The Complex continues to push the boundaries of art education

The Complex modern dance company.

BY REBECCA RAMSEY CONTRIBUTING WRITER

PUTNAM—The Complex Performing and Creative Arts Centre on Main Street, Putnam, has been pushing the boundaries of the creative arts for 15 years.

Founded in 2005 by Nichola Johnson, owner and MFA-holder, The Complex seeks to provide children, teens, and young adults a creative arts education in the areas of dance, theatre, music, and creative/visual arts.

According to Johnson, the mission of The Complex is "to offer the highest level of arts education to the community, create an innovative hub for performance and education, open a space for students to grow and flourish through creative critical thinking, and ignite a life-time love of the arts for all students."

Johnson began dancing at the age of three and spent her childhood and adolescence in a dance studio where she studied ballet, jazz, modern, and tap. Influenced by the typical competitive, trophy-centered mindset of the studio, Johnson didn't realize at first how little she knew about the history of dance or the elements of choreography until she graduated from high school. During her undergrad, she had the privilege to study the movements of the great modern dance pioneers Martha Graham, Katherine Dunham, Jose Limon, and Lester Horton. She also began to explore elements of theatre, acting methodologies, and stage design, realizing how big and incredible the world of the arts truly is.

Savor the magic of childhood at Sadie's Sweet Shop

BY REBECCA RAMSEY CONTRIBUTING WRITER

PUTNAM-Sweet shops are magical places. No matter how old you are, their nostalgic scent of chocolates, caramels, and freshly baked pastries will always captivate your attention and leave your mouth watering. As children, we stood at the counter on tiptoes, blinking our bright eyes at a myriad of colorful treats displayed beneath glass covers, taking minutes to choose which to carry home with us in our brown paper bags. As the sugary, sticky coating melted on our fingers and lips, we'd imagine what life would be like to live in a candy shop surrounded by delicious treats every day.

For Jenna Perez, this thought wasn't merely an imagination—it was her goal.

Perez grew up watching her older sister experiment in the kitchen, creating delicious baked desserts and treats to share with the family. The more she watched her sister, the more she felt inspired to follow her own dream of owning a sweet shop.

"I have always had a passion for owning a sweet shop," she said. "There was nothing like it in our area."

Perez began to do her own experiments with sugar and syrup. As she pursued to learn the ins and outs of candy making, her family stuck behind her the entire time.

St. Joseph School closes after 138 years

BY REBECCA RAMSEY CONTRIBUTING WRITER

N O R T H GROSVENORDALE — St. Joseph School in North Grosvenordale has been offering outstanding Catholic education since 1882. Unfortunately, due to low enrollment and lack of funding, the school has chosen to close its doors at the end of the 2020 school year.

Rev. David P. Choquette, Pastor of St. Therese of Lisieux Parish, informed the members of the St. Joseph School's closure through a letter released on June 1.

"I have witnessed the tremendous dedication of so many of you as well as the great love that you have for this school," he wrote. "However, despite all of the hard effort by so many over the years, the school has fallen into serious financial difficulty stemming primarily

St. Therese of Lisieux from a significant decline Parish, informed the in enrollment."

Principal David Sizemore shared some kind words for members of the school in a video he posted to the school's Facebook page several days later. In the video, he discussed the history of the school and thanked the students, parents, and teachers for their love and support. were an absolute blessing and joy to work with. You put a big smile on my face each and every day."

The history of the school is enormous, having been opened four years before the Statue of Liberty was placed into New York City's harbor and 29 years before the Titanic set sail. Through its 138 years, St. Joseph's School has been in continuous service to the greater northeastern Connecticut region.

To bid farewell to the school that has been a huge influence on thousands of students for three decades, the school hosted a special Farewell Mass on Tuesday, June 30, in the school's parking lot. Attendants were limited to 150 people to fit within COVID-19 regulations. Those who couldn't attend in person were able to watch or listen to the mass on Facebook Live via WINY Radio. During the Farewell Mass, Choquette prayed for the church and read from the second book of Samuel and the Gospel of Matthew. He compared the school to Joseph, Mary's husband, who trusted God and performed his role as stepfather to Jesus.

"Joseph was faithful to his call," said Choquette. "Through these past 138 years, St. Joseph's School has been faithful to its call."

POMFRET — Rebecca Hague of Pomfret is the 2020 winner of the Patrick David Wood '01 Memorial Prize. The award is given to a high-achieving local student entering Pomfret School in the fall.

Hague distinguished herself at Pomfret Community School with outstanding scholarship, citizenship, and leadership. She was the eighth-grade class president and president of the National Junior Honor Society. She received the Connecticut Association of Schools Scholar Leader Award and the Excellence in Art Award.

Hague was presented with a silver bowl by Patrick's family at Pat's memorial tree near the chapel at Pomfret School.

"I was honored to receive this award," she said. "It was special to meet and spend some time with Patrick's family, especially to be handed the cup by his niece, Addy."

Patrick graduated from Pomfret School as valedictorian in 2001. He was a Merit Scholar, earned perfect SAT scores, and won the Robert C. Byrd Honors Scholarship given to highest-achieving high school graduates. He graduated from Stanford University in 2005 with distinction in math.

"Pat was a pure learner," his mother, Lisette Rimer, said. "He was disciplined, and he had insatiable curiosity. When he got home from school in the eighth grade, he would type his notes from his English class so that he could remember grammar lessons. Most importantly," Rimer said, "his true gift was character. He was humble and gracious, and I can see that Rebecca has those same qualities. She works hard, and she is a caring, compassionate young lady."

Rimer said that the award evolved from the "multitude of donations, which poured in after his death and which we decided should support like-minded students." The award is given on the basis of merit, similar to the full-tuition Peck Scholarship Pat received when he attended Pomfret School in 1997. Hague is the 16th winner since the award was established in memory of Patrick, who died in 2006 at age 23.

QVR Rotaract Club awards annual scholarships

REGION — Despite the Barnes. challenges of a global pandemic, the Quinebaug Valley Regional Rotaract Club continued their commitment to local graduating high school seniors through the awarding of five $1,000 scholarships and hand-delivery of a special dinner for each of the families to share on Wednesday, June 24.

The recipients of QVR Club's 2020 Rotaract Scholarships are Alyssa Arends and Nathan Craig of the Woodstock Academy: Keeley Cerbo and Soudalath Souvanhnaphan of Killingly High School; and Justin St. Martin of Putnam High School.

We are always amazed to see how successful the young people in our communities are and all that they've accomplished," said outgoing President, Emily

"I am truly honored to receive this award from an organization as dedicated to helping the community as the QVR Rotaract Club." wrote recipient Nathan Craig.

year's recipients This are moving forward to even impressive feats; more Nathan Craig plans to study at Brown University in the fall, Alyssa Arends at Quinnipiac University, Soudalath Souvanhnaphan at the University of Connecticut, Keeley Cerbo at Nichols College, and Justin St. Martin at Landmark College.

"We felt these students rose above the rest in demonstrating their commitment to their community and the ideal of 'service above self'," wrote Scholarship Committee Co-chair, Jessica Fontaine, when describing the competitive pool of applicants this year.

In an effort to provide a special experience during this period of physical distancing, QVR Rotaract Club partnered with local Thompson restaurant, ANYA, to provide a full course meal for the families, delivered to their doorsteps by members of the club. The club also enlisted the help of recipients' references to make a virtual ceremony video hosted on their Facebook page.

"One of our favorite aspects of the scholarship process is meeting recipients at our annual Awards Night where their accomplishments can be celebrated amongst their families, our community partners, and local leaders," said Scholarship Committee Co-chair and incoming President, Kevin Davis.

"We know this delivery option was a bit unconventional - and we would have much preferred to offer the full Award Night experience - however we hope this might still capture the spirit of celebrating their great achievements," added Scholarship Committee Co-chair, Jessica Fontaine. Eastern named a 2020-21 'College of Distinction'

WILLIMANTIC — Colleges of Distinction has recognized Eastern Connecticut State University for a variety of distinctions in its 2020-21 rankings, including badges of distinction for Public Colleges, Connecticut Colleges, Business and Education Programs, Career Development, Equity and Inclusion, and Military Support. Colleges of Distinction is a guide for college-bound students that recognizes undergraduate institutions that prioritize a well-rounded and individualized education.

The organization is a trusted resource for guidance counselors, parents and students, focusing on the four criteria of Engaged Students, Great Teaching, Vibrant Communities and Successful Outcomes to help prospective students find the best-fit college for them.

Schools awarded the Career Development badge have shown that they are well equipped to help their students graduate with confidence for the workplace. The badge recognizes schools with comprehensive four-year plans, advising, internship opportunities, professional networking and career-readiness workshops.

"The Career Development recognition goes beyond a job board and résumé writing," said Tyson Schritter, chief operating officer at Colleges of Distinction. "Eastern has shown inventiveness in connecting with students throughout their academic careers and beyond."

In recognizing schools for Military Support, Colleges of Distinction notes that veterans can be some of the most dedicated and capable students on a college campus, but that the unique challenges they face can impede success. Eastern has been named a stand-out institution for veteran and active-military students due to the efforts of its VETS Center.

"Schools like Eastern ensure that military students are supported through comprehensive education benefits, a committed military/veterans' affairs team, flexible options, trained faculty and dedicated campus activities and community support," wrote Colleges of Distinction in a press release.

Colleges of Distinction also notes that Eastern distinguishes itself as a community dedicated to equal opportunity for all students, faculty and staff. With a dedicated Office of Equity and Diversity and a variety of clubs and campus organizations aimed at fostering intercultural awareness, Eastern ensures that students of all ethnic, gender and religious backgrounds have equal opportunity to thrive academically and personally.

Students of color make up 28 percent of the total student body, up from 17 percent in 2009. In addition, Eastern has the highest percentage of minority faculty of any college or university in Connecticut, including Yale, Wesleyan and the University of Connecticut.

Programs of note that support diversity on campus include the Women's Center, Pride Center and Intercultural Center. Among Eastern's nearly 100 student organizations are those for the campus's Caribbean, African American, Asian, Latin American and religious student communities.

"Eastern has created a welcoming environment for underserved stu-dents," said Schritter. "It's a tremendous opportunity to highlight the noteworthy support offered for students who might not otherwise study and thrive on a college campus.'

Buck's reaches out to help Windham-Tolland 4-H Camp

WOODSTOCK — Some businesses become iconic over time, others are born that way. One of the latter is Buck's Soft Serve, LLC. Friends Judy Buell and Emilie Hebert and their families opened the serving windows to the public on May 25, 2018, and the rest is history. It is tucked away in a tiny corner of Woodstock Valley, on the farm originally owned by Harvey Buck, grandfather to Judy's husband Ben.

In pre-Covid times, visits to the goat pen, bunny cages, and chicken coops, playing corn hole and hula hoops by the tables under the shade tree made it a wonderful family destination. They offer 52 hand mixed individual flavors and their famous Nor'Easters and sundaes, with hard dips, candies and sauces galore, all at a reasonable prices. The loyalty of their fans was demonstrated in October of 2019, when a Planning and Zoning meeting in Woodstock to discuss the permit they had been issued to be held at the Bates Auditorium at Woodstock Academy in order to hold all those who wanted to attend to support them.

Like all businesses, Buck's had to adapt to the constraints necessary to control exposure to the virus for their customers and staff this year. They switched to a curbside service that maximizes every inch of space in the former parking area. As you pull up to the ordering tent, you get a chance to see the goats, you place your order and a car hop brings it to your car window.

A quick exit is required to keep the traffic flowing.

Both Buell and Hebert were 4-H club members and attended camp when they were kids. Emilie was born and raised on a dairy farm and went to camp throughout her childhood, "making memories and friends that I cherish to this day." She has been leading cow camp since 2016 and also does Farm Camp. Judy and her children also grew up as 4-Hers and attended camp. Judy became a club leader and also served on the advisory group to the Windham County 4-H Fair Board, working with kids in all aspects of running the fair.

Buell said "The friendships I formed and skills I learned from my 4-H experiences are life long."

Despite the temporary change to their business model, they were concerned enough about the virus induced problems the Windham-Tolland 4-H Camp was experiencing, that they set up a donation bucket at their check out and on their Web site. Camp Director Heather Logee and some of her administrative staff have also been on site on the week-ends to sell water to customers and help with traffic management. Since the beginning of May, more than $4,500 has been raised at Buck's for the 4-H Camp! We cannot thank them enough for reaching out to help us as we struggle with the financial shortfalls caused by this year of no in- person camps.

April in response to significant drops in patient volume resulting from the coronavirus pandemic.

"As we safely and carefully resume services that have been delayed due to COVID-19, we have been strategically examining our operations across our system," said Joseph Adiletta, DKH interim president.

"We recognized an opportunity to improve productivity and efficiency by combining our three imaging services locations to two sites," he explained.

"Day Kimball's diagnostic imaging sites at our Plainfield and Putnam locations ensure we're providing access to diagnostic care for patients across our entire service area," Adiletta continued. "And, both of these sites offer the latest in cutting-edge technology, including state-of-the-art 3-D technology for mammograms."

Adiletta explained that the change in locations offering diagnostic imaging services does not result in any eliminations of staffing.

"Only a small handful of employees have been impacted by the consolidation. Those few have either been reassigned to one of our other diagnostic imaging locations, or they have been extended an offer to apply for open diagnostic imaging positions at the main hospital campus," Adiletta said.

Patients can also access all diagnostic imaging services, including x-rays, CT scans, ultrasounds, nuclear medicine studies, MRI, PET scans, and mammography, at Day Kimball Hospital located at 320 Pomfret Street in Putnam. Please see the website for service hours of

LEGION Act opens door to all area veterans

WINDHAM — Since a brief period following World War I and following the attack on Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941, veterans who served a minimum of one day on active duty during a period of war have been eligible for membership in The American Legion. Due to gaps between periods of hostility many veterans were ineligible for membership in the organization. Those requirements changed abruptly on July 30, 2019, when the LEGION Act was signed into law.

The signing of the LEGION Act (Let Everyone Get Involved In Opportunities for National Service Act) opened the door to more than six million veterans to join the world largest veterans organization. The American Legion, which boasts a membership of two million veterans, has been responsible for the initiation of many veteran services, most notably the G.I. Bill of Rights. The G.I. Bill enacted after World War II and the Post-9/11 Bill opened the door for thousands of veterans to pursue not only a college education but also other post-secondary opportunities leading to careers in a broad range of areas. The American Legion has also brought into existence dozens of health care benefits for veterans.

The American Legion, with National Headquarters in Indianapolis, Ind., works every day on behalf of all veterans and U.S. servicemen and women. The organization is based on four pillars: Veterans Affair & Rehabilitation; National Security; Americanism; and Children & Youth.

According to Ronald P. Coderre, Commander of District #4, which covers Windham and Tolland counties, there are local American Legion Posts waiting to enroll and assist veterans who have served their country from World War II through the War on Terrorism. American Legion Posts in Northeastern Connecticut are located in Woodstock - Post #111; North Grosvenordale – Post #67; Putnam – Post #13; Danielson – Post #21; Eastford - #203; and Moosup – Post #91. All of these Posts are involved in a variPhoto Courtesy ety of veteran related activities and patriotic ceremonies in their respective communities.

"The passage of the LEGION Act opened the way for thousands of local veterans to avail themselves of the opportunities offered by The American Legion. The organization, through its local Posts, cares for veterans of all ages, as well as their family members especially the young people of the community. The mission of the Legion can only continue through the willingness of veterans to step forward and become members. I urge local veterans to seek out the opportunity to join a local Post," said District #4 Commander Ronald P. Coderre.

Anyone interested in more information or wishing to join a local Post is urged to contact any member of area Posts. These men and women Legionnaires are active throughout their communities. Coderre is available at rpcassociates@snet.net or at 860-942-7243.

More about Elliott's Station

I've received still more feedback about Elliott's Station in Pomfret so will pass along the interesting tidbits. John Carter, past president of Pomfret's Historical Society, called and clarified that the building that is still standing and is now a residence was the freight station, not the passenger station, which was tiny. This freight station building at one time also served as a store and the local post office. John commented that Mr. Elliott would only let the railroad cross though his land if they put in a station. (Conversation June 27).

This weekend our country celebrates the anniversary of its Independence, tomorrow being the 4th of July. I thought it would be timely to branch out from Killingly and write about two signers of the Declaration of Independence who were from Eastern Connecticut, William Williams and Samuel Huntington.

'A Congregational pastor's son, (William) Williams was born in 1731 at Lebanon, Conn., his lifelong home. After graduating from Harvard in 1751, he began studying for the ministry under his father. Four years later, during the French and Indian War (1754-63), he accompanied a British expedition to Lake George, in northeastern New York, that won a victory. Back home, he became a merchant. In 1771 he married a daughter of Jonathan Trumbull, Royal Governor of Connecticut; they had three children.

"During his long political career, Williams held a myriad of local, provincial, and State offices: town clerk (1752-96) and selectman (1760-85); member, clerk, and speaker of the lower house of the colonial legislature (1755-76); State legislator (1781-84); member of the Governor's council (1784-1803); judge of the Windham County court (1776-1805); and probate judge for the Windham district (1775-1809). He also represented Connecticut at various New England meetings, and attended the 1788 convention that ratified the Federal Constitution, of which he approved.

'Upon the outbreak of the Revolution,

Williams threw his weight behind the cause. Besides writing tracts for the press expressing the colonial viewpoint, he prepared Revolutionary state papers for Governor Trumbull. Williams also raised money for and personally contributed to the war effort. Between 1773 and 1776 he held a colonelcy in the Connecticut militia and served on the provincial council of safety. In Congress (1776-78 and 1783-84), he sat on the Board of War and helped frame the Articles of Confederation, though he did not sign them. During the winter of 1780-81, while a French regiment was stationed in Lebanon, he moved out of his home and turned it over to the officers. Williams died at the age of 80 in 1811. His grave is in the Trumbull Cemetery, about a mile northeast of town." (www. nps.gov/parkhistory/online_books/ declaration/bio52.htm)

You may be more familiar with Samuel Huntington, who resided in Norwich. I found many Web sites that included information on him, but chose this one from his homestead since it was a local one (http://huntingtonhomestead.org/about_samuel.html.). The homestead in Scotland, CT is not that far if you would like to visit when we are out of Pandemic mode.

'Samuel Huntington was born on July 16, 1731*, the fourth of ten children of Nathaniel and Mehetabel (Thurston) Huntington. In the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, the Huntingtons were a large and prominent family in this region. Samuel's great-grandfather Simon was among the original settlers of Norwich in 1660, his grandfather Joseph was one of the founders of Windham and his father Nathaniel helped to establish the Scotland area as a separate parish of Windham. Nathaniel was a prosperous and influential farmer who owned a 180-acre farm bordering Merrick's Brook in Scotland Parish.

It was two stories

"Nathaniel Huntington sent three sons to Yale where they trained for careers in the ministry, but Samuel was not one of them. On his own, the young man pursued the study of law in the library of Reverend Ebenezer Devotion, and under the instruction of several lawyers. In 1754 Samuel received permission to practice law in the Connecticut colony. In 1760, he moved to the river port town of Norwich where greater opportunities existed for a young and ambitious attorney. It was here that he launched his illustrious political career.

From election as a Representative from Norwich to the Connecticut General Assembly in 1764, Samuel rose to King's Attorney for Connecticut and Judge and Chief Justice of the Connecticut Superior Court. Because of his patriot sympathies he was appointed a member of Governor Trumbull's Council of Safety and a delegate to the Continental Congress, where in 1776 he signed the Declaration of Independence. He represented Connecticut in the Continental Congress until 1784, serving as President from 1779 through 1781. Those were some of the most difficult years in the War for Independence. Through quiet diplomacy and encouragement, Samuel was successful in encouraging the states to meet their quotas of men and provisions. It was during his term as President that the Congress ratified the Articles of Confederation and adopted the name 'United States.' In 1786, Samuel was elected Governor of Connecticut, an office he held until his death in 1796. He presided over the adoption of the Federal Constitution in 1788 and the decision to erect a new state house in Hartford, designed by the highly regarded Boston architect Charles Bulfinch".

Samuel Huntington died Jan. 5, 1796 and was buried in the Old Norwichtown Cemetery, Norwich, Connecticut. (www.findagrave.com). *The date of his birth varies on various sites depending on whether they used the old calendar or our current one.

John Hart, a signer of the Declaration of Independence from Hopewell, New Jersey, was also born in Eastern Connecticut, in Stonington, and moved with his family to New Jersey as a child. His farm and the fulling and grist mills that he owned were severely damaged by the British during the Revolution. He died in 1779, aged 68 and was buried in Hopewell. New Jersev (Malone, Dumas. "The Story of the Declaration of Independence," p. 147). I know of John Hart from my sister Ann Markunas Fitts who named my Godson Robert Hart Fitts after this signer.

Safely manage insect pests in your gardens

You plant and tend your garden hoping to enjoy a bountiful harvest and beautiful blooms. Despite proper planning and planting, insects can move in and wreak havoc on your garden. The good news is, you can manage problem pests without harming the pollinators that are so important to your garden. Start by reviewing the care your plants need to thrive. Make sure you are watering thoroughly and only when needed. Consider mulching the soil with shredded leaves, evergreen needles or other organic material to conserve moisture, moderate soil temperature, suppress weeds and improve the soil as they decompose. Only fertilize if needed. Over fertilization, especially with high nitrogen and fast release products, can stimulate lush, succulent growth that is more susceptible to insect damage. Let your plants, not the fertilizer label, be your guide. Pale plants and those not performing as expected may need a nutrient boost. Consider a low nitrogen, slow release fertilizer that won't stimulate lush, succulent growth or damage the plants when the weather is hot and dry.

Horticultural oils have been used for many years because they are low risk and effective against a variety of pests.

Horticulture oils kill insects by blocking the air holes through which they breathe. This makes them effective against all stages of the insect's development from egg through adult.

You will find valuable information on the label, including application rates and directions to help you attain the best results.

You may also find some added benefits when reviewing the label. Horticulture oils can help in managing powdery mildew on plants like beebalm, phlox, peonies and cucumbers. Some can be applied when plants are dormant to smother and kill overwintering mites and aphids as well as egg masses of pests like the gypsy moth.

she had received a deeper level of training earlier in her childhood dance studio. These thoughts inspired her to open The Complex Performing and Creative Arts Centre where children in her community could receive exceptional training while simultaneously excelling in personal growth.

Unlike other competitive recital dance schools, The Complex focuses on creating ambassadors of the arts who deeply understand their craft and enjoy what they do—whether its dance, theatre, music, or visual arts. The Complex is run by several dedicated and experienced artists, many of whom hold master's degrees and are high school teachers or college professors. Each one values education and teaches with care and integrity.

"Our mission is to give our learners a comprehensive experience in technique, creative development, and self-discovery," said Johnson. "We encourage our students to push past their comfort zones and develop work that makes change."

Last year, their student dance company created a fulllength work in response to the school shooting epidemic in the country and performed it at orders and the support of others. "Thanks to the support of our customers and businesses like the Broken Crust Pizzeria, our online sales kept us going," she said.

Customers can shop in-store or place orders by phone, email, or on their website at sadiesweetshop.com. They also offer free local delivery and curbside pickup. Perez is hoping to begin offering in-store parties again during phase 3 of Connecticut's reopening.

Sadie's Sweet Shop is the epitome of a child's dreamland with bright pink walls and a

The Loos Center for area high school students as well as at Providence Water Fire's Fringe Festival. This is just one example of the exceptional events The Complex has been a part of.

Like many other businesses in the community, The Complex was negatively affected by the coronavirus. On March 12, the complex was two hours away from their final dress rehearsal for their winter musical "School of Rock" which they were to perform in collaboration with The Bradley Playhouse. They had been working tirelessly for months. The rights were paid, and the advertising was done. As they were preparing to open the show, they received word that Broadway had closed and Disney had closed. After a hard decision, they decided to follow suit and moved the production to March 2021. Both The Complex and The Bradley Playhouse suffered from the sudden cancellation.

"It was the scariest time I have ever experienced," said Johnson.

Two weeks later, all classes were running via room and Google classroom. Despite the challenging circumstances, The Complex was committed to not turning away any family that had lost jobs or couldn't afford tuition. The loss of performances and tuition lead to a 60 percent checkered floor. Colorful treats line the walls in glass jars or plastic. Starry-eyed children or adults with a sweet tooth will be impressed by the wide selection of candies and other treats.

Working in a candy store is different from what children might imagine. It takes times and effort to stay on top of orders and maintain quality—but there is still some magic in it. People smiling when they enter the shop, children laughing at the birthday parties they cater, or customers saying a kind word is enough magic to make Perez glad she pursued her dream.

"We will keep fighting to stay open for the next 15 years, but it has not been easy!" said Johnson.

They have set up a tuition relief fund to help offset the massive amount of tuition loss.

Currently, Johnson is planning to reopen for a summer season on July 7, operating inside their building at about 20 percent capacity. They have designed classes to ensure minimal students are in the building at a time to allow for movement freedom and physical distancing. Students also have the option to study virtually this summer for their four-week classes. The Complex will also be teaching dance, acting, and music classes for ages four and up this summer, and private music lessons will still be held virtually through August. Their annual Summer Arts Intensive, a week-long arts camp for students aged 12-20, is still being offered.

The Complex is determined to continue to deliver a high level of arts education despite its current challenges. Nichola Johnson is thankful for the generosity of others and is looking forward to great things in the future. He encouraged the community to keep faith and to remember the many gifts and blessings God bestowed upon the community through the faithful service of St. Joseph School.

After Choquette delivered the mass, Sizemore honored several teachers, friends, parents, and alumni who have contributed to the school throughout the years through their support and commitment. He awarded several outstanding members of the school with St. Joseph School Awards and newly created Lifetime Achievement Awards meant to recognize members who poured their lives into the school.

To end the ceremony, attendants read together the school's mission statement: "The mission of St. Joseph school is to create a strong foundation of Catholic faith in a caring, respectful, and nurturing environment. We encourage academic success, instill discipline, and infuse lifetime learning skills in each student."

The doors of the school have closed, but the influence St. Joseph School has had on Connecticut won't be easily forgotten. Their legacy will live on in the hearts and attitudes of its teachers, faculty, and alumni for years to come.

Woodstock Academy declines ESSER CARES funds

WOODSTOCK -The Woodstock Academy is eligible to receive Elementary and Secondary School Emergency Relief (ESSER) Fund Grants as a part of the Education Stabilization Fund under the CARES Act. The Woodstock Academy has, however, chosen to decline the full amount of $77,594 that would have been allocated through the Town of Woodstock, therefore allowing Woodstock Public Schools complete access to the full ESSER Fund Grant.

Christopher Sandford, The Woodstock Academy's head of school, noted, "This is just one way we can support one of our community partners at Woodstock Public Schools as they navigate many of the same obstacles we have faced with educating our students in challenging times."

Viktor Toth, Superintendent of Woodstock Public Schools, shared, "This will have a tremendous impact in preparation for the year ahead. Specifically as we purchase 900 new iPads."

Toth added, "We value the partnership between Woodstock Public Schools and The Woodstock Academy and this is a prime example of we can work towards the best interest of the students.

Some fun facts about the Fourth

One of our favorite holidays to write about is Independence Day. We all know the stories of our Founding Fathers -– John Adams, Sam Adams, George Washington, Paul Revere, James Madison, Benjamin Franklin and Alexander Hamilton, to name a few. However, the history is endless. We thought we would shine a light on aspects surrounding Independence Day that aren't commonly known.

The famous painting that depicts the signing of the Declaration of Independence isn't exactly an accurate portrayal. All of the delegates were never together at the same time in Philadelphia. The final signing took place roughly a month later on Aug. 2. The Declaration was formally dated and adopted by Congress on July 4; however, Congress voted for independence on July 2.

Celebrating their new independence, soldiers along with civilians tore down a statue of King George III and melted it into bullets. In Georgia, people burnt the King in effigy and even held a faux funeral service. In Philadelphia, the King's coat of arms was burned in a bonfire. Massachusetts was the first state to recognize July 4th as a holiday in 1781.

In 1777, fireworks could be seen in the sky and the ringing of bells rang through the night in Philadelphia. Ships were decorated and lined the coast and streamers could be seen flying in celebration everywhere. The oldest annual parade takes place in Bristol, Rhode Island. 2020 will be the city's 235th consecutive celebration since its start in 1785.

In New England, dining on salmon became tradition. The story behind the popular cuisine, is due to the influx of salmon that summer. Along with the salmon, people had peas and turtle soup.

One common fact, is that Thomas Jefferson and John Adams both died on July 4, 1826. James Monroe also died on the fourth of July in 1831. President

Opinion and commentary from the Quiet Corner

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

What's offending you today?

To the Editor:

I still believe that whatever happened in the past — whether it be good or bad, right or wrong — is history, and nothing is ever going to change that. So, what's going to offend you today?

Having said all that, I'd like to comment on the tearing down of statues and the defacing of monuments, churches and other public property. This truly angers me but you don't see me starting a riot, blocking traffic, or breaking windows because of it. I'd even bet that some of my fellow letter writers feel the same way. The cowardly, mask-wearing, cretins who are doing this damage are not expressing freedom of speech - or the freedom of anything else - what they are doing is malicious destruction and as far as I know it's a crime! I'd like to say to Donna Dufrense that these are the people who are "flagrantly incit-ing violence." When you watch who is actually doing this, it appears that the majority of them are younger people, and what does this say about their parents? I'd like to know if any of them are even registered to vote, have jobs or are still living in their parents' basements? Protest all you want, but I think that this vandalism and destruction should be encountered by force and anybody who does this should be punished for their actions. And what does this say for our spineless politicians, governors and the city officials who are letting this happen? I'd say that punks running amok causing damage is truly a national crisis, but then again, whose job is it to run the country and to govern their states? (Hint: it's not Donald Trump.) I will, however, give credit to the officials in California who declared a state of emergency for parts of Los Angeles County when they imposed a curfew and had the National Guard on standby and ready to deal with this unrest. For a bunch of liberals, I'd say that was a good and much needed move. An even better move, in my opinion, was when a group of armed Texans defended the Alamo from intended,

Little white lies

To the Editor:

It's true that America has a sordid past in its dance with racism which is carefully selected in the stories we tell. It's no wonder that so many of us in white America are oblivious to the everyday systemic and overt racism that African Americans and black and brown people wade through most of their lives.

Americans tend to not know so much about history ecause let's destructive hoodlums.

Does it really surprise anybody that now our finger-pointing Congress can't agree on police reform? We need true leadership in this country, you say? I agree, but we need it at all levels of government, and if you're referring to Pelosi, Schumer and her mindless, puppet ilk who wore clothing linked to the slave trade as "true leaders," you definitely need to have your heads examined. (Now there's a photo-op that backfired.) In a recent speech, the dictator queen of the Democratic Party referred to George Floyd as "Geroge Kirby" and said that "his name will always be remembered." Her "toady lap dog' Schumer also botched George Floyd's name and referred to him as both "George Kirby' and "Floyd Taylor." Stupid is as stupid does! Pelosi is the poster child for term limits, and needs to be put out to pasture!

Ill never be ashamed to be an American, nor will I ever be ashamed of our President. I am, however, ashamed that we've become a nation of people who feel that they have to now be appeased (to quiet by satisfying) for events that happened well before their grand-parents were even born. So now a statue of Christopher Columbus has been removed from a park in New Haven. This action was greeted with both cheers and jeers, but I feel that these removals only lead to a further national divide and this cannot be blamed on Donald Trump. Maybe the new American statue should be a pacifier on a plinth? Are you offended yet?

Its been questioned as to why people still support Donald Trump; the answer could be as simple as they just don't like the alternative. And if you really think that all the problems facing this country will magically disappear if Mr. Joe Biden becomes President, you're entitled to your opinion, but I certainly wouldn't bet the farm on it happening.

> ED DELUCA NORTH GROSVENORDALE

of a gap the size of the Grand Canyon over slavery which had deeply divided America. Especially in the North. We believed the little white lie that Northerners wanted to end slavery and the South did not with those woodcut images of slave owners, whip in hand etched in our brains. Needless to say, it was much more complicated than that. The economy of the North - the cotton mills, the He gasped for breath every banks, the shipping industry, and our fine few words, but he was not complicit in the institution of slavery. After all, very few business limited to me, but to him, it men from the 1830's up to the Civil War would have tolerated an immediate emancipation as the radical abolitionists called for. Even Prudence Crandall, who opened an academy for African American girls in Canterbury, Conn. in 1832, had two brothers who frowned upon her abolitionist leanings. Hezekiah owned at least two cotton factories and Reuben had his own conservative bend toward gradualism. The argument for gradual change was another little white lie embedded with our complicity which still haunts progressive movements. Northern complicity helped to establish institutional racism from slavery, through the Jim Crow era and up to the present. Yet we continue to read the past and the present through our snow blind lens oblivious to the fact that racism still exists. And why should we care about those Little White Lies? Much of white America believes that racism has the face of a hooded white Southern terrorist wielding their confederate flag, a symbol of terrorism to many African Americans. Because we have been led to believe that racism no longer exists or it's a Southern thing, people think we are making this stuff up, and black and brown communities are over reactive. Yet it eats away at the American psyche. Many white Americans, especially those of us in the middle and more privileged classes go out of our way to ensure others that we are not racist. But even those who are overtly racist will tell you "I haven't got a racist bone in my body," even though their behavior and the things they post in social media tell you otherwise. It is not helpful to have our white brothers and sisters hyper-focusing on convincing each other that they are not racist. What we really need is for everyone to use their voice and privilege to stop systemic racism now. And while taking that most frightful leap of faith, we (meaning the white community) need to continue on an introspective journey in which we examine how racism has impacted our own lives, how we have benefited by it, and how we have been hurt by the institutions that perpetuate a segregated society. This is what it means to be an anti-racist, as opposed to a non-racist. It's a difficult journey. There may be anger. There may be tears and guilt. But guilt will Turn To DUFRESNE page A9

Lessons from the Fourth

For decades, we have celebrated the Fourth of July with the same friends at a lovely seaside town in Maine. There was a lively parade, with politically inspired floats and tourist jokes, lots of children scampering around and excellent food. Not this year. We will toast Independence Day in our own backyard. It is the ritual that matters, and the need we have right now to consider how best to celebrate the birthday of our country. I'm looking backward to think about the lessons of the holiday.

The older I get, the more I remember the people I knew when I was a child. My childhood was rich in characters. My parents were older, and my beloved two brothers were 15 and 13 when I was born. I essentially had four parents, who took me everywhere and regaled me with stories about the people we met. I suppose I should have been lonely, but the combination of my family's affection and my insatiable appetite for reading kept me from feeling on my own. An assortment of dogs, cats, rabbits, and an old Welsh pony added to the stories that filled my life.

An old man worked in our barn sharpening saws and repairing things. He had served in WWI and been exposed to mustard gas. He talked out loud to himself all day long. Perhaps he was Mostly, he quoted lonely. the Bible, I assume as a way to explain what happened in his life and because it was his frame of reference.

Calvin Coolidge was born July 4, 1872.

Left out of mainstream history was the story of Crispus Attucks, the first to die in the patriot cause. Attucks was a black/native American patriot who was shot, and the first to fall during the 1770 Boston Massacre. Attucks was a runaway slave who was a rope maker and sailor. History says he was shot by two musket balls to the chest. In 1778, it became legal in Rhode Island for free and enslaved blacks to serve the cause. with freedom as part of their payment.

Educated by her owners, Phillis Wheatley was a well known poet during those times. Wheatley was kidnapped in West Africa and brought to America. At the age of 20, in 1773, she became the first African American and third female to publish a book of poetry. She eventually became free. She also advocated for independence, writing in support for George Washington's Revolutionary War in her poem, "To His Excellency, General Washington." Washington, impressed by her talent invited her to a meeting.

In 1958, when Alaska and Hawaii were on deck to become states, a history teacher assigned his class to design a flag, depicting the two new states. Sixteen-year-old Robert Heft, received a B- on the project. Unhappy with the mark, Heft sent the flag to Dwight D. Eisenhower. After the flag was chosen, Heft had his grade changed to an 'A.'

Another fun fact is that Thomas Jefferson wrote the Declaration on what was referred to as a laptop. A writing desk that could fit over a person's lap.

In 1778, Washington ordered a double ration of rum for soldiers to celebrate with

In 1776, there were roughly two and a half million people living in America. The current population is now 325.7 million.

Wearing an American flag, whether it be on a tee-shirt, headband, towel or shorts is in violation of the Flag Code. The code says that you are in violation if you sell or display any "article of merchandise, upon which shall have been printed, painted, attached, or otherwise placed a representation of [the flag... in order to] advertise, call attention to, decorate, mark, or distinguish the article or substance on which so placed." The code, however, has long since been deemed unenforceable due to the logistics involved. Good news indeed for all of us who love to let our patriotism shine at this time of year.

ry was always taught from the perspective of HIS STORY, those white, waspish males whose ancestors fought in the Revolutionary War and became our heroes. We didn't know that most of them owned slaves, and we would not have cared because slavery had no relevance in our lily white lives. If you were female, Native American, the child of immigrants, or a Muslim, your story was never told in the history books until quite recently. Like many of the untold stories of the past, racism was so neatly packaged that we grew up believing in the little white lie that it no longer existed. These little white lies, seemingly so benign and meant to protect our innocent minds from the awful truth, had us believing that in America everyone is equal and has an equal opportunity to obtain success with a little gumption and pulling up on those boot straps. Those little white lies had us believing that slavery and racism was something of the long ago past and even then it couldn't have been all that bad, right? Movies and books engraved our brains with images of an antebellum South where slavery was a benign system of indentured servants who somehow enjoyed their captivity. Of course, the word "captives" was never mentioned.

Unless you were raised in Texas or Georgia, whose text books glossed over or omitted African American history altogether, you probably learned about slavery and the underground railroad in elementary school. In high school you may have had a social studies class that whizzed through the Jim Crow and the Civil Rights eras. In the '60s and '70s, you may have had a daring lefty teacher who did the Blue Eye/Brown Eye experiment in your class. But most likely the narratives in your textbooks were the Walt Disney version of American history. The fast-food drive-through version lacking the nutrition required to sustain democracy. By omitting the full story and not including the mistakes of the past Americans have been robbed of truth and anesthetized by those Little White Lies.

The Civil War (or the War of Northern Aggression, if you grew up in the South), became white-washed in text books with an emphasis on "States' Rights." In fact, it was the pustule on the sore of division in a fledgling democracy. The war was the symptom held a wealth of experiences.

Our neighbor served in the US Congress. With a hyphenated last name, Seely-Brown, and a patrician demeanor, he hardly seemed like the type to represent a sprawling district with a mix of rural towns and small cities based on textile manufacturing, but he served for six terms. He owned a large orchard and drove from Washington, D.C. through the night on Thursdays when the House was in session, to get home by dawn to work with his trees. He preferred hunting with local men to talking politics. He would have said that his life, including wartime service in the Navy, was the fulfillment of his dreams and the promise of our country.

My aunts were proud members of the Daughters of the American Revolution. My mother would have nothing to do with the organization. She felt everyone has ancestors and it was just a matter of luck who they were and what they did. My aunts supported the charitable work the DAR did and argued with my mother over the incident when singer Marion Anderson was not allowed to perform in a DAR concert hall. Ms. Anderson was African-American. My mother died before her sisters, so the debate ended. My aunts and my mother agreed that their right to hold different opinions was central to their existence.

This Independence Day finds our country divided in many ways. We can't agree on much. The people I once knew had strong opinions, too. They expressed their ideas, kept going, laugh occasionally and believed in the fundamental goodness of the country, their relatives and their neighbors. Hope we can do that too.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Let's discuss the real problems in America

To the Editor:

In a recent letter to the Editor, we have more name calling by another tunnel vision perspective of President Trump's supporters as "white supremist base" by donna Dufrense.

I and others refer to ourselves as people who love America and don't want to see a future of the Democratic Party taking away more of our liberties and trying to destroy our Constitution constantly. The real problem with this Presidency is, Mr. Trump is not a career politician and won't give in to that group, both sides, who have made themselves millionaires over the years at our expense and many do not represent the average citizen. Even here in Connecticut, your own Chris Murphy has no residency in our state, but that's OK with the Left.

We don't want a party who call themselves Christians but pass every bill to end pregnancies up to and including after birth and than harvest their organs like something out of a sci-fi horror movie and Nazi Germany. Dufrense continues with name calling, "rabid" and "zombie like" supporters. She further states that President Trump's Tweets are a "secret Code for police giving a green light to white supremacists and an over-militarized police force to carry out the systemic oppression and murders of African Americans, Hispanics and immigrants.

Only the Left can make this up, and this is the norm for them. They are filled with hatred and violence left over from the defeat of Hillary Clinton, the most corrupt politician and traitor and now they want to put in another corrupt Joe Biden. Is this the best they can come up with? Joe Biden and his family and friends who have profited many times over because of his position under Obama? The Obamas created this hostility towards the police, and where it is today? Yes, the senseless murder of George Floyd by a policeman that should have been off the force a long time ago, so Dufrense calls this "systematic murders?"

Dufrense also speaks of Colin Kaepernick taking a knee during the during the National Anthem to "call attention to police brutality." His exact words were, "I am not going to stand up to show pride in a flag for a country that oppresses black people and people of color," so Dufrense adds fuel to the fire by adding "police brutality." See, this is the way of the Left to continue to create hatred and dissension among non-President Trump supporters and keep it going.

Let's give some real stats. Latest FBI report murders of blacks in the US: Whites killed by Blacks, 11.30 percent; Blacks killed by Whites, 0.93 percent; Whites killed by Whites, 10.84 percent; Blacks killed by Blacks; 57.14 percent, a staggering number. The real problem is so evident. More than 72 percent of children in the African-American community are born out of wedlock and raised by a single parent for relative. There is no family structure, little true education and lack of a decent raising of the child. So, where do they wind up? I think the answer is evident. BLM is focused in the wrong direction, and we will never see this problem go away or the success of the majority of black youth and it was very evident with the makeup of the looters and those who set fires, etc. You don't hear this on any news outlet; you don't have the Left condemning this and you don't have sport figures condemning this.

Redirecting money to inner city programs on drugs, violence, and sex education has very little effect on black youths. Peer pressure is the guiding force. What can anyone do is the million dollar answer. So next time anyone who wants to dump on our President Trump, try writing about the real problems in America, and for those who are ashamed to live in America, no one is prevention you from leaving!

We need a Congress with courage

To the Editor:

It must be exhausting working in the Trump White House. Being in "Damage Control Mode" 24/7 because of Trump's neverending stupid statements and actions has to take its toll. That (of course) explains the record number of Press Secretaries and all the resignations and firing of cabinet members. Probably the most dysfunctional administration in our nation's history. Trump's ship seems to be taking on water and slowly starting to sink. Public sentiment is turning against him because of his incompetent handling of --- everything, and even some Republican members of congress are slowly starting to distance themselves from him because of their own job security anxiety. As we get closer to November, the rats will start jumping off the sinking ship. Trump still has his "Base," of course. In a recent letter, one local supporter suggested that God himself chose Donald Trump to lead our nation. God chose Trump — wow! No matter what your political or religious beliefs are, it's impossible to not see the irony in that. The writers at SNL would be hard pressed to come up with a more ridiculous premise.

Other local supporters seem more realistic. In his June 19 letter, Mr. Ed DeLuca seems to agree with my opinion that Congress (Republicans and Democrats) is the bigger problem. Mr. Deluca described Congress as "Gutless, Incompetent, Idiots" --- Amen, Ed! If Congress functioned as the bi-partisan body it was created to be, a failing or corrupt president would be a moot point. We need a Congress that has the courage to make unpopular decisions

Not all Christians align with Trump

To the Editor:

What an embarrassing letter identifying Trump as God's new Chosen One, doing His work. People, please don't assume that most Christians agree with this. Some Evangelical power brokers have praised Trump, but they're following political strategies, not the Gospels.

Trump has routinely and unapologetically violated all Ten Commandments, and vigorously embraced all Seven Deadly Sins. God often uses us sinners for the world's healing, but repentance must come first, a recognition of right and wrong. Trump never admits any error of any kind. He's a proud sinner.

The Divine Will for the world is not about surging stock markets or lots of jobs that pay so little you have to work three of them to pay the rent. It surely isn't about a man who, even in the midst of this health crisis works relentlessly to withdraw the one program that tries to include all Americans in our health care. Jesus was a healer, not an investor.

not save the world. We cannot afford to become anesthetized and fall back into inaction. What's most important is that we do not expect people in the black and brown community to solve our problems for us or guide us on our journey. They have enough on their plate.

While doing the personal work, it's important to stop making excuses for racist behavior and systemic racism. First of all, acknowledge that racism is real and though we may hate to admit it, we are culpable for our blindness, silence and complacency. It's not those other white people who are at fault the few bad apple cops - those white supremacists. It's all of us. If you don't see color, you are part of the problem; if you don't have a racist bone in your body, you are part of the problem. If you bristle at the idea of white privilegebecause you were raised poor and think you understand, you are part of the problem.

There are many good and decent human beings who think of themselves as non-racists and who would never God's will surely doesn't include a man who got to power by promising to protect voters from folks of different countries, religions, skin color and their children. Jesus is so much simpler than the Right's agenda for Him.

'What must I do to do God's will?" asked the lawyer.

'What does the Law say?" Asked The Truth, right back at him,

"Love God and my neighbor as myself...but who is my neighbor?

Jesus told him the Good Samaritan story (Luke 10) - kindness to strangers, yes, but the most important part is Jesus' choice of a Samaritan - an alien from a hated, feared group with a different religion, but a man who showed tender mercy to a victim from another tribe and country.

'That is the whole of The Law. Go and do likewise, Mr. Trump.'

Don't hold your breath, folks.

G. LESLIE SWEETNAM WOODSTOCK

dream of participating in some of the overt racist behavior we are witness-ing on social media. The most hostile reactions to the protests against police brutality have been spun by racist elements of the Trump administration in order to woo their base away from the very difficult conversation we as a country need to have about race. The recent protests, the anger and the outrage against 400 years of oppression, and decades of not being heard as we knelt, prayed, sang, chanted and wrote letters seems to have reached a tipping point. We - meaning all the patriotic Americans, black, brown, white, rich, poor in the rainbow of diversity which represents the ideals of America, have had enough of little white lies. We can no longer be complacent about racism and the other little white lie about gradual change. Like those feisty abolitionists in the 19thcentury we are demanding structural change. It will be messy. There will be resistance. But this is America's challenge as we strive to live up to what the rest of the world dreams and hopes we really are.

Latest antiques, collectibles, and auction news

It has been nearly three months since our last update on antiques, collectibles, and auction news. Much has occurred since my last report, beginning with some valuable antique eyeglasses that were saved from destruction.

The rare pair of eyeglasses were saved by a knowledgeable employee of a second-hand store WAYNE TUISKULA before they were buried in a New Zealand landfill. They were recently sold in an online auction according to UPI. The Martin's Margins style glasses were designed by optician Benjamin Martin in 1756. According to UPI, "the unusual thick-framed look of the glasses results from Martin's belief that exposure to sunlight would cause damage to eyeglass lenses." The glasses sold for $5,282.

A 1933 "The Invisible Man" movie poster went on the auction block in March according to the Antique Trade Gazette. The one sheet "Invisible Man" poster (two feet, three inches by three feet, five inches) starred Claude Rains in the title role as a scientist. The film was based on a novel by H.G. Wells. This "Type B" version of the movie poster sold for $152,000.

Six 1933 Goudey Babe Ruth cards alone are expected to sell for $1 million.

A 1959 Martin D-18E guitar that had been modified to accommodate the left-handed Kurt Cobain recently set an auction record according to the Rolling Stone magazine. Cobain played the guitar in Nirvana's iconic 1993 MTV Unplugged performance. It sold for slightly over $6 million. The winning bidder was identified as Peter Freedman. Freedman plans to include the guitar in worldwide exhibitions that he is planning to benefit the arts. The Rolling Stone reported "the previous record was $3.95 million for a Black Stratocaster owned by Pink Floyd's David Gilmour.³

Food and Wine magazine reported that an over 250 year old bottle of cognac recently set an auction record. The 1762 bottle of Gautier Cognac was said to be the oldest bottle ever sold at auction. There are believed to be only 3 bottles of this vintage that still exist. The bottle with its original label sold for a little over $144,000. There was no information on whether the winning bidder planned to sample any.

Mid-year is a good time to fine-tune your finances

Last month, we mainly discussed the benefits and differences of long-term and short-term planning, strategies, and goals. As we transition into July, we want to bring awareness to the idea of checking your finances at the midyear. Taking a close look at your finances may give you the foundation you need to begin moving forward. Mid-year is an ideal time to do so because the planning opportunities are potentially greater than if you waited until the end of the year.

Let's face it, the last six months have been a roller coaster. But it's finally time to look at those investment statements, assess the damage, and implement a strategy to move forward.

Renew Your Resolutions

It is important to review resolutions and goals built at the New Year. Some may be more personal - maybe getting to the gym, making time for yourself to focus on a hobby, or moving forward in your career - but others are often focused on our finances – creating and sticking to a budget, saving for retirement, or making a large purchase like a home or car. Mid-year is a good time to look back and see if you've made any progress towards those goals.

Consider your retirement goals: has a reduction of income or contributions to your 401(k) affected your goals? How did market performance impact your retirement fund? The COVID-19 pandemic seemingly came out of nowhere, and none of us were prepared for the amount of devastation it would cause - particularly to retirement accounts. This could potentially affect your time horizon for when you aimed to retire. Being 55 with the goal of retiring in 10 years is a lot different than being 25 and hoping to retire in 40 years. The more time you have before you retire, the better chance you have at making up for losses.

If you're still saving for retirement, look for ways to increase retirement plan contributions. For example, if you receive a pay increase this year, you could contribute a higher percentage of your salary to your employer-sponsored retirement plan, such as a 401(k), 403(b), or 457(b) plan. If you're age 50 or older, consider making catch-up contributions to your employer plan. For 2020, the contribution limit is $19,500, or $26,000 if you're eligible to make catch-up contributions. If you are close to retirement or already retired, take another look at your retirement income needs and whether your current investment and distribution strategy will provide enough income.

It is also important to review your investment goals, especially considering the toll COVID has taken on the markets. You may reconsider your risk tolerance based on the recent market volatility and overall performance of your investments. Just remember you only need to review your investments a few times a year. Monitoring doesn't always mean daily or weekly check-ins.

Finally, review your savings goals and check to make sure you are still on track with your budget. How has COVID affected your savings goals? If you had to reduce your savings goals, are you sticking to your new goals? Are you putting discretionary dollars toward retirement? These are important considerations when trying to achieve your financial life goals.

While it may be difficult to look at your finances during turbulent times, review financial statements and account balances to determine whether you need to make any changes to keep your financial plan on track. Also, talk with your financial advisor to see if your retirement savings, investments, or budget need any adjustments to keep you on track to meet your goals!

Take Another Look at Your Taxes

Completing a mid-FINANCIAL year estimate of your tax liability may reveal planning opportunities. You can use last year's tax return as a basis, then factor in any anticipated adjustments to your income and deductions for this year.

Check your withholding, especially if you owed taxes or received a large refund. Doing that now, rather than waiting until the end of the year, may help you avoid a big tax bill or having too much of your money tied up with Uncle Sam.

You can check your withholding by using the IRS Tax Withholding Estimator at irs.gov. If necessary, adjust the amount of federal or state income tax withheld from your paycheck by filing a new Form W-4 with your employer.

Also, there are some COVID-related tax implications you may want to consider for the 2020 tax year. If you took a distribution from your IRA because of an unexpected impact of COVID, consider how you will pay that back while maximizing tax efficiency. The IRS announced anyone who already took a required minimum distribution (RMD) in 2020 from certain retirement accounts now has the opportunity to roll those funds back into a retirement account following the CARES Act RMD waiver for 2020. The 60-day rollover period for any RMDs already taken this year has been extended to Aug. 31 to give taxpayers time to take advantage of this opportunity.

Consider the tax implications of a PPP loan and unemployment benefits. Unemployment benefits are considered taxable income. If you received unemployment benefits in 2020, did you have funds withheld or will you need to prepare to pay those taxes in April 2021?

For more information related to tax implications and the CARES Act, check out the CARES Act Q&A on our Web site, www.whzwealth.com/covid19-resources, and talk with your financial advisor and accountant! They can help you determine the best strategy and plan for preparing your 2020 taxes.

Bouncing Back

We have all had lots of changes occur in the last 3 months - from loss of income, and unemployment, to investment losses and the effects of overnight policy changes. Take some time to sit down and comb through your finances and consider making an appointment with your financial advisor and accountant. These are important planning aspects to consider every year, especially this year due to the pandemic.

Don't forget, mid-year check-ins extend beyond finances. Are you still working toward achieving other goals? Even if you didn't, there's always another chance! But remember, don't put off until tomorrow what you can achieve today.

Ensure you're properly insured

There's certainly been plenty of volatility and uncertainty the past few months, but one aspect of your financial picture has probably remained stable: your need for insurance. And since National Insurance Awareness Day is observed on June 28, now is a good time to review your overall insurance coverage to determine if you and your loved ones are well-protected. You might be surprised at the lack of protection among your fellow citizens. Less than 60 percent of Americans have life insurance, and just about half of those with insurance are underinsured, according to LIMRA, a research organization.

Of course, you might think the reason so many people don't have insurance is because they don't need it. But just about every age group can benefit from life insurance.

If you have a house and a family ... Your insurance needs are obvious: If something happened to you, could your mortgage payments still be met? How about your car payments? Doctor's bills? College for your children? Even if you have a spouse or partner who earns a decent income, your family could still have big trouble paying its bills if you weren't around.

If you're young and single with no family responsibilities . If you're in this group, why entire debt. And just because you don't have family responsibilities now, it doesn't mean you never will. If you have a family history of serious health issues, which may eventually affect you, you could have trouble getting life insurance later, or at least getting it without paying a lot. Now, when you're young and healthy, the coverage is available and may be more affordable.

Your children are grown and you're retired ... If you retire with debt or have a spouse dependent on vou, keeping vour life insurance is a good idea, especially if you haven't paid off your mortgage. Plus, life insurance can be used in various your needs. And, perhaps just as important, if you leave your job, voluntarily or not, you'll likely lose this coverage. If you purchase a private policy, what's the right amount? You might have heard you need a death benefit that's worth seven or eight times your annual salary, but that's just a rough estimate. To determine the appropriate level of coverage, you'll need to consider a variety of factors: your age, income, marital status, number of children, and so on.

Still, even after you've got the right amount in place, it doesn't mean it's set in stone. You should review your coverage regularly, and especially when you change jobs, get married or remarried, have children or experience any other major life event. Life insurance should be a key part of your overall financial strategy, along with your

would you need life insurance? For one thing, perhaps you owe money together with someone else – you might, for example, be a joint debtor on a mortgage. If you passed away, your co-debtor would be responsible for the ways in your estate plans.

Even if you recognize the need for life insurance, though, you may be uncertain about how much you require. Your employer may offer insurance, but it might not be sufficient for

Our nation afraid ...

MOORE

Most of what we fear in life never becomes true. As children we were afraid of the shadows in our bedroom and that the Boogeyman would come and take us away. As adults, most of our fears switch to lack of security. Fear that our home would be broken into, our family will be harmed, or fear of lack of financial security. Regardless of what frightens us, most of us will admit we're living with some form of fear and/or anxiety.

Fear of sickness from Covid-19, fear of job loss or economic collapse, fear of racist cops, fear of rioters, looters on the streets that are openly committing harm to property or others. If you believe cable news, there is much to be afraid of ... and we are.

Gun dealers across the country are selling their shelves empty. Citizens are stocking up on toiletries and food supplies, buying guns at a record pace and loading up on ammunition. What's driving these actions?

Fear.

Fear is a healthy sensation, as it can keep some of us from what I'll call the "Oh yeah? Hold my beer" syndrome. Fear kept our early ancestors from being eaten by sabre-tooth tigers. I can go on, but you get the picture. However, fear can also make you react irrationally at times where rational thinking is needed. Fear can negatively impact your health and ruin your life.

I grew up in an anti-gun family. My dad didn't like guns nor want one in the house. For most of my life, I never wanted a gun, but 25 years ago we moved out onto 40 acres and coyotes where everywhere. I still didn't buy a gun as I felt the coyotes had just as much of a right to be here as I did. But as our two beloved dogs began to age, the coyotes would try to lure them away from the house and we had our clash with nature ... so I bought a shotgun. Mostly for the noise, I thought I'd scare they coyotes off and did.

Now, as I age, I began worrying about being and out away from civilization and bought my first hand gun. A Smith & Wesson nightstand next to me as I sleep. Rational? I think so. POSITIVELY But at what risk? SPEAKING

Last night, the dreaded intrusion happened. I was asleep and heard a commotion on our side deck. Our door was open and only the screen separated us from the apparent intruder that began pushing on the screen. I rolled out of bed, grabbed my handgun, crawled to the screen and there he was. The biggest Opossum I'd ever seen. He growled at me, then slowly walked away, never knowing that all three of us, me, Smith & Wesson, were poised to send him to Opossum heaven. He was just a friendly neighbor out for a walk. I recognize that I moved into his neighborhood. He isn't trespassing in mine. I also realize fear almost caused me to pull the trigger. It was a wake-up call for me. Relax.

I think in normal times, I'd have sleepily gotten out of bed, walked to the door, looked, smiled, said a friendly word to a curious visitor and climbed back into bed ... but something has changed.

Before we start shooting each other ... Lets' take a breath. Relax. Step away from our fear and understand what's driving our anxiety.

The news is frightening. A bad cop murdered a relatively harmless suspect on television. Statues being torn down, stores looted and burned. Innocent civilians are being killed. It's all real. Television pundits stoking the fires and encouraging lawlessness are also real, while municipalities are voting to defund or disband local law enforcement.

On CNN an ignorant pundit, while encouraging rioters and looters shouted, "Show me where it says public protest should be peaceful!" Well ... Look no further than the First Amendment.

"... the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

I think peaceably is a key word here. I'm mailing Chris Cuomo at CNN a copy of our Constitution, with the First Amendment tagged to make it easy for him to find without having to read too much. I highlighted the word "peaceably" in hopes he might understand.

And it's not just CNN. Fox photo shopped images allegedly depicting "CHAZ/CHOP" to escalate fear. MSNBC is full of fearmongering. There is not much real news on cable, especially 357 magnum now sits on my after 8 p.m. EST. Only ideological agendas designed to frighten us.

My longtime friend, Tim Duggan's says, "This is all driven by a 24-hour news cycle, that is driven by ratings, which networks found can be driven by fear." He's right. Fear is an effective ratings tool.

There is a drive, which I agree with, to license police officers. Maybe there should be the same for political pundits and politicians. I get the feeling lately that most have little knowledge of civics or American history. If a pundit, while on the air, is encouraging others to commit crimes, shouldn't he or she be charged with a crime? I think it's largely our political pundits on cable news driving much of the fear and anxiety on both sides.

I'm not talking about prohibiting free speech. I am recognizing that screaming "fire" in a crowded theater where there is no fire is prohibited. Promoting and encouraging others to commit crimes, using your platform on an international cable show is even more dangerous. Why is it not prohibited?

'Common Sense Americans" need to relax and be more discerning about what voices we allow into our heads and hearts. The nation is in turmoil. We have problems that must be addressed but we cannot allow a group of irresponsible talking heads on cable news to drive us over the edge ... and they are working overtime to do so. They are mixing news of the day with "False Evidence Appearing Real (FEAR)" to drive their political agenda. And make no mistake about it. There is little real news available to us on television. It's all sensationalized to drive an ideology. Do you still wonder why we are afraid?

What can we do to relieve this fear and anxiety?

Let's start with recognizing that an Opossum is just an Opossum. Maybe our fear is misdirected. Is it possible that sensationalized media is the true source of our national fear and not each other?

Shut them out. Turn them off. We are smarter and better than this.
