teachers, Fire/EMS, Law Enforcement, and Military/Veterans. Recipients receive a cash reward of 25 percent of the commission during the buying, selling, and/or refinancing of their property. In the last four years, Diane has rewarded her hero clients with nearly $188,000 and has dedicated her career to working tirelessly to support this program.

As a thank you to local heroes, Casey-Luong visited the Dudley Fire Department this week and hosted a “cookout and learn” for firefighters, EMS, and police. Captain Erik Spahl of Dudley Fire graciously offered up his culinary skills and cooked a delicious spread that was provided by Diane. While staff were enjoying their lunch, she was able to educate staff about the program and spend time hearing their on-the-job stories, which is ultimately what fuels her passion for the program. Rebecca Hendrix, a Loan Officer at MBA Mortgage, and an affiliate lender of Homes for Heroes, also participated and was able to talk about the lending side of the home buying process.

Later in the week, Casey-Luong and her team visited the Webster Fire Department and hosted the Webster Police for their “lunch and learn,” which was sponsored by Delray Doc’s Fruit and Deli. Participants were given the opportunity to not only learn about the Homes for Heroes program, but also hear valuable insights from her about the real estate market and current trends. Hendrix was also on hand to answer questions about the mortgage process and even spoke with a couple of staff about important things to consider when buying their first property.

To end the afternoon, the team even had the opportunity to meet Murphy, the Webster Police Department’s newest (and very cute) member.

Department of Revenue conducting a financial management audit of Dudley DUDLEY — Following its annual independent audit, the Town of Dudley’s FY2023 financials were deemed to be free of red flags and compliant with U.S. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles (GAAP), by financial auditing firm Scanlon & Assoc. Tom Scanlon discussed the results of his auditing team’s findings, detailed in a 74-page report, with the Board of Selectmen on November 13. Mr. Scanlon reported that he saw no red flags or variances.

At this meeting, selectmen noted a handful of residents were calling for a forensic financial audit of the town, which Scanlon said could cost as much as $700,000.

Instead, the Board of Selectmen pursued free assistance from the state. The Inspector General’s Office directed selectmen to the state Department of Revenue’s Division of Local Mandates. On Jan. 26, the town made a formal request for the state Department of Revenue to conduct a financial management review of the town. The audit began on March 14, and it is expected to finish by mid-summer 2024.

The scope of the audit is focused on the town’s financial offices and the practices, procedures and the policies that guide municipal decisions. The audit team examines the duties and responsibilities of finance officers and the degree of coordination and communication that exists among the various boards, committees, and officials involved in financial management.

The state inspectors evaluate the effectiveness of financial checks and balances and compliance with state laws and regulations that govern fiscal matters. The process includes interviews with selectmen, independent auditors, collector/treasurer, information technology director, and assessors.

Also undergoing examination are documents from various documents, including the Tax Recapitulation Sheet, Schedule A, balance sheet, the town’s annual budget, warrants payable, revenue and expenditure reports, and reconciliation reports.

This voluntary, independent audit comes at no cost to the town. The anticipated report and audit findings will be shared with residents upon receipt.

A story behind a street name

BY HELEN POIRIER
AUBURN HISTORICAL SOCIETY

AUBURN — While driving along the streets of Auburn, one could start wondering how a street got its name. For those who are familiar with Auburn town history, several names jump out as founding fathers, Bancroft, Stone, and Boyden Streets to name a few. There are others that are not so well known such as Prentice Ave. This street is located between Sharon and Central Street somewhat behind #262 Central St., which was the home of John Prentice. It was built between 1763-1765, and four generations of the Prentice family lived in the house. The house started out as a half salt-box with an end chimney. Across from his house, which is now Camp Gleason, John built the first sawmill in town. He created a dam on a nearby stream to power the mill.

There is a local legend that this house was once a stop on the Underground Railroad and another that prisoners were held in the basement at one time. Although there has been no documentation found to support either statement, they're not out of the realm of possibility.

Anyway, John Prentice was born Feb. 24, 1738, in Middlesex County to Solomon and Sarah Prentice. Some time before 1763, he came to this area and married his first wife, Sarah and they had five children between 1765 and 1779, Elijah, Josiah-Sartel, Lucy, Sarah and Rhoda. Sarah was 35 when she died March 13, 1779.

John then married Rebekah Richardson in November 1779 in Worcester. They had two children, John, who died April 1785 at 14 months, and then John who was born in 1786. Rebekah died in 1838 at the age of 97, out lasting her husband by 26 years. John Sr. died March 26, 1812. Many of the family members are buried in the Center Burial Ground in town.

John Sr. was among the original incorporators of South Parish of Worcester and of Ward. He served as the town clerk from 1778 - 1784 and was the first clerk for the town of Ward at the May 4, 1778, town meeting. He was a representative to the General Court in Worcester. Other town jobs that included being a member of the Committee of Supply, which was sending aid to the colonial troops. In 1779, he was also a selectman and school squadron (committee man) for area #3 school. In 1780, he held the jobs of assessor, school committee, moderator, and inspector of the grain for the preacher.

1781 he was on the town Committee of Correspondence which functioned mainly as a means of spreading news and information about the Patriot cause and mobilizing opposition to British policies in cities, towns and rural communities throughout the colonies. In accordance with the Massachusetts Militia Law of 1781, John Prentice was elected the first captain of the Auburn Militia Company on July 1. The militia was part of the 7th Division, 1st Brigade, and 1st Regiment of the Massachusetts Militia.

In 1783, he was just the town clerk. 1784 saw John as the town assessor, inspector committee, preacher committee, and general court representative. 1785 town clerk, tax inquiry committee, school examiner, school squadron, tax collector and general court rep. 1787, John resigned his commission in the Auburn militia in September. 1808 he was listed as a justice of the peace and a representative to the State Legislature.

John Prentice certainly did his share of work in the early stages of establishing the town of Ward to merit at least a street bearing his name.

Nichols College welcomes "The College Tour" TV series to campus

DUDLEY — Nichols College is pleased to announce that The College Tour, an Amazon Prime and Apple TV show about college life, is filming on the Nichols College campus from April 29 through May 3.

The show, now in its 12th season, is hosted by Massachusetts native and Executive Producer Alex Boylan, who won the CBS series The Amazing Race in 2002. Boylan's interest in creating an educational reality show stemmed from an experience he had while taking his niece on college tours. Knowing that many students don't have the financial means to travel far from their hometowns, Boylan aspired to create a show that promotes an accurate depiction of campus life through academics, career preparation, research, student activities, and intercollegiate sports.

"We are excited to showcase Nichols College and our extraordinary students to prospective students, their families and other viewers across the nation," said Nichols College President William C. Pieczynski. "The students selected for the episode have taken full advantage of all Nichols offers, including experiential learning opportunities, NCAA Division III athletics, student government, and leadership of clubs and organizations. They are our best ambassadors, and we look forward to showing others the significant value of a Nichols education."

About Nichols
Nichols College has earned business accreditation from the prestigious Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB International), the longest serving global accrediting body for business schools and the largest business education network connecting learners, educators, and businesses worldwide. Gladys E. Kelly Library hosts "Horse 101" program

WEBSTER — On Saturday, April 20, the Gladys E. Kelly Public Library featured a program dedicated to a better understanding and appreciation of horses. Lindsay from the Winterberry Homestead in upstate New York shared with her audience some of the do's and don'ts when approaching a horse.

Several of the adults and children had an opportunity to introduce themselves to Katie (a miniature Shetland pony) and to stroke her side. In addition to the thrill of meeting a real live horse, the audience had a chance to view and inspect some horse grooming tools and riding equipment. Lindsay used Katie to give a demonstration on the use of the grooming tools and the riding equipment.

This is just one event leading up to the visit of Pulitzer Prize-winning author Geraldine Brooks on June 6. Keeping with the horse theme of Brooks' novel "Horse," the Library will be hosting Jean Walker for another extremely popular paint night. Attendees will be painting a horse-themed landscape on May 30th. Registration opens on May 16. These programs are generously funded by the Friends of the Gladys E. Kelly Public Library.

in this area with this funding.”

“The Webster Public Schools have always been ahead of the curve in assuring adequate nutrition for its students so they are able to learn and thrive in the classroom,” said Rep. Unwind and savor

In a world where the pace of life seems to quicken with each passing day, it's becoming crucial to pause and appreciate the beauty in life's simplest moments. We're bombarded with messages that tell us success is synonymous with constant activity and productivity, but in our relentless pursuit, we often overlook the joy that can be found in slowing down and simply chilling out.

Think about it—how often do we rush through our days, barely taking the time to notice the world around us? We grab our morning coffee on the go, scroll through our phones during moments of downtime, and fill our schedules to the brim with commitments and obligations. But what if we took a step back and savored the little things?

There's something incredibly powerful about embracing simplicity in a world that seems to value excess. Whether it's enjoying a quiet moment with a good book, taking a leisurely walk in nature, or sharing a meal with loved ones without the distraction of technology, these small acts can have a profound impact on our well-being.

Research has shown that practicing mindfulness and engaging in simple activities can help reduce stress, improve focus, and cultivate a greater sense of contentment. By slowing down and being present in the moment, we can find peace amidst the chaos and rediscover the beauty that surrounds us.

Living more simply isn't about depriving ourselves or giving up on our goals—it's about finding balance and prioritizing the things that truly matter. It's about recognizing that true happiness isn't found in material possessions or external achievements, but rather in the connections we form, the experiences we cherish, and the moments of quiet reflection that nourish our souls.

Our journey of faith

"We do not reach the Kingdom of God going from victory to victory but more often we have to journey from defeat to defeat," notes St. Tikhon of Zadonsk. "After each defeat, however, we don't bewail our misery but we get back up and continue the battle. We go forward in repentance and humility." This is the tension between our worldly, earthly defeats and our spiritual victory. We are engaged in spiritual warfare and it's a struggle to go forward toward our goal of union with Jesus Christ.

The Prayer of Saint Ephraim reminds us of this battle and tension between defeat and victory. He reminds us of our serious spiritual struggle. In his prayer he asks God to "take from me the spirit of laziness, idle curiosity, lust for power and vain talk." Here are four of the primary vices that constantly attack us, and from which we are constantly falling – into laziness, a lack of sobriety and seriously in our pursuit for the kingdom of heaven; into idle curiosity, wasting our time on superficial things which lead to a superficial, surface level life which then easily falls into despondency; into a lust for power, where we allow our pride and ego to control our lives, falling into our own self-deluded arrogance which leads to self-righteousness; and into vain talk, idle, meaningless chatter.

Yet, after each defeat, how do we respond? Are we reflective and repentant? Do we realize and confess our sins and then turn to Christ for healing and forgiveness, for renewal and new life? Yes, every day we fail. Yes, every day we fall. The sober Christian life, however, is one where every day we repent, we get back up, we keep our vision on Jesus Christ, and we turn back toward Him.

Our spiritual victory comes when we keep our eyes set on the goal, and don't get confused to what our goal of life actually is. It is union with God. It is becoming a new creation through Jesus Christ. It is tasting and living in the Kingdom of Heaven here and now in our daily life.

Again, Saint Ephraim not only offers to us the warning of our struggle, but he gives us a vision of what we strive for: "Give to me the spirit of purity, humility, patience and love." If we are journeying with Christ daily, we will be crucifying our own ego and making space for our Lord to live in us. His Spirit is one of purity, not simply sexual purity but purity of heart to pursue the one thing needful in life. His Spirit is one of humility, remembering who we truly are and who God truly is. We reject all our facades and masks we pretend to be and know who we truly are – the first among sinners before God but also a beloved child created in His image and likeness. His Spirit is one where patience reigns. We wait and trust on the Lord in every circumstance, waiting on His timing, not on ours. His Spirit is one which will inspire us to live in love, divine love. We strive to do all in love, for love, with love.

"After each defeat, we don't bewail our misery but we get back up and continue the battle. We go forward striving for these virtues that lead us closer to Christ."

Our spiritual battle is a fierce one if we take the spiritual life seriously. And because we are defeated every day, it may seem impossible at times. There is a beautiful Gospel story that offers a paradigm, a model and a way to follow.

A desperate father approaches Christ's disciples, and then Jesus Himself, asking for help for his epileptic son. All his life the son and father have suffered. Even after the father approached the disciples, there seemed to be little hope for healing. Yet the Father cries out to Jesus, "if you can do anything, have pity on us and help us."

To which Christ responds, "If you can! All things are possible to him who believes." The Father immediately cries out, "I believe. Help my unbelief." And our Lord sees the faith of the Father and heals the son. Later, the disciples ask Jesus why they themselves couldn't heal the son and our Lord teaches them that some healings can only happen through prayer and fasting.

All things are possible if you believe. I believe. Help my unbelief.

This kind of healing and miracle can only happen through prayer and fasting.

In these three statements lie the paradigm which can help us in our spiritual struggles. Yes, we are tempted and defeated every day by the passions and vices which attack us. Yet, we know that we progress down our spiritual path through continual repentance and turning toward Christ for help and healing. But HOW do we turn to Christ to cultivate the virtues we want to flourish in our lives?

We believe that all things are possible with Jesus Christ. We can overcome all our bad habits and addictive behavior. With Christ, we can control and crucify our passions and vices!

We need the humility of the epileptic's father and cry out daily, "Lord I believe. Help my unbelief." We acknowledge our doubts and questions and skepticism but express our faith and trust in Him. I believe. Help my unbelief.

And then we remember that to nourish and nurture our faith, the two greatest spiritual tools that we see repeated again and again in Scripture are prayer and fasting. We are called to use these spiritual tools of prayer and fasting in a proper manner so that we can open our hearts to Christ, push aside through our fasting all that hinders us from approaching the Lord, and encounter Him in a living, life-changing manner.

We are in the middle of spiritual warfare. We are striving to climb up the Ladder of Divine Ascent. In the war, we will have many defeats. Yet, we persevere. We continue to go forward. Every time we fall, we get back up and remember the paradigm of this Gospel story.

All things are possible if you believe. I believe. Help my unbelief.

Our spiritual life will progress only through increased prayer and fasting.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Davies has it all

To the Editor:
Experience. Dedication. Integrity.
These three words appear in Elaine Fitzback Davies' campaign literature.

I could not think of three better words to describe this wonderful person, nor to begin this letter of endorsement for her candidacy for the office of the Webster Board of Selectmen.

I have known Elaine for many years now, through my association with the Webster Veteran's community, the Building Bridges program, the Church of Reconciliation, and the Town Administrator Candidate Screening Committee two years ago.

In all of these endeavors, Elaine has demonstrated her deep intelligence, her complete dedication to the Town, and her vast experience that allows her to provide guidance to other people's efforts...and to make other people's contribution to any endeavor stronger because of her unique ability to draw out the best in others!

Elaine always elevates any endeavor or conversation!
If you have seen and read Elaine's campaign material, you will easily see that she possesses a vast store of experience in government, business, and education.

She worked for the EPA for 30 years, and has served on innumerable Town of Webster boards, committees, and commissions. She has strong connections to the business community, and she has absolutely dedicated her life to serving the larger Webster community through her church, the schools, the Library, and so many, many other endeavors.

It can truly be said, without the slightest exaggeration, that Elaine has dedicated her life to the people of Webster.

In my own career, I have worked as a Mass. Town Manager and have served with hundreds of Selectmen in several communities. I have seen the full gamut of people who occupy the Office of the Board of Selectmen and have become well-acquainted with the skills and attributes of both good and great Selectmen.

Elaine will clearly be a great selectman.
She could simply not be more dedicated to the Webster community, she possesses substantial directly relevant experience, and I have known very few people in my 45 years of public life who so clearly demonstrate the real meaning of integrity – the deep caring for place, purpose, and people that drives every action, every decision, that she HAS made for Webster, and that she will make as one of our selectmen.

As a resident of Webster, I cannot think of a better person to join our Board of Selectmen and to assist that Board, both to continue its excellent record of service and to help our Selectmen to make even greater achievements on behalf of we, the citizens.

Experience. Dedication. Integrity. Elaine has it all.
Please consider her candidacy, and together, let us ensure that we all enjoy the many gifts of this marvelous person and long term resident of Webster; and enjoy the benefits that she will give us as a character-driven Webster selectman!

Respectfully submitted,

Invasion of the stripers

John Gareri with his first striped bass of the season from the Providence River!

Stripers are starting to invade coastal waters in both Mass. & Rhode Island. This week's picture shows John Gareri with his first striper of the season caught in the Providence River last week! The pair of anglers reported no sightings of Menhaden, but the fish were feeding on some small fish near the surface.

THE GREAT OUTDOORS RALPH TRUE

The one striped that they caught was on a surface plug.

Tautog fishing was also hot last week, with Captain Mel of FishNet Charters reporting limits of tautog for his clients. Seabass will open on May 18 in Mass.! Black seabass will open on May 17 in Rhode Island with a two fish daily limit? Summer flounder open on May 3, in Rhode Island with a four fish daily limit, and an 18 inch size limit.

The black bugs exploded with their annual hatching last week, and made it uncomfortable just trying to sit in the backyard. Wild turkey hunting opened this past Monday and hunters were hoping that the black bugs were gone by then.

The wild rabbit population continues to grow which is good news for sportsmen that own a good beagle, and love to hunt the rabbits. This past week, I observed five rabbits that were killed by cars near my home. It is a sure sign that the rabbits are making a big comeback, and are here to stay. Unfortunately, they are a nuisance to gardeners trying to grow some fresh vegetables for the family. Woodchuck populations are also abundant in the valley area, and can mow down a garden almost overnight.

The Uxbridge Rod & Gun club will stock their club pond with trout this Friday in anticipation of their annual kids fishing derby next Saturday, May 4. Breakfast will be served starting at 7 a.m., and the derby will start at 8 a.m.! Fish chairman Matt Fontaine is hoping for a good turnout, with plenty of prizes being awarded for the largest trout caught.

Spring Garden Roundup

It's finally May, and the promise of a warm weather and a bountiful gardening season awaits. For many in New England, the highly anticipated spring season brings with it the excitement of "getting out in the garden" again.

TAKE THE HINT
KAREN TRAINOR

A new season of gardening chores has begun, and in recognition of the 2024 planting season, the following guide, geared toward planning your garden tasks, is offered - as well as some tried and true garden tips.

MAY
May Stats: Monthly Averages: Average temperature (Worcester, MA): High: 66 degrees; Low: 47 degrees; Precipitation: 4.19"; Rainy Days: 15 days
US Climate Data, 2024

May is the month to:
Obtain a soil test
Add lime to "sweeten" soil as necessary
Complete indoor sowing of tomatoes, herbs, broccoli, cauliflower
Set out cool season varieties such as peas.
Turn gardens over
Compost or fertilize garden beds six to eight inches deep

Dig and transplant many perennials before new growth advances too far.

Fertilize your trees, shrubs and perennials. As these plants emerge from the dormant state, their need for nutrients is great.

Plant your bareroot rose stock this month.

Transfer crops to larger containers until ready to plant

Fertilize spring bulbs which are actively growing

Plant your summer flowering bulbs later in the month such as gladiola, dahlia and canna.

Prune shrubs such as forsythia, witch hazel, and weigela right after blooming. Fertilize soon after for lush growth this season

Harden off plants to prepare for planting

Pinch back early blossoms of annuals now and you'll be rewarded with more blooms later. Also Pinch off early blossoms of established strawberries for a more bountiful harvest later.

Control your lawn weeds now before the heat of summer to avoid burning grass.

Green Thumb Growing Tips

Hard shelled seeds do not always germinate properly. But you can aid the germination process by making an x cut in the hard seed with a sharp knife.

Or, to speed germination in without breaking the surface, try soaking hard shelled seeds overnight in water.

To get a fast start on germinating corn, try this old trick. Place the corn seeds on a moist paper towel, leaving it overnight. Then fold the damp towel over.

Corn seed that has been pre-sprouted will jumpstart your crop and is less likely to rot in cold soil.

When planting your garden, sink a small jar or can in the middle of a row. This way, you can gauge exactly how much water your garden is getting from both irrigation and rainfall.

To stop vigorous mint from spreading and taking over the garden, keep it corralled by planting it in a plastic bucket with the bottom cut out.

Pepper plants thrive on heat, so it helps to place large rocks next to your green pepper plants to attract the sunlight

Plants that grow best in alkaline soil such as geraniums and hydrangea, will thank you with better blooms if you water them with a mild mixture of baking soda and water occasionally.

When buying flowers, the general rule is to choose the largest bulbs because they usually result in larger flowers.

When buying annuals, you'll have the best luck transplanting them if you choose short, stocky, dark green plants with no flowers on them.

When removing the plants from their containers, don't be afraid to break the root mass apart. It will stimulate these small starters into better, stronger growth.

For cost effective mulch, use three sheets of newspaper under bark mulch. You'll save money on bark and the newspaper decomposes, enriching the soil.

Did you know that approximately seven pounds of human hair contain as much nitrogen as 200 pounds of manure? Save hair from home trims to toss in the garden.

I've had the pleasure of seeing and handling a wide variety of antiques and collectibles and one of the things I enjoy seeing most is folk art. Folk art follows traditional forms of style, theme, and craftsmanship. Items were made from whatever resources were available to the craftsman at the time. Folk art pieces often have a utilitarian purpose but are also aesthetically pleasing.

ANTIQUES, COLLECTIBLES & ESTATES

with a fruit basket and their cat. A painting in Colonial Williamsburg shows nine children in an outdoor setting. One of the boys has a stick and hoop that was a popular toy at the time. An older girl is holding a baby. Other paintings of the time depict boys with fishing poles and a sea captain with a ship beside him. Given the high mortality rate for children during that time period, many paintings of children were painted posthumously.

Another type of folk art is quilting. European colonists were skilled in working with wool and linen. Quilting was born out of necessity, though. When imported textiles weren't available or when people didn't have the money to buy them, they repurposed material. Block printing and printing on copper plates were used to create designs on fabric, according to the Metropolitan Museum of Art. These fabric pieces were often incorporated in quilts. Basic designs consisted of squares, diamonds, and hexagons. There were other styles of quilts, but the patchwork quilt is a popular style that used small pieces of cloth to create something that not only kept people warm but looked great in their homes.

There are many other types of folk art, including weathervanes, whirligigs, cigar-store figures, trade signs, ship's carvings, stoneware face jugs, game boards, carnival game wheels of chance, and scrimshaw. Most definitions describe a whirligig as a toy that spins like a top or pinwheel. The folk art whirligigs often depict people with paddle-like arms that twist in the wind or cause a character to saw wood or perform another task.

Some of the more interesting types of folk art we've handled were trade signs. We sold a painted zinc sign that had painted eyes inside the frame to let people know they could find an optometrist there. That piece sold in the mid-thousands. We've sold multiple weathervanes, but an old banner (directional arrow design) with great patina (natural aging) went for over $4,000. A pair of beautifully painted leather fire buckets with a connection to Sutton, MA sold for nearly $20,000. We've sold two 19th century wooden barber poles that brought figures in the thousands. One pole had a sign attached advertising haircuts, shaves, and baths. Up until the 1700s, barbers also performed surgery, dental work, and bloodletting. The red and white design that's still being used symbolized blood and bandages. In the 18th century, you had to be very clear when telling a barber to "take a little off the top."

We are accepting folk art consignments for our summer auction, along with historical items, fine jewelry, sterling silver, art, coins, and other antiques and collectibles. It was nice discussing antiques with the large group who came to the Holden Senior Center last week. Thank you to the readers of this column who attended the event.

I'll be at a Learning in Retirement event in Danielson, Conn. on May 6 discussing downsizing. Please visit our website <https://centralmassauctions.com> for links to other upcoming events.

Attract success, don't chase it

So many of us yearn to be successful, driven by an unrelenting desire to achieve. We work tirelessly, struggle against all odds, and clock in long hours, yet often find ourselves falling short of our goals.

POSITIVELY SPEAKING
TOBY MOORE

Sometimes, it seems we're chasing after success like a mirage in a vast desert, seemingly within reach yet perpetually out of grasp, like trying to catch smoke with our bare hands. It can be like running a marathon with no finish line in sight. This relentless pursuit can feel like chasing the horizon — the closer you get, the further it seems to stretch away. Success, when pursued directly, often proves elusive, darting away like a startled deer the moment you think you've cornered it. If you persist in chasing success and consistently fall short, you will encounter a series of deep disappointments. These are not just mere setbacks; they are soul-wrenching disappointments that penetrate to the core of your being. Like sharp thorns on a seemingly beautiful rose, they prick at your spirit each time you reach out, leaving emotional scars that linger. Each failure feels like a personal betrayal, a dream deferred that saps your enthusiasm and dims the light of hope within you. These profound letdowns can hollow you out, leaving a feeling of emptiness where your passion once thrived.

Imagine sitting quietly in a park, lost in thought, when Jim Rohn, a white-haired man with twinkling, wise eyes, sits beside you. He carries the quiet authority of someone who has experienced much in life and who, during his lifetime, was celebrated for his insightful approach to personal development.

After a moment of comfortable silence, he turns to you and asks gently, "Well, how come you haven't achieved success yet?" His voice is soft but carries a weight that suggests deep understanding.

You find yourself opening up more than you intended, sharing, "I've tried for many years, but Success has always eluded me. I put in the hours, worked relentlessly, and at the end of the day, I watched as everyone else got their slice of the pie, but I never got mine." The older man nods thoughtfully as if he knows this story all too well.

His response is both shocking and eye-opening. He responds with serene confidence, "Success is something you attract, not something you pursue. It's something you attract by becoming attractive."

You can't help but chuckle to yourself, misinterpreting his words, and reply, "Well, there are plenty of successful people who aren't traditionally attractive, and unfortunately, we're born with the looks we have."

He flashes a gentle, knowing smile and clarifies, "Not that kind of attractive. I'm talking about becoming someone who naturally draws opportunities. It's about being a person of value, character, and action—qualities that magnetize success."

Encouraged by his insight, you lean in, intrigued, and ask, "So, how does one attract success then?"

His eyes light up with the question as if he's been waiting to share this secret.

He replies earnestly, "It's not about chasing external rewards; it's about personal development. You can have more than you've got right now because you can become more than what you are right now. If you multiply your value by three or by five, you can easily multiply your income by three, five, or even ten. But the key is to work on yourself. That's how you make yourself a magnet for Success."

His words resonate deeply, suggesting a shift from outward effort to inward growth and highlighting a pathway to better circumstances and a better self.

If you want to have a successful large business, you need to refine your leadership skills. If you aspire to be a renowned artist, enhance your innovative thinking and master new artistic techniques. For those aiming to excel in academia, strengthen your research abilities and cultivate critical thinking. Want to innovate in technology? Develop your technical expertise and learn to adapt quickly to new technological advancements.

By focusing on personal growth in these targeted ways, you make yourself a beacon for opportunities, naturally attracting the success you seek.

Fundraiser supports Congdon Family

Jason Bleau

A popular feature of the benefit was an hour-long intense workout session with a room full of participants pushing themselves to the limit.

AJ Congdon and his family pose for a photo as they meet with guests at a benefit to help them with AJ's medical expenses.

A massive raffle filled with donated goods from local supporters and businesses served as the centerpiece of the fundraiser to help the Congdon family.

DUDLEY/CHARLTON — Supporters of AJ Congdon, a student of Dudley Elementary School who has been diagnosed with a brain tumor, came together for a day of fun, family, and community on April 27 with the proceeds helping pay for AJ's treatment. Building off of AJ's love of athletics, the event featured a variety of activities including sports demonstrations, a basketball free-throw, and an hour-long workout while also featuring more conventional fundraising activities including a massive raffle filled with donations from local businesses and supporters. Every penny from the event will help support the Congdons as they pursue treatment of AJ's condition. Supporters have also set up a GoFundMe page called AJ Congdon Strong which, as of this writing, was nearing $80,000 of its $85,000 goal.

Heat-tolerant beauties for gardens and containers

Boost the summer-long beauty and heat tolerance in your gardens and containers with new varieties of annual vinca (Catharanthus). The unique Soireea vinca varieties provide added appeal with their cute, double, and ruffled flowers.

Annual vincas, also known as Madagascar and Rose periwinkle, thrive in full sun and well-drained soil. Once established they are drought tolerant. Similar in growth habit as impatiens but these flowers thrive in hot sunny locations where impatiens struggle. Hardy in zones 10 and 11, vincas are grown as an annual in most parts of the country.

Include annual vincas in containers, hanging baskets, and garden beds. Mix them with other plants or allow them to shine on their own.

Soireea Kawaii vincas light up any garden with their vibrant mini flowers. You’ll enjoy an abundance of flowers that cover the nine to 18 inch tall by 12 to 18 inch wide mound of glossy deep green foliage. No need to prune away long leggy branches as this plant maintains its compact habit all season long. Kawaii means cute in Japanese and these flowers certainly are just that.

Select from eight Soireea Kawaii (suntoryflowers.com) flower colors ranging from white to coral, purple, and red. Add some sizzle with Paprika Red, a patriot flare with the Lady Liberty Mix, or a harmonious mix of pinks and purple in the Berry Blast mix. Grow White Peppermint, Coral, or Coral Reef Soireea Kawaii if the disease phytophthora has been a problem in the past. These three are as resistant to this disease as Cora XDR, the gold standard of phytophthora resistance.

Visitors to your garden will take a second look when you add Soireea Double and Flamenco vincas to the landscape. Their unique flowers don’t look like a typical vinca, adding a bit more pizzazz to any planting and combination.

Soireea Doubles have two distinct layers of frilly petals and produce an abundance of blooms. They are more vigorous, with a larger growth habit than Soiree Kawaii. These plants have a larger leaf and body. You can select from white-, pink-, or orchid-colored flowers that bloom all season long. Don’t be fooled by their delicate appearance, Soireea Doubles are as heat tolerant as other annual vincas.

Unlike any other vinca, the Soireea Flamenco puts on a display as fancy as that of a flamenco dancer. The ruffled petals may be solid or bicolor. This plant grows 8 to 12 inches tall and 15 to 20 inches wide. It has the same heat tolerance, glossy green foliage, and compact growth habit as the other Soireea vincas.

Senorita Pink Flamenco flowers have a dark pink eye surrounded by a lighter pink blending into the white outer edges of the frilly petals. Contrast that with the deep maroon ruffled petals with a bright terracotta edge of Salsa Red. Salmon Glow’s white eye contrasts nicely with salmon peach. Pink Twist has the most curled flowers in a lovely pink, adding to its appeal.

Look for opportunities to add some unique flare to this

William C. Pieczynski named ninth president of Nichols College

DUDLEY — William C. Pieczynski, current interim president at Nichols College, has been named the ninth president of the nationally ranked business school. The appointment was announced by the Nichols College Board of Trustees and is effective May 1.

“We are thrilled that Bill has accepted our invitation to assume the presidency of Nichols College,” said Randall V. Becker '83, MBA '96, chair of the Board of Trustees. “Bill has led Nichols through a period of transition with deft skill and unquestionable success. He is a natural leader, a man of great character, and cares deeply about Nichols and its extended community. He is uniquely qualified to harness the College's recent momentum and continue the upward trajectory that now ranks Nichols among the national leaders in salary potential and return on investment.”

President Pieczynski has a long and distinguished career at Nichols, working closely with faculty, staff and students across academic disciplines and campus-wide departments. He joined the College as director of the Nichols Fund in 2006, where he was charged with expanding the President's Society, generating annual funds and overseeing alumni relations. President Pieczynski was named vice president for advancement in 2010 when he oversaw the successful completion of the College's bicentennial campaign, Securing a Legacy of Leadership, which raised $66 million to support capital projects, endowment and brand-elevating curricular and co-curricular initiatives. The campaign was the largest in the College's history, generating a record number of multimillion-dollar gifts, and far surpassed the campaign's initial goal of $45 million.

Under President Pieczynski's leadership, Nichols has set new standards for overall giving, President's Society giving, giving percentage and number of donors. During his tenure, he has been instrumental in securing contributions to support new building projects. Among them are the Fels Student Center, Nichols Innovation Center and major renovations and upgrades to athletic facilities and Lombard Dining Hall. The number of endowed scholarships rose from 16 to 98. In addition, the College has received numerous major gifts for new experiential learning programs such as the Nichols Consulting Group, the student-managed Thunder Fund, the Center for Intelligent Process Automation and co-curricular initiatives such as the Susan West Engelkemeyer, Ph.D., Institute for Women's Leadership and the Emerging Leaders Program.

“To lead Nichols College is a tremendous honor and I am excited to assume the presidency at such a pivotal time in this institution's long and storied history,” said President Pieczynski. “We offer something special at Nichols—a highly relevant, hands-on education that prepares students for lives of meaning, purpose and success after graduation. LANDLORDS

vided mixed responses to the regulations, especially the fees. Board of Health member Jennifer Cournoyer said charging landlords what could amount to $300 worth of annual fees was excessive, a sentiment later echoed by actual landlords present for the discussion.

“First, we’re Dudley, we’re a smaller town. Second, this is something new so I think we should start on a smaller scale,” said Cournoyer who felt lowering one or all of the fees to $25 was a better option. “I like the idea of a common area inspection because I think a good percentage, over 50 percent of the complaints, are from the common areas be it no locks on the doors, no posting of landlord information or property manager information, no lights in the common area or the lights are being paid for by another apartment, no lights in the laundry area in the basement. These should all be taken care of by the landlord. I think when you do a common area inspection, you’re also going to do a visual inspection of the outside. So, you see the trash, you see if screens are there or not. Also, if you’re in the basement you see the oil tank and then you know.”

The proposals received a much stronger response from landlords and tenants alike who felt the proposal was an invasion of their privacy among other issues. Local landlord Jim Ciprari was strongly opposed to the regulations.

“If you impose anything on landlords and don’t give them a break, like you would normally do with taxes, you’re not going to find a developer, so the Economic Development Committee is kind of useless because noone is going to want to come into our community,” said Ciprari, who proposed the possibility of an opt-out feature which Hannon felt was a good idea.

Another landlord Mark Marzeotti, who also sits on the Economic Development Commission, was one of several speakers who felt the proposed inspections and fees would inconvenience responsible landlords and felt the town should instead create rules that apply to those who have a history of violations.

“I don’t expect a bad landlord to be here, but I think it’s important to know the facts don’t lie. Unfortunately, the tenants who are being treated poorly are being treated poorly by the same landlord - Why impose something on the entire community if you know we’re doing a good job? It just doesn’t feel right,” Marzeotti said.

While most of the public feedback came from landlords, at least one tenant did present their perspective. Kaitlyn Auger said she feels the inspections would be invasive and that she trusts her landlord to do the right thing.

“I understand the importance of health conditions and sanitary conditions in apartments. However, my landlord is welcome to come into my home anytime in accordance with our lease and I don’t think the government, the Board of Health, needs to step in there. I do have a child and I don’t feel that’s safe. It’s a blatant invasion of privacy. I think biannual inspections disregards the privacy and autonomy of residential landlords to maintain the residences diligently. The other part of this is

I know there’s language to prevent the cost falling on tenants, however when rent raises come it’s no surprise what it’s going to be for, even if that’s not what it states,” said Auger. “My landlord can come anytime. He can put in the lease to do his own inspections, but I don’t think the state needs to be at my home.”

The Board of Health did not make a motion on the proposal during the meeting. At the recommendation of the Health Agent, the board continued the discussion until their May 21 meeting when they are expected to present a re-drafted recommendation taking into consideration the public’s feedback from the hearing.

BELAND

Compassionate Change of Assignment. The remainder of his enlistment plus an extension ordered by the President because of the Vietnam War, was served at Westover AFB, 99th, B-52 Bomber Wing, Strategic Air Command.

Alc Beland was separated from the service in 1963 besides his ‘at home’ machine shop on Dresser Street, he maintained employment at several locations, settling into Packard Mills space in ‘67. Nine years later he opened a new building in the Oxford Industrial Park when AJEC Eng. Inc was founded. The business now employs the Beland Family plus 16 others, with Al at the controls there has been steady growth.

Al’s credentials are impressive: Thirty year member of the Police Dept., member of the Planning and Finance Boards, Conservation Comm. and Trustees of Soldiers Monuments. He is in his twentieth year as a member of the Bay Path School Committee. Al has met the requirements for the position of Harbor Master. The lake is patrolled in a boat designed and built by AJEC ENG. The Corporation also supports the Men’s Softball League, The Joe Namath Football Camp, and finances the BHS Math Team. Al is also a certified E.M.T. This is only a part of Al Beland’s impressive resume. He is a member of the Veterans Council and Funeral Squad Honor Guard...and he also fixes jet engines!

one of those names you see repeatedly in the records. Among other things, she’s been on the Historical Commission, Personnel Board, Town Administrator Search Committee, and recently helped write the library’s strategic plan.

She describes that work as being “the next phase of her retirement here,” after three decades working for the federal government’s Environmental Protection Agency. She sees that experience as particularly useful in dealing with the town’s PFAS and emergency preparation issues, among other things. She still keeps abreast of EPA changes as part of the agency’s alumni association.

To Davies, the key need in town government now is having people who know how “to deal with very senior people,” not in the age sense, but in the experience and authority sense.

“To lead in Webster, you really have to have read first and acted in Webster,” she said.

Despite their difference, Davies agreed with Morin on the need for updating the Master Plan, which she noted is 10 years old. She said “a lot of the pieces are already available” in other documents. To her, a big part of it should include expanding Webster’s green spaces, including the French Riverwalk. One specific goal would be to create an art center in one of the older buildings, and otherwise “reuse historic buildings better.”

Davies also agreed on the need to ask “are we reaching all the citizens we should?” and getting more people involved by reaching out to various nonprofits and churches and seeing what skills the town board need. She specifically cited Webster’s “vibrant” Spanish and Polish communities, noting “we have such a rich history.”

Davies is sister-in-law to outgoing selectman Randy Becker, who decided not to seek re-election after several terms in office. That means Scott Dziedzic will very likely replace Becker for a three-year term easily; he has no opposition.

Like Davies, Dziedzic is a lifelong resident, and has mostly worked in town, too. He said he’s running for the three-year term largely because “I feel kind of attached now that I have a family” and has been trying to “get a little bit more involved” over the last two years.

Specifically, he’s been on the Finance Committee, and he said he sees the next few years as likely to be “kinda tight. ... We have to make sure we’re good in the short term to make sure of the long term.” For example, he said he feels the Bartlett and PFAS projects, though expensive, were “the right choice” to do now because the costs will only rise if delayed.

Overall, Dziedzic said he feels the town has “done a pretty good job with spending. I can’t think of anything I’d say ‘We should never have done that.’”

Like the other two, he wants to make Main Street businesses “a little less empty,” something he believes requires “work[ing] as a group.” Finding the “right mix” down there is crucial, but particularly figuring out how to retain businesses by seeing what they need.

“It’d be good to look at what kinds of hoops they had to jump through ... and make things a little easier” at the town level while still following safety and other laws, Dziedzic said.

He sees economic development as an avenue to get more people involved in to affairs, but noted overall there’s no “easy answer” to that. One thing he observed is that there’s a “vast difference” between the apartment he grew up in and where he now lives on Lower Gore Road.

Rest of the ballot Besides the selectmen, the rest of the ballot has no races, with a few vacancies. The School Committee’s two seats only have one candidate – Nick Adamopoulos is seeking re-election, but Kathy Napierata is not. Robert Tremblay is seeking re-election to his Bay Path School Committee seat. Jeanne Mikels is also seeking re-election to the Library Trustees.

All of the other listed candidates are new. Linda Krupsky seeks to take over the town clerk’s office from departing long-term clerk Robert Craver. There are two Board of Health seats: Brett Bergeron seeking a three-year term and Oktawia Gielarowicz seeking a one-year term. Kathryn Ward seeks five years on the Housing Authority.

There are no candidates for Redevelopment Authority or Finance Committee.

FUNDING

82.5 percent of the foundation budget for very wealthy towns, but the target for local contribution is 59 percent. Allen noted that first number was simply chosen as the mid point between what the two branches of the legislature wanted – 80 and 85 percent.

In Oxford, those figures were $1.7 billion in property, which accounts for a $6.7 million share of the CEY, and $439 million in income, which accounts for $7.1 million of the CEY, including Bay Path. Based on the formula, that makes Oxford’s maximum local share $22.2 million, but the actual local payment for fiscal 2025 is $13.15 million (including Bay Path) when other factors are included.

“All communities have the ability to spend more than foundation,” Allen noted, and many do so. Oxford is among them, with its budget this year in the second highest group of towns by spending 108.9 percent of what the state expects. Allen said the state average is 126.7 percent, but 235 communities (including Worcester) “are [still] below target. It’s because of the phase in of the Student Opportunity Act, to be clear.”

Those figures go toward “net schools spending,” but that also includes other things that are often budgeted on the town side of the ledger, termed “indirect costs.” Among them are insurance, accounting, educational media for the library, school security, maintenance, charter tuitions (which are only partly offset) and staff benefits (by far the largest category, usually). But they do not include such things as debt (even for school-specific projects, like the $10 million Oxford approved for repairs last year) or transportation.

Several audience members had detailed questions, some of them slightly off-topic. A few surrounded the issue of what responsibilities the towns and schools have to each other and how to document them.

As Palmina Griffin noted, the last written agreement she could find was nine years ago, but various things have changed since then.

“We just never memorialized these things” despite often “work[ing] very collaboratively” to get there, she said.

Allen said Worcester’s been using the same practices since 2007, but agreed “it’s a conversation the town and schools should be having on a regular basis.” In Worcester, the auditors “make sure the charges are in line with that agreement,” he added.

To John Eul, that sparked a question wondering “where we are on auditing the school side of the budget” and specifically how much money the schools have carried over in recent years. He also noted “health care is a big issue because it’s gone up,” which he dubbed “an involuntary increase from the town side.”

Allen said Worcester schools pay their own insurance, and the schools “have very limited areas where they can carry over money,” because they don’t have the “free cash” mechanism towns have.

Eul wasn’t impressed. He noted schools often “pre-pay for things [for next year]. There’s nine ways to move the deck chairs. I know that from being an accountant,” he said.

Amy Frick wanted to know what the “best practice” is for handling school choice funds. Allen said choice-in can be a revolving fund, but choice-out has to get deducted from the budget. He also noted Medicaid reimbursement legally has to go to the town’s general fund, not the schools.
