Killingly officials request island be named for fallen soldier

BY JASON BLEAU
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

KILLINGLY – The Killingly Town Council has requested that a small island in a local pond be named in honor of a fallen soldier who served in Operation Iraqi Freedom.

Councilors took up the matter of naming a small island in Killingly Pond on Jan. 12 after a request had come forward to name the island in honor of June Hopkin-McCormack, a former property owner who passed away in 1993. The island is considerably small, at only three tenths of an acre, and is often submerged during rainy season although is often exposed when weather is dryer. The matter of naming the island came from the U.S. Board on Geographical Names who received an application from Daniel Galgano of South Salem, N.Y. The McCormack family still owns property along the pond’s southern shore.

However, when researching the McCormacks with the help of Killingly Town Historical Margaret Weaver, Town Manager Mary Calorio found that naming the island after the family wouldn’t fit the prerequisites set forth in the U.S. Board of Geographical Names’ guidelines, specifically when it comes to honoring someone with a direct or long-term association with the town or who has made a significant contribution to the community.

“There is a property owned on Dam Road that appears to be owned by siblings of the family. I reached out the family numerous times via email and phone and received no response back. We were looking to try and get more information. Unfortunately, with the little information that we did receive on the application it was still really hard to go back in history and find anything. It was almost like finding a needle in a haystack so there wasn’t anything prominent in the Killingly history that tied to this family that we were able to find,” Calorio told the Town Council.

This left the council with four options: to approve the name, deny the name, submit and alternate or allow the Geographical Names Board to make a decision without board input. This opened the door for a new discussion, naming the island after a fallen Killingly veteran.

Town Council Chair Jason Anderson brought up naming the island in honor of Christopher L.

Stuck In the middle of Covid

WOODSTOCK — Being a middle school student in a normal world is hard. Being a middle school student in a Covid world is even harder.

“When I was in middle school, I was always with my friends. We’d get dropped off at the library and study together after school, we’d hang out on the weekends- we were always together,” says Angela Stringer, the School Counselor of Woodstock Middle School. “I would not have survived without the social connection if I were living through this time during middle school.”

For the last 21 years, Stringer has been working with students in grades 5-8 at the Woodstock Middle School.

“I was a teacher for many of those years, but have served as a school counselor for the last seven,” she noted.

Stringer describes her role as multi-faceted, with her main focus covering three domains: social and emotional health, academics, and career and college support. She provides these services to just under 400 students.

“This past October, our school psychologist sadly passed away,” she explained. “We used to work together but when we lost her, I became a one man show. This year there has been an increased need for social and emotional support. The teachers have been instrumental in providing assistance

THOMPSON – A new initiative is coming to Thompson to encourage micro-entrepreneurs to bring their products and ideas to local consumers as part of the “Eleventh Village,” an installation of custom built mini-shops expected to open in Riverside Park this May.

The Thompson Economic Development

Commission officially announced the project in a press release on Jan. 22, but the initiative has been in the works for some time. Construction was commissioned by Thompson craftsman Dave Eddy of Orchard products and students from the UConn School of Engineering Class of 2020 assisting with drafting the layout and designing the shops. Plainfield proposes new Summer Academy

BY LINDSAY M. JOSLYN
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

PLAINFIELD — Before Covid, the idea of summer school might have sounded like a punishment. But according to Superintendent of Plainfield Public Schools Ken DiPietro, that’s not how it has to be.

“We’re going to make it so inviting that people will hope to join us and that they will be asking for it,” DiPietro said.

Plainfield School District has been operating, like most Connecticut public school districts, between remote and hybrid models of education since March of last year. DiPietro knows they need to be looking ahead to see how they can provide support to their approximate 2,000 students.

At the last Board of Education meeting, DiPietro explained they can’t make up for lost time.

“We’re not going to make up 180 days,” he said. “There will be some children who have already missed 40 to 60 days. They may not be prepared to go to the next grade. Not because we don’t want them too but because if we put them into a grade when they’re not ready then we will see children failing in the wrong grade level.”

DiPietro explains that the district hopes to get its students back to full time in-person education possibly by May, but understands that other supports such as enrichment programs need to be reviewed in order to provide the best educational support for the district’s pupils.

The proposed Plainfield summer academy is one way DiPietro hopes the district can do that. “It’s going to be intimate and active and engaging and designed like an academy,” he commented.

DiPietro says the summer academy will provide breakfast and lunch for the students who enroll, and bus transportation will be provided.

“The idea is that the students come three days a week, for four weeks or more,” he said, adding that enrollment will be open, but limited to what they can safely manage with staffing.

“We have an amazing staff, and because this is a summer program, we will probably have a blend of existing teachers willing to give up part of their summer to help the children here as well as some new hires that we will be hiring for the next year,” he said.

Keeping class sizes to 15 students or less, DiPietro wants to incorporate STEM activities and projects that enhance core subjects such as reading, writing and math.

project will see as many as three initial custom-built shops opening this spring.

Initially presented by the UConn students as a “pop-up vendor village,” the goal was to design as many as ten chalets to host local businesses placing the miniature facilities along the roadway within Riverside Park leading to the baseball field adjacent to Riverside Village. An example of one of the chalets made its debut during one of Thompson’s annual Community Day events. Each shop is expected to be modeled after historical structures from each of Thompson’s ten villages including the Thompson Hill Bank, Keegan Mill, Pepin’s Store, Sacred Heart Church, Thompson Speedway and others, thus earning the project the nickname as the “Eleventh Village.”

“During the heyday of the mill era, the neighborhood of North Grosvenordale had a bustling downtown full of local shops and other businesses. Many of these were demolished following catastrophic floods in the 1930s and 1950s and were eventually replaced by residences. Since that time, the lack of storefront properties has been a challenge to revitalization of the downtown,” the Economic Development Commission stated in a press release. “As a way to sidestep these challenges, the EDC has initiated a project to activate Riverside Park, with a small ‘village’ of custom-built miniature shops.”

The shops will be available for rent by local businesses from the months of May through October offering artisans, crafters, agricultural producers and others a new opportunity to connect with potential customers and increase their presence in the community. Opening day for the Eleventh Village is set for May 1 to coincide with the Second Annual Thompson Maker Fair. Vendor applications will be available in February of 2021.

Murphy praises Biden’s efforts to strengthen Buy American laws

BY JASON BLEAU
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Connecticut State Sen. Chris Murphy is praising President Joe Bidens Executive Order geared towards strengthening Buy American provisions by supporting manufacturers, businesses and workers of American-made products. The order designates that the federal government will spend tax dollars on American-made products including investing in products made with American-produced parts.

Murphy’s appreciation of the move shouldn’t be a surprise. The Senator introduced The 21st Century Buy American Act in August of 2020 which itself was geared towards strengthening existing Buy American laws seeking to have the government itself prioritize American-made goods. Senator Murphy has also been the lead sponsor of the American Jobs Matter Act requiring the Department of Defense to measure their impact on domestic employment. Some institutes have predicted the Buy America approach could bring around 100,000 jobs to the United States while others doubt its potential positive impact.

Regardless of the potential impact the act may have, the newly inaugurated President Biden has made Buy America a priority and Senator Murphy sees it as a great step forward.

“As a long-time champion for the Buy American movement with the introduction of the 21st Century Buy American Act, the actions taken by President Biden are a big step in the right direction for American manufacturers,” Murphy stated in a press release on Jan. 25. “During the global COVID-19 pandemic, stimulating local economies and creating well-paying jobs is imperative to strengthening our manufacturing sector against foreign competition. I applaud the president for signing this Executive Order that prioritizes domestic production and will help bring jobs back to Connecticut.”

The specifics of President Biden’s executive order are as follows: providing transparency for Buy American rules a waivers, ensuring strong economic content requirements, mandating supplier scouting to identify domestic suppliers, and creating a new Made in American Office within the Office of Management and Budget.

“It’s going to be very enjoyable with hands-on, fun activities built on strengthening the core subjects for grades K-5, and then looking at middle and high schools as to what they would like to create,” he explained.

DiPietro wants parents to know the summer academy may be recommended by a child’s teacher not necessarily because of any deficits, but because some students may benefit from the accelerated opportunities that the summer academy can provide.

According to DiPietro, the state of Connecticut allows for certain monies to be set aside every year in what is called a Non-lapsing Set Aside Account.

“The voters approved a school budget last year, but because of Covid, we didn’t spend all $36 million, so we put well over $400,000.00 into a set-aside Non-Lapsing account,” he explained. “That means the money stays there until the school uses it.”

DiPietro believes said monies may be able to help cover some of the costs associated with the proposed enrichment opportunities.

“We can address some of the challenges created by Covid to an extent by accessing the set-aside fund,” he said.

First Selectman of Plainfield Kevin Cunningham meets with school leadership once a week, and is excited about the possibility of a summer program.

“Utilizing summer school programming to help students out is a great idea,” Cunningham commented.

Cunningham’s wife works in the Plainfield school district, which allows him to witness first-hand how difficult the remote and hybrid models have been on both teachers, students and parents.

“You can’t get engaged with kids through remote learning and make sure they’re focused when there is unstable internet connectivity,” he said.

He acknowledges attendance is an issue, noting “Since schools went remote, there are approximately 38 students who have not logged in at all.”

Cunningham also knows that if students return to full-time in person school next year after having been out of school for such an extended period, that their test scores could hurt the district’s school ratings. These tallies are published in Connecticut Magazine every year. “Annually, they come out with their scores for each municipality and I look at all those and think, ‘how do I keep awareness of every single category?’” Cunningham said. “I know we are scored and based on those so to get our evaluations up you can’t do that with a lower score for education.”

Still, Cunningham believes Plainfield school district is doing a good job.

“No one could have predicted this, and changes have been rapidly coming in,” he said. “The numbers of Covid infections are coming up, and there are a lot of people testing positive or coming into contact with someone who is and you have to make those adjustments on the fly.”

With the recent addition of several new businesses in town and the proposed sale of two Industrial Park lots, Cunningham is optimistic about where the town of Plainfield is going.

That same enthusiasm can be felt in listening to DiPietro as he explains how his team is looking to the future and investigating ways to strengthen opportunities for the children in their care. They want to ensure that students are where they need to be academically to successfully meet grade level expectations.

DiPietro imagines students might say “Yep, it was a little hard during the Covid year, but somewhere along the way someone kept watching me and making sure they provided me with enrichment, acceleration, and a summer academy program...a smaller class because that’s what I might have needed during that time.” He wants parents to know the district understands and has expectations that won’t end at summer.

“We are creating an array of responses to the children who are coming in because we understand parents are doing everything they can to support us and their children,” DiPietro said. “Our service now is to help them through this year and our service in the future will be to make sure all these children get re-tracked right to where they need to be.”

Scramble the Duck to predict spring weather

EASTFORD—Scramble the Duck, the accurate weather-predicting groundhog alternative, will be making his prediction next week, on Feb. 2, at 7:30 a.m. Due to COVID-19 concerns, his prediction will take place online without any in-person audience. Scramble the Duck is an alternative to groundhog forecasters like Punxsutawney Phil and others. Scramble the Duck, unlike any groundhog, boasts a perfect accuracy rate for every year he has predicted the weather.

The gathering of Scramble’s supporters warns people across the community every year. The cancelation of the in-person event is truly a disappointment to many, but the safety of Scramble’s supporters is his top priority. Scramble encourages everyone to reach out to family and friends to celebrate the event online in some way. Scramble hopes that Duck Day, despite the online format, will still be an encouragement to many.

Scramble the Duck is an alternative to groundhog forecasters like Punxsutawney Phil and others. Scramble looks for his shadow to predict six more weeks of winter or early spring. ISLAND

Hoskins, a Killingly graduate who died at the age of 21 serving in Operation Iraqi Freedom in June of 2005 due to injuries resulting from an improvised explosive device. Councilor Ulla Tiik-Barclay confirmed that she had spoken to the Hoskins family who gave their blessing to the idea. Several other councilors felt the honor would be more fitting for Hoskins.

“I really wish that (the McCormacks) had gotten back to us. It really would have given some better insight. As much as I would like to honor their wish, with no historical information that we can find I think that the better option is to honor a citizen who has given their life to our country in serving,” said Councilor Raymond Wood.

Councilor Tammy Wakefield concurred.

“Chris was a native son. He served and he put his life on the line so that we could have freedoms and be sitting here discussing naming an island that is almost as insignificant as a freckle on somebody’s nose. I know the Hoskins family will appreciate that honor. I know we have a stone for him in Davis Park, but it’s be even nicer to have a permanent land feature that has his name,” said Wakefield.

The Town Council voted unanimously to request that the U.S. Board on Geographical Names consider naming the island after Hoskins although they did not put forth a specific name for the landmass.

for our students wherever they could and together we have tried to help all of our students.”

Woodstock Middle School restarted a hybrid model on January 8th after having been remote since Thanksgiving. Stringer said a small group of students do very well in the remote model.

“Some kids love it and are living their best life,” she explains. “These students love being remote because when you don’t have to come into the school building there is less social anxiety, which at the middle school age, can be a very real obstacle.”

Stringer says that while this modest percentage of students are regularly attending their online classes and getting good grades, she is not without worry.

“My concern for that group is the potential for increased anxiety when the time comes for them to switch gears and physically cross the threshold into the academic building,” she added.

There is another group of students who are not doing as well, explains Stringer, adding “The other students are struggling. They’re not doing good behind the screens. Some of the challenge is technology based and some is because they miss the social aspects of school.”

Attendance is one way in which you can observe this struggle. Stringer reveals that attendance is more of an issue this year than in years prior. She describes some teachers have noticed that students will log in at 8am for homeroom because that’s when attendance is taken but then not show up for other classes.

“It is difficult because sometimes, you have kids logging into a class, but when you call on them, they don’t respond,” she said. “How do you track that?”

Stringer realizes there are other reasons that make remote and hybrid learning problematic.

“We’ve essentially taken two worlds that used to be completely separate, school and home life, and meshed them into one,” she said. “Kids are logging into school from home in their pajamas. They are surrounded by distractions like video games and phones.” Stringer knows a lack of routine doesn’t help. “Most students have lost the normal school schedule of waking up early, showering, eating breakfast and getting out the door to catch the bus. Now, we are seeing them rolling out of bed just in time to log in for homeroom.”

Stringer believes remote and hybrid learning don’t set the same expectations for students as full-time learning does.

“When you enter a school building, the expectation is that you are there for a job and that job is school work. At home, if parents aren’t able to oversee their child’s remote learning, students in this age group face huge distractions and lack the executive functioning to self-regulate and independently complete all of their work,” she said, noting that some older students may also be responsible for watching younger siblings while parents are at work.

Remote and hybrid learning isn’t just hard on students and their families. Stringer illustrates the difficulties for teachers, nurses and administrators on the hybrid model.

“Hybrid is the toughest option for everyone from top down,” she said. “It’s a lot to manage to know who is where, who isn’t where they should be and following up with parents regarding students who aren’t connecting or signing in. Our school nurse has spent countless hours contact tracing and working with the Department of Health.”

Stringer is worried about the teachers, too, commenting that “Our teachers have added responsibilities; at some point we need to look at what we are putting them through and what we are doing to the profession.”

Stringer herself has three school-aged children, but they attend a public school that is open five days a week for in-person instruction.

“I’m grateful my kids are going five days a week and get to see their friends and have recess and eat lunch with different people,” she said. “I don’t know what it would have been like if they had had to go hybrid or remote.”

When asked what people can do to support kids who are hybrid or remote, Stringer advises a focus on positive things, commenting “Reflect on the last year and ask your kids what they learned? Ask them to look forward to the new year and set goals and make action plans to meet those goals.”

She also thinks if the last year has taught us anything it’s that we can be flexible and we can adapt.

“I’ve had to be flexible in letting my kids use more technology so they can facetime their friends, but I hope when this is all over they pick up a basketball or a baseball bat instead of a device,” she added.

Still, Stringer believes at this point there is no right or wrong. Realizing how tough this would have been for her at the middle school age, she also sees that through these transitions, kids are learning life skills on how to adjust and yield to changes as we all work to get through this together.

AT 300
MARGARET

Recently, Lynn LaBerge, archivist for the Killingly Historical Center, came across small cards (two and a half by three and three quarter inches) entitled “Bobby Benson’s Game Circus.” The description on the cards said, “57 ways to amuse yourself. Mosaic Designs, Number Formations, Fortune Telling, Card Tricks, Card Games, Puzzles, Magic, Party Games.” The back of the tiny manual read, “Tune In ‘Adventures of Bobby Benson,’ ‘Sunny Jim’ and ‘H-Bar-O Rangers.’ Station WABC and Columbia Network. Monday to Friday. 6:15 p.m. 1934 Hecker H-O Co., Inc.

I had never heard of “The Adventures of Bobby Benson,” et. al. but hoped a search of the internet might help. I was not disappointed. “The H-Bar-O Rangers” radio show began in 1932, presenting the adventures of Bobby Benson and his friends, and extolling the merits of H-O cereal. This card game was published sometime around 1933. The back shows a lovely drawing of Bobby riding the range with Sunny Jim, the sponsor’s mascot, who was to be phased out of the program shortly after this. I like their blue and red horses.” (ullagegroup.com/2011/11/16/childrens-card-games-153/#more-976).

As I searched, I came across several other promotional items for the show. “ORIGINAL H-BAR-O- 808 RANGER RADIO SHOW BRACELET 5/16 INCHES WIDE METAL CURVED ‘ADVENTURES OF BOBBY BENSON’  CBS 1932 RADIO SHOW SPONSORED BY HECKER’S OATS BURN’T ORANGE ENAMEL

I also discovered a 1936 Bobby Benson Cereal Bowl. Do any of you have any Bobby Benson collectibles? If so, I’d love to hear from you. Perhaps a few of you even remember the radio program.

Cowboys and Indian shows were also all the rage on early television. I seem to recall my grandmother having Ranger Joe cereal bowls. A search revealed that Ranger Joe was a pre-sweetened cereal. The television show of that name, which originated out of Philadelphia, Pa., started in 1950 and aired on NBC and ABC in different years. Jesse Rogers played Ranger Joe. (broadcastpioneers.com). Does anyone remember them? It’s funny that I don’t recall the program at all.

Do you remember when there were all sorts of promotions at gas stations and grocery stores? You don’t see that anymore. I wonder what you do with old S & H Green Stamps? I came across a number in a little used drawer. I’ll have to check with Lynn and see if we have any in our archives at the Center.

Did you know that there was a Revolutionary War patriot physician/surgeon from Northeastern Connecticut who was at Valley Forge during that dreadful winter of 1777/1778? In fact, he kept a diary, which records first-hand the horrible conditions which the soldiers had to endure. In 1975 Mrs. Edwin J. Prior published a little booklet, including some extracts from the diary, entitled Dr. Albigeance Waldo. Pomfret’s Patriot. Revolutionary War Hero. 1750-1794 from which I have taken the following tidbits. “Dr. Albigeance Waldo was born in Pomfret, Connecticut, Feb. 27 1749/50 and died in Pomfret Jan. 29, 1794, son of Zachariah Waldo and Abigail Griffen Waldo. Married 1st., prob. At Scotland, Conn. Lydia Hurlburt Nov. 11, 1772; married 2nd , Lucy Cargill, born August 16, 1762, died Northampton, Mass. July 31, 1830, daughter of Benjamin Cargill and Mary Hayward. There were seven children by 1st marriage and 2 by the 2nd. (Woodstock Genealogies, Bowen, Vo. VII, p. 429-430).”

Waldo wrote this in his diary about Valley Forge. ““Dec. 14 (1777). Prisoners and Deserters are continually coming in. The Army who been surprisingly healthy hitherto...now begin to grow sickly from the continued fatigues they have suffered this Campaign. Yet they still show spirit of Alacrity & Contentment not to be expected from so young Troops. I am sick...discontented...and out of humour. Poor food...hard lodging...Cold weather...fatigue---nasty Cookery. ...Vomit half ye time...smoaked out of my senses. ...Why are we sent here to starve and freeze. What sweet Felicities have I left at home; A charming Wife, pretty children, Good Beds, good food, good cookery, all agreeable, all harmonious. Here all Confusion, smoke Cold, hunger & Filthyness...Here comes a bowl of beef soup, full of burnt leaves and dirt...” ‘Dec. 25th Christmas. We are still in tents, when we ought to be in Hutts, the poor Sick, suffer much in Tents this cold Weather.’

Like the other men at Valley Force Dr. Waldo helped construct his own hut. Jan. 3rd. ‘Our Hutt, or rather our Hermit Cell, goes on briskly having a short allowance of Bread this morning we divided it with great precision, eat our Breakfast with thankful hearts for the little we had, took care of the Sick...and went to Work on our little humble Cottage. Sunday Jan. 4th. Went to work at Masonry...being found with mortar & Stone I almost compleated a genteel Chimney to my Magnificent Hurt, however, as we had short allowance of food & no Grogg, my back ached before Night.”

Following the Revolution Dr. Waldo practiced medicine in northern Windham County and worked hard to promote a county medical society and was “one of the organizers of the State Medical Society in 1792.” (p. 13). Since today, January 29th is the anniversary of his death, why not take the time to say a silent “thank you” for the many sacrifices he and others made so that we might be free. May God bless America!

Facts are stubborn things

John Adams was right when he said “Facts are stubborn things.” It’s pretty funny, albeit disturbing, to sit and listen to what some individuals believe to be true, not based on facts, rather hearsay. We’ve become a society where facts just don’t seem to hold much weight anymore.

The sky is blue, grass is green, milk is good for your bones, helmets prevent head injuries in accidents, a cow has two eyes, and George Washington was our first President. All of these things we know to be true because we’ve either seen it with our own eyes, or trust the documents of history. Our grandparents tell us stories of days gone by about other family members and the way things were, and we sit and listen intently and enthusiastically, and while we take in this information, we know it to be true.

We can dig through old newspaper archives, old and current court documents, valid witness testimony, police reports, judges’ orders, and we accept this information as fact. This isn’t to say that certain things ought not to be questioned; however, when facts upon facts upon facts are staring you dead in the eye and you still believe them not to be true, well, that’s simply dumbfounding.

We know that surgeons wear masks to prevent infection. We know that vitamin C boosts our immune systems. We know what elements make up oxygen and water. We know that Ibuprofen is an anti-inflammatory. We know that too much alcohol can hurt our livers, we know that plants need sunlight and water to grow. We know all of this to be factual, because of science.

So now, when scientists express how important mask wearing is during a pandemic to prevent the spread of a deadly virus (a practice done even in 1919), we have some individuals who just brush it off. It would be humorous if it wasn’t so disturbing. The fact is, based on science, that proper masks prevent the spread of airborne viruses, just like sunblock can prevent a sunburn. Why is one scientifically proven technique widely accepted and the other not? Well, a sunburn has never been politicized. Science has been saving lives and keeping our parents, friends and family members alive for longer, since the dawn of time.

Enter the ever interesting topic of conspiracy theories. A conspiracy theory is an explanation for an event or situation that invokes conspiracy by sinister and powerful groups, often in political motivation when other explanations are based on actual, proven facts.

Such theories have been around forever. They are nothing more than fairytales. Recently, psychologists have begun to unravel why certain individuals are more likely to believe in conspiracy theories and what attributes about them, make them so gullible.

Experts have surmised that characteristics of those people who are likely to believe in conspiracy theories include distrust of others, low agreeability and Machiavelliansim (when a person is so focused on their own interests, they will manipulate, deceive, and exploit others to achieve their goals.)

Low agreeability is typically defined as someone who is not very kind, nor dependable or cooperative with others. People more susceptible to conspiracy theories are more likely to have lower levels of analytic thinking.

When a person who believes in non-sense, is presented with demonstrable, thorough, proven, hard facts, they are often responded to with even further out there thinking, and it is noticeable that there is very little critical thinking.

Further it has been discovered that conspiracy theories make a person feel special. Some individuals who need to feel unique but can’t any other way, may fall prey. Conspiracy theories rely on ‘secret information’ which can give those believers a false sense of belonging.

It has been discovered that those individuals also are narcissists with a grandiose idea of the self and a touch of paranoia. Further, those who fall prey are likely more alienated, powerless and socially isolated.

Remember, conspiracy theories are brought about by people, not actual facts. Take note that you cannot argue with those who believe in conspiracy because those beliefs are not rational.

The simple answer here is to not ignore the facts — wear your sunscreen, wear your mask, drink water, eat your vegetables, have some fun, laugh and be kind to one another.

Condemning Capitol violence

To the Editor:
Where were our Connecticut legislators this summer, when New York, Seattle, and Portland were burning?
Thirty-foot flames, broken windows, and burnt police cars were not exactly peaceful demonstrations.

If they wanted to unite the country, they’d condemn all violence.

The decline of liberty

To the Editor:
In his 1801 Inaugural Address to the nation, President Thomas Jefferson remarked that, “A wise and frugal Government, which shall restrain men from injuring one another, shall leave them free to regulate their own pursuits of industry and improvement, and shall not take from the mouth of labor the bread it has earned. This is the sum of good government.”
Now, 220 years later, what is the status of our government today? Instead of heeding Jefferson’s prescient warning, the American government has become everything our third President despised. Frugality is nowhere to be found in the federal government as lawmakers continue to spend far more than is necessary. To put this into perspective, prior to the Great Depression, annual federal expenditures accounted for roughly three percent of Gross Domestic Product (GDP). Since 1930, this number has routinely been over fifteen percent, and in the last decade, over twenty percent. Unfortunately, the massive increase in federal spending has not been offset by a corresponding increase in revenue. As a result, the United States has amassed a $28 trillion debt that threatens the very existence of this great nation. This accumulation of debt is a shameful repudiation of our founders, who viewed excessive debt as undemocratic and dangerous.

The increase in federal spending and expansion of government has had other serious consequences, most notably the loss of liberty. As Ronald Reagan stated in his 1989 Farewell Address, “I hope we once again have reminded people that man is not free unless government is limited. There’s a clear cause and effect here that is as neat and predictable as a law of physics: As government expands, liberty contracts.” This message was important 32 years ago, and it is now more critical than ever. The current power of the federal government would have terrified the founders, and it should scare all Americans today. The founders constructed a federal government that had few and defined powers, coupled with a union of states which had numerous and indefinite powers. Tragically, this framework has been completely reversed. The federal government now wields powers far beyond those enumerated in the Constitution. This power must be curbed very soon, because if it is not, liberty will fade into history as a glorious relic of the great American experiment.

Our firefighters deserve your support

To the Editor:
Did you know the Town of Thompson currently has five Fire Departments? These Fire Departments are sorely underfunded and in desperate need of new facilities. The current approved budget for the Fire Departments is $655,687. This represents approximately a 35 percent increase over the approved budget for the Fire Departments five years ago. This year, each Department received a grant of $62,000 to cover their operational costs and Community Ambulance received a $75,000 grant from the Town. The increases in recent years have not proven to be significant enough to bring these Departments into the 21st century.
As a town, we can appropriate additional money to the Departments in the coming year, but is a fundamental change necessary as well? As Albert Einstein is widely credited with saying, “The definition of insanity is doing the same thing over and over but expecting different results.” It is insane to think that we can just keep appropriating dollars to a system that may need to be revamped entirely.

I will admit that although I come from a long line of volunteer firefighters, I am no expert in fire department protocol or procedure. I do have an immense amount of respect and admiration for these warriors who answer the call day and night to serve their communities. They put themselves in harm’s way and expose themselves to situations that most of us could not handle. These men and women are our neighbors and friends. It is our responsibility as a town to provide adequate protective gear, equipment, and facilities so that these individuals are safe when answering the call of duty in our community.
There was a time when these departments acted independently of the town. Fundraising efforts and donations were adequate to sustain operations. The costs associated with Emergency Services has risen to levels that

Some questions for Mr. Taylor

To the Editor:
Last week, Billy G. Taylor put his own spin on the part in my letter where I said: “I do not agree with the actions of those who did this,” which as of today, we are still all allowed to state differing opinions. (But more about that will follow.)
The deaths at the Capitol were indeed unfortunate, but the riots, the deaths and the destruction that happened previously doesn’t seem to matter much anymore, now does it? The heat is apparently off of the useless Democrats who stood idly by and let that happen, and it’s now all on Donald Trump; how convenient.
Aw, Billy G Taylor, did I ruffle your little feathers by calling out your cherished members of Congress? What we really all should be appalled at is that on the day after Congress quivered, it’s again back to business as usual for them and the finger-pointing and bickering continues. And in quoting “political science 101,” Billy G Taylor, you’re basically agreeing with me that they are a bunch of self-serving “whores” that go where the money is, and thank you for that. Are you blind to the fact that Pelosi said: “People will do things,” Mad Max Waters said to: “Push back at Trump supporters,” and Kamala Harris said: “These protests must continue?” A “not-too-subtle message that such actions were justifiable and even desirable,” perhaps? I’d say that those were “obvious” messages that weren’t

How low can the Democrats go?

To the Editor:
Well, it’s about time I respond to some past Letters to the Editor.
Why is it the Democratic Party condemns violence now, but said little or nothing when there were riots, looting and mass destruction months ago? Another letter writer compared a pro-Trump supporter to the Nazis and Stalin, and also — here it comes — the typical answer from these types of people, that cannot give facts, “it’s all lies” when confronted with the truth.
Then we have another about the pandemic of lies, blah, blah, blah of President Trump, but never mentions CNN, MSNBC and others and Facebook, Twitter, who sensor conservatives and more. And now the best for last...who usually calls people nasty names, writes long letters to make you think they are smart...Trump was calling for violence, certain people calling for beheading people, and attempting a coup, Trump could have stopped it all, and the writer goes on to add negative adjectives to all individuals and uses their own “facts.”

The Democratic party has reached the pinnacle of how low politicians can get. They preach about God and country and laws, but have done everything possible to destroy the Constitution, religious freedom, life, freedom and what made America great. They haven’t represented the people in ages but have become rich for themselves and Republicans as well but not in the massive degree as the Democrats. They have let our Americans die overseas so as not to offend foreign nations and lie to our people about the cause and let our ambassador die without even attempting to send help. We now have a

Routine gives us power over time

As dawn breaks, I settle into a comfortable chair by the window and open a poetry anthology I received for Christmas. I read at least one poet’s work before I allow myself to open my iPad and begin skimming the news or my email. The reason for the routine is simple. I want to exercise some power over time, as it seems to slip by in ways it never did before. I don’t like feeling that my life is either passing too quickly, or as occasionally happens, creeping like a slug over slippery pavement.

Perhaps you’ve read or heard as much or more than I have about our distorted sense of time during these pandemic months. It seems that about 40 percent of us feel that time is moving more slowly. Forty percent think it is moving faster. What happened to the other 20 percent? I don’t know. I assume they say it is all the same. I happen to be among the group that feel time is moving faster.

I’m grateful to be able to stay at home and do most of my communicating via Zoom meetings, emails, and bits of other social media. Most days, I walk for several miles with another person and take in the beauty of our region. Regardless of the weather, I suit up and step out the door. I can’t imagine what it must have felt like for citizens of a number of European countries and parts of China to be locked down inside for weeks at a time.

I heard that in France, one could walk a dog as late as 10 p.m. without getting fined. It is always worthwhile to own a dog, but it could also bring a breath of air at the end of a leash.

All my life, I longed to have more time. I felt rushed, behind, always failing in some way to be on top of the schedule or even where I was supposed to be when I was supposed to be there. Time and I were in a constant battle. As I walked out the door for a meeting, I might water a plant, toss a treat to the cat, put the dry cleaning in the car and drag out the trash can.

No matter how many years I commuted to work, I always underestimated how long it really took. I was pulled over for speeding and given warnings. Each time I was intimidated enough to reform for a few weeks, until I went right back to my old ways. My family liked to tell me I had an unrealistic relationship with time and they were right.

There is little hurrying around now. Routine is the hallmark of the day, the week, the months. It seems one moment we are watching Masterpiece on Sunday night, and the next thing, we are ordering Friday night pizza from Sweet Evelina’s. In between we are busily living our lives, but the sense of time is skewed. Time should feel slower without novelty, but it doesn’t.

Routine, I read, makes us feel that time is passing by more quickly because there is nothing novel or exciting to reflect upon. When we remember what happened, all we have is a general sameness, which blurs it all together.

I was brought up to believe that being bored is a personal failing. It is an individual responsibility to be engaged and interested in all sorts of things.

These strange times will last a bit longer. We can look at time in new ways. After all, time is really all we have.

Killingly is in the crosshairs

To the Editor:

The state permitting process for construction of the NTE fracked-gas power plant near Alexander’s Lake in Dayville continues to move forward despite the numerous reasons to prevent it.

Some of those reasons include the fact that in Killingly, approximately one mile from this proposed site, is an already-existing gas power plant which demonstrably operates only sporadically. Why would we need another one? We do not. Connecticut is an energy-exporting state with no shortage.

Estimates from NTE’s printed materials show that two million tons of emissions, including carbon dioxide, particulate matter, and other pollutants, are expected to flow from the 150-foot-high stack every year. The stack is so low, per FAA regulations due to the nearby Danielson Airport, that those emissions will not diffuse high enough in the atmosphere and instead will fall into the soil and water and remain in the air breathed in Killingly, Pomfret, Putnam, Thompson and other towns where the air currents send it. That’s forty tons over the twenty-year period that Killingly will receive the five million dollars promised annually by NTE. And how many pairs of damaged lungs?

As I have noted with horror previously, within a three-mile radius of this proposed project, we have Killingly High School, Killingly Central School, Goodyear Early Learning Center, Killingly Intermediate School, a day care center, Owen Bell Recreation Park, a convalescent center and a newly-constructed 74-unit elderly housing complex. Our most vulnerable residents are at risk for respiratory illnesses like asthma, or exacerbation of already-existing respiratory problems. Windham County, by the latest reports available, already has one of the highest child asthma rates in the state. Why would we risk increasing that rate?

Sierra Club of Connecticut has also warned of habitat damage to some endangered species, specifically the long eared owl, whose population is declining. According to CT.gov, “The main reason the long eared owl is endangered is because of the lack of habitat due to land development.” The habitat will surely be disrupted or eliminated by the work recently permitted for pipeline expansion by the state Department of Energy and Environmental Protection along the Pomfret-Killingly border. Who cares about owls? Many of us do.

The Town of Killingly, who by the way had no voice in the decision by the Connecticut Siting Council to approve this project, is definitely in need of the millions of dollars contracted by NTE. But what happens if the facility is built and then NTE sells it to another entity—maybe a power plant company instead of a private equity firm? Does that agreement hold, or will it need to be President who is the epitome of corruption in politics and 47 years of absolutely how a politician can stay in office. They have given a new meaning to election fraud and no voter ID. They represent their constituents as if they were non-existent, and consider veterans non-essential any longer because of their age. They use blacks and racism as an answer when they are backed against the wall, and have no other explanation. They mention God as if they are all “Praise the Lord” church going while killing the unborn and live born as if they were a piece of meat while profiting on dead baby organs. They increase abortion rights almost daily in the name of women’s rights, and we know it’s plain murder.

If a woman decides she does not want a child, there are so many before and after precautions. Why not make abortions illegal and have them all put up for adoption? There are many people wanting to adopt without going abroad and paying exorbitant fees...all would be happy. They omit words from the Pledge of Allegiance, if they say it at all, the Lord’s prayer and have destroyed our country’s history and now are using gender to change names, allowing school bathrooms to be used by how a person feels that day. I’m not saying the Republicans are saints but the Democrats give new meaning to “how low can you go.” Obama could have been the greatest president ever, and what America needed, but he and “clear” enough for you, Billy G Taylor! Could that message have been “violence is okay” just as long as it’s happening in Trump’s America? Answer that question, Billy G Taylor. So now, there are anti-Biden protests going on in Seattle, Portland and Denver, and do you think that’s what Kamala Harris had in mind when she said: “These protests must continue?” But maybe now I shouldn’t be saying such things?

Do you know how to get more than 50 people to attend a Biden rally? Invite the National Guard! Also, did you know that Joe Biden has impeached himself? Yup, when he was signing all these exec-re-negotiated?

This situation is a perfect example of why Connecticut needs to change the way public schools are funded—evidently a political non-starter from my conversations years ago with elected officials. Education is the largest town budget item, by far, as it should be. Our children need and deserve the best we can possibly provide them. But Killingly children are no less deserving of an equal per-pupil expenditure than the children of Greenwich and other wealthy Connecticut towns. Killingly does not need a second power plant. Killingly needs a fair shake for its education system, and should not have to choose between accepting a dirty power plant and adequately funding its schools.

Which brings me to a final reason for stopping this plant—although there are even more reasons. NTE has presented its fracked gas power as cleaner than coal or petroleum power plants, now being closed as they should be. That is not the same as guaranteeing this gas power is clean. It is not. Just as there is no safe level for lead or arsenic—although the Reagan administration changed those regulations and set «safe» levels for them—the claim of «cleaner» does not equate to «safe.» If NTE is interested in «safe,» maybe they could decide to invest in an energy storage plant to store solar and wind power. That way, power could still be provided when the sun does not shine and the wind does not blow. That, and water power, is clean energy.

Gov. Lamont has expressed his opposition to this plant, yet D.E.E.P. Commissioner Katie Dykes has apparently only taken seriously the «Energy» part of her department at the expense of the «Environmental Protection.» The remaining permit applications need to be denied, not rubber-stamped. Citizens of Killingly and surrounding towns have persistently expressed opposition and provided facts to support their concerns. This has not swayed Commissioner Dykes.

My first 41 years of life were in Killingly. I still consider it my home and have many people I love who still reside there. I live about nine miles north of where this plant will be sited. Plant emissions will no more distinguish between which town is polluted than the coronavirus determines its victims by political affiliation. This plant must be stopped and another public education formula devised that never puts another small, politically impotent town like Killingly in its cross-hairs. Call Gov. Lamont at 800 406-1527 or email him at governor.lamont@ct.gov to hold him to action that backs up his words. The people of northeast Connecticut deserve nothing less.

his wife turned this country around to make it a racist nation which we have never seen before. It will now take decades to change how Americans feel against one another, and family against family. I hope I am wrong, but I feel America will never be the same. They now call for “unity,” but have a vengeance by going after every conservative and businesses dropping them from any future dealings

Now let’s get to your Savior and part of his 17 changes and more that are coming...Biden now allows boys to compete in girls’ sports, so why should girls compete? Biden cancelled the 1776 Commission created to promote & encourage educators to teach our children about the miracle of American history and make plans to honor the 250th anniversary of our founding. Biden stopped building additional walls on the U.S.-Mexico border; sure, let anyone come in, the gateway to America. Opening the southern border to a flood of illegals that will take more jobs away. Biden previously promised a national mask mandate, but quickly backtracked from that position. Cancellation of the Alaskan Pipeline and over 1,400 jobs & Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau is very unhappy, as most of the jobs and many more are his people. Biden order lets people who quit jobs where they thought they might catch Coronavirus collect unemployment, and wait till the new taxes come in.

Did you know that there is now a call to reprogram Trump supporters? You think I’m joking? It’s out there; look it up! But isn’t that something a dictator would do, and something right out of Nazi Germany or Stalinist Russia? Answer that question, Billy G Taylor.

Anyhow, imagine if the Villager editor was ordered by the censorship gestapo to only publish pro-Democrat points of view? I’d say that would be pretty scary, and also very boring.

Lobbying for the freedom to hate

To the Editor:

We are a nation of laws. It is against the law to yell “Fire!” in a movie theater. And even though the Declaration of Independence (which inspired the writers of the Constitution) emphasized the inalienable right to “life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness,” it is still against the law to steal and murder. Yet the fire that burns in the belly of the uber right has been stoked by the illusion that our Constitutional freedoms protect us from the law itself. First amendment rights such as freedom of speech have become the centrifuge of extreme conservatives igniting the NRA and white supremacist groups to commandeer social media. And because we Americans hold sacred first amendment rights such as Freedom of Speech, we have tolerated a culture of hate for too long. Liberals, moderates and the media have remained blatantly silent while the maniac in the White House has been yelling “Fire!” for four years.

In retrospect, we are a bunch of cowards. We hold our Constitutional rights so dear, we tremble at the very thought of dousing the fire of thought and freedom of speech, even on the extreme right or the left. There has been a great reluctance to admit that social media has been driven by the rhetoric of hate, and that the “Fire!” law might apply when a sitting president incites a violent insurrection. Although clearly too little too late, it’s about time that Twitter, Facebook, Parler, and other media venues manipulated by those who lobby for hate have finally been shut down.

Not surprisingly, the same people who assassinated Colin Kaepernick’s career and made death threats to athletes, politicians and ordinary citizens who tried to speak up for racial justice are now outraged that their First Amendment rights are so-called under attack. The same haters of Black Lives Matter and the peaceful protest marches are lobbying that insurrectionists, secessionists and a president who has committed treason not be censured. They still fail to understand the difference between exercising First Amendment rights to peacefully petition the government to do justice (based on facts) and a violent attempted coup fueled by lies and incendiary rhetoric perpetuated by a sitting president. It is a matter of national security that Mr. Trump be cut off from the social media accounts through which he has trucked disinformation, hatred, racism, and white nationalist rhetoric for four years – not to mention insurrection.

Those who are up in arms (literally) about freedom of speech fail to understand that we are a nation of laws but there is no law that protects hate, insurrection, and treason. And before you start sending out threatening posts and Tweets, there is no double standard here. During the summer of 2020 and the Black Lives Matter protests, there were all kinds of infiltrators, many of them white, including anarchists, and other fringe groups that jump on the bandwagon of every movement. After the marchers went home, they incited riots, destroyed property, and burned neighborhoods. They too should be prosecuted for breaking the law. There are fools in every crowd. I’m sure there were many ordinary citizens who joined the protest on Jan. 6 who were simply ardent supporters of Trump, and though misguided by a pack of lies it was not their intent to storm the Capitol. However, social media networks were buzzing for weeks about overturning the elections and showing up with violent intent, armed up and geared up for an insurrection. Although some would like to blame the mythical Antifa, the responsibility lies clearly at the feet of Trump and his supporters. Furthermore, the absence of Capitol Police and the fact that Trump refused to call the National Guard is a blatant double standard as to who is criminalized and who is protected. Imagine, if you will, that the protest consisted of mostly black and brown people asking for racial justice. Washington would have been heavily armed by militarized police.

Those who have lobbied that hate speech is protected by the Constitution are in the same boat as the extremist NRA supporters who lobby for automatic weapons. The Constitution does not protect insurrectionists any more than their intention to kill people with weapons designed for war. It is designed to protect the right to differ in opinion and the right to engage in civic discourse (assuming that Americans would be well-versed in civics through public education).

I first wrote this essay in March of 2019, when some argued that the Constitution protects the Confederate flag and Confederate statues. At the time, I proposed that the Constitution might give you the right to fly the Confederate flag, but you should know it also gives me the right to call you out as a racist. Civil War relics are a reminder of hatred, racism, and treason unworthy of reverence in a democracy. Their presence in public spaces is offensive to anyone who holds the ideals of the Constitution, equality and civil rights dear. Likewise, the flying of the Confederate flag is not a Constitutional right, but an act of defiance against the progress and the good which was accomplished by the civil rights movement before and after the Civil War. It is no surprise that the recent insurrectionists planted a Confederate flag, which appears to be the new republican banner, in the hallowed halls of democracy.

Freedom of speech and the right to bear arms have been usurped and misinterpreted by right-wing racists and fascists who falsely flaunt the Constitution as a shield to protect their racism, anti-Semitism, and beliefs in white supremacy. They represent the antithesis of the founding values of this country. They are not patriots, but cowards marching in a perpetual temper tantrum over the erosion of their white entitlement. Unfortunately, they infiltrated the White House long before Jan. 6 by electing a megalomaniac who would both stand up for them and join the fray, a traitor to his country. Shame on anyone who equates this violent hateful display as being even sided. There are no “good people” in the white supremacy movement. Shame on anyone who doesn’t have the guts to call it what it is.

It is an American travesty that we the people have allowed the alt-right movement, with their radio-wave rhetoric, to infiltrate the political arena and usurp our civic duty to protect the Constitution. While we have been distracted by fabricated conflicts and the daily misguided rants of presidential Tweets, our true civil rights (not the imagined right to overthrow the government) have been systematically eroded. Freedom of the press and the right to voice our opinion in protest have endured violent attacks from Trump and his supporters for more than four years. They have been systematically squelched by the disinformation campaigns gassing out of the President’s bully pulpit, and a pointed campaign to vilify journalists and intellectuals. Without the most basic of Constitutional rights to have a free press the People will not have an informed voice to keep the government in check. Instead, we are being fed propaganda by the President and his state news, Fox [The violence in Charlottesville was not the fault of the neo-Nazis and white supremacists, but those who were protesting against them; the elections are fraudulent], implying that those of us who dare to stand up for justice and speak out against hatred, deserve to be verbally and physically attacked. In fact, the president himself has been the perpetrator of verbal attacks which have ignited and empowered the extreme right to do his dirty work long before Jan. 6. Unlike any of his predecessors in over 200 years of the U.S. Presidency, this President lacks the moral character and leadership to stand with those of us who love our country and the ideals for which we stand.

Because he is a “businessman” and an ideologue, rather than a scholar of history and governance, Trump does not realize that the Constitution was humbly created by men who knew that they were flawed, and that their society was flawed. Yet they created a document which could be amended over time, based on the founding principle of equality - holding out an ideal for generations to live up to. (“Constitutions are writ broad for ages yet unborn.”) Rather than living up to be the leader of the people and protecting the Constitution, Trump has chosen to align himself with those whom Hillary Clinton rightly called his “basket of deplorables.” While Steve Bannon pulled the puppet strings behind the scenes, dismantling civil rights, Affirmative Action and environmental protection laws, the President fed us propaganda and corporate speak to cover up his treasonous acts. Obviously, Trump flunked American history since he prefers to buy into the likes of Steve Bannon’s alt-right white revisionist history. Unfortunately, he is not alone.

The corporate model and corporate speak have not only edged their way into government. They have also infiltrated public education, with an emphasis on privatization, data-driven test scores and high-stakes testing as a means to dismantle yet another uniquely American right – the opportunity to acquire an equal education. Public education was meant to be the great equalizer, giving a leg up to all citizens regardless of their race, religion, ethnicity or economic status. It was also cleverly derived to teach American history as a means of cultivating citizenship. Thomas Jefferson, who chicken BBQ’s just cannot make up. As the town bears most fire department expenses, the Departments begin to lose their independent standing. Consequently, reorganization needs to occur because, getting by “the way things have always been done” simply is not working anymore. The Departments are currently discussing options of coming under the authority of one governing body or agency. I applaud the Departments as they search for ways to improve their facilities and the mechanism with which they currently operate. They have my full support as they explore options and unite to find solutions that will help them to advance into a new era of firefighting.

is unfortunate that so few of the Republicans have had the courage of the late Sen. McCain to call Trump out for what he is. Only now, as the momentum of outrage rises in public sentiment against Trump's racist policies and incendiary rhetoric, do we hear the voices of the moderate right. Call it like it is. Speak the truth. Trump is and always has been a racist who identifies with extremist right-wing views. In 1927, Donald Trump's father, Fred Trump was arrested during a KKK riot that took place at the Memorial Day Parade in NYC. Although charges were dropped, and it's not clear why he was there or what his role was, it is doubtful that Fred Trump's presence was innocent. It is naïve to suppose that Donald Trump's racist views are purely his own, given Fred Trump's track record for red-lining real estate, blocking African American's from renting certain properties. In fact, both father and son were investigated in the 1970's for breaking equal housing and anti-discrimination laws. And let us not forget what Trump did to the Central Park Seven.

Given the fact that none of Trump's previously seditious and criminal acts led to any consequences, one must wonder if there are any republicans with enough cojones to invoke the 25th or the 14th Amendments. Some admit that he done wrong but believe that now that "his finger has touched the fire, he may have learned his lesson." Those Republican senators and representatives who continue to support Trump through impotent silence are complicit in enabling his behavior. At the very least, they too should be suspended from their duties. If Donald J. Trump is not impeached and forced to resign, he poses a threat to national security. Those who are lobbying for his right to tweet and pontificate anti-American propaganda are promoting sedition and the unleashing of a wrathful and dangerous man who will become the undoing of life as we know it in the United States of America.

Marilyn P. Stears, 79, of Danielson passed away at Day Kimball Hospital January 18, 2021. She was born in Willimantic October 21, 1941 daughter of the late Richard Stewart and Frances (Newton) Potter. Marilyn grew up in the Danielson area until the age of 5, then moved to Glastonbury. She graduated from Glastonbury High in 1958. Marilyn was a life-long member of the Westfield Congregational Church. She was also a member of interfaith stitchers where she made dozens of thoughtful lap robes for people in need. She was always there for others and very giving of herself to everyone, whether just a smile, taking the time to listen, or giving a warm much needed hug. Marilyn was a teacher's aid for 12 years from 1969-1981. She always enjoyed when her students came up to let her know they remembered and liked her. Marilyn ended her career working for the Building and Zoning office at the Danielson Town Hall, retiring in 2003. During her employment there Marilyn made many close friends. Marilyn enjoyed being in her beautifully landscaped yard, hand planting all her flowers and shrubbery. Her green thumb came natural to her as well as making everyone she came in contact with feel special and loved. Marilyn spent the last year of her life at Matulaitis where she received exceptional care. Marilyn was married to Ronald (Gus) Stears on October 1, 1960. For many years they loved to travel, take motorcycle rides, and go camping with their family. She loved playing cards, board games and her favorite show was Jeopardy, which became the standard rule "don't call mom from 7 to 7:30". She enjoyed fishing and just being outside. Marilyn also loved to cook and bake, especially making cookies with her grandchildren. Besides her husband, Gus, Marilyn also leaves behind a son, Michael A. Stears of Wilmington, DE, and wife Cynthia. A daughter, Laura L. Wolfburg of Danielson and husband Daniel Wolfburg. And three grandchildren, Michael Stears, Meghan Stears and Michele Burris. Due to COVID restrictions, funeral services will be private. In lieu of flowers donations can be made to Matulaitis Nursing Home 10 Thurber Road Putnam, CT 06260. Tyler Sean Bates, 31

THOMPSON- Tyler Sean Bates, 31. An outstanding young man with a huge heart unexpectedly passed away on Tuesday, December 29, 2020, to be with departed family and friends. Tyler was a son, brother, grandson, nephew, cousin, and friend, but most importantly he was a little girl's hero and daddy. He is survived by his daughter, Lennix, who was the center of his life and sole purpose for being. Tyler took with him a piece of the hearts of all who knew and loved him.

A happy go lucky kind of guy, charming and charismatic, a friend to all. Always willing to help and most importantly to listen. Tyler was often seen wearing a great big smile. In his free time, he enjoyed the beach, music, hiking, fishing, disc golf, camping, kayaking, and a rip-roaring fire to sit around with friends and family. Tyler had a real love for Subaru, he enjoyed going to the Wicked Big Meet and being part of the Subaru family. He loved to tinker around, much like his father, he was a jack of all trades, master of none.

A private celebration of life will be held at a later date. In lieu of flowers, please donate towards Lennix's expenses via: Tyler Bates Memorial Fund (<https://gofundme.com/love-for-lennix>) or Lennix Bates Fund, PO Box 313, North Grosvenordale, CT 06255 believed that "An educated citizenry is a vital requisite for our survival as a free people", must be rolling in his grave. I imagine that Sandra Day O'Connor, who led the charge to teach civics in elementary schools, must be equally dismayed.

In the age of the corporate industrial complex, many schools have stopped teaching social studies. Like the president, we have generations of Americans who do not know their history. It is a sad truth that immigrants and naturalized citizens know more about the Constitution and American history than the average American Citizen, myself included, even though I am a lover of history. Perhaps this explains the America First anti-immigrant rhetoric of Trump and his ilk. I like to imagine that for the most part, new citizens hold their civil liberties dear, and that many are willing to protect our civil rights while the rest of us stand idle in our presumption that the government will do the right thing without our voice. FINANCIAL
INVESTMENT ADVISER

Earlier in the month, we discuss how to Take Control to Begin Recovery or Acceleration of Your Financial Goals. We focused on keeping your financial goals top of mind, while creating a budget to help you work towards achieving those goals you set for yourself in the new year. Many people carry some amount of debt, whether in the form of a student loan, a mortgage, or a car loan. Indeed, making large purchases using someone else's money is often a smart financial move depending on the cost of the capital. Borrowing can be convenient, allowing you to purchase big-ticket items with less out-of-pocket cash. And, with today's attractive interest rates, it is relatively low cost. But taking on any amount of debt comes with risk. A financial setback can reduce your ability to repay a loan, and any amount of debt may prevent you from achieving those long-term financial life goals.

How Much Debt Can You Afford to Take On?

When analyzing your ability to carry debt, take a close look at your personal finances, focusing on the following factors:

Liquidity. If you suddenly lost your job, would you have enough cash at the ready to cover your current liabilities? It's a good idea to maintain an emergency fund to cover three to six months' worth of expenses. But don't go overboard. Guard against keeping more than 120 percent of your six-month expense estimate in low-yielding investments. And don't let more than 5 percent of your cash reserves sit in a non-interest-bearing checking account.

Current debt. Your total contractual monthly debt payments (i.e., the minimum required payments) should come to no more than 36 percent of your monthly gross income. Your consumer debt—credit card balances, automobile loans and leases, and debt related to other lifestyle purchases—should amount to less than 10 percent of your monthly gross income. If your consumer debt ratio is 20 percent or more, avoid taking on additional debt.

Housing expenses. As a general rule, your monthly housing costs—including your mortgage or rent, home insurance, real estate taxes, association fees, and other required expenses—shouldn't amount to more than 31 percent of your monthly gross income. If you're shopping for a mortgage, keep in mind that lenders use their own formulas to calculate how much home you can afford based on your gross monthly income, your current housing expenses, and your other long-term debt, such as auto and student loans. For a mortgage insured by the Federal Housing Administration, your housing expenses and long-term debt should not exceed 43 percent of your monthly gross income.

Savings. Although the standard recommended savings rate is 10 percent of gross income, your guideline should depend on your age, goals, and stage of life. For example, you should save more as you age, and as retirement nears, you may need to ramp up your savings to 20 percent or 30 percent of your income. Direct deposits, automatic contributions to retirement accounts, and electronic transfers from checking accounts to savings accounts can help you make saving a habit.

Evaluating Mortgage Options

If you're in the market for a new home, the myriad of mortgage choices can be overwhelming. Fixed or variable interest rate? Fifteen- or 30-year term? If it were merely a question of which mortgage provided the lowest long-term costs, the answer would be simple. In reality, the best mortgage for a particular household depends on how long the homeowner plans to stay in the house, the available down payment, the predictability of cash flow, and the borrower's tolerance for fluctuating payments.

How long will you be there? One rule of thumb is to choose a mortgage based on how long you plan to stay in the home. If you plan to stay five years or less, consider renting. If you plan to live in the house for five to 10 years and have a high tolerance for fluctuating payments, consider a variable-rate mortgage for a longer term, such as 30 years, to help keep the cost down. If the home is a long-term investment, choose a fixed-rate mortgage with a shorter term, such as 15 or 20 years.

Is a variable-rate mortgage worth the risk? Because the monthly payments are typically lower with variable-rate mortgages, they are generally the easiest to qualify for—and may enable you to purchase a more expensive home. Variable-rate mortgages also allow you to take advantage of falling interest rates without the cost of refinancing. But keep in mind that it's generally not wise to take on a variable-rate mortgage simply because you qualify for one. Although these mortgages offer the lowest interest rate, they're also the riskiest, as the monthly payment can increase to an amount that may prove difficult to meet. Selecting a shorter loan term, such as 15 years, can help lessen this risk.

Remember, when it comes to taking on debt, the loan amount you qualify for and the amount you can comfortably afford to repay may not be one and the same. Be sure to consider your special circumstances before taking on debt to buy a home or make another major purchase. If you need assistance prioritizing your finances to help you work toward your long-term financial life goals. The Serenity Prayer

Before reviewing the prayer, let's consider why people in AA meetings have found the prayer to be such a comfort. Alcohol has been a social problem since the beginning of time. The website www.webmd.com describes the problem Americans have with alcohol like this:

It is estimated that between 18 million – or one in 12 adults – in the U.S. abuse alcohol or are chronic alcoholics. Nearly 100,000 Americans die each year as a result of alcohol abuse, and alcohol is a factor in more than half of the country's homicides, suicides, and traffic accidents. Alcohol abuse also plays a role in many social and domestic problems, from job absenteeism and crimes against property to spousal and child abuse.

The immediate physical effects of drinking alcohol range from mild mood changes to complete loss of coordination, vision, balance, and speech – any of which can be signals of acute alcohol intoxication, or drunkenness. These effects usually wear off in a matter of hours after a person stops drinking. Many law-enforcement agencies regard a .08 percentage of alcohol in the bloodstream as evidence of intoxication. Larger amounts of blood alcohol can impair brain function and eventually cause unconsciousness. An extreme overdose, alcohol poisoning, can be fatal.

That academic description cannot begin to convey the grief and pain cause by people who are bound by alcohol. Neither can it begin to capture the frustration, shame, fear and helplessness experienced by those caught in its grip.

In 1935, two men set out to help people whose lives had been marred by alcoholism. They established a faith-based, twelve-step program called Alcoholics Anonymous. Bill Wilson and Bob Smith founded the first group in Akron, Ohio. The idea was to invite people to admit their need for help, turn to a higher power and then take steps toward overcoming the addiction. AA has been in existence for 80 years and there are now over 115,000 groups world-wide.

Each time a group meets, they recite the Serenity Prayer, so there is no telling how many people have prayed this prayer.

This prayer is effective because it is based on biblical truths and because of the sheer volume of people who have prayed it. Here is the most commonly used version of the Serenity Prayer:

*“God, grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change,
Courage to change the things I can,
And wisdom to know the difference.”*

The Serenity Prayer personifies how Believers can rest in God through prayer. We can have peace because, through prayer, God will help know what we need to do and what we need to leave up to Him. Prayer works and is powerful because the God to whom we pray is so big... and powerful... and full of mercy and grace. Because we pray to an all-powerful God, we can enjoy serenity, even in difficult circumstances.
