Killingly BOE votes to retire mascot again

BY JASON BLEAU
VILLAGER CORRESPONDENT

KILLINGLY — The Killingly Board of Education has once again decided to retire the "Redmen" moniker after a brief review by a special ad hoc committee. A recommendation provided to the Board of Education on June 12 and approved by the majority of the board will see Killingly High School move away from the Native American mascot for the second time in the last five years continuing a longstanding debate that gained the town national attention during the pandemic.

The debate over the use of Native American mascots is not unique to Killingly. Schools nationwide and even national sports teams have begun to move away from the mascots as tribal nations and activists have deemed these names and likenesses to be offensive and, in some cases, racist. However, opponents to the changes, which includes some Native American groups, say the names preserve the tradition of strength and honor represented by the native people. In Connecticut, the state has withheld certain funds from towns whose schools have maintained a Native American-themed mascot specifically costing Killingly $94,000 in grant money each year it continues to use the Redmen name. In 2019 the Board of Education voted to retire the mascot and adopt the Red Hawks as its new name. Come election time, local Republican's ran on essentially a single-issue campaign to reinstate the name and voters filled the board with GOP representatives who then brought the name back. The election and its resulting shift back to the "Redmen" name gained Killingly national attention as a prime example of the politically charged nature of the movement away from such mascots. In 2023 other controversies involving the Board of Education led voters to elect several Democrats giving that party the majority. Earlier this year an ad hoc committee was formed to further determine the fate of the team's name.

As would be expected, the debate over the proposed change was heated at times and split solidly along party lines. Supporters of the mascot argued it as a source of pride and that the students desire a mascot to call their own as athletes

Woodstock Academy Head of School announces retirement plans

BY JASON BLEAU
VILLAGER CORRESPONDENT

WOODSTOCK — After more than a decade with Woodstock Academy, one of the oldest public schools in the country, Head of School Christopher Sandford has announced he will retire at the end of the upcoming school year.

The announcement was made through a pair of letters released by the Academy, one from Sandford himself and the other from the President of the Academy's Board of Trustees. In his letter, Sandford acknowledged that the decision involved plenty of "reflection and consideration" and has set June 30, 2025 as his official date of retirement.

"As I prepare to embark on this new chapter in my life, I want to express my heartfelt appreciation to each of you who have made my journey at The Academy so memorable. Your kindness, encouragement, and unwavering support have been the driving force behind my dedication to our shared mission of nurturing young minds and fostering a vibrant learning community," Sandford wrote. "While I will miss the daily interactions with students, colleagues, and alumni, and the sense of purpose that comes from being a part of The Academy, I am excited about the possibilities that lie ahead. Retirement will allow me to pursue personal interests, slow down, and explore new opportunities."

Sandford's letter thanked the Trustees, parents, and students for their support since his appointment in 2013. His tenure will make him the fourth-longest-serving Head of School (formerly titled Headmaster) in

Boyd secures funding for Windham-Tolland 4-H Camp

POMFRET — Rep. Pat Boyd (D-Pomfret) is proud to announce that the Windham-Tolland 4H Camp in Pomfret will be receiving a grant for $1,000,000 for emergency dam repairs. The funding was approved by the State Bonding Commission on June 7 with the support of State Sen. Mae Flexer (D-Windham).

"The camp has always been a vibrant spot in our community, and this funding will go a long way to help with the repairs needed for the camp to continue to serve youth in the Quiet Corner," Boyd said. "Funding this project is essential to keeping the camp open not just for the foreseeable future but for a very long time after. Thank you to Governor Ned Lamont for adding this item to the Bond Commission agenda."

"The Windham County 4-H Foundation Inc. is celebrating 70 years of service to Connecticut youth in 2024. Our large pond is the centerpiece of our property and programs," said Jane Rider, president of the Windham County 4H Foundation. "The reconstruction of the dam is vital to our Windham-Tolland 4-H Camp and Ragged Hill Woods Environmental Education programs' survival and to the lives of the thousands of children who come through our gates every year. They experience life and learning experiences 'unplugged' and engaged with the great outdoors and make lifelong friends. We are tre-

Day Kimball Health's Caitlyn Sward honored as a 2024 Healthcare Hero by CT Hospital Association

PUTNAM — Day Kimball Health is proud to announce that Caitlyn Sward has been honored with the 2024 Connecticut Hospital Association (CHA) Healthcare Heroes Award.

The 2024 CHA Healthcare Heroes Award celebrates and recognizes es the invaluable contributions of exceptional healthcare workers, both to their field and to the community at large. This year, the award was presented to an individual from each Connecticut hospital.

Sward is a Registered Dietician who originally came to Day Kimball as a dietician in its Oncology department. She quickly identified the need for food assistance on the hospital premises as dietitian-recommended patient nutrition directions were not being implemented due to lack of funds and poor access to transportation to other food assistance facilities. An analysis of the state's population showed that Northeastern Connecticut had one of the highest food insecure rates in the state with 11.9 percent of the population of Windham County experiencing food insecurity.

When new data emerged showing that the food insecurity rate had increased by an estimated 34.1 percent, Sward established a "Cupboard" in the spring of 2020 bringing more awareness to the importance of Windham County residents who regularly struggle with food provision. What's more, in addition to these staggering statistics, cancer patients often experience undue financial burden with 42 percent of cancer patients spend their entire life savings within two years of their diagnosis. This program, designed to address food insecurity issues for patients being treated within the Oncology department, has affectionately been named "Caitlyn's Cupboard."

Since Caitlyn's Cupboard began, more than 200 patients have been provided with food supplies as well as limited non-food supplies, nutrition education, and coupons for fresh produce and dairy. Caitlyn's Cupboard has been able to partner with IHSP's Daily Bread (a food assistance organization in the community) for cancer nutrition. The Caitlyn's Cupboard program continues to grow in its service to patients in our Oncology program and is supported via donations from the community and Day Kimball staff.

"Caitlyn exemplifies what it means to be a Healthcare Hero. Her dedication to serving our patients and community is truly inspirational," said Kyle Kramer, chief executive officer of Day Kimball Health. "Food insecurity is a critical issue in our community, affecting the health and well-being of many, especially those with chronic health conditions. Caitlyn is an invaluable asset to our organization, her patients, and the community. The food pantry program she created enhances our ability to treat the whole patient by addressing their nutritional needs during and after cancer treatment."

Since 2002, CHA has included a celebration of healthcare heroes as part of its Annual Meeting, which took place on Thursday, June 13. At the event, healthcare heroes who represent all types of care from every corner of Connecticut's hospitals received a certificate from CHA and a Proclamation from the Office of Gov. Ned Lamont, which says in part:

"This recognition celebrates your outstanding leadership. The honor you are receiving signifies your outstanding professional accomplishments in the healthcare services sector... Through your thoughtful work, you have demonstrated professional excellence and extraordinary service to your community, organization, and to the State of Connecticut. Therefore, I, Ned Lamont, Governor of the State of Connecticut, on this day of Thursday, June 13, 2024, do hereby officially convey honor and recognition upon Caitlyn Sward.

Northeast CT community pulls together to help church in need

EASTFORD — Several churches of northeast Connecticut are excited to host the "Fabulously Fun Family Fundraiser" on July 6 from 3-7:30 p.m. to benefit the Congregational Church of Eastford (CCE) Fire Fund.

This family-friendly event, sponsored by local area churches, and generously supported by many area businesses, promises an afternoon of fun, games, and entertainment for all ages.

The Congregational Church of Eastford Fire Fund was established to support the replacement of the historic Congregational Church of Eastford following the devastating fire earlier last year. All proceeds from the event will directly contribute to the rebuilding efforts, helping to provide a new home for this service-focused congregation.

One of the organizers, Herm Barlow said, "I have been pleasantly surprised by how widespread the support for this effort has been, crossing many cultural and faith values. This demonstrates that in northeast Connecticut, community is still highly valued."

Old Trinity Church to hold Independence Day Eucharist

BROOKLYN — In honor of Independence Day, the public is invited to an historic Eucharist at Old Trinity Church on Sunday, June 30 at 10 a.m. Located at 60 Church St., Old Trinity is the oldest standing Episcopal church in Connecticut. The service will feature a salute to American folk music officiated by priest-in-charge, The Rev. Dr. Gretchen S. Grimshaw.

Also at Old Trinity, there will be a healing service with Gospel music Saturday, July 20 at 2 p.m.

For information visit <http://www.trinityepiscopalchurchbrooklyn.org>.

Trinity's services are available online at <https://www.facebook.com/trinity-churchbrooklyn>.

The series wraps up on Friday, Aug. 9 at 6:30 p.m. (rain date Sunday, August 11) with popular local band The Triple Double. Triple Double brings a folky, mellow sound to covers of popular hits from the '60s to the '90s, along with a few original songs. Their perfectly blended vocals and tight harmonies are complemented by guitar and bass for a silky-smooth take on an eclectic mix of recognizable songs.

Roseland Cottage is located at 556 Route 169 in Woodstock.

POMFRET — State Sen. Mae Flexer and State Rep. Pat Boyd (D-Pomfret) are welcoming State Bond Commission approval of more than a million dollars for upgrades to the Pomfret Public Library.

The Pomfret Public Library was built in 1739 and was the first public library in eastern Connecticut. The library receives more than 10,000 visitors a year and hosts a variety of programs every week that attract more than 2,000 attendees.

"The Pomfret Public Library expansion is a critical investment in our community, helping to transform it into a modern community and library space," said Boyd. "I want to extend my thanks to Governor Lamont and members of "This project comes at a crucial time," said First Selectwoman Maureen Nicholson. "The need for connection is growing as we become more dependent on remote interactions. Pomfret's Public Library provides a variety of opportunities for residents to meet and socialize in person in a time of growing isolation. With the space this addition will provide, our community will be enriched with greater opportunities and expanded spaces to come together. When we gather, our community fabric grows stronger, our residents feel connected, and our lives are enhanced."

WOODSTOCK — The Benson-Flugel Post 111 American Legion, Inc. invites the public to our free open house and breakfast on June 22 from 8-10 a.m. Come to our post, located at 22 Stone Bridge Rd., Woodstock, to see what we do for our veterans and the community and see our newly renovated post home.

We are always looking for new members and due to the Legion Act of 2019, all veterans who have served since Dec. 7, 1941 are eligible to join.

PUTNAM — Cub Scout Pack 21, of Putnam, will host a spaghetti and meatball dinner, including salad and garlic bread, this Saturday, June 22, from 2 until 5 p.m. at the Albert J. Breault VFW Post 1523, 207 Providence St., Putnam. Tickets are $10 for adults and $7 for children 12 and under. Take-out or eat-in. There will also be a bake sale and raffles to benefit our program. Tickets are available at the VFW Post and at Joseph's Jewelers, 153 School St., Putnam, or by calling (860) 928-7241. Why vinyl is making a comeback

In an era where digital streaming services dominate the music industry, it's fascinating to observe the resurgence of vinyl records. What is it about these relics of the past that continues to captivate new generations and rekindle nostalgia in older ones?

Vinyl records, once thought to be obsolete with the advent of CDs and digital downloads, have experienced a renaissance over the past decade. Sales have soared, with records outselling CDs for the first time in decades.

One of the key reasons behind this comeback is the tangible and tactile experience that vinyl offers. In a world where music is often reduced to intangible files on a smartphone, vinyl records provide a physical connection to the music. The process of selecting a record, carefully placing it on the turntable, and gently lowering the needle creates a ritualistic experience that digital formats simply cannot replicate.

The sound quality of vinyl is another compelling factor. Audiophiles argue that vinyl records offer a warmer, richer sound compared to the compressed audio files of digital music. The analog nature of vinyl captures the nuances and imperfections of the original recording, providing a listening experience that many find more authentic and immersive.

Moreover, the artwork and packaging of vinyl records add an aesthetic value that digital formats lack. Album covers on vinyl are often considered works of art in themselves, with their larger size allowing for more detailed and impactful designs. The liner notes, lyric sheets, and additional artwork included in vinyl releases offer a deeper insight into the artist's vision and creativity, making the listening experience more comprehensive.

The resurgence of vinyl is also driven by a growing desire for a more intentional and mindful approach to music consumption. In an age of instant gratification and endless streaming options, vinyl encourages listeners to slow down and savor the music. It demands attention and engagement, as flipping the record and changing sides becomes a part of the listening journey. This intentionality is a refreshing change from the passive and often distracted way we consume music today.

Record stores, once thought to be dying out, are thriving again, becoming hubs for music enthusiasts to gather, discover, and discuss music. Record Store Day, an annual event celebrating independent record stores, has grown in popularity, drawing crowds of eager fans looking for exclusive releases and rare finds.

Vinyl records, with their crackles and pops, their weight and presence, are more than just a medium for music—they are timeless.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Happy birthday, Mr. Trump!

To the Editor:
Today [June 14], former President Donald Trump is marking his 78th birthday. We should hope that he enjoys the day, relishing his family, his friends, and his good fortune. Meanwhile, as we're thinking of birthdays, it's a fair time to think about reproductive rights as they stand today, and as they will evolve in a second Trump administration.

As everyone knows, the U.S. Supreme Court two years ago issued the decision in Dobbs v. Jackson that repealed Roe v. Wade. Dobbs took away a woman's right to make abortion decisions privately with her doctor and left that health choice subject to the whims of state legislators. Many here in Connecticut and in other blue states assume that abortion rights will always remain intact here, as we have a legislature that would never curtail a woman's freedom to choose.

That's a false sense of security. Many pro-lifers support a national abortion ban similar to those that have passed in states such as Alabama and Texas. With GOP majorities in both houses, should that occur, a reelected Trump could well sign a national ban that would supersede the privileges afforded by the laws of any given state.

Well, at least, contraception would still be safe, right? Oh no. The right to contraception was established in 1965 in a case called Griswold v. Connecticut. In his concurring opinion in the Dobbs decision, Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas said this: "[I]n future cases, we should reconsider all of this Court's substantive due process precedents, including Griswold v. Connecticut [b]ecause any substantive due process decision is "demonstrably erroneous [and]. ... we have a duty to "correct the error" established in those precedents . . ."

You didn't think they'd outlaw abortion, did you? So watch out when they tell you that the day may come when your doctor can no longer prescribe you a contraceptive, nor your drugstore sell it to you legally.

They don't even have to wait for the Supreme Court to act. In 1873, Congress passed what is known as The Comstock Act, that forbids mailing anything related to contraception or abortion. Over the next fifty years, hundreds who dared violate that statute wound up in prison, and targets of prosecution turned into suicides in at least fifteen documented instances. Prosecutions under the Act ground to a halt when the zealot Mr. Comstock finally met his maker, but the Act is still on the books and enforceable. Do you think Trump would not appoint as Attorney General a modern Comstock bent on enforcing the Act again? Do you think Clarence Thomas and his allies would strike down the Comstock Act?

I sincerely hope that the former president enjoys his day today. I would not wish upon him or anyone else the misery that I fear would visit many if he is granted a second term.

actually going through their minds. Except for Greene, who is a lost soul.

Just think how someone could choose to let our country fall to an avowed dictator just to keep the perks of a government title. Human frailty at its worse. Ask Liz Cheney or Adam Kinzinger about courage.

I will keep beating this dead horse to dust by defending the memory of all the brave men and women who fought and died to defend our democracy. These Republicans would trade all of this for a parking space?

Now Ms. Burdick, I would like to close my part of our dialogue by responding to a few of your well crafted statements.

As you may have read above, I choose to get my information from MSNBC. The reason is I enjoy listening to intelligent commentators bringing what I believe is the truth to my attention. So, no brainwashing.

My intention for calling you ...lady was strictly out of courtesy. Allow me to explain: A gentlelady is defined as a woman of gentle disposition. Maybe you would have preferred gentlewoman? That is also a woman who is polite and well mannered. No insult intended.

Then again, as a member of the fairer sex who choses to support a man who sees women as a usable object, perhaps I should have just said "Hey, you."

Finally, I would have no qualms about helping President Joseph R. Biden, a man of character, as his seeing-eye person. I would even say woof on occasion.

All the best.

A well deserved honor

To the Editor:

Chamber Executive Director Elle-Jordyn Sherman has hit another home run at the Nccc annual award ceremony.

Emerging Leader of the Year Award was presented to Tayler Sazhin of NOW - Northeast Opportunities for Wellness, honoring her innovative spirit and commitment to shaping a prosperous future for Northeastern Connecticut. She is ultra dedicated to the health and well being of Northeast Connecticut youth.

Congratulations to Robin Dear Fillmore on being honored as Businesswoman of the Year by the Northeast Chamber of Commerce! This prestigious recognition is a testament to your remarkable journey, from an All-American gymnast to a successful business leader and mentor.

Your athletic prowess set the stage for an exemplary career, but it's your enduring dedication as a gymnastics coach and educator over the past four decades that truly distinguishes you. You have shaped countless young athletes, instilling in them the values of discipline, and excellence that defined your own career. Your leadership has not only fostered talent but also inspired a culture of hard work and achievement within the gymnastics community.

The transformative impact you've had extends beyond the gym. Your commitment to mentoring and guiding young minds has contributed significantly to their personal and professional growth, making you an inspiration in both athletics and business. Your award as Businesswoman of the Year acknowledges not just your achievements but also the lasting influence you've had on your community.

Robin's journey epitomizes excellence, perseverance, and leadership. Your legacy as a gymnast, coach, and businesswoman is a source of pride to our community and this accolade is a well-deserved recognition of your unwavering dedication and outstanding contributions.

My opinion on Trump is based on observation

To the Editor:
Letters in the Villager are under the heading "Opinion," and rightfully so. How those opinions are formed is where the big differences are found. To quote the late Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, "Everyone is entitled to his own opinion, but not his own facts."

My very negative opinion of Donald Trump doesn't come from talk radio, social media, or bias cable networks. It comes from my own observations over the last 50 years. Starting in the 1970s, those of us who lived near New York City were subjected to reports of Trump's misdeeds almost every time we turned on the TV or picked up a newspaper. He was viewed as a cartoon-like con artist by everyone I knew, regardless of their political preferences. His sleazy and corrupt business practices in New York usually involved equally sleazy politicians or organized crime figures. His personal life was another never ending "soap opera." He's only gotten worse with age.

Back then, if you had suggested that Trump could become president someday, the laughter would have been deafening. But here we are -- Trump scammed his way into the White House in 2016, and he almost dismantled our democracy. We can't give him another shot at it.

Friends are the best medicine

Friendship is being prescribed like a miracle pill that can alleviate what ails us. Torn between the promises of eternal life and immediate cessation of gastric distress from pharmaceutical sponsors of "60 Minutes" on Sunday night, and dire warnings from purists that all medicine is evil, what else is left? We can exercise, give up alcohol, practice intermittent fasting, breathe and keep breathing and make friends. Keep friends, too.

NANCY WEISS

We can't pick our relatives, neighbors, work associates or classmates, but we can pick our friends. Becoming someone's friend is a voluntary action and it makes life so much better, even in ways we can't quite measure, because friendship is something everyone wants. Articles I've read compare a lack of friendship to being as harmful as smoking a pack of cigarettes a day. I think the comparison of lacking friends and cigarettes is an awkward one, but it does underscore the seriousness of being the solo kid on the playground. Awful.

With luck, most of us make our first friend before we are five. My first friend, with whom I have lunch every year, loved kittens, bike rides and following my lead in whatever imaginary world I hatched up. She was patient and her ego didn't need to be stroked. I can recall how she smelled, gritted her teeth when trying something difficult and giggled when a remark struck her as funny. Along with my fox terrier, she taught me lessons in friendship that lasted. We weren't especially similar as children and we aren't as adults, but a special bond linked us then and it was an early gift.

In elementary school came the painful moment when it was clear that boys and girls weren't supposed to be friends. Boys had more freedom and seemed more fearless, full of fun, but one day the pleasure of building forts in the woods and stomping through swamps ended. Other kids turned the friendships into girlfriend-boyfriend relationships and that ruined them. Later, I formed wonderful friendships with people who don't identify rigidly by gender, which enriches my life enormously.

For many years, my brother operated several large manufacturing plants. When he offered a person a job after they had been vetted by the HR department, he asked them to describe their experiences in high school. He believes that our self-image in those years is pivotal. Having at least one friend can make adolescent years not just bearable but enjoyable. I'm in touch with several friends from that era of my life. We grateful to have grown together.

I'll go on a long hike in the fall with my best friend from college. We met at orientation and knew immediately that we would be friends. Through a couple of marriages (hers), a pair of children for each of us, careers, ups and downs, we can still pick up a conversation wherever we left off. Although I was a bride's maid in nine weddings of college friends, most of us lost track of each other and never connected again. I'm grateful the first one stuck.

Life as an adult would be dismal without friends. A close friend was 30 years older than I, another merely 20. I am 20 years older than several current friends. Age isn't especially important. Most important are a precious, generous handful of people with whom I share anything. They are a lifeline to me. They listen when I am tedious and tell me the truth. They are as sustaining as sunshine. Their company makes life more vivid and more amusing. The exercise of making and keeping friends is the best medicine.

To the Editor:

It's pretty rich that Brenda Burdick should accuse critics of convicted felon and rapist Donald Trump of being brainwashed in the June 14 Villager. In her letter, she uses many of the devices employed by the Trump media to brainwash its consumers- lies, false equivalencies, amateurishly edited videos and sophomoric insults of opponents' physical appearance.

Is there any wonder? Ms. Burdick seems to believe that a couple of Fox News shows, that she highly recommends, reveal the objective truth. That idea is laughable given Fox News' history of lying about the 2020 election and paying out $787 million for that lie with further lawsuits pending. Maybe readers will recall that right-wing hero Tucker Carlson was fired by Fox over his role and other Fox executives lost their jobs.

Bad Democrats are why Republicans win elections

To The Editor:

Here's to hoping this little blurb isn't buried in too many long-winded articles about Donald Trump Donald Trump Donald Trump, but I'd like to be the voice of reason while people in my own party can't stop writing long-winded wastes of time regurgitating stuff people can easily get in a few clicks on MSNBC's YouTube channel. Bonus points when local Democratic Town Committees are stupid enough to repost these blurbs which already brought nothing new to the table, preaching to the choir as usual instead of trying to relate to regular Joes who don't nerd out on C-SPAN, CT-N, and WINY's Facebook page 24/7.

At this point, everyone knows that Donald Trump is a convicted felon. He should have leaned into the meme when he had his little fling with Stormy Daniels instead of trying to cover it up. I'm not here to showcase the usual problems with Democrats being out of touch elitists who live in ivory towers and can't be practical about things though.

The truth is that the two major parties are like those times in the private sector when we see companies and sometimes an entire industry pop up and do well when something else is crap. The success of those businesses depends entirely on whether or not the other side gets their act together. Satellite TV is one example, doing well when cable was a bloated mess, and now they're either in someone else's portfolio or risking filing for bankruptcy in today's cord-cutting world. Tesla was great with the Roadster when other electric cars had no mainstream appeal. Now they struggle as numerous more established competitors finally start making decent electric cars. Apple did great when they had something nobody else had, but then devolved into a money sucking boutique brand that makes techies like me annoyed when they're not on top of their game.

Then there's the Democrats, sitting pretty in a position where elections are theirs to lose. Good luck getting them to acknowledge this though as they bumble about with weak candidates and a persistent inability to look like they're down to Earth about anything, persistently feeding Republican narratives about them even though the Republicans themselves have nothing good to offer and are simply trying to save face.

What even are the Republicans these days? The GOP has been ideologically bankrupt for decades. The reason Donald Trump is so popular is because he's the first person in a long time that a lot of them could win something with, even if it drove them nuts in the process. It's like that person we may know or hear about that is single for a very long time and then ends up in a very bad marriage because they rush to the altar with the first person that will actually go out with them.

The Republicans have suffered badly when it comes to coming up with hot-shot leaders like Bill Clinton or Barack Obama over the years. Before Trump they were propping up Mitt Romney, a moderate that conservatives used to laugh at, until he became their guy. Then John McCain, another one that conservatives laughed at, until he became their guy. George W. Bush had some conservatism to him as an evangelical Christian, so the party of Reagan's sense of direction pretty much crashed with the 2008 financial crisis.

Has it recovered since? I don't know. You tell me. Being a Republican nowadays is about pretending to support morality while bending over backwards for a fat old rich guy who's had multiple wives and now, as we've seen with the felony convictions, flings with spicy adult stars. Or how about supposedly wanting more of the free market while instantly hating green technology or electric cars? How about screaming "America First!" while instantly hating Covid vaccines from Moderna, a company based out of Massachusetts?

Worst of all, how about Republicans tooting around with Confederate flags or Trump flags on their trucks instead of The Stars And Stripes? Yeah that's right folks. Being a Republican is no longer about showing off the flag that countless people with the guts to take a bullet for this country fought and died for. Let's replace it with a flag representing a bunch of rich Southerners suckering people into fighting for slavery, or a flag about a 21st century rich guy suckering people into attacking police officers and

In Ms. Burdick's world, somehow Trump's 34 felony convictions equal some unspecified Democratic criminals in New York, none of whom who are running to be President of the United States. And, of course, no defense of Trump would be complete without at least one lie, which in this case is that all the jurors in Trump's felony trial were Democrats.

Finally, if Fox News viewers ever tire of seeing President Trump stumble on a stairway, maybe they should watch and read real news media that don't intentionally lie, and when it does get something wrong, makes a correction. They might actually hear the un-American, racist, and often unhinged things Trump is saying.

Sincerely,

BILLY G. TAYLOR

Masterful incoherence

To the Editor:

OK. Yes, Biden fluffs a word now and them. But then again, who doesn't? We all do, but we don't have a national press corps or an entire political party out head hunting for every gaff.

So let's look at his unworthy opponent. Trump not only slurs his words, but he can't even put together a cogent sentence. To wit – a recent quote from your fearful leader you need to read twice to fully appreciate his incoherence:

“Religion is such a great thing, it's... so it keeps..you know, there's something to be good about you want to be good you want to, it's so important, I don't know...if it's explained right...I don't know, if I am explaining it right, I don't know... if I am explaining it right, you know, you want to be good, you want to go to Heaven, when you have something like that, you want to go to Heaven, OK? So you want to go to Heaven, so if we don't have Heaven, OK, you almost say, what's the reason why I have to be good, so let's not be good; what difference does it make?”

His eloquence and mastery of the English language leaves us in awe. And let's not overlook the lucid presentation of his solid religious beliefs. Neither you nor I can make this crap up. We're not that disconnected from reality.

Day Kimball Hospital hosts heartwarming wedding ceremony

Holly Rzepa and Doug Rogers, Day Kimball Health staff members, were married at a ceremony at Day Kimball Hospital on Friday, May 31.

PUTNAM — Love was in the air at Day Kimball Hospital as two dedicated staff members, Holly Rzepa and Doug Rogers, tied the knot on Friday, May 31. The ceremony, officiated by DKH Chaplain Reverend Jonathan Scott, took place in the hospital courtyard where perfect weather provided a beautiful backdrop for family, friends, and co-workers to attend the ceremony.

Holly Rzepa, a cook in Nutritional Services since June 2018, and Doug Rogers, a housekeeper in Environmental Services since February 2023, wanted a simple and meaningful celebration with those who have supported their journey. Choosing the hospital was a natural decision as they both value the sense of closeness and support from their colleagues.

“Most of our friends work here, so we thought this would be a way to include all of them,” the couple shared.

Holly first noticed Doug during his workouts at Owen Tarr Park in Putnam, and the couple officially met through a mutual friend at Holly’s 30th birthday celebration. After 10 years together, Doug proposed to Holly on Christmas Eve 2023 at “The Big Ornament” in Rotary Park, making for a memorable proposal.

“We are thrilled to celebrate the union of Holly and Doug,” said Kyle Kramer, CEO of Day Kimball Health. “Their story is a testament to the sense of community and support that defines our hospital. This event was truly a collaborative effort. Our staff came together to decorate the courtyard, Nutritional Services provided flowers and a post-ceremony breakfast for the couple and their families, and staff and patients cheered Holly and Doug on from the windows during the ceremony while our chaplain performed the ceremony. We were happy to host their nuptials and wish them a lifetime of happiness together.”

Working together has strengthened their bond, even though they are in different departments and rarely see each other during shifts. Doug has enjoyed watching Holly grow in her role at the hospital. When she started at DKH, she was in the dish room, then moved to cook, head cook and now she is the lead on the weekends she works. Their colleagues have been incredibly supportive, ensuring they share the same days off to spend more time together. This has allowed them to travel and enjoy beach trips, further enriching their relationship.

The happy couple has some advice for other couples planning on getting married: live in the now and don’t postpone it. As they look forward to their future together, Holly and Doug are most excited about making more cherished memories together.

SENIORS SING TO SENIORS

Twice a year, the Mansfield Senior Center Chorus takes to the road to share their music. They travel to sites in Windham, Mansfield, Killingly, Hebron and Lebanon where they visit nursing homes, assisted living facilities and Senior Centers. Programs feature a variety of music, and the audience is encouraged to sing along. This year, a former member, 100 year old Bob Guttay, a D Day Veteran and resident of Creamery Brook, performed a duet with current member Stu Sidney, age 83. Two of our members rocked to a Beatles Medley. The chorus is also home to Howard Drescher, a composer and musician. Together with Bruce Kay who accompanied him on the fiddle, he performed one of his own songs. Members, who must be at least 55 years old, perform under the direction of Dr. Charles Houmad and are accompanied by Nancy DuCharme.

currently wear uniforms adorned with just the town's name. Supporters of the change feel that the students are being put in an unfair position of having to answer to other schools for their defense or opposition of the mascot that represents them on the field.

The recommendation to change the mascot was presented by ad hoc committee chair and Board of Education member Kevin Marcoux, a Democrat who served as Athletic Director at KHS during the initial name change. Marcoux cited past letters from the Nipmuck Tribe and emailed support from the majority of coaches at KHS asking for the district to move on and choose a new name.

"The letter from the KHS Athletic Department was signed by 14 head coaches which represents 20 of the 23 athletic offerings at the school as some of the head coaches are in multiple sports. In the letter, coaches outline several instances when students have been the target of ridicule from opposing players and spectators due to the controversy surrounding the current mascot. It places them in a difficult position to either defend the mascot or to defend their stance on wanting to change mascots, neither of which is a position we should be putting our students in. The coaches have asked that the current mascot be retired and that a new mascot be selected," said Marcoux.

Republican board member Kyle Napierata made the point that the letters from the Nipmuck tribe were not new documents and that other than the email from the coaches there was little new public input provided for the board to consider. Like most aspects of the debate, the argument over public opinion was split along party lines with Republicans saying their conversations with citizens have shown support for the mascot and Democrats saying they've been told there needs to be change. Members of both parties acknowledged there may be a communication bias in these opinions and that both sides should hear from the public at large. The idea of holding a public survey on the mascot was briefly discussed and supported by members of both parties, however that did not result in an official motion.

Some Republicans board members, such as Kelly Martin, made the point that the name change was being poorly prioritized and that the grant money it's costing the town isn't even earmarked for education.

"Since the new board took over, we've had one curriculum meeting, one policy meeting, two bullying meetings, and four mascot meetings. Where are the priorities? During a reassessment year when taxpayers must choose between housing, food, and medicine, the board is prioritizing changing the team's name imposing yet another financial burden on taxpayers. The $94,000 goes to the town, it does not go to the school system. The timing and the intent are both flawed," Martin said.

Building off Martin's statement, Republicans questioned the cost of making the change which Marcoux said would be minimal as refinishing the gym floors, buying new uniforms and other related costs are already part of the annual athletic budgets. He argued the only major cost would be $250 to design a new logo.

In defending the move, Democrats said they felt it was simply time to move on from the controversial mascot, and that the debate has negatively affected the image of the town. Misty Murdock, who was one of the Democrats elected to the board last year, said the district has already found it difficult to bring in new talent due to many controversies, including but not limited to the mascot. Board Vice Chair Danny Rovero, who was elected alongside Murdock in 2023 on the Democratic ticket, acknowledged his frustration with the state for withholding funding, but said he feels that the sentiment over the mascot has shifted, and that people are ready to move on.

"So $94,000 — we talk about it's going to go to the town, not the Board of Education, but no matter who it goes to, $94,000 is a lot of cabbage. I wouldn't mind getting it, I can tell you that," said Rovero. "I talked to a lot of people about changing the name, and some of them who were very against changing the name last time now have no problem changing the name provided you have some sort of a ceremony that puts the Redmen to rest."

Board Chair Susan Lannon, who admitted she wasn't born or raised in Killingly and moved there as an adult, said she admired the pride Killingly takes in its mascot although she feels this is "unique" to the town as many move on from their high school teams as they grow up. Acknowledging that pride, she admitted that being involved in the decision was "humbling"; however, she also felt it was time to retire the Redmen name.

"I've met people who support it, who love it, who are ready to move on because it's the time and the place. Whether or not you loved this mascot when it was your turn, it's not your turn right now. It's the students' turn, and they've told us in prior surveys that they want the mascot to be changed," said Lannon. "For me, it's truly not about me. It's about the children and the money equally. As a town we cannot turn away, continuously, $94,000 but also the children have told us they want a mascot, and we deserve to give them one."

The roll call vote saw a 5-4 split with every Democrat voting in favor of the motion and every Republican voting against it. The result will instruct the Superintendent to develop a process to select a new mascot to officially retire the Redmen.

SANFORD

Woodstock Academy's history and complete a 25-year career in education. During his time as Head of School, Sandford highlighted Woodstock Academy's endurance through a pandemic, expansion to a second campus after inheriting the former Hyde School property, and the renovation of the Academy Building as well as significant increases in endowments.

In a letter signed by Board of Trustees Chair Christine Swenson, she thanked Sandford for his commitment to the school and his work enhancing the institution.

"We set out to find a Head of School who was a visionary educational leader, with superb soft skills who would embody the values of the institution and would live and breathe The Academy. We are tremendously grateful that Chris accepted the challenge and joined us on what has been an amazing journey. Collaboration was his guiding principle in the pursuit of new opportunities or resolution of challenges. His natural ability to combine big picture perspective with detailed execution, genuine caring, and tireless dedication have been truly transformative and will leave a lasting impact. Most importantly, Chris has been a fearless advocate for our students, placing their benefit and well-being at the forefront of his efforts," said Swenson. "We are forever indebted to Chris for his service and dedication to The Academy and while we are sad to see him go, we wish him all the best in his retirement. He will leave The Academy exceptionally well-prepared to continue progressing forward."

Swenson said she will personally oversee the search for a new Head of School as the Academy enters its final year under Sandford's leadership this fall.

Worcester Polytechnic Institute announces Dean's List

WORCESTER, Mass. — A total of 2,226 undergraduate students at Worcester Polytechnic Institute (WPI) achieved the criteria required for the university's spring 2024 Deans List. The criteria for the WPI Dean's List differs from that of most other universities as WPI does not compute a grade point average (GPA). Instead, WPI defines the Dean's List by the amount of work completed at the A level in courses and projects.

"WPI's academic programs are rigorous and require a level of independence beyond what is required in traditional courses. WPI students work on open-ended problems for communities around the world. The problems are important and the impact is real" said Professor Arthur C. Heinricher. "Some of this nation's best and brightest students come to WPI to study engineering and science and business and the humanities. Those named to the Dean's List have excelled in all of their work, and we are exceptionally proud of these outstanding students."

The following students were named to the Dean's List for Spring 2024:

Meredith Bergendahl, of Pomfret Center, class of 2027, majoring in Biology and Biotechnology
John Peabody, of Woodstock, class of 2025, majoring in Biomedical Engineering
Connor Quinn, of Woodstock, class of 2025, majoring in Electrical and Computer Engineering
Zachary Roethlein, of Pomfret Center, class of 2026, majoring in Aerospace Engineering
Brooke Peloquin of Putnam, class of 2025, majoring in Mechanical Engineering
John Steglitz of Thompson, class of 2025, majoring in Biomedical Engineering
About Worcester Polytechnic Institute
WPI, a global leader in project-based learning, is a distinctive, top-tier technological university founded in 1865 on the principle that students learn most effectively by applying the theory learned in the classroom to the practice of solving real-world problems. Recognized by the National Academy of Engineering with the 2016 Bernard M. Gordon Prize for Innovation in Engineering and Technology Education, WPI's pioneering project-based curriculum engages undergraduates in solving important scientific, technological, and societal problems throughout their education and at more than 50 project centers around the world. WPI offers more than 70 bachelor's, master's, and doctoral degree programs across 18 academic departments in science, engineering, technology, business, the social sciences, and the humanities and arts. Its faculty and students pursue groundbreaking research to meet ongoing challenges in health and biotechnology; robotics and the internet of things; advanced materials and manufacturing; cyber, data, and security systems; learning science; and more. www.wpi.edu mendously grateful to the Bonding Commission for their support which will save our pond and enable us to keep our camp affordable to Connecticut families.”

This saga goes back to 2018 when while weed whacking, seepage on the downstream face of the dam embankment near the low level drain and several sink holes were discovered on the dam. The Foundation has been working with DEEP and civil engineering firms since then.

Foundation Treasurer Sandra Ahola said, “We have been working to raise funds for the dam since this discovery. We have already expended $250,000 for engineering and design costs, surveys and inspections and an emergency bank stabilization repair, recently completed by Steve Donahue Construction. These expenses were covered by generous donors including The Gates Group, Buck’s Soft Serve, a grant from the Last Green Valley, ARPA grant awards from the towns of Brooklyn, Killingly, Pomfret and the Borough of Danielson, Foundation reserves, a number of fundraisers and several generous individual donors. The thought of trying to raise an additional one million dollars to fix the dam seemed so overwhelming. This state grant ensures that the dam will be able to be reconstructed in a timely fashion, saving our pond. We have campers from across the state of Connecticut every summer. We work hard to keep fees as low as possible and provide campership support to as many as we can, so feel that this state support is reasonable and so much appreciated. What a wonderful 70th birthday present this is!”

A mid-year outlook on 2024 interest rates, market performance and more

This has been a record-breaking year in the stock markets. The Dow Jones Industrial Average crossed the 40,000 milestone in mid-May continuing this amazingly strong bull market rally. The S&P 500 and Nasdaq have also risen to new record levels—not the eye-catching, round-number variety, but records nonetheless.

The stock markets’ latest push higher was fueled by increased conviction that the Federal Reserve has engineered a soft landing. Earnings seem reasonably strong, most everyone who wants a job has one, and wages are rising. It’s widely believed that the Fed’s interest rate hiking cycle has concluded and it will begin a rate cutting cycle some time over the next year.

From the start of the year through May 22, Nasdaq has jumped 11.9 percent, the S&P 500 has gained 11.3 percent, and the Dow Jones Industrial Average has added 5.3 percent.

As we enter the second half of 2024, it seems likely that large cap growth stocks will continue to outperform and bonds will offer both income and diversification. That said, investors should take a moment to rebalance portfolios because future returns are never guaranteed.

Large growth still dominates

Large capitalization growth stocks have continued to vastly outperform other styles of equity investments. The iShares S&P 500 Growth ETF has risen 26.5 percent over the past year through May 23, far exceeding 17.9 percent one-year gain in the iShares S&P 500 Value ETF.

Large companies have benefitted from trends like artificial intelligence, which require substantial amounts of capital to build out the necessary technology. Small companies may not have the same financial resources that their larger counterparts enjoy and often pay higher interest rates on borrowings. Consider that 41 percent of small-cap companies were unprofitable in the first quarter, while only 7 percent of large-cap companies were unprofitable during that period, JPMorgan Asset Management reports.

As large-cap growth stocks have outperformed, their representation in the broader indexes has grown. Over the past decade, the percentage of large-cap stocks in the Russell 3000 Index has risen from 50 up to 73 percent as of March 31. Conversely, small-capitalization stocks have shrunk from 12 percent of the index 10 years ago to 4.5 percent at the end of last quarter; the folks at Commonwealth Financial Network® report.

Investing at home

Most international equity markets have underperformed the US stock markets and we expect that they will continue to do so going forward. Many of the international markets face geopolitical risks. Wars between Russia and Ukraine, Israel and Hamas and hostile barbs traded between the US and China makes us more comfortable investing closer to home.

Don’t forget to rebalance

As we all know, the past performance of stock markets is not a guaranty that they enjoy positive future returns. So, it’s always important to rebalance portfolios, trimming investments that have had the best performance and using the proceeds to increase exposure to areas that have underperformed. Doing so once or twice a year is often a good practice to ensure a portfolio doesn’t become over-exposed to any one area.

Given the sharp outperformance in equities and the losses in the bond market last year, now might be an opportune time to increase a portfolio’s exposure to the bond market. If interest rates fall modestly in the months to come, as we expect will occur, bonds should once again provide investors with income and the benefit of diversification.

Talking with an investment advisor about rebalancing strategies can be vitally important to your investment portfolio’s performance today and in the future. That’s why at Weiss, Hale & Zahansky our team considers the entire financial picture for each client as part of our strategic Plan Well, Invest Well, Live Well™ process. The Class of ’24...1924

After reading my June 7 article on old plants, Marilyn Labbe sent me a rhyme she said that she learned while growing up. “This is the rhyme they used when planting corn, and other seeds. One for the blackbird, one for the crow, One for the Grub Worm, One to Grow.” I had never heard it, but perhaps it was a regional saying.

In reference to last week’s article about the flag, I received an email on June 14 with a little more on the topic. “Some historians attribute the design of the first flag to Francis Hopkinson, a New Jersey delegate to the Continental Congress and signer of the Declaration of Independence, who also played a role in designing seals for various departments within the U.S. government. In 1780, Hopkinson sought payment from the Board of Admiralty for his design of the flag of the United States of America. However, his petition for payment was denied on the grounds that ‘he was not the only one consulted’ on the design.” I wonder who else was consulted. I didn’t realize that his petition for payment was denied. (www.history.com/news/did-betsy-ross-really-make-the-first-american-flag?cmpid=email-hist-inside-history-onequestion-2024-0614-06142024&om_rid=)

Since June is the month of graduations, I thought I’d look at who was in the graduating class at Killingly High School 100 years ago. Fortunately, the Killingly Historical Center is the repository for the Alumni files so I had access to a 1924 Killonian. The class members were listed under Personalities. Dana B. Man does he study...” “However, Dana has found time to distinguish himself as an athlete.” The little sketch accompanying his profile is of a guy with his nose buried in a book. Earle N. Bassett. Motto: Do what you can and what you can’t do, trust to luck.” Anita Berthiune. “Motto. If you want a thing done, do it yourself.” “She is the youngest member of the class.” Laurie Beeney. “Motto. Now for a comment about “a fur-lined bath tub.” An internet search helped only a little and did not really explain the expression, but I did find some interesting tidbits. In days gone by metal or even wooden tubs were often lined with fabric such as linen sheeting to help protect the user from the sharp edges of the metal or from wooden splinters. I was asking my youngest sister Susie if she’d ever heard the expression, and she was able to come up with the following site: www.weirduniverse.net/blog/comments/velvet_lined_bathtub. The Nov. 27, 1936 Emory County Progress showed a photo of Broadway dancer Barbara Beck of New York City with her new mohair velvet bathtub. “Interior decorators predict a popular future for this new fad.” (Courtesy of Susan Dayan June 4). Hmm! I don’t think it ever took off. However, it did provoke interesting discussions.

I thought the bathtub was much older than it actually is. According to www.badeloftusa.com/ideas/history-of-the-bathtub/ it was invented by “John Michael Kohler in 1883 in Sheboygan, Wisconsin. Creating a horse trough out of cast iron, he attached four decorative feet and covered the whole thing in an enamel finish. His company, the Kohler company, who made their living off of creating products out of steel and cast iron, quickly changed production with Kohlr’s invention.”

“Ah! It’s just my luck!” yelled Bob, slamming the phone in frustration. In the high-stakes sales world, every call and meeting counts, and Bob had one of those months when nothing seemed to go right.
His colleagues were closing deals left and right while Bob sat at his desk, staring at another lost opportunity. It seemed that every deal slipped right through his fingers! Determined to change his luck, Bob approached Lisa, the top performer in their sales team. He asked, “How are you always so lucky? You’re making sales every day!”
“It’s not luck, Bob,” she laughed. “Luck has very little to do with it. Let me show you a few things that might change your perspective.” Lisa then shared her secrets for creating her own luck in sales.
“First off, physical fitness is important,” Lisa began. When you care for your body, you have mental clarity and won’t get stressed easily. A healthy body supports a sharp mind, essential in sales.”

Bob nodded, making mental notes. “I’ve been meaning to hit the gym,” he admitted.
“Next, courage is key. You must be willing to take risks, make that cold call, or approach a potential client. Fear of rejection is deadly in sales.”
“I do get nervous,” Bob said. “I guess that’s something I need to work on.”
“Imagination is another important factor,” Lisa said. “You need to think creatively about how to meet your client’s needs and solve their problems.”
Bob nodded. “I’ve always admired how you come up with unique solutions.”
“Your speech is also vital. How you communicate can make or break a deal. Clear, confident, and persuasive speech helps build trust and rapport.”
“That’s something I struggle with,” Bob admitted. “I sometimes stumble over my words.”
“Practice makes perfect,” Lisa encouraged. “A pleasing personality is another must-have. People want to do business with someone they like and trust. Be friendly, approachable, and genuinely interested.”

“I can do that,” Bob said. “I enjoy talking to people!”
“Self-confidence is a big one. If you don’t believe in yourself and the product you’re selling, neither will your clients. Confidence helps reassure clients that they’re making the right choice.”
“I’ll work on that,” Bob said determinedly. “I can see how all these factors play a role.”
Lisa paused and then leaned in closer. “Here’s a secret. Everything works a little in sales, and nothing works a lot. While all these factors are important, neither one of them alone would get you the sale, but combined, they increase your chances of success.”
Bob was starting to see the picture. “So, it’s about balance and putting it all together?”

“E x a c t l y,” Lisa said. “But there’s one factor that works more than all the others, and if you do it, it will change your luck.”
Lisa smiled at Bob. “Hard work is one thing you have absolute control over. And if you think about it, all the other points I mentioned boil down to hard work, too. Hard work is the most reliable way to improve your ‘luck’ and achieve success.”
With Lisa’s advice fresh in his mind, Bob decided to make some changes.
He set his alarm an hour earlier for a morning workout, boosting his energy and mood. He took risks, reaching out to clients he had felt too intimidated to approach or thought would say no. His imagination flourished as he brainstormed creative solutions for the client’s needs, and he practiced his speech in front of the mirror to improve his communication skills.

Bob also focused on developing a pleasing personality. He tried to be friendlier and more approachable, always showing genuine interest in clients. His self-confidence grew with each small victory, fueling his determination.
Eventually, he started closing deals, winning over clients with his dedication and newfound skills. Once a place of frustration, his desk now buzzed with activity and success.
One day, as Bob celebrated closing a major deal, he caught Lisa’s eye across the office. She smiled and gave him a thumbs-up, knowing that Bob had finally understood the relationship between work and luck.
Bob learned that it was never about chance—it was about putting in the hard work and dedication needed to achieve his desired success.

Celebrate Pollinator Month by inviting a variety of pollinators to your garden

Melinda Myers

A Monarch caterpillar on an Asclepias tuberosa plant.

June is National Pollinator Month and it’s a great time to celebrate all the pollinators that play an important role in producing food, fiber, medicine, and more that we rely on. When you think of pollinators, bees, butterflies, and hummingbirds are likely the first that come to mind. But moths, wasps, beetles, flies, bats, and some other birds also help pollinate our gardens. More than 80 percent of all flowering plant species, including 180,000 different species and more than 1,200 crops, rely on them for pollination.
Like honeybees and Monarch butterflies, many of these pollinators are struggling and their populations dwindling due to pesticides and loss of habitat. Gardeners can make a difference by creating pollinator gardens filled with their favorite plants.

When designing a garden select plants with different shapes, colors, and bloom times. You’ll attract a wide array of pollinators and provide them with a constant supply of nectar and pollen. Include bright white, yellow, blue, and ultraviolet-colored flowers to attract the bees. Add some tubular flowers with a spur or landing pad for the butterflies. They are especially fond of purple and red blossoms.

Don’t be in a hurry to squash those beetles you find meandering over your plants. Many do not harm the plant but rather move pollen as they travel throughout your garden. These generalists visit a variety of plants, but most often can be found pollinating large strongly scented flowers like Canadian ginger, magnolia, paw paws, and yellow pond lilies.
They can be annoying, but flies are also busy pollinating your flowers. They are generalists, like beetles, and tend to pollinate small flowers with shallow, funnel-like, or complex trap-like flowers. You’re likely to see them on annuals, bulbs, goldenrod, skunk cabbage, paw paws, and members of the carrot family.
It may be difficult to welcome the often dreaded and feared wasps and hornets to your garden. However, most are solitary, not all sting and some are predators or parasitoids that help manage garden pests.
Besides helping with mosquito control, bats pollinate over 500 species of night-blooming flowers around the world. They prefer those with a musty or rotten odor of mostly tropical and some varieties of desert plants.
Most of us enjoy watching hummingbirds visit our gardens and feeders. Hummingbirds are the primary bird pollinators in North America, carrying pollen on their beaks and feathers. They prefer brightly colored scarlet, orange, red, and white tubular flowers. Baltimore orioles are accidental pollinators spreading pollen as they feed on nectar while white-winged doves pollinate and spread saguaro cactus seeds.

MOMENTS

Be sure to include milkweed, herbs, trees, shrubs, and grasses with foliage that caterpillars and others feed upon. Use native plants including trees, shrubs, flowers, and grasses whenever possible. These plants have evolved with pollinators and provide the greatest benefit. Make sure the native plants you select are suited to the growing conditions and available space.
Don’t overlook cultivated plants that also attract and support pollinators. Many have flowers or foliage that benefit a variety of pollinators. Watch for bees visiting thyme, borage, and calamint flowers; hummingbirds sipping on salvia, cuphea, and verberna blossoms; and swallowtail caterpillars munching on dill, fennel, and parsley leaves.
Once you create a pollinator-friendly environment, give them time to discover your pollinator paradise. It may take time but once the word gets out you will be enjoying lots of pollinators and the many benefits they provide. Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love Sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your Sudoku savvy to the test!

Level: Intermediate

Here's How It Works: Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
