Thompson Congregational Church set to begin reconstruction

BY JASON BLEAU
VILLAGER CORRESPONDENT

THOMPSON — It's been ten years since a fire severely damaged one of Thompson's most recognizable landmarks, the Thompson Congregational Church, and now the rebuild effort appears to be proceeding into its final steps to reconstruct the most damaged parts of the facility.

Nestled in the center of town overlooking the Thompson Common, the Thompson Congregational Church has been one of the town's most recognizable structures for 170 years. In 2016, it was struck by a devastating blaze that severely damaged the back of the church and caused the roof to collapse. In the years since, a rebuild effort has sought to procure funding and support to rebuild the church using the remaining structure as the base. Those efforts are now moving forward according to a press release posted on the church's Facebook page, thanks to the recent approval from the Connecticut Historical Preservation Council for a $180,000 Historic Restoration Fund matching grant award which church representatives said was the largest issued by the state from that fund in 2025.

Those funds, combined with a $500,000 grant previously announced through the National Park Service, will allow the church to officially begin the first phase of its reconstruction, according to Church Rebuild Chair Bruce Hall.

"This approval reflects years of thoughtful planning and continuous leadership stewarding the rebuild effort, along with a shared commitment to the congregation and the Thompson community," said Bruce Hall in a statement. "The congregation has unanimously supported moving forward, and both federal and state agencies have provided funding after careful review of the plans for the project. With that work complete, we can now begin restoring the historic church as close as possible to what it once was."

The church is in its final architectural review which would allow them to access the National Park Service Grant. With that grant and the Historical Restoration Fund money now secured, the project is slated to go out to bid for Phase 1 of the rebuild this spring.

The plans include not only restoring the sanctuary, but also the development of the Thompson Hill of Hope Center to support services including adult education, youth and senior programming, preschool services, concerns, and more. Overall, the reconstruction effort is quoted as a $2.2 million investment, with around 40 percent funded through the state and federal grants and historical tax credits.

The fire in 2016 was deemed accidental due to an electrical issue in the basement of the church. Architectural firm Evelyn Cole Smith Architects, LLC is leading the reconstruction effort. It's possible that the church's reconstruction could be well underway before the congregation's 300th anniversary in 2030.

PUTNAM — On Sunday, Dec. 7, families and friends gathered on village greens in 11 communities across northeast Connecticut for Day Kimball Health's 36th annual Hospice Tree of Life ceremony. This year's tree-lighting tradition raised $33,500 to support hospice and palliative care services in the region.

Roger Franklin, a long-time volunteer of more than 22 years, served as the campaign's chairperson.

Supported by local clergy, civic organizations, community members, and hospice staff and volunteers, the ceremonies were held in the towns of Brooklyn, Canterbury, Danielson, Eastford, Griswold, Plainfield, Pomfret, Putnam, Sterling, Thompson, and Woodstock. Trees at each location were

Killingly officials plan public hearing on PFAS

BY JASON BLEAU
VILLAGER CORRESPONDENT

KILLINGLY — In his continued update on PFAS issues affecting the Rogers neighborhood of Killingly, Town Manager Brian Palaia said the focus is now beginning to turn to determining a cause and providing a public forum for citizens to learn all the details of the contamination.

In January, Palaia confirmed that more than 100 homes had been contacted for testing, and an estimated 78 homes had gone through with the process. At a meeting of the Town Council on Feb. 10, he confirmed earlier reports that around 66 homes had tested positive. Additional testing began before Christmas, but results had not been reported as of that meeting. Meanwhile, state agencies remain perplexed as to where the contamination began, and citizens are seeking a more focused meeting to stay informed about the situation.

Reports about PFAS have now become a common segment of Palaia's monthly report to the Town Council as numbers continue to trickle in showing a growing number of impacted homes. Members of the Council confirmed they have heard demands for a PFAS-focused informational session. Palaia said they are planning a public meeting with the Department of Public Health, tentatively scheduled for April 8, to provide a complete update to the citizens on the PFAS situation and what is being done to resolve the contamination and determine a source. A specific time and place for that meeting has yet to be announced.

Meanwhile, Palaia confirmed there weren't many new details to report on the testing, only that state agencies are starting to put more focus on determining the origin of the contamination.

"They are getting to the phase of their work where they're going to be more seriously looking at the investigation of where the source is and where it is going," said Palaia. "They haven't been seriously engaged in that part of the work yet. They've been focused on doing the test results, getting the remediation systems installed, and retesting some of the wells, so they don't really have an accurate sense yet of where it's going. They say doing that work may take them up to a year."

Previous assumptions were that the source was the fire training site in Rogers, but those assumptions have been unofficially debunked. State agencies now believe that a

Killingly Public Schools launches second installation of Art Around Town Artwork Trail

KILLINGLY — Killingly Public Schools (KPS) is proud to announce the launch of the second installation of the Art Around Town Artwork Trail, a creative collaboration between the school district and local businesses that celebrates student talent, creativity, and community connection.

The first Art Around Town installation was on display from May 2025 through December 2025, drawing community members into local spaces to experience student artwork and photography. Building on its success, the second installation continues this momentum, further strengthening connections between schools, families, businesses, and the broader community.

Art Around Town highlights the creativity, skill, and achievements of KPS students from Preschool- Grade 12 through artwork and photography displayed throughout the community. Serving students from 11 towns across Northeast Connecticut, Killingly Public Schools offers rich learning experiences and opportunities, and this exhibit brings student stories to life beyond the classroom.

Each piece reflects students' unique perspectives, talents, and potential. The project celebrates the arts while reinforcing KPS's role in shaping future leaders, strengthening the workforce, and nurturing engaged citizens. Students, families, staff, and community members are invited to explore the trail and experience the promise of the next generation through their creative work.

- Student artwork and photography are currently featured at the following locations:
- Sugarz Bakery
  - Killingly Public Library (Children's, Young Adult, and Computer Sections)
  - Two Dogs Coffee Shop
  - Chubby Dog Coffee Co.
  - Pourings and Passages Bookstore (Young Adult and Children's Sections)
  - Sweet Peas Fine Foods (Brooklyn)
  - The Vanilla Bean Café (Pomfret)
  - Killingly Board of Education Meeting Room

To make the experience even more engaging, students are invited to participate in a scavenger hunt as they explore the artwork around town, with opportunities to win small prizes.

Jim Weigel, Proprietor of Pourings and Passages Bookstore, stated, "The student art display was a big hit! It was so good to see such wonderful products from the young talented artists in our school district. We've seen so many more families visit us on their scavenger hunt who never knew our store existed."

Brittany, owner of Two Dogs Coffee Shop, stated, "I love that the artwork represents different ages. We have a kids' corner here, so when families come in, and children see the artwork on the walls, we can say, 'One day, your artwork could be here too.'"

For location addresses, scavenger hunt maps, and additional information, visit www.killinglyschools.org, select Community Partnerships in the top right corner, then click on Art Around Town, or visit: www.killinglyschools.org/community-partnerships-new/artwork-around-town

While visiting participating locations, community members are encouraged to scan the red QR code displayed at each site to leave a message for the student artists or share feedback on the displays.

Killingly Public Schools extends its gratitude to the Community Engagement Committee for bringing this idea to life, the art teachers across the district for their continued support, and, most importantly, the talented students who generously share their creativity with the community.

Mary is considered the first woman to receive a U.S. Patent in her own name. Reflect on why she applied for the patent and how life was changing in Northeastern Connecticut in the early 1800's. There will be time for questions and discussion following the program.

Have you been watching the Winter Olympics from Italy? I have. How they have changed since I was young! I was curious about how long snowboarding had been an Olympic event. An internet search revealed the following: "Snowboarding has been in the Winter Olympics for 28 years, making its official debut at the 1998 Nagano Games. It was introduced with men's and women's giant slalom and half-pipe events, and has since expanded to include snowboard cross, slopestyle, big air, and mixed team events." (AI) I love watching the halfpipe, but do find that it makes me very nervous to see men and women soaring so high. I keep praying no one will be seriously injured.

Without a doubt, my favorite events are the ice skating ones. As a young child I was so impressed that my father could cut figure eights into the ice. Are you old enough to remember when doing figures was actually part of the Olympic event? How many remember Connecticut's Dorothy Hamill who won the Gold Medal at the 1976 Winter Olympics in Innsbruck Austria? Part of me misses the gracefulness of the skaters of yesteryear. It seems to be all about the jumping now. C'est la vie! Time marches on.

I recently attended a 250th meeting in Putnam. That made me wonder what

300

was going on in February 1776, 250 years ago. Keep in mind that Connecticut was still a British colony since America had not yet declared its independence. George Washington and his troops were still facing off and encircling the British in Boston. They "made major strides in February. Supplies and cannon from Fort Ticonderoga were being moved into place under Henry Knox's daring 'Noble Train of Artillery.' By month's end, Washington was preparing to fortify Dorchester Heights—an action that would soon force the British to evacuate the city entirely... Colonial vessels—authorized to capture British ships—became a crucial tool in disrupting British supply lines and fueling economic support for the Patriot cause.* February marked one of the first large waves of American privateer activity... Thomas Paine's Common Sense (released in January 1776) was spreading like wildfire throughout the colonies by February. Its bold call for independence reshaped public debate, convincing thousands of colonists that reconciliation with Britain was no longer an option." *In eastern Connecticut both Norwich and New London were actively engaged in constructing and outfitting privateers.

"February 1776 is often overshadowed by later events, but it was one of the most important months in the buildup to independence. It shows how the Revolution wasn't just won on the battlefield—it was forged in town meetings, pamphlets, military planning sessions, and everyday conversations that slowly united a people around a shared vision. It's the moment the colonies began thinking—and acting—like an independent nation". (https://www.rochestermtours.com/blog\_posts/the-american-revolution-in-february-1776-rising-pressure-rising-resolve/#:~:text=Rochester%20Trolley%20&%20Tour%20Co.,rules%20and%20commissions%20for%20privateer.ing.)

Conflicts were also arising in the Southern colonies. Being from Pennsylvania, and then living in Connecticut since 1967, I hadn't learned the South was involved in the conflict at such an early date. Have you heard of the Battle of Moore's Creek Bridge, which occurred on Feb. 27, 1776?

I hadn't. The "Battle of Moore's Creek Bridge (was) often called the 'Lexington and Concord of the South;,' this was the first decisive Patriot victory in the southern colonies. A force of North Carolina Patriots defeated nearly 1,600 Loyalists (mostly Scottish Highlanders), ending British authority in North Carolina and stalling a planned invasion of the South". (AI). Keep in mind that there were a number of Loyalists in the Colonies, and some decided to fight during the Revolution on the British side.

The value of getting it right

There is a temptation in small-town life to rush.

Rush to finish a project before the next storm. Rush to approve a plan before a deadline. Rush to respond to controversy before the next round of social media commentary takes hold.

But one of the quiet strengths of Northeast Connecticut has always been something different: a willingness to slow down and get it right.

Across the Quiet Corner, town boards are deep into the unglamorous but essential work of budgets, facility upgrades and long-term planning. These discussions are rarely headline-grabbing. They involve spreadsheets, state reimbursement formulas, building codes and timelines. They require patience.

That patience is not weakness. It is discipline.

When a town considers a major school improvement project, such as heating and ventilation upgrades, it is not merely weighing cost. It is asking whether the proposal is sound, whether reimbursement is realistic, whether bidding procedures are correct, and whether the community understands the long-term financial impact. Getting those steps wrong can delay projects for years and erode public trust.

Likewise, when officials respond to public complaints or legal questions, the answer is not always what some residents want to hear. Constitutional limits, zoning regulations and state statutes shape what municipalities can and cannot do. Local leaders are bound by those frameworks whether the issue involves signage, land use, or public safety concerns.

In moments like these, it is easy for frustration to overshadow perspective.

Yet the rule of law and the rule of process are not bureaucratic obstacles. They are safeguards. They protect everyone, even when outcomes feel imperfect.

The same can be said for community institutions. Libraries forming partnerships with local businesses. Historical societies honoring veterans. Nonprofits organizing concerts or fundraisers. Each of these efforts reflects a deliberate approach. They do not happen overnight. They require planning, coordination and follow-through.

The truth is that strong communities are built not through dramatic gestures, but through consistent attention to detail.

Residents sometimes ask why things take so long. Why does a grant application stretch over months? Why must a building committee be reappointed? Why are public hearings required? The answer is simple: accountability.

Transparency and procedure can feel slow, but they create confidence. When taxpayers see that decisions are vetted carefully and openly, trust grows. And trust is the currency that keeps small towns functioning.

This is particularly important as we move deeper into budget season. Municipal and school officials will soon be presenting proposals that affect property taxes, capital reserves and long-term infrastructure. Some proposals will be popular. Others will invite scrutiny.

The best outcome is not the loudest one. It is the one that has been examined thoroughly and explained clearly.

Civic life in our part of the state works best when residents stay engaged without becoming reactive. Ask questions. Attend meetings when you can. Read summaries. Reach out respectfully to elected officials. But also recognize the complexity behind many of these decisions.

Getting it right often means resisting the urge to get it fast.

In an era where national politics rewards speed, spectacle and outrage, the steady pace of local governance may seem dull by comparison. It is not.

It is careful. It is grounded. And it is precisely what allows our towns to remain stable, predictable and resilient.

In the end, the strength of Northeast Connecticut lies in this simple principle: do the work, follow the process, and take the time necessary to get it right.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Emilio’s numbers are false and misleading

To the Editor:

After reading Pomfret Selectman Martha Emilo’s letter to the Editor in the Feb. 13 Villager in which the Selectman stated “property taxes have increased by more than 10 percent per year on average over the past five years,” I felt a response was needed. The Selectman’s numbers are factually false. Pomfret Board of Finance member Christian Smutnick was kind enough to run the numbers for the annual taxes imposed with this equation, “grand list / 1000 * mill rate”. Here are the increases year over year including town and fire district tax. No way near greater than 10 percent per year.

25 - 26	2.87	percent
---------	------	---------

24 - 25	1.99	percent
23 - 24	4.41	percent
22 - 23	4.26	percent
21 - 22	2.83	percent

If Selectman Emilo attended more Board of Finance meetings and cooperated with other boards in good faith, the Selectman may have a better understanding of the budget process. Writing misleading op-eds with incorrect information insinuating corruption and backroom deals does nothing but insult our elected officials, volunteers, staff and the Town of Pomfret.

Profit over people: Who wins when environmental protections are rolled back?

To the Editor:

Who benefits from Trump’s Environmental Protection Agency’s repeal of the Endangerment Findings on greenhouse gases? Fossil fuel companies and automakers. Industries that have long opposed limits on the pollution they produce will now face fewer restrictions. For them, fewer regulations mean lower compliance costs and higher profits.

But what does that mean for us?

Do you like drinking clean water that isn’t contaminated with toxic chemicals? Polyfluoroalkyl substances, known as PFAS or “forever chemicals,” are man-made compounds used in industrial processes, nonstick cookware, food packaging, and firefighting foams. They don’t break down easily. Instead, they seep into soil, rivers, lakes, and groundwater through industrial discharge, landfill runoff, and stormwater.

Millions of Americans have been exposed to PFAS through drinking water near military bases, airports, and manufacturing plants. Exposure has been linked to higher cholesterol, immune system suppression, and certain cancers, including kidney and testicular cancer. Erik Olson of the National Resources Defense Council told ABC News that PFAS contamination is “sprinkled in every single state in the country.” Even here in the Northeast corner, in Killingly, DEEP has confirmed wells have tested positive for PFAS.

Clean air is just as important. Smog and soot contribute to asthma, heart disease, and cancer. Greenhouse gases such as carbon dioxide and methane trap heat in the atmosphere. They come from coal, industrial smokestacks, oil and gas wells, and vehicle tailpipes. Regulations that limit these emissions exist for a reason. They protect public health and the environment.

This Administration doesn’t think we need regulations. It believes climate change is a hoax. Instead of proving its belief in court with scientific proof, that it cannot substantiate, it took the path of least resistance by rolling back EPA regulations by Executive Order. For those who believe in science as opposed to industry polluters who put profit over people, the evidence is indisputable that coal and acid rain, caused by burning fossil fuels, adversely affects humans and the Earth.

The current administration argues that regulations burden businesses and slow economic growth. Scientist counter that weakening environmental protections shifts the costs from corporations to families, who bear them in the form of health issues, medical bills, contaminated water, and climate-related disasters.

We saw a small example of the human impact on air quality during the COVID-19 pandemic. As travel slowed and fewer cars filled the roads, air pollution temporarily dropped in many cities. It was brief, but it showed how closely human activity and air quality are linked. Even our exposure to COVID-19 is said to be the result of human land-use change, we’ve encroached and degraded nature so much that we are reaping the results of our human contact with wildlife.

Scientists continue to warn that greenhouse gases are causing the planet to warm at a dangerous pace. Rising temperatures contribute to stronger storms, melting glaciers, coral reef loss, and prolonged droughts. These are real problems. They affect food supply, property, insurance costs, and public health. Who should bear the cost of pollution? The companies that produce it, or the public forced to live with it.

If clean water and clean air matter to you, speak up. Contact your members of Congress. Environmental protections were built over decades because Americans demanded them. They can be preserved the same way.

Let’s leave the planet in better shape than we found it.

Emilio will have ample opportunity for input on Pomfret’s budget

To the Editor:

After reading Ms. Emilio’s letter to the Editor in the Feb. 13 Woodstock Villager, as a former member of the Pomfret Board of Finance and a selectman, I don’t share the same opinion on how the budgets are prepared. I may not always have agreed with the outcome, but the budgets are prepared by individual town boards and commissions and various offices in the town. The selectmen put the numbers together and tweak them.

As a member of the Board of Selectmen, Ms. Emilio will have direct input in the town budget, prepared by the Board of Selectmen. There is also opportunity for her or any other citizen to speak with any Board or Commission, or Town Office to see how those budgets are prepared. There are many opportunities to attend budget meetings and hearings to provide input and sometimes dialogue, providing the dialogue is civil and meaningful. Once the budget is prepared, it can also be found on the town Web site. The final input is at a town meeting where the budgets are decided.

Education, which needs to be redefined.

The Board of Finance has the last say, as it approves both the Municipal and Board of Education budget. While the Board of Finance can reduce the municipal budget line by line, it can only reduce the Board of Education budget by a specific amount, leaving the Board of Education with the task of reducing the various lines.

Get involved and stay informed. Talk to your selectmen and to your Board of Education representative if you have questions. Sign up for the E-Alerts from the town with this link: <https://www.pomfretct.gov/subscribe>.

Dear Reader

I have written for the paper since its founding about 20 years ago, or about 900 columns. I’m grateful to the late David Cutler, who hired me while I was having lunch at 85 Main in Putnam, and to Frank Chilinski, the Publisher, for providing a place for me to share my thoughts with you over all these years.

Ironically, about the same time as I was asked to cut back the frequency of my column earlier this year, a number of journalists and columnists were notified that they would be let go from the Washington Post. I don’t put my writing in the same category as them, but it does feel as if the winds of change are swirling into a tempest that strikes at the heart of individual columnists and reporters.

Locally, we have seen the end of columns by Marge Hoskins and Charlene Perkins Cutler, Ron Coderre, Kathy Naumann and so many more. When I was young, Mrs. Gilbert Danielson wrote a column that covered the goings-on in my little town, including mention of trips my mother and I took to Hartford to shop. Columns are sometimes hyper-local.

We subscribe to Yankee Magazine as an almost religious obligation. It captures the flavor of our region better than our state magazine, which focuses on ritzy Fairfield County. Mel Allen, writer and editor for 40 years of Yankee, retired this year and compiled 40 of his columns into a book, which I bought. The stories are good, of course, and have a redemptive theme that we all love. Small town people and smalltown life work in mysterious ways, but move toward good. That’s the gist of most of them. I’ll never be convinced that isn’t the truth, just perhaps not entirely.

Readers sometimes see the uglier side of individual communication in this paper’s letters to the Editor. We also read writers’ solutions to seeming intractable political and human problems. When the conversations leap to national or even international issues, biases can swamp logic and reasoned argument. The authors work hard on their letters, often writing week after week. Their names become familiar as do their arguments.

If Tom Paine or Sam Adams, who kickstarted the American Revolution through their writing, were around today, they would recognize the tradition and the passion these writers, predominantly men, possess. They would defend it. I defend it philosophically even if I often don’t always read the letters. That’s how I exercise my freedom.

The pace and nature of the changes in our county and our world is real. I feel like a dinosaur when I reflect on my upbringing, but a love of words, a response to poetry, a belief in good manners, devotion to traditions, loyalty to people just because I grew up with them, and not wearing white shoes before Memorial Day are just basic.

AI can write a column in seconds, and for free. It can create stories much like mine. So far it can’t chat with friends at the Y or watch a little girl dance in the aisle at her baptism, but it may. Reading and writing. Talking and thinking. Connecting to others through words and images. These things matter. Once a month, I will share observations filtered through my faith that we live to communicate, enjoy nature and each other, and find what’s good.

Say their names

To the Editor:

Why is it that current political-speak rejects the full words? Diversity. Equity. Inclusion. It is indeed difficult to dismiss the values lurking behind the full-bodied statement of those words.

What if, as Pete Buttigieg once suggested, we explore their opposites? The opposite of diversity is uniformity. The opposite of equity? inequity. Opposite of inclusion? exclusion. Teasing out meaning in this manner uncovers the spirit of vitality, fairness, justice. It's easy - and safe - to speak in dehumanizing code such as FYI, IRS, OMG. But codifying to DEI removes the personhood and exonerates the speaker from recognizing that behind the categories are real flesh and blood human beings who are our coworkers, our neighbors, our friends, our family.

So refuse the dehumanizing acronym. Claim the real values behind those words. And Say Their Names.

What's happened to Martha?

To the Editor:

Martha Emilio, as head of the Pomfret Proprietors, was Pomfret's cheerleader for many years. Now, sadly, she has become obsessed with trashing our town leaving many wondering 'what's happened to Martha?' Accusations of high crimes and misdemeanors in the town hall, hidden agendas, back room deals, and forever and always 'No Transparency.' With all this negativity posted on all sorts of social media and news outlets, our town's previously enviable statewide reputation as a beautiful, well governed town in the northeast corner has gone down to "What's happened to Pomfret? Criminals have taken over."

No. Pomfret is still a beautiful, well governed town. Unfortunately, a negative extremist has taken over our formerly normal Republican Town Committee, and in order to become a selectman, Martha has signed on as Chris Coyle's devotee. She could go to the multiple, open to all information hearings the boards of finance, or education put on, but no, why learn the facts when you can just dump on the boards, the volunteers, and the town. She has a total of two months as a selectman and has not provided a single suggestion. It's a shame. I hope Martha will soon return to being a booster instead of a trasher.

TIM McNALLY

Justified

To the Editor:

I am not pro-gun in any way, and I think the Second Amendment is perversely being used to justify the paramilitary army of ICE and the widespread and paranoid ownership of guns.

The apologists for Donnie Tyrant's regime have been howling about how Alex Pretti should not have been carrying a weapon to a protest and therefore was tempting fate in the face of armed and provocative opposition. Well, the ICE horde with the same logic should also not have been armed at the demonstration.

However, I would posit without agreeing with the thought process, that considering he was brutally murdered that maybe, just maybe, he might have not been wrong in thinking he might need self-protection. Remember, he was an ICU nurse and daily saw the prevalence and result of ubiquitous gun ownership.

On a cheerier note, the Heritage Foundation made a study of federal elections over 24 years - 1999-2023. They discovered with 1,008,643,528 people voting, a frightening 77 were undocumented. I don't know what planet all you MAGA'ers and Republicans did your basic education on but 0.00000764 percent of voters trying to sneak by and distort the election exceeds the significant digits most of us consider important. Just another proof that Donnie Tyrant and his sycophant herd of lemmings have nothing of value or truth to support their desperate hope of winning the midterms.

Lower interest rates are expected in 2026: What it could mean for your wallet and investments

HOLLY C. WANEGAR
INVESTMENT ADVISER

As we move into 2026, interest rates remain one of the most important variables shaping the investment landscape. After several years of inflation concerns, aggressive Federal Reserve policy, and market volatility, the direction of interest rates now carries meaningful implications for investors across all life stages.

Most experts anticipate interest rates to decline in the coming year. While lower interest rates are often welcomed by markets, their impact is nuanced. For investors, the key is to not react to headlines. Instead, understand how a lower-rate environment may influence your portfolio as well as your financial plan and long-term goals. Here's what to know...

Why interest rates matter so much Interest rates act as a gravitational force for the economy. They influence borrowing costs, consumer spending, corporate investment, and asset valuations. When rates fall, money generally becomes cheaper to borrow, which can stimulate economic activity. However, lower rates also reduce yields on traditionally "safer" investments like cash, CDs, and high-quality bonds.

For investors in 2026, this tradeoff is especially important. Many portfolios were adjusted during the higher-rate environment of recent years, and a shift toward lower rates may require reassessing how different assets work together. Working with a financial advisor can help these reassessments stay streamlined and organized.

What lower rates could mean for stocks

Historically, lower interest rates tend to be supportive for equities. When borrowing costs decline, companies can refinance debt more cheaply, fund growth initiatives, and improve profitability. Lower rates also reduce the discount rate applied to future earnings, which can support higher stock valuations.

But not all stocks benefit equally. Growth-oriented companies, particularly those with earnings expected further in the future, often benefit more from falling rates. Value-oriented or dividend-focused stocks may respond differently depending on economic conditions and earnings trends.

For investors, this underscores the importance of diversification. Rather than trying to predict which sector will outperform, a balanced approach allows portfolios to participate in opportunities while managing risk.

The impact on bonds and fixed income

Bonds typically move inversely to interest rates. When rates fall, existing bonds with higher yields generally increase in value. This can be positive for investors who already hold bonds, particularly those with intermediate or longer durations.

However, reinvestment risk becomes more prominent. As bonds mature or interest payments are reinvested, new yields may be lower than what investors became accustomed to during the higher-rate period. This is where thoughtful fixed-income positioning matters. Bond ladders, diversified maturities, and active management can help balance income needs with interest-rate sensitivity.

Cash, savings, and income considerations

Lower interest rates are not great news for savers. High-yield savings accounts, money markets, and CDs typically see yields decline as rates fall. While maintaining adequate liquidity remains essential, holding excessive cash over long periods can quietly erode purchasing power, especially if inflation remains persistent.

For retirees or income-focused investors, this environment may require revisiting income strategies with a trusted financial advisor. Relying solely on cash and short-term instruments may no longer be sufficient to support long-term spending needs. Incorporating a broader mix of income-producing assets, aligned with risk tolerance and time horizon, becomes increasingly important.

Housing, borrowing, and personal finance

Lower interest rates can also create opportunities beyond the investment portfolio. Mortgage rates often follow longer-term Treasury yields, and declining rates may open the door to refinancing or improved affordability for homebuyers. For business owners, lower rates can reduce the cost of capital and support expansion or succession planning strategies. However, lower rates alone should never drive major financial decisions. Borrowing strategies should always align with broader financial goals, cash flow, and long-term plans.

The bigger picture: Planning matters more than predictions

Perhaps the most important takeaway for investors in 2026 is this: interest rates are just one variable. Markets often anticipate rate changes well before they happen, and reacting too quickly can introduce unnecessary risk.

At WHZ, we focus on building portfolios and financial plans designed to adapt across environments—not just thrive in one. Lower interest rates may present opportunities, but they also reinforce the importance of disciplined investing, regular portfolio reviews, and alignment with personal goals.

Moving forward with confidence

Whether you are accumulating wealth, approaching retirement, or already drawing income from your portfolio, a changing rate environment is a reminder to stay proactive rather than reactive. Reviewing asset allocation, income sources, and risk exposure can help ensure your strategy remains aligned with where you are—and where you want to go.

At WHZ Strategic Wealth Advisors, we believe clarity creates confidence. If you're wondering how lower interest rates could impact your investments, your retirement plan, or your long-term financial strategy, now is the right time to have that conversation.

The Centaurs finished off a three-game week on the road with its second victory as they survived a 17-0 fourth quarter run by the Vikings to improve to 10-7 overall and 5-1 in Division II of the Eastern Connecticut Conference.
The Centaurs were up, 50-29, before East Lyme closed it to just four pints with four minutes to play. Woodstock Academy sealed the win with a 7-2 run over the next minute and a half.
Xawier Matwiej led the Centaurs with 18 points despite not making a second-half field goal. He was 8-for-9 from the free throw line, however.
Drake Abdyllovski tossed in 17 points and Jamie Dean Stewart had 15

Anyah Oatley was tops for the Centaurs as she placed seventh in the All-Around (34.7) and had the third-best vault of the night (8.85).
Rhea Desota was sixth best on the bars (8.75) and Emma Long was 12th in the All-Around.

Centaurs finish 2nd; have 2 state champs
The Woodstock Academy girls indoor track team was only 11 points behind Mercy for first in the Class M state championship indoor track meet at the Floyd Little Athletic Center Friday with three events remaining.
But the Middletown school was able to take second-third and fourth in the 3200m race and pulled away for the 66-42 win over Woodstock Academy and take the state title in the process.
The Centaurs had their own dominant event as Avery Plouffe finished with the second best throw in Connecticut thus far this year in the shotput, 40-feet, 5 ¼ inches, to win the individual state title.
Teammates Kiley Elliott and Lily Morgis finished third and fourth in the competition.
Senior Emma Weitknecht bettered her own Woodstock Academy school record and won the 55m hurdle championship in 8.33 seconds.

Ella Lidonde was fourth in the long jump and the 4x200m relay team also scored a fourth-place finish for the Centaurs.

Manning brings home state title
The Woodstock Academy boys indoor track team had high hopes for a top-five finish but found that to be easier said than done.
Senior Eli Manning had a nice night as he won the Class M boys shotput title with a heave of 51-feet, 1 ½ inches for the Centaurs.
The Centaurs 4x800m relay team of Lucas Hecker, Sam Greene, Jackson Durand and Ronan Curran finished fourth in a Woodstock Academy school record 8:29.7 and senior Abraham McGregor was fourth in the long jump.

Woodstock Academy (1-15) avoided the shutout with an early third-period goal from Alex Haggerty off an assist from Cam Perreault. The Centaurs had a further chance to diminish the Eagles’ lead but could not cash in on a 5-on-3 power play opportunity shortly after Haggerty’s goal.
Wethersfield (9-5-1) got a hat trick in the opening period from Jack Leahy and also had three assists being dished out by Nick Socha. Tyler Giangrave and Ryan Pace also scored for the winners in the opening period.

When one person has cancer, the whole family has cancer

BY CALE FERLAND
BROOKLYN

In 2021, my wife Christy was diagnosed with stage four lung cancer. She was 44 years old. She had never smoked a day in her life. She was active, strong, and the kind of person who believed in pushing forward no matter what. After her diagnosis, she ran multiple 5Ks. That was Christy. She didn't let cancer define her. For two years, we fought alongside her. And when I say "we," I mean our entire family. Because when one person has cancer, the whole family has cancer. You quickly learn that it isn't just the appointments and treatments. It's the everyday things that become overwhelming. The dishes pile up. The lawn keeps growing. The floors need cleaning. Life doesn't pause just because your world has been turned upside down. And there's something else people don't always talk about. The patient feels it. They see the strain. They see their spouse picking up more, their kids stepping in, and they carry that weight, too. Christy passed away in July 2023. She was just 46 years old. She left behind four children who miss their mom every single day. After she died, I knew I needed to do something. I kept asking myself: what would have made that time just a little bit easier? What would have helped us hold onto more of the moments that mattered?

Kell leads Clippers over Wheeler

PUTNAM — The Putnam High Clippers won their 10th game of the season last Tuesday night over division rival the Wheeler School, 69-51. The Clippers jumped out to a big lead early and was up 34-7 after the first quarter. Sophomore Camden Kell led Putnam with 24 points, 5 rebound and 5 assists. Senior Nick Devlin had 22 points, 11 rebounds and 4 assist in the win. Freshman TJ Espinosa added 15 points, 6 rebounds and 5 assists and sophomore Sam Jackel chipped in 8 points and a season high 15 rebounds. "That was the best half of basketball we played all season," said Coach Shawn Deary. "The boys played hard and they were ready to play from the start."

Camden Kell knocks down a three pointer in action against Wheeler.

The answer was simple. Community. During Christy's treatment, friends and neighbors showed up. They stepped in quietly and without hesitation. That support gave us time — time we could spend together as a family. That's where Christy's Angels began. Today, Christy's Angels Inc. is a 501(c)(3) non-profit serving families in Windham County who are navigating cancer treatment. We provide house-keeping and yard work services through insured local providers, easing the burden of everyday tasks so families can focus on each other. What has surprised me most about this endeavor is the impact it has had, not only on the families and the community, but on me. When I meet with families now, I see something powerful. When someone battling cancer knows their community is standing behind them, it lifts them. It gives them strength. It reminds them they're not alone. It's more than a clean kitchen or a freshly mowed lawn; it's dignity, it's relief, it's hope. The grief doesn't go away. It doesn't shrink with time. There isn't a day that goes by that I don't miss Christy and wish she were still here beside me. But walking alongside other families has given our loss purpose. It has shown my children that even when life throws something unimaginable at you, you still have a choice in how you respond. On Sunday, March 29, our community will gather at Grill 37 in Pomfret for "A Night of Music and Friendship" featuring

Felix and Fingers Dueling Pianos. It will be an afternoon of laughter, music, and connection. But more than that, it's an opportunity. An opportunity to look for the helpers, to look for the love, to be part of something good happening close to home. If you've ever wondered how to make a difference in your own community, this is one way. Because when one person has cancer, the whole family has cancer. And when one family is hurting, the whole community can choose to show up. For those who would like to learn more about Christy's Angels, volunteer, make a tax-deductible donation, or attend "A Night of Music and Friendship" on March 29 at Grill 37 in Pomfret, visit www.christysangels.com.

Cub Scout Pack 21, of Putnam, held its 2026 Pinewood Derby on Friday, Feb. 13, at its chartering organization, the Albert J. Breault VFW Post 1523 on Providence Street. Joining in on the fun were Pack 21's guests, members of Cub Scout Pack 93 from the nearby town of Hampton. The Pinewood Derby is a longstanding Cub Scout tradition where, with help from experienced adults, boy and girl Cubs from five to ten years old carve, paint and decorate their own small race cars made from a block of soft pine. Weighing no more than five ounces each, the cars can go as fast as 200 miles-per-hour or more down a specially built Pinewood Derby track. The Pinewood Derby is just one of many challenging and fun activities Pack 21 does throughout the year. For more information about our programs for boys and girls, call Pack 21's John Ryan at (860) 928-5873 and leave a message.

The map on the kitchen wall

There used to be a map on our kitchen wall.
It was nothing fancy. Fold lines running across it like wrinkles on an old face. A little tear near the corner where it had been pinned and re-pinned over the years. The colors had faded from bright reds and blues to something softer, like they had been left in the sun too long.

But that map mattered.
When I was a boy, a map meant possibility. You did not scroll to zoom in. You leaned close. You traced the road with your finger. You measured distance by how far your hand had to travel from one town to the next.

I thought about that map the other evening while waiting in the car outside a store here in Northeastern Connecticut. I looked around at the other drivers. Every head was bent the same way, lit faintly by the glow of a screen. Phones held at just the right angle. Thumbs moving in small, steady motions.

No one was lost. At least, not geographically.

Today, we have directions that speak to us. Turn-by-turn instructions delivered in calm voices. Recalculating. Rerouting. Avoiding traffic. The mystery has been removed from getting from one place to another.

It is efficient. It is convenient. It is remarkable, really.

But I wonder if we have lost something in the process.

With that old map on the wall, you had to pay attention. You had to remember landmarks. The bend in the river. The name of the next town. The stretch of road where the pavement changed color. You learned the lay of the land because you had to.

You also learned something else. You learned patience.

If you missed a turn, you did not panic. You pulled over. You unfolded the map again. Maybe you asked someone at a gas station for directions. Maybe they gave them in a way that made no sense at all. “Go past the old mill, take a left where the barn used to be.”

You figured it out.
I am not against progress. I would not trade away the safety of being able to find your way home in a storm or in the dark. And I will admit, when I am headed somewhere unfamiliar, I appreciate that calm digital voice guiding me along.

CORNER OF KINDNESS By CHIP

Still, there was something grounding about knowing your route before you left.
When my children were young, we took a few long drives together. My wife would sit in the passenger seat with the directions printed out, and I would keep my eye on the road signs. We talked more then. There was room for it. No one was staring down at a screen.

Now, if you are not careful, the car becomes another quiet bubble. Directions flow in. Messages come through. News updates interrupt.

The world is at your fingertips, but the person sitting next to you can feel miles away.

I suppose what I am really talking about is attention.

A map demanded it. You could not half-use it. You either followed it or you did not arrive.

These days, it is possible to move through a whole afternoon only half-present. Half-listening. Half-looking. Half-engaged.

And yet, when I drive through the back roads of the Quiet Corner, I am reminded that not everything can be digitized.

You still have to notice the curve near the stone wall. You still have to watch for deer at dusk. You still have to slow down when the road narrows unexpectedly.

Life here still asks you to look up.
Maybe that is our quiet advantage in this part of the state. We are not immune to distraction, but we are surrounded by reminders to stay grounded. A farm stand on the side of the road. A church steeple rising above bare trees. A hand-painted sign pointing toward a town meeting or a pancake breakfast.

You cannot swipe past those.
That old map eventually came down from our kitchen wall. I do not know where it ended up. Probably folded into a drawer somewhere, waiting.

But every now and then, when I catch myself relying too much on the blue dot that tells me where I am, I think about that paper map.

About tracing a route slowly. About learning the road instead of simply following instructions.

And I remind myself that the point is not only to arrive.

It is to know where you are while you are getting there.

Rotary Club gives its heart to seniors

PUTNAM — The theme of the Putnam Rotary Club this year is “Boots on the Ground,” and it’s a year-long outreach to those in need including mentally challenged, seniors, veterans and those unsheltered. For Valentine’s Day, the club members gave their hearts to the area’s senior citizens. Putnam Rotary Club President Kathy Kirk said the club members put together 180 “love bags” that contained: Cookies, word puzzles, scented bookmarks, playing cards, motivational pocket calendars with matching pens, warm socks and handwritten Valentine cards from the Rotarians. It was all hands on deck Feb. 10 when all the Rotarians formed fun assembly line and put the bags together. From there, various Rotarians took care of delivering the bags to seniors, including: Putnam elderly housing at St. Onge, Crabtree and Bulger; the Gladys Green senior housing in Thompson, the Pomfret Public Library for its senior dementia program; Putnam’s senior programs and the town of Eastford’s elderly program. Kirk said, “Our theme this year is Boots on the Ground, and supporting our senior community is a big part of that. Packing and personally delivering these Valentine love bags gave us the chance to spread encouragement, connection, kindness and community support as a reminder to our seniors that they are loved and are not forgotten.”

Quiet Corner Garden Club sponsors tree planting project

WOODSTOCK — The Quiet Corner Garden Club (QCGC), with a grant from National Garden Club’s Plant America program, is sponsoring a tree planting project in honor of the nation’s 250th anniversary. The Club is prepared to plant a tree in the fourteen towns in Connecticut and two in Massachusetts, representative of the Garden Club’s membership. Nine of the fourteen towns have already committed to the project. Trees planted in Connecticut will be the White oak, the state tree. In Massachusetts, it will be the state tree, the American elm. Each town will choose the location to plant. Funds raised in part by the QCGC’s annual Plant Sale and the $2,000 grant from Plant America will be used to purchase the trees. QCGC is recruiting local scout groups, 4H clubs and others to assist Club members in planting the trees in the spring. Involving youth groups encourages interest in gardening, horticulture and the conservation of natural resources, all part of QCGC’s mission. White oak trees and American elms have a historic resonance in their respective states. The White oak was named state tree to honor the Charter Oak, a majestic white oak that grew at the state capital. In 1687, Colonists hid Connecticut’s Royal Charter in the Oak to prevent its confiscation by British authorities. In 1856, a violent storm felled the Charter Oak estimated to be 500 to 600 years old. Native Americans used bent oak saplings, which are extremely pliable, to mark trails. Because white oaks flourish in many different eco-regions, they are considered well suited to withstand anticipated climate changes. American elms, due to their distinctive vase-shaped arching form, were traditionally used by Native Americans as “council” trees for important meetings. Massachusetts designated the American elm as its state tree in 1941 to commemorate General Washington assuming command of the Continental Army in 1775 under an American elm (which stood until 1923). American elms were used extensively as a street tree in many American towns and cities in the 19th century. The rapid spread of the Dutch elm disease decimated the elm population during the 20th century. Arborists have created varieties in the past few decades that are hoped to be disease-resistant. # Putnam Corridor Gallery features unique show

PUTNAM — Currently on display at the Corridor Gallery in the Putnam Municipal Complex is the work of Jamie Soroka, a Putnam native who specializes in avant-garde designs in multiple mediums. The show, entitled “A Quiet Communion with Nature” features ethically sourced entomology and contemporary taxidermy, photographs, and found objects. Jamie’s love of nature is evident in every piece. “I try to maintain the simplicity and integrity of the subject while highlighting the wonder and awe that speaks to my soul. As an artist, I enjoy exploring and reimagining all the beauty life’s creatures have to offer us, even in death. I hope my work inspires others to find the elegance among the oddities that surround us in everyday life,” says Jamie. The most spectacular piece in the show is a 1970s wedding dress which Jamie has refashioned with moss and other natural elements. It’s showcased in the front window of the Municipal Complex. The show will be on display until the end of March. The Corridor Gallery, sponsored by the Putnam Arts Council, is located at 200 School St., Putnam. decorated with colored lights, each bulb representing donations collected in memory of loved ones or in honor of caregivers throughout the community. Activities at each site included holiday-themed musical entertainment by local chorus groups and personal stories about the impact of hospice and palliative care on those served, culminating in the lighting of the ceremonial Tree of Life. The purchase of memorial lights on each community’s Tree of Life supports the work done by Hospice & Palliative Care of Northeastern Connecticut, a service division of Day Kimball Healthcare at Home, which enhances the lives of seriously and terminally ill patients and their families. Skilled professionals and trained volunteers provide care through individualized plans that meet the physical, psychosocial, spiritual, and emotional needs of patients and their families throughout end-of-life and bereavement care.

“This event is one of my favorite Hospice events and takes place during the holiday season, which I see as a season of hope,” stated Kim Durand, RN, MSN, Hospice Program Manager, Day Kimball Health at Home. “The event and the donations it generates provide comfort and hope to our Hospice patients and their families.” Funds raised through this event are used to support hospice and palliative care services provided to the community that are not covered by insurance, including bereavement programs and services, as well as comfort items that improve patients’ quality of life. In addition, these funds help provide ongoing education for the hospice team, ensuring that they remain current and equipped to deliver the highest level of care. “The Tree of Life is such a special tradition for so many families in Northeast Connecticut and one of the most significant fundraising opportunities to support hospice and palliative care services in our region,” said Kristen Willis, Development Director, Day

Kimball Health. “Most importantly, it’s an opportunity and deeply personal way to celebrate a loved one, honor a caregiver, and pay tribute to so many remarkable individuals who have forever left their mark on our community and in our hearts.” More information about the event can be found at daykimball.org/TreeOfLife. local disposal site used by several businesses might be the source, but they have yet to officially declare an origin for the chemicals. Once PFAS is introduced to the environment, it’s considered a perma-chemical that does not break down and thus once it infects groundwater and local wells, it requires special filters to be removed from drinking water. Palaia said the situation has left inspectors with many unanswered questions. “Maybe they shouldn’t have been surprised, but they are surprised by what they found. They went out here to test the fire training center and they’re testing water in a heavily industrialized area,” Palaia said. Initial testing has involved the areas of Cotton Bridge Road, Route 101, Litchfield Avenue, Williamsville Road, State Avenue, Weeks Lane, Arnold Lane, and Lawton Lane with each positive test increasing the focus area by another 500 feet. Palaia has implied several times that officials believe the impact will eventually prove to cover a much larger area beyond the current testing sites.

OBITUARIES

Myrtie I. Blackmer, 81

Myrtie I. (Chandler) Blackmer, 81, of North Grosvenordale, passed away peacefully on February 7, 2026. She was born to the late Chester and Helen (Law) Chandler. She is survived by her husband of 63 years, Randolph Blackmer Jr.; her sons, Mark Blackmer (Lynn), Todd Blackmer (Monique), daughter, Lori Kelley (Tiger); siblings Carol Kudzal (Joseph), Robert Chandler (Debbie); seven grandchildren of whom she was immensely proud, Christopher, Daniel (Michaela), and Rachel Kelley, Gregory (Aimee) and Nicholas (Jessica) Swope, and Kendrick and Zachary (Olivia) Dexter; her great grandchildren, who she absolutely adored; as well as her nieces and nephews. She married the love of her life when she was seventeen and lived her entire life at the family homestead. While raising her kids, she volunteered as a Cub Scout Den Mother and Boy Scout committee member for over 30 years, coached a Lassie League team she and Randy sponsored, and served as the Windham County Farm Bureau Secretary for many years. Myrtie was an avid UCONN Huskies basketball fan; if you wanted to talk to her, you better have called before the game started or waited until it was over, because even if they were ahead by 15 points, it was too close for her comfort. Myrtie’s go-to one liner was, “I never get to go anywhere.” Truth be told, she enjoyed many trips with Randy to Switzerland, Germany, Belize, Holland, Hawaii, and numerous other locations, with their Farm Bureau friends, as well as cruises and all-inclusive vacations with her children and grandchildren. During one trip, and unbeknownst to her, Myrtie’s family decided every night would be her birthday (even though her birthday was months away). At first, she didn’t know why the waitstaff was singing Happy Birthday to her, but by the third night, she knew the drill; she enjoyed her nightly celebrations the rest of the trip, just as much as we enjoyed celebrating her. Myrtie hosted Christmas, Thanksgiving, and Fourth of July gatherings for her family and extended family for many years. If you ever drove passed her house on the Fourth of July and saw a group of people sitting on her front lawn wearing red, white, and blue accessories, while waving the American flag at each passing car, rest assured, we didn’t need to be evaluated, we were just playing along with one of her shenanigans. Together with her husband and family, Myrtie kept very busy with their two businesses, Ag Service, Inc., and Blackmer Farm. She took immense pride in providing top notch products to her customers; if she spotted a minor blemish on the vegetables, or the flowers weren’t perfect, they simply didn’t make it to the stand. We sure hope Heaven’s gardens were up to her standards when she arrived. Honoring her wishes, there will be no public services. A private celebration of life will be held, at a later date. After the Navy the family moved back to Webster, MA and he first worked as an electronic engineer for ITT, he then worked Digital Equipment of Littleton, MA, which later became Compaq and Hewlett Packard. While at Digital he was an integral part of some of the groundbreaking developments, including the first PC’s such as the VT 100 and many others.

He found enjoyment in building and flying radio-controlled helicopters and airplanes, and as a ham radio operator, and cooking, making everyone feel welcome and comfortable. His home was always full of family. After retirement, he continued working and creating many electronic toys and items. Volunteering his time as secretary for Yankee Flyer and Tri-County Barnstormers. His greatest joy was spending time with his children and grandchildren, whether he was coaching a baseball team, or as a league umpire, or just watching them in the pool. He was proud, along with his wife, to have been a Webster, MA town representative in the 1990’s. He was also always ready to help his brother at his brother’s service station. He was a self-made man who was highly respected, strong, creative, funny, caring and very intelligent. He liked to debate and make you think. He intentionally said no to his children, so that they had to work it out for themselves and learn to be independent. He always made his kids laugh by telling great stories and songs he made up. They would compete with him for the best story. Private services will be held at the convenience of the family. The family requests that flowers be omitted and instead donations in his memory be made to the American Heart Association, 20 Speen Street, Framingham, MA 01701. ## Dann Herindeen June 17, 1957 – February 7, 2026

Dann Herideen, son of the late Donn A. Herindeen, Sr. and Barbara (Menard) Herindeen passed away after a ten-year battle with cancer. Dann loved to work and his passion for woodworking meant you would find him busy in his shop every day, starting his next project singing or whistling the entire time. His talents live on in countless homes and businesses throughout Woodstock and surrounding towns. He was an avid outdoorsman – a hunter and fisherman who had great respect for nature and wildlife. He truly enjoyed his backyard birds and the majesty of the local bald eagles. Dann loved gardening and was well known for his beautiful dahlias that he happily shared with many people. He enjoyed simply going for drives, eating good food, and Friday nights at the shop. Dann loved his family – his brother Donn, sisters Debra and Donna, as well as his uncle Tod and recently departed Aunt Ruth, and several nieces and nephews. He adored his German Shepards, Isla Mae and Cinder. But nothing meant more to Dann than friendship, and he had the good fortune of having many good friends. Dann was a great guy, and he will be sorely missed. Relatives and friends were invited to visit with Dann’s family on Thursday, February 12, from 4pm to 7pm at the Gilman Funeral Home, 104 Church Street, Putnam, CT 06260. If you would like to donate in Dann’s memory, he was a supporter of Wildlife Forever, wildlife forever.org, and Defenders of Wildlife, defenders.org

Donald E. Moreau March 9, 1946 – February 5, 2026

Donald “Don” Moreau, 79, of Pomfret, Connecticut, passed away peacefully at home on February 5, 2026. Donald is survived by his loving wife of many years, Sandra A. Moreau; his daughters, Francesca Harnois and her husband Jason Harnois, and Amanda Moreau; his brother and best friend, Denis Moreau; his grandchildren, Madyson Harnois, Katelyn Trainque, Meadow Harnois, and Harmony Shaw; and his beloved nephew, Chad Moreau. He is also survived by his dog Winnie and his “grandpups” Willow and Moose - whom he insisted were truly his - as well as his great-grandpup, Blu. As well as all of his bonus grandkids, nieces and nephews. Donald was born on March 9, 1946, in Putnam, Connecticut. Growing up on a farm instilled in him a lifelong belief that everything in life is earned through hard work and dedication. He served his country during the Vietnam War. After returning home, Donald worked for many years in bridge construction and was a proud, loyal member of the Laborers’ Union. During this time, he built his own home on family property, spending countless hours perfecting his craft and creating what he proudly considered his own empire - all while navigating life’s challenges and raising his two daughters. After retiring, Don continued working for several years in plumbing. Those who knew him knew he could never sit still for long. Don will be fondly remembered for his big bonfires, his love of hunting, and the weekly horseshoe nights that became a cherished tradition. Bringing his close friends together to enjoy each other’s company and listening to his favorite playlist of rock music. He will always be known as someone that would give a helping hand in any scenario, to anyone and everyone that needed it. He was the true epitome of an outdoorsman. He loved Harley Davidson and just about anything that had to do with motorcycles. Most of all, his favorite thing to do was spend any and all time with Denis, especially if it had something to do with a nice ice-cold beer and some sort of fixing. A loyal friend to many, Don will be deeply missed and never forgotten by all who had the pleasure of knowing him. Those closest to him knew he was a true free spirit, always determined to live life on his own terms. Don will be forever loved and remembered.
