Board of Health looks at landfill's future

BY GUS STEEVES
CORRESPONDENT

STURBRIDGE — The Board of Health opened the door to closing Sturbridge's landfill a couple years early at their Jan. 14 meeting.

Doing that, though, will depend on a cost benefit analysis comparing the cost to invest in the necessary upgrades and staffing to keep the landfill running for the roughly 6.5 years of permitted airspace it still has versus the cost of contracting for trash disposal, closure and monitoring more quickly.

Either way, as Town Administrator Robin Grimm noted, the latter will have to be done, and she's concerned the costs will rise before the permit actually expires.

According to contractor Fred Roche of EA Engineering, the landfill takes about 3,500 cubic yards of trash a year, and has just over 23,000 cubic yards of remaining space. That intake has been stable for years, and he said the town will have to start the closure process about two years before the permit actually ends to meet DEP timelines.

At the moment, he said, there are two issues Sturbridge has to fix to comply with the permit, regardless of what it does going forward. One is that two areas are violating the official grading requirements; the other is that two monitoring wells have issues. One was crushed by a falling tree and needs replacing; the other has shown exceedances in arsenic and a volatile organic compound.

Health Director Ken Lacey said the grading work will prepare for final capping anyway, and will make those sections safer for the DPW staff. He noted it'll be "the last time we grade it until we're getting close to closure."

Regarding long-term closure, Roche said what happens partly depends on what Sturbridge wants to do with the property afterward. Some towns have put recreational facilities on theirs, others built emergency communications or cell towers, and others have erected solar arrays. Those all have different impacts on the underlying landfill and require different capping techniques to support their weight.

To Grimm, the real issue is that Sturbridge is going to have to fund closure eventually anyway (it has a capping account set aside), so she feels it might make sense to start the process now. "The longer we wait, the more expensive all of this is going to be to

Charlton police announce officer's passing

BY JASON BLEAU
CORRESPONDENT

CHARLTON — The Charlton Police Department is mourning the loss of one of its own after announcing the untimely passing of Officer Richard Reddick who passed away at his home on Jan 12. A cause of death was not announced. He leaves behind his wife Brandi and six children: Valentine Reddick, Madison McNamara, Hailey McNamara, Kaydence Derany, Nicholous Derany and Brayden Derany.

Reddick's passing sparked tributes from numerous area departments, especially Charlton and Southbridge where he spent much of his career. He began as an Auxiliary Police Officer in Southbridge, eventually being promoted to a full-time police officer and began working as a narcotics K9 handler in 2004 teamed with several different K9 partners through his career including Chase, Mika, and Pablo. He also worked with outside agencies including the Massachusetts State Police, Postal Police, and the Drug Enforcement Agency on training, crime fighting, and education initiatives. He joined the Charlton Police Department in 2023.

When announcing Officer Reddick's passing, the Charlton Police Department commended their comrade for his tireless dedication to his job and his ability to keep his composure despite the inherent stresses associated with being an officer.

"Rich always led the departments he worked for in citations and arrests... 'the numbers.' But he would always say that's not what this job is about. He would say it's about getting the work done, getting bad guys, guns and drugs off the street and helping people in any way you can. The numbers came to him by way of the sheer volume of work he was producing, not as goals he was striving for. Those of us who had the pleasure of working with him in critical situations of high stress saw nothing less than grace under pressure in his actions. He was someone to look up to and emulate. No matter how many years you had on the job, Rich could show you a thing or two about how it's done," the department said in a statement, calling Officer Reddick a "superhero" feared by criminals but revered by others including local youth.

The Southbridge Police Department posted their own tribute courtesy of Chief Shane Woodson, who acknowledged Officer Reddick for serving and protecting local communities for over two decades.

"Rich will be missed

Officer Richard Reddick

by his friends and colleagues and anyone who ever had the privilege of working with him at our department would tell you he was a 'cops cop,' which is a compliment in our profession. Rich volunteered countless hours doing K9 demonstrations at our schools for the children in our community (including my own children at schools in another district). Rich made many sacrifices that all police officers make when we get into this profession by working nights, holidays, weekends, etc. and having to spend time away from your family. His impact will be felt at our department for years to come, and he will forever be missed," said Woodson.

Services and a burial for Officer Reddick were completed prior to this story's publication. In lieu of flowers, the family is asking anyone looking to honor Officer Richard Reddick to donate to the Friends of Charlton Police Dogs, Inc. c/o Charlton Police Department, 85 Masonic Home Rd., Charlton, MA 01507.

CDBG hearing explores using $925,000

BY GUS STEEVES
CORRESPONDENT

SOUTHBRIDGE — This year's Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) application follows on what the town has been prioritizing the last couple years — housing and commercial rehab and code enforcement.

But as CDBG Coordinator Sue Starkey and Economic Development Director Peg Dean noted at one of the recent public hearings, they're "always collecting ideas for future grant [rounds]" and want people to "reach out and throw their two cents in."

This year, Southbridge is eligible for $925,000, a sum that's basically guaranteed once a plan's approved because the town is a "mini-entitlement community." The economic development department is using the money as one source of funds to implement issues raised by the 2023 Community Development Plan, but Starkey noted other ideas "could be part of the next strategic plan."

The funds need to be used in ways that improve conditions for residents of low and middle income, typically in certain downtown areas, but a wide range of things have been approved over recent years. Some of the CDBG projects still in the works include River/Crane and North streets and creating an open space plan (with public outreach coming soon). Others have been completed, including re-vamping various parks and roads and doing the slum/blight survey.

Regarding the rehab projects, they're being done now and proposed for this year as forgivable 15-year loans; if they sell before then, they have to repay a prorated portion of it. The housing work requires owners to live in the home (although they can have tenants there as well) and meet certain income qualifications. If they have tenants, they have to sign a "fair rent agreement" that restricts how much they can hike rents during the loan's term, and report their rents annually, Dean said.

Before the work applicants seek can be done, federal rules are requiring the homes to have lead removed and certain other things, and the town has a contractor who coordinates the work.

For commercial loans, they've typically been used for awnings, signs and similar things, although Dean is seeking comments on using some for painting this year. Eligible places need to be "within the view of the windshield" along town streets, because the intent is to improve the area's appearance, Dean noted.

On top of that, she said she'd like to consider using some funds for downtown beautification, namely painting light poles, replacing benches and trash cans, and the like.

Nursing students celebrate 100 days of school

CHARLTON — "Let's celebrate 100 days!" exclaimed Gretheline Bolandrina, DHA, MSN Ed, RN, CRRN, Academy Director to the PN Class of 2025. So, on Jan. 16, the Nursing Students on campus and at their respective clinical sites celebrated the 100th day of nursing school in their own unique ways.

To commemorate the event, several professors contributed on their own ways. Professor Shannen Sherman brought 100 days cardboard crowns and flowers for her students at Harrington Hospital while Professor Angela McGrath brought healthy snacks.

"Celebrating the 100th day is celebrating the learning and growing and incorporating some fun," said Bolandrina. "Nursing school is busy, life is busy, but our nursing students enjoy the build up to this day, and it is amazing to see their progress over the preceding months."

Originally, the academic premise behind the 100th day is to integrate learning to count with fun activities that encourage young children to explore their environment while applying what they've learn in the classroom. This is the first time that the Practical Nursing Academy celebrated the 100th day with the adult learners.

Preparing high school students for civic engagement and leadership

Cornerstone Bank donates to 2025 Inspire Massachusetts Youth Leadership Institute

WORCESTER — Cornerstone Bank, a community bank with locations throughout Central Massachusetts, is donating $2,500 to a program designed to educate, inspire and engage local high school students to be civically active and address key social issues affecting their schools and communities. Inspire Massachusetts Youth Leadership Institute is a one-day civic engagement session presented by the Massachusetts Teachers Association in partnership with Team Harmony.

“We want to help pave the way for a bright future for area youth in our community, and we know that begins with a strong foundation for encouraging future leaders,” said Cornerstone Bank CEO Todd Tallman. “When our children succeed, we all succeed.”

This year, the institute is scheduled to take place at Worcester State University on Jan. 16, when 100 students from high schools across the state will gather and learn about critical social issues such as educational justice, school violence, environmental protection, women's rights and racial harmony. Teachers acting as coaches work to empower students to create and implement action plans to address these issues in their schools and communities. Organizers follow up in the spring to recognize students who successfully put their ideas into action.

“This program inspires real-world change,” said Tallman. “At Cornerstone Bank, we know that innovation and collaboration lead to impact. It's special to see young people put that formula to work to create measurable results in their own communities.”

Latino poetry: “a legacy that is part of our nation”

BY GUS STEEVES
CORRESPONDENT

SOUTHBRIDGE — With the vast majority of US citizens being immigrants or descended from them, there's a lot of common ground to find in Latino poetry.

That was the big take-away from Worcester State professor Naida Saavedra's recent Jacob Edwards Library on that topic, which especially addressed border-crossing, juggling cultures and languages, and melding them into a new home.

“Latinos are really part of the discourse of the United States, and part of what the US means as a nation,” she said, noting Latinos have been here since the earliest colonial days.

But there's also not just one kind of Latino. Food types vary (even when they have the same name), attitudes vary, and the Spanish or Spanglish spoken by people from various places is often only partly comprehensible to other Latinos. That's because the Native cultures in those places were different, as were the local US subcultures and flows of foreign peoples from Europe, Africa and elsewhere, including different parts of Spain itself.

That comes out in the poetry. Saavedra's talk was specifically focused on a recently released anthology called “Latino Poetry: Places We Call Home,” which incorporates work from more than 180 people with different backgrounds. Some were born here; some came here as immigrants, refugees and exiles, with various life paths while here. Some are able to visit their original homeland, others cannot.

As she put it, “When they come here, their identities change,” and all of them “have unique experiences of shaping that identity.” “Multiplicity is one of the characteristics that will connect the writers.”

Saavedra showed a brief video of the book's editor, Rutgers professor Rigoberto Gonzalez. In it, he said Latinos “need to be proud of who we are, especially now that there are so many ways we're being told we don't belong. ... [We are] part of the American family.”

The poems she read highlight the variety Latinos represent. First came “the Newyoric tradition of performance poetry” of Miguel Pinero, talking about his love of his home and wanting his ashes spread on the Lower East Side despite its violence and other issues.

He contrasted with Julia Alvarez, a Dominican novelist also in New York City, who explored how identity is expressed in language and appearance. Two of Alvarez's lines stood out for those ideas: “Would tristeza even feel the same as sadness with its Saxon sound?” and “Long after I'd lost my heavy accent, my face showed I had come from somewhere else.”

To Saavedra, who hails from Venezuela, that's a common occurrence, and she raised the question of what an American looks like. The answer can only depend on who you are when Black, White, Latin, Native, Asian, Arab, many others and many mixtures make up the US gene pool.

Chicano poet Gloria Anzaldúa, a resident of the Tex-Mex borderland where the borders have moved as much as the people have, writes about that. “In the Borderlands, you are the battleground where enemies are kin to each other,” she states. Elsewhere in the same poem, she described people there as “carrying all five races on your back.”

Saavedra said she has friends in that region who don't identify as being “from Texas” but as “from the Border.” In most cases, they have family on both sides of that imaginary line and cross it routinely. “It is a way of living and what makes them people,” she said.

The inherent mixing of such cultural components into one personality is described by Miami's Cuban-born poet Gustavo Perez-Firmat by analogy to one of his culture's soups – ajiaco. Saavedra described that as a dish with Indigenous origins plus Spanish and other ingredients, “a mixture of cultures in a bowl.” Perez-Firmat's work “plays with the language a lot,” and thus explores “what it means to live between those two realities,” she said.

The discussion after her last poem explored that idea some more, with participants commenting on their own experiences and those of ancestors from Puerto Rico, Portugal, Scotland and elsewhere. Even where ancestors spoke English, it's not quite the same language – British English is diverging from US English, just as English spoken in Dixie is different from that here in New England.

Despite the longevity of Latin presence here, Saavedra noted Latino literature is still typically taught in the Foreign Language, Ethnic Studies, or similar departments as an elective, rather than where she'd like to see it – a core part of American Literature. She personally teaches it, and writes fiction in Spanish.

“This is a legacy that is part of our nation,” she said, later adding “but there's always this sense Latino literature will be on the margins, not in the center of the discussion.”

People will get another chance to share their own poetry, plus some music, at part two of this event on March 27, also at Jacob Edwards Library. They're happening under a grant from the Library of America, which is promoting events around this issue between September 2024 and April 2025.

The library has copies of the anthology, and more information's available at its Web site, LatinoPoetry.org.

Bay Path Community's act of kindness featured in Woman's World magazine

CHARLTON — Bay Path Practical Nursing Academy Director Gretheline Bolandrina, DHA, MSN Ed, RN, RN, CRRN submitted a story about the Bay Path community's Act of Kindness to the publication, the national magazine Woman's World Magazine.

Kindness takes on many meanings. Everyone knows the Golden Rule: Treat others how you would like to be treated and most everyone would like to be treated kindly. Bolandrina believed that sharing the story is likened to telling the world how valuable an act of kindness is. Bolandrina said, "I am in awe at all the acts of kindness of our practical nursing students, alumni, staff, and faculty." Bolandrina adds, "even the littlest acts of kindness make a difference in people's lives."

The submitted work of Bolandrina published by Woman's World Magazine was about the Bay Path community's acts of kindness. In an email to Bolandrina by the Woman's World Magazine Circle of Kindness Editor, it was expressed how they love the story!

Below is the story as it appeared in the December issue of Woman's World:

"In our small post-secondary practical nursing school, bags and boxes of uniform scrubs, books, feminine hygiene supplies, and non-perishable food are sent by alumni for current students in need- the environmentally challenged, the food insecure, the poor, the hungry, and the vulnerable. There are no public acknowledgments, huge announcements, or videos to capture the acts. It is simply a gesture of kindness, goodwill, and service. Nurses pass forward acts of kindness with compassion and humility. This continued quiet kindness serves as a powerful reminder that true kindness and generosity often, and sometimes go unseen, yet the impact is tremendous and deeply felt."

Evangelidis mulls run for governor's office

BY KEVIN FLANDERS
STAFF WRITER

REGION — After receiving waves of support from across the state following the release of a petition urging him to make a gubernatorial run in 2026, Worcester County Sheriff Lew Evangelidis said he will carefully consider his options before reaching a decision on his political future.

Posted to Change.org late last month, the online petition titled "Draft Lew for Governor" thrust the longtime Sheriff into the statewide spotlight. Prior to its release, Evangelidis didn't even know of the petition's existence, but he quickly became aware of the strong support when his phone started ringing.

Over the past week-plus, Evangelidis (R—Holden) has received calls and emails from Republicans and Democrats throughout the Commonwealth encouraging him to pursue a campaign for governor in 2026.

"People have contacted me not only to express their support, but also to share their frustrations with the track we're on," said Evangelidis, who has served as Sheriff for the past 14 years. "I want Massachusetts to do better. Right now, we are going down an unaffordable, unsustainable path."

In a summary posted to the Change.org page, the organizers of the online petition described several frustrations shared by Massachusetts residents and officials, including issues with affordability and disapproval of Democratic Governor Maura Healey's immigration policies.

"With Maura Healey's dangerously liberal policies that have contributed to the crippling debt, overburdened our healthcare system, and prioritized illegal immigrants over hardworking taxpayers in the Bay State, the time has come for change," the petition read in part.

The organizers also cited rising crime in their summary, which Evangelidis confirmed as a major problem in Worcester County. He told the New Leader he is receiving calls and emails daily from residents and officials seeking a change in the state's leadership.

Looking ahead, Evangelidis doesn't plan to rush into any decisions. He is committed to continuing conversations with officials statewide and monitoring conditions as the new year progresses.

"I am also going to continue raising awareness that we have a bad situation right now," said Evangelidis, who opposes the Governor's handling of the migrant shelter crisis, calling for major changes to policies. "I haven't made my mind up yet [on a potential run for governor]. I am flattered to receive such strong support."

Evangelidis said he will take time to review how a potential run would align with his family situation. He appreciates the many residents and officials who have reached out to express their support. Many callers conveyed praise for his leadership as Sheriff since his election in 2010.

"I love being Sheriff. I enjoy it every day," Evangelidis said.

Evangelidis previously served as a state representative for eight years. He represented the First Worcester District.

Healey has not announced whether she plans to run for re-election to a second term in 2026.

Charlton Library announces new seed library

CHARLTON — You probably already know that Charlton Public Library lends books, movies, audiobooks, games, and a wide assortment of items in our Library of Things. Now we are pleased to announce we will also be offering garden seeds as of Feb. 1! How will our seed library work? Stop by the main level of the library, choose your seeds, and plant them! When you harvest your crop later in the year, save some seeds, bring them to the Library, and we will add them back to our “growing” collection.

Seed collecting is the age-old process of harvesting and preserving seeds from one’s garden or local environment. It is based in indigenous tradition and deeply tied to cultural preservation, agricultural practice, and community building. Sharing seeds collected from plants in our neighborhoods increases our access to resilient plants. The seed library aims to support our local ecosystem and combat food insecurity.

We have a variety of easy-to-grow vegetable, herb, and flower seeds as well as many books on seed collecting and gardening available to borrow. Seed selection may vary and will be available while supplies last. The Seed Library is possible through the generous support of Friends of the Charlton Library, Eden Brothers, Sow Right Seeds, Baker Creek Heirloom Seed Co., High Mowing Organic Seeds, Prairie Moon Nursery, Blackstone Valley Veggie Gardens, and the Charlton Garden Club.

Save the date for these upcoming workshops at the Charlton Library with Blackstone Valley Veggie Gardens (register by visiting our event calendar at charltonli-

Hitchcock Brown Bag Speaker Series reinstated

BRIMFIELD — Due to demand, Hitchcock is proud to announce the revival of a popular, long-missed series of Brown Bag speakers. The series kicks off at noon on Jan. 29 with a talk about “Brimfield Heroine” and “Mother of Oregon” Tabitha Moffat.

Join local historian and Hitchcock Trustee Mike DeFalco for a talk about “Brimfield Heroine” Tabitha Moffat. Moffat was born in Brimfield in 1780 and later in life (in her 60s) journeyed with her children on the Oregon Trail. Once there, she started a school for children that later became Pacific University. She wrote a letter to her family back in Brimfield talking about her experiences on the Trail which became known as the “Brimfield Heroine Letter.” It described attacks by Native Americans, near starvation and other assorted dangers. In the 1970s, the Oregon State Legislature proclaimed her the “Mother of Oregon.”

The talk will also include the story of Moffat's husband Clark Brown who arrived in town in the 1790s to serve as the Congregational Church pastor and immediately became part of a major controversy which resulted in an ecclesiastical trial known as the Brown Church War.

These accounts are also mentioned in The Brimfield Historical Commission's “101 Things to Know About Brimfield.”

Reservations are required (Registration closes Jan. 27 at 6 p.m.) and there is a $10 fee per person. Lunch begins at noon and the talk at 12:30. Registrants can choose to bring their own lunch or for an additional $10 (includes half sandwich, soup, and beverage. The talk will run approximately an hour.

This program is presented with support from The Shirley Frye Memorial Fund.

Hitchcock Academy is a community center located at 2 Brookfield Rd. in Brimfield, serving the community with educational, recreational, and cultural programming. More information can be found at www.hitchcockacademy.org.

Staying grounded in the age of social media

It happens to all of us. You're scrolling through your social media feed, and a post grabs your attention — something outrageous, dramatic, or too good to be true. Before you know it, you've shared it, commented on it, or brought it up in a conversation. But how often do we stop to ask ourselves: Is this actually true? Or, more importantly, why is this being shown to me?

Social media platforms like Facebook, Instagram, TikTok, and Twitter (or X) are marvels of modern technology, but they're also powerful, profit-driven machines. Behind every post, video, or ad you see lies an algorithm, a set of rules designed to keep you engaged. These algorithms know more about you than you might think: your likes, your dislikes, your habits, even the time of day you're most likely to scroll. They're built to serve you content that aligns with your interests, but also content that provokes strong emotions, because emotion equals engagement, and engagement equals profit.

The problem is, emotions like outrage, fear, or excitement can cloud our judgment. This is how misinformation thrives. Social media algorithms aren't designed to prioritize truth, they're designed to prioritize clicks. This means that sensationalized or extreme content often rises to the top, not because it's accurate, but because it grabs your attention. Over time, you might find yourself in an echo chamber, exposed only to ideas that reinforce your existing beliefs while opposing views are filtered out.

This can have real-world consequences. Extremism, divisiveness, and distrust grow when we stop engaging critically with information and simply accept what's fed to us. And it's not just about politics. Think about the misinformation around health, science, or even history that spreads unchecked because it's wrapped in a flashy headline or a viral meme.

So, how do we navigate this algorithm-driven world without losing our grip on reality? The answer lies in slowing down, staying skeptical, and taking responsibility for what we consume and share.

Before hitting that share button, take a moment to verify the information. Check the source: Is it reputable? If it's a website you've never heard of, does it provide evidence or just emotional appeals? Cross-reference with trusted outlets. A quick Google search can save you from spreading misinformation.

Know that your feed isn't a random collection of posts, it's curated for you. If you find yourself feeling angry, overly excited, or even validated after seeing a certain type of content, ask yourself: Is this manipulating my emotions? Algorithms don't care about truth; they care about keeping you scrolling.

Social media platforms often show you content you agree with, which can feel comforting but limits your perspective. Make a conscious effort to follow people or organizations with diverse viewpoints. This doesn't mean you have to agree with everything, but exposing yourself to different ideas helps build critical thinking.

If a post seems overly dramatic, divisive, or paints an entire group of people as "good" or "evil," it's worth questioning. Extremist content often thrives on oversimplifying complex issues, using inflammatory language to provoke a reaction. Real solutions and truths are rarely found in black-and-white thinking.

The online world is just one part of the bigger picture. Building relationships, discussing issues in person, and relying on community engagement can help you stay grounded. Social media is a tool, not the whole world.

Social media is a double-edged sword. It can connect us, inform us, and even inspire us. But it can also mislead, divide, and manipulate us if we're not careful. The algorithms may be powerful, but so are we. By staying wide-eyed, curious, and critical, we can take control of our online experience and ensure that we're not just passive consumers but active participants in seeking truth and understanding.

Valentine's Day

Like with many of the early Church Fathers and saints, mystery and fiction cloud St. Valentine's life story. While we cannot reliably know much about St.

Valentine, we can, I think, assume that some of the legends have an association with the truth.

Family histories often exaggerate, for instance, but usually the exaggerations are based in reality. In my family, I've heard that a great, grand uncle was once chased down a mountain no his bicycle by a wildcat after he collected blueberries, so his blueberries were bouncing all over the mountain. Fact? I doubt it. Yet I'm certain my grand uncle once tried, at least, to ride his bicycle as fast as he could down the mountain while carrying blueberries. The wildcat was added in later, probably, to explain why he had so few blueberries at the bottom.

So it is with St. Valentine. And the story I most appreciate about him that also makes sense of his connection with romance is that he secretly married couples so that the husband could avoid military service. At the time, Christians technically weren't allowed

REV. JOHN H.D. LUCY
CHARLTON CITY

to serve in the military, and the Roman emperor had a policy that newlyweds couldn't be sent to a war's frontlines. Rome needed soldiers, though, so the emperor was none too happy when Valentine kept purposely limiting the ranks. A good "stick it to the Man" story.

We could take away a number of lessons from that story, as well as the others attributed to St. Valentine. For me, the point is that Valentine's Day shouldn't be reduced to merely expressing our love to a beloved, because romantic love itself can and should serve a purpose. Those of us who are lucky enough to be in a loving romantic relationship should not stop at merely loving one another. Our love can and should take a step further; take us a step further, so that we together, empowered by our love, can help right wrongs in society.

I invite us, then, to celebrate Valentine's Day this year not with flowers or chocolate but with service. Is there an injustice, a tyranny in our community, country, or world that you and your beloved can inspire one another to address?

Democracy calling! Please answer the phone

Last Monday, we saw yet another transfer of power in Washington, as the White House changed hands from Joe Biden back to Donald Trump.

As usual, there was a lot of rhetoric on both sides about it that mostly obscured, rather than enlightened, anyone on what's likely to happen. Trump partisans extoll him to Mars; his detractors demonize him. The same thing has happened to Biden. Both sides largely ignore their commonalities — the fact both are henchmen of the oligarchy.

What happens in D.C. has largely become a game for the super-wealthy elite and corporate interests that affects most everyday Americans almost by accident (usually negatively).

Honestly, to me, it's an issue of "been there, done that." But it should also be a wake-up call for us to remember that if good people don't get involved in government, we will be ruled by the more selfish and venal people who see government as a path to enrich themselves at our expense.

By that, I am not talking about just voting. While a key part of the democratic process, it's also, quite frankly, the laziest.

If we want democracy to regenerate from the oligarchy it's fast becoming, we need people with good ideas and community spirit to run for office. Most importantly, we need people active on the local level, where a few people and a few votes can truly make a difference.

With the change to the new year, most of our towns made nomination papers for local offices available. Most towns require a fairly similar number of signatures to get on the ballot (typically around 50), although their deadlines vary widely depending on when their town elections are.

BY GUS

In Southbridge, the town election is on June 10, with nomination papers due to the Town Clerk in late April.

The three councilors with terms ending are Jasmin Rivas, Mike Marketti and Mike Montigny. Beyond that, three school committee seats are available, with Andrew Murch's term ending and two members recently resigning: Kathy Lapriore and John Shaw. (The committee and council are now seeking applications to fill those seats until the election; they'll meet jointly to choose on Feb. 3.) Also, Helen Lenti's Bay Path School Committee term is up, as are those of Diane Servant on the Housing Authority, Arthur Martin on the Redevelopment Authority, and Diane Kokozka on the Board of Assessors.

Additionally, there's been talk of putting a charter change question before voters this year, but that depends on whether the Legislature finishes it in time. The council actually approved several changes a couple of years ago, but only one of them was deemed significant enough to need voter approval.

Chances are, we won't know whether any of those officeholders want to seek re-election for some time, but let's ensure this year's elections all have a full slate of candidates. All incumbents should face opposition. That gives the good ones a chance to explain what they've done, and gives the public an alternative to the bad ones.

Having unopposed elections is not good for democracy, and we see far, far too many of those. According to Ballotpedia, only 30 percent of last year's elections (at all levels nationwide) had multiple candidates to choose from. Of the 76,902 elections they tracked, 53,485 were uncontested, "the highest rate Ballotpedia has covered in a year since data collection began in 2018."

Granted, six years is not a long track record, but it's a terrible precedent and one that accords very well with what many of us have seen for many years. That website found the ratio was even worse here in Massachusetts, where 84 percent of races went uncontested. Our state was tied at the bottom with Louisiana.

By contrast, New Jersey had the most contested races — 75 percent. While I feel leaving a quarter of incumbents unchallenged isn't a good thing, that number shows actual democracy is more active in Jersey than here.

Let's change those ratios as much as we can on the local level this year! Doing that right means we need at least six council and six school committee candidates, plus at least two for each of the other

You can put more into your 401(k) this year

NIELSEN

Once you retire, you'll likely need to draw on a variety of financial sources — and one of the most important ones may be your 401(k). And for 2025, you can put even more money into your plan than ever.

You can invest in your 401(k) in one of two ways, depending on your employer's plan. With a traditional 401(k), you contribute pre-tax dollars, which can lower your taxable income, and your money can grow tax deferred. If you have a Roth 401(k) option, you can contribute after-tax dollars, which aren't deductible, but your eventual withdrawals will be tax-free if you've had your account at least five years and you're at least 59 and a half.

For either a traditional or Roth 401(k), as well as similar plans such as a 457(b) (for government employees) or a 403(b) (for educators and employees of some nonprofit groups), the contribution limit has increased by $500 for 2025, to $23,500. If you're 50 or older, you can contribute an additional $7,500, for a total of $31,000. And under the SECURE 2.0 legislation, if you are between 60 and 63, you have a higher catch-up contribution — $11,250, instead of $7,500, for a total of $34,750.

If you can afford to contribute the full amount to your 401(k) or similar plan, consider doing so. Of course, not everyone is in that position. If you're a younger worker, you may well have other financial obligations, such as paying off student loans. And even if you've been in the workforce for a while, you may be putting away money for other things — such as your children's education — as well as your own retirement. But even if you can't "max out" on your 401(k), try to contribute at least enough to earn your employer's matching contribution if one is offered.

Regardless of how much you contribute to your 401(k), consider these suggestions on managing the money within your plan:

Create a portfolio that fits your risk tolerance. Most 401(k) plans offer up to a dozen investment options, while some plans offer many more. You obviously want to increase your 401(k) balance as much as possible, but that doesn't necessarily mean putting all your 401(k) dollars into the most aggressive funds available. Instead, consider spreading your 401(k) contributions among a range of investments, which can help you lower your risk level while still giving you opportunities for long-term growth. Everyone's risk tolerance is different, though, so you'll want to evaluate yours when constructing your 401(k) portfolio.

Adjust your portfolio as needed. It's a good idea to review your 401(k)'s investment mix at least once a year to see if it's performing as you'd hoped. But be patient — one "down" year doesn't necessarily mean you must make changes. However, as you approach retirement, you may want to lower the risk level of your 401(k) by moving some of your dollars into more conservative vehicles. Still, even when you're retired and have started drawing money from your 401(k), you might want to keep some growth potential in it to help you stay ahead of inflation.

By contributing what you can afford to your 401(k), and by carefully managing the investments within your plan, you can help maximize the value of this powerful retirement savings vehicle — and give yourself a key asset to help you enjoy your retirement years.

Eight days a week

POSITIVELY SPEAKING

TOBY MOORE

Sometimes, life feels so busy I dream of having one more day in the week. How great would that be? Eight days a week - just like that Beatles song! It sounds great, but let's think this through.

It could be a day of leisure: no emails, errands, or to-do lists. Just sleep in, read a book, or spend hours binge-watching your favorite show without guilt. It could revolutionize how we approach self-care and mental health.

It could be the day you finally learn to paint, start that podcast, or bake croissants from scratch! Imagine having dedicated time for personal growth—no interruptions, just you and your creative spark.

Imagine the extra family time. You could host family dinners, volunteer in your community, or reconnect with old friends!

You could catch up on everything you didn't finish earlier in the week. Grocery shopping, home projects, errands—you name it. We could call it the "Get your life together" day!

It sounds great, but adding an eighth day might plunge the world into chaos.

Holidays would go rogue. Weeks wouldn't align with months, so Christmas might land in February, and New Year's could appear in July.

Imagine singing "Jingle Bells" in a heatwave or explaining to your kids why Thanksgiving dinner now involves sunscreen and barbecue grills instead of turkey and mashed potatoes. Santa might quit in protest!

Payroll would be a nightmare—when is payday? Who knows! HR would give up entirely, and accountants would cry themselves to sleep.

Solstices and equinoxes, those dependable markers of seasons, would go completely out of whack. Farmers wouldn't know when to plant crops. Benjamin Franklin, who started the Farmer's Almanac, might come back to write a pamphlet titled: "Leave the Calendar Alone, You Fools!"

Your circadian rhythm—already clinging to life thanks to caffeine—would give up entirely. Owls would start hooting at rush hour, your cat would decide 3 p.m. is now breakfast time, and your smartwatch would scream, "I don't know what day it is!"

Okay, eight days - bad idea. Still, seven doesn't feel like enough.

Let's flip the scenario: what if we lived in a world where the week only had six days? You don't know what you got until it's gone.

Suddenly, the seven-day week we take for granted would feel like a luxury. That seventh day—the one we rely on for rest, errands, or just catching our breath—would be gone. Imagine the chaos of squeezing everything we currently do into fewer days.

Without the seventh day, weekends would shrink, leaving little time to recover from the grind of the workweek. Rest wouldn't be optional—it would become a desperate need. Perhaps we'd have to find new ways to recharge during the week, taking shorter, more deliberate breaks to avoid burnout.

Losing the seventh day would make finding time for hobbies or creative pursuits even harder. Gone are the lazy afternoons spent painting, writing, or tinkering with a new project. Play and creativity would need to be crammed into the workweek, likely pushed aside by more "urgent" demands.

Family dinners, game nights, and community events would become a rarity. Without the seventh day, many of us would feel perpetually rushed, sacrificing time for relationships, and the value of connection would become clearer, but finding the time for it would be even harder.

Life without that seventh day means laundry piles up, errands get delayed, and "to-do" lists spill into the rest of the week. Chaos would become the new normal as we struggle to fit everything into an already packed schedule.

If the world switched to a six-day week, the chaos would be equally absurd as eight days a week but in reverse!

Einstein might remark, "Yes, time is relative, but this is ridiculous!"

Okay, maybe the problem isn't with the number of days. It's not about though. A 1970 Plymouth Satellite that needed restoration sold for over $13,000 in 2023. Another project car, a 1954 Corvette, sold for nearly $23,000 and a 1962 Corvette in better condition went for over $30,000 in 2021.

Transportation memorabilia – Part 2

ANTIQUES, COLLECTIBLES & ESTATES

Other automobile memorabilia also has collector appeal. We sold a small metal building that was part of an Auburn, Mass., gas station several years ago. After paying close to $3,000, the winning bidder relocated it to New Hampshire where he was recreating an old-time gas station. We also sold some signs from the former gas station that brought figures in the hundreds.

Other auto-related pieces can bring even higher returns. A 1920s Wayne Roman Column Five Gallon Pump in restored condition sold for $18,000 at auction in 2020. I'm sure some readers of this column remember "Flying A" gas stations.

The brand was used until 1970 when it became part of Getty. An embossed porcelain 62 inch "Flying A" sign brought $5,500 last year. Another sign that many of you will be familiar with is the Mobil Oil Pegasus. The Pegasus was part of Mobil Oil's advertising from 1932 into the 1960s. An older Pegasus neon sign went for $24,000 at auction in 2015.

Some people prefer to get somewhere faster and travel by air. We sold two collections of aviation memorabilia in our January 2024 auction. An Admiral Byrd flights over Arctic & Antarctica commemorative bronze medal sold for $660. The other collection of airline memorabilia came from a Pan Am flight attendant (then called stewardess) who was on the crew with presidents. Her cap and badges brought over $400. Three silver appreciation coins she received from President Eisenhower reached nearly $2,900. A piece of fabric from the Hindenburg with documentation sold for nearly $800 in one of our auctions last year. Airline travel posters are also desirable. A circa 1940s Pan Am Clipper airplane poster promoting Caribbean travel soared to $2,500 in a 2023 auction. The winning bidder might have liked the graphics or maybe it was a New Englander dreaming about escaping the cold weather for a Caribbean vacation.

We will be offering some travel posters from a Boston estate in our late spring/early summer major auction. In the meantime, we are cataloging a Civil War memorabilia auction, a Beacon Hill online estate auction, and a comic book, sports memorabilia, and collectibles auction. We are always accepting consignments of estate jewelry, sterling silver, art, coins, and other items in our top 10 list. Please visit our Web site, <https://centralmassauctions.com>, for links to upcoming events.

Large trees and other established plantings are often overlooked when weather extremes occur. Extended dry periods, temperature extremes, and flooding can stress and weaken these plants making them more susceptible to insect pests, diseases, and decline in the coming years.

Always select plants suited to the growing conditions and start watching for those that appear to be more tolerant of extremes. Visit local public gardens and consult with your University Extension specialists and other plant experts when selecting new plants for your gardens.

Workshops to warm your winter days

Make a mosaics, create an illuminated sea glass heart wreath, or decorate a woodland cake at Hitchcock

BRIMFIELD — Winter days can be cold and long, but they also offer an opportunity to dig into a creative project, or to learn a new craft. Hitchcock is offering three such opportunities in its ongoing series of hands-on workshops led by expert craftspeople. Beginners are welcome!

On Jan. 30, join The Art Lab & Gallery for a "delightful" workshop in creating a 10-inch illuminated sea glass heart wreath to warm your door or your wall. The instructor will assist you in navigating the steps from beginning to end and everything you need with be provided, including two string lights that run on batteries and an assortment of tumbled colored glass, mostly red and pink. Participants are also free to bring their own objects to add.

On Feb. 18, Let's Cake Decorate brings its next installment in its popular series: a Woodland Cake. Sue Gaulin leads this fun workshop for adults (adult/child pairs age 8+ can also work together on one cake under one registration at no extra cost). Participants will learn to level, torte, and fill a cake with buttercream, pipe chocolate buttercream bark on the side of the 'tree stump', use premade edible moss to decorate, and then use fondant to create mushrooms, frogs, and gnomes as adornments. No decorating experience necessary, step-by-step instructions are provided, as are all supplies. Students will use Sue's decorating tools and an apron during class. A six-inch vanilla cake, buttercream, fondant, cake board and carry home box will be provided.

On Feb. 19, join master stained glass artist Chris Lyons for a Mosaics workshop in which participants will each make their own tile.

Mosaics are one of the oldest art forms and can be made from just about any type of material including pebbles, seashells, gems, ivory, glass and ceramic tile. The workshop will include a quick look at the history of Mosaics and a walk through the construction process and then each participants will create a simple Mosaic coaster project using glass & ceramic tile.

Chris also regularly offers Stained Glass Suncatcher workshops at Hitchcock. Anyone interested is encouraged to follow Hitchcock for upcoming dates.

For more information or to register for any of the winter workshops mentioned, visit www.hitchcockacademy.org.

Hitchcock Academy is a community center located at 2 Brookfield Road in Brimfield serving the community with educational, recreational, and cultural programming. More information can be found at www.hitchcockacademy.org.

Components failures to blame for Heritage School boiler issue

BY JASON BLEAU CORRESPONDENT

CHARLTON — The Dudley Charlton Regional School District has determined the cause of boiler failures at Heritage School which required maintenance just as the cold snap was beginning to impact the region in early December.

Last month, Joseph DeSantis, Director of Finance and Operations for the DCRSD, revealed that multiple vendors had been brought in to examine the boilers at Heritage School after a malfunction. At that time, it was recommended that the tanks be cleaned at the cost of between $12,000 and $13,000; however, the district decided to seek an internal solution to minimize the financial impact. In the meantime, school officials have also sought answers as to the primary source of the failure. DeSantis provided an update to the School Committee in early January that revealed a likely cause.

“It was found the oil tank cover and certain tank components are the problem causing the leak. Our facilities director has contacted multiple companies to get quotes in order to move forward,” said DeSantis. “As of today, we heard back from one of the companies for repair components and related construction would be $6,350. We’re hoping to get several more quotes before moving forward, but we are confident that this will provide a solution to the situation that’s occurring with the temporary tanks, and we can move forward from that point.”

DeSantis’s report included with the Jan. 8 School Committee meeting agenda named CommTank, Holden Mechanical, and Dependable Petroleum as the contacted vendors. He did not specify which of these companies had already submitted the existing estimate.

Currently, installed secondary tanks will continue to serve as alternative energy source until quotes are obtained and evaluated. This temporary solution is expected to take the school through the winter months until a permanent fix has been established.

Bay Path Nursing student coordinates flower bulb distribution

CHARLTON — Thirty-six members of the Practical Nursing Class of 2025 were recipients of premium flower bulbs from Achille Agway of Keene, New Hampshire. Hundreds of tulips and daffodil bulbs were donated to Bay Path Practical Nursing Academy and distributed to the Practical Nursing students as part of self-care efforts and in collaboration with the UNICEF Club. Bay Path Practical Nursing Academy was one of many non-profit organizations chosen to receive bags of premium flower bulbs. The same bulbs are sold online and at the Keene, NH location of Achille Agway.

According to Greteline Bolandrina, DHA, MSN Ed, RN, CRRN, Academy Director, “Going to nursing school is a busy time. Like nursing, flower bulb planting is both an art and a science.”

Bolandrina stated, “The care one takes in planting is both therapeutic and stress relieving. It is a beautiful form of self-care.”

Loise Ngigi of South Grafton, a member of the PN Class of 2025 and UNICEF Club officer graciously coordinated the distribution of the flower bulbs.

“I like doing it,” said Ngigi with a smile.

Ngigi is a compassionate Certified Nursing Assistant (CNA) and certified home health aide (HHA) whose knowledge is based on the accumulation of seven years of direct experience as a certified HHA and CNA. She obtained her nursing assistant certification through the 3 Dimensions College (Worcester) in 2017. She obtained her high school diploma from Moi Girls Kamangu High School in Kenya (2012). Much of the discussion with the hearing's one resident, Kevin Buxton, revolved around other housing issues and the rail trail.

Dean said the "fair market rent" in our area is defined by Worcester County standards and set as $1,200/$1,600/$2,000/$2,200 for one to four bedrooms, respectively. As of the 2020 census, Southbridge had about 7,800 housing units, and has since added the Wells and 5 Case Street projects, she said.

To Buxton, those have "risen significantly" in recent years, and many people confuse "affordable" with "subsized" housing. "For a $1,200 apartment, you'd have to bring home $3,600" a month to stay below the official 30 percent standard, he said. (In reality, many pay far more than that, since the standard is supposed to include utilities and many rents don't.)

Regarding the rail trail, he said he expects people to "have an outcry of why don't you have a bridge" when they start using it. That refers to the rotary, where the trail cuts down to the sidewalk on East Main Street and follows the surface to Walnut Street, where it returns to the railbed because the grant funding the trail construction (which is not CDBG) doesn't include bridging the rotary. Instead, for now, the trail will dead end on both sides there as overlooks.

Buxton also cited a parcel across from Big Y as potentially being worth obtaining in trade for town-owned land elsewhere. While he feels that's not big enough for a strip mall, it can be used for smaller businesses tied into the rail trail (which runs behind it) and a crossing to the plaza. Furthermore, clearing some of it will enable passers-by to see the arch bridge there.

In general, he opined that "these areas are going to bloom" because of the trail. Construction is slated to begin this spring, and the Conservation Commission recently walked key parts of it in preparation for their public hearing in February.

Regarding past projects, Starkey said the fiscal 2021 McCann Fields work "helped transform that area," but drainage and the retention ponds for the ADA-access trail to Capillo Park still need work because they "didn't work." Dean noted the town tried to get Mechanic Street funded by CDBG, but the state rejected it on the grounds Southbridge couldn't clearly show it would benefit the people living there more than the commuters using it.

from compaction and erosion during heavy downpours. Healthy soil is the key to growing plants that are better able to tolerate environmental stresses.

Manage water that falls on your property. Check with your local municipality for any restrictions or support for these efforts. Create rain gardens to capture, clean and direct rainfall to groundwater to help manage water where it falls. These also support pollinators and provide added beauty to your landscape. Enlist the help of rain barrels, if permitted, to capture rainwater to use on ornamental plantings and containers when needed.

Take this interest one step further and volunteer to be part of a network of volunteer weather watchers. The Community Collaborative Rain, Hail and Snow Network (CoCoRaHS) is a non-profit community-based network of volunteers that provides daily measurements of rain, hail, and snow that fall in their backyards.

The goal of the Network is to provide more localized weather information to scientists, researchers, resource managers, decision makers and more. The data is used for natural resource, educational and research applications.

Weather watching is a great project for the family or classroom. It helps boost gardening success while increasing our awareness and knowledge of what's happening around us.

ing Midwest Gardener's Handbook, Revised Edition, and Small Space Gardening. She hosts The Great Courses "How to Grow Anything" instant video and DVD series and the nationally syndicated Melinda's Garden Moment radio program. Myers is a columnist and contribhaving more or less time; it's about making the time I already have more meaningful.

If you're like me, wishing for more time in the day or more days in the week, it's not about getting that extra time; it's about making the time we have work better.

The solution isn't in more days—it's in making the ones we already have truly count.

seats.

But don't stop there. Democracy requires more than just numerical choices, it requires actual differences in views and ideas that we get a chance to weigh. All too often, when we do have multiple candidates, they come from the same factions, leaving key segments of town unrepresented and potential solutions unspoken.

Southbridge, let's prove our democracy matters to us in 2025. Don't just get out and vote – get out and run for office.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Level: Advanced

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
