Killingly wins second straight ECC Division One title

KILLINGLY — The Killingly High Trailblazers defeated Norwich Free Academy 63-27 on Military Appreciation at Morgan Field. The win captured Killingly's second straight ECC Division 1 title and 8th overall in the past 10

Killingly (8-0, 4-0) jumped out to a commanding 21–0 first-quarter lead and never looked back, scoring in all four quarters and showcasing big plays in all three phases of the back Hayden Allard sparked the Trailblazers early, intercepting a pass and returning it 27 yards for a touchdown on NFA's opening drive. His interception set two CIAC State records for most interceptions returned in a season (5) corner- and career (6) for touchdowns. Quarterback Quinn Sumner followed with a three-yard touchdown pass to Joseph Mackie, then added an eight-yard scoring run to put Killingly firmly in control before the end of the first quarter.

NFA (3-5) got on the board in the second quarter with a 53-yard touchdown pass, but any momentum was quickly erased when Hunter Allard returned the ensuing

The Allard brothers continued to shine — Hayden added a 10-yard rushing touchdown, and Hunter hauled in a 52-yard scoring pass from Sumner before halftime as Killingly built a 49-14 lead at the break.

Sumner finished an efficient night completing 5 of 7 passes for 95 yards and three touchdowns while also rushing for another. Hunter Allard caught two passes for 80 yards and two touchdowns and added 54 rushing yards. Joseph Mackie chipped in with 51 rushing yards, one touchdown on the ground, and another through the air.

attack rolled up 335 total yards -240 on the ground and 95 through the air. On defense, Mackie led the way with nine tackles, while Hayden Allard added an interception and a defensive touchdown.

Special teams were just as dominant. Kicker Cooper Logee went 7-for-7 on extra points and sent three kickoffs for touchbacks. The Trailblazers didn't punt once all.

Killingly tacked on second-half touchdowns from Mackie and Joseph Gould to close out the win.

Residents seek resolution for Old Killingly Pond dam leaks

BY JASON BLEAU VILLAGER CORRESPONDENT

KILLINGLY - Representatives of the Connecticut Department of Energy and Environmental Protection hosted a full room of concerned citizens in Killingly on Nov. 6 to discuss a situation at Old Killingly Pond, which has been draining at an alarming rate due to a compromised dam.

Seepage issues with the dam have resulted in the loss of as much as four inches of water per day, drawing concerns about the condition of the structure and the potential for further leaks or a complete dam failure. DEEP, the regulating entity for dams in Connecticut, has issued an emergency authorization for dam's owner Wright Investors' Service Holdings (WISH), Inc. to take pressure off the structure. A notice of violation was also issued, which DEEP representatives clarified does not necessarily indicate that

WISH has been negligent with the dam. WISH has been in communication with DEEP and assigned engineers to keep an eye on the situation. The dam is designated as a Class B hazard, which means there is potential risk for loss of life if it fails. Citizens made it clear they want the pond preserved due to its significance as a local water supply and source of recreation as well as the dam itself being a gateway to local properties. Those concerns only grew during the meeting when breaching the dam was considered a realistic

Northeast Education Foundation (NCEF) held the 12th annual Tackle the Trail event on Saturday, Oct. 18. Known as Northeast Connecticut's place, Tackle the Trail features multiple distances, including marathon, marathon relay, half-marathon, 10K, and TackleJR. This event attracts runners from near and far. To date, runners from 34 states and 5 countries have Tackled the Trail. For 2025, the 10K male winner hailed from New Zealand.

Wolanin, Monique Race Director and CT State Community College Quinebaug Valley Director of Institutional Advancement shared her appreciation for all who support the race each year, saying, "Since our inaugural race in 2014, Tackle the Trail continues to grow, raising over $650,000 to help local students reach their educational goals and dreams. We could not put on this race without the generous support of so many, including our runners, volunteers, sponsors, and partnerships with many local organizations. On behalf of the hundreds of students who benefit from this event, heartfelt thanks."

2025 winners include: marathon male Travis Godley, female Sara Tarascio; half-marathon male Chris Churchill, female Shelley Buchbinder, non-binary Dylan Lomangino; 10K male Willie Gunn, female Annie O'Sullivan, non-binary Liz Paglione; marathon relay male team Pomfret School XC, female team Trail this Pace, and mixed team Striding to the Top. the Republican slate but was subsequently elected First Selectman for the next three terms with Witkowski as her successful running mate. Beausoleil carries a much larger tenure, serving roughly 14 nonconsecutive years on the board, including time as both a Selectman and First Selectman. While Beausoleil will continue to serve the town as a newly elected member of the Board of Finance, St. Onge and Witkowski are taking a step back from local politics for the time being.

Beausoleil said he isn't closing the door on a return to the Board of Selectmen in the future but wished the incoming members well, acknowledging the unique situation of the election.

"The groundwork has been set over the last several years for the foundation to move forward to get everybody continuing with that movement," Beausoleil said. "I can't remember the last time there's been a completely new board. There's a lot to grasp."

Witkowski reflected on the great successes of the board over their years together, which have included helping work towards revitalizing local mills and Thompson's downtown.

"I think our board has done some great things in our six years. We've built a track and salt shed, we've got a road reclamation plan in place, we've opened up the dog pound, we switched over the abatement for the firemen to an exemption. We haven't always agreed, but we've always come to some really good conclusions and we've respected each other," she said.

First Selectman Amy St. Onge said the one thing she will miss the most is the people, not just the voters but those behind the scenes who are essential to keeping the town operating beyond the Board of Selectmen.

"It has been a pleasure. I will say one of the hardest things for me is going to be leaving the people here at the Town Hall. They have become my friends. They're the most impeccable colleagues. They've been wonderful to work with. They're all very talented," said St. Onge.

All three exiting selectmen offered their help and guidance to the incoming board, which includes new Republican First Selectman Nick Donahue, Republican Larry Consiglio, Jr., and Democrat Geoffrey Bolte.

Sprucedale Gardens of Woodstock donated many of the plants. The Beautification Special Fund covered the remaining amount. Designed by Joyce Larson, the garden contains Black-eyed Susans, yellow daylilies, and Willowleaf Sunflowers intermingled with blue asters, catmint, and Russian sage. Pink geraniums with leaves that turn crimson late in the season ensure there is always color in the garden from spring to fall.

The selected plants are attractive to butterflies and other pollinators, drought-tolerant once established, and resistant to deer and rabbits.

Long-time Beautification member Pat Papini expressed excitement about the new garden, saying, "The newly planted garden has been well planned, and it will need time to become established. The variety of plants and colors will surely bring pleasure to anyone stopping by the Town Hall."

Paul and Joyce Larson, owners of Sprucedale Gardens Nursery, stated, "We have received the support of our fellow residents for over 30 years, and we're happy to give back by donating some of the plants and labor to this project of beautifying our town office building with this landscape planting."

Gratitude that grows close to home

Here in the Quiet Corner, November always seems to arrive quietly—less a grand entrance, more a soft reminder that the year is winding down. The leaves are gone from the maples, the fields are bare, and morning frost coats the stone walls that line so many of our roads. It's the season when the noise of summer fades and the small sounds of community rise to take its place.

Gratitude doesn't always announce itself. It often hides in the ordinary, tucked into the moments we forget to count. You'll find it in the hum of a coffee pot at a volunteer firehouse before dawn, in the neighbor who plows a shared driveway before heading to work, and in the teacher who stays late after class to help a struggling student understand fractions or Shakespeare. These quiet acts, rarely photographed or praised, are the backbone of every small town in northeastern Connecticut.

In Thompson, Pomfret, Woodstock, Putnam, Killingly, Brooklyn, and all the surrounding villages, people tend to measure generosity differently. We might not have skyscrapers or big-city budgets, but we have something harder to quantify: a culture of care. Residents notice when a friend is sick, when a family needs a meal, when a road needs clearing or a child needs a coat. That awareness—unspoken, constant, human-is what holds these communities together.

As Thanksgiving approaches, it's worth remembering that gratitude is not only a feeling but a practice. It lives in the choice to look outward, to see what others need, and to do something about it. Food drives fill pantries, coat collections stock school closets, and church kitchens hum with the sound of neighbors cooking for one another. Every can donated, every ride offered, every smile exchanged in a grocery store aisle is a small declaration that we belong to one

This time of year reminds us that "community" is a verb as much as a noun. It's something we build, repair, and renew—one act of kindness at a time. Even as national headlines grow louder and divisions deeper, the daily work of compassion continues quietly right here in the Quiet Corner, often without fanfare.

So before the rush of the holidays sweeps in, take a moment to look around. Say thank you to the postal carrier who trudges through slush, to the clerk who keeps the store lights on late, to the nurse finishing another long shift. Gratitude grows when it's spoken out loud-and when it's acted

In this season, may our appreciation stretch beyond our own tables. May it reach the neighbor down the road, the volunteer we barely know, and the stranger who holds open a door on a cold day. Gratitude, after all, is not about counting blessings—it's about sharing them.

Here in the Quiet Corner, that's the harvest that matters most.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

We are honored by your trust in our candidates

To the Editor:

The Killingly Democratic Town Committee would like to extend our deepest gratitude to all the residents of Killingly who came out to vote in this year's municipal election. Voter turnout was exceptionally high, and we thank each and every one of you for engaging in the democratic process and making your voices heard.

We are truly honored by the trust you have placed in our candidates. We promise to uphold the values that guide our work - supporting the children, families, seniors, and citizens of Killingly with dedication and integrity.

As we move forward, we will strive to lead sensibly and fairly, always keeping the best interests of our entire community at heart. We recognize that there are no true winners when a town is divided, and we pledge to work together people fight it out of fear - only wanting to take the path already trod and well worn.

The results of the latest election are clear and encouraging. A massive shift in the electorate is occurring from the No Kings movement and the inhuman actions of Donnie Tyrant and his enablers Miller, Vance and Bannon.

Our message for next year's mid-term election has to be stopping the destruction and start rebuilding. Not by using the debris that Donnie Tyrant has created, but with modern, intelligent and progressive tools and concepts to allow the regrowth of the middle class and the humane support of those in need.

What kind of leaders do we deserve?

To the Editor:

To the Editor:

Before you know it, the 2026 mid-term elections will be here. The question is: What are "we the people" really looking for in our leaders? Do we want representatives who serve everyone, or those who cater to the extremes on the left or right? Personally, I want a leader who represents

Despite the widespread belief that Americans are completely divided, surveys over the last ten years show that more Americans have identified as politically independent rather than affiliating with either of the two main political parties. However, when it's time to vote independent voters have shifted their support between the parties noticeably.

Much of the polarization in politics has been driven by misperceptions people have about ordinary citizens on the other side, the everyday people in your neighborhood or office who happen to support the other party. The reality is most Americans fall closer to the center. Most Americans share similar hopes: want decent jobs, safe communities, good schools, affordable healthcare, and a united country rather than one that is divided.

As the next election cycle starts, let's learn as much as possible about the candidates who are seeking our votes. An informed electorate is key to choosing the best people for the job. In a sense, every election is a job interview, and we are the interviewers. Here are some interview questions to think about:

Will these leaders represent all constituents? Do they have vision, integrity, and the ability to act decisively while earning our trust?

Do they communicate clearly, listen to diverse perspectives, and balance immediate needs with of a song, there is no direct long-term goals?

Are they strong leaders who remain resilient close attention. Spontaneous under pressure, show empathy toward the people applause broke out now and they represent, and make choices guided by principle rather than convenience?

What distinguishes great leaders isn't just their that it is the immigrants, referability to win power, it's how responsibly they use i ring to each other, who "get the it to make a lasting, positive impact on everyone job done."

Ultimately, the best leaders are those who rise NE Blackout, I was the presibove partisanship and put people first. Several dent of my floor in a big dorm. Democratic incumbents are doing just that. When When the lights went out, I we come together, when we choose collaboration wasn't concerned, until some over division, the entire nation moves forward.

Pomfret — a truthful and transparent assessment

To the Editor:

Now that the elections are over and the dust has settled, it's time for a little post-campaign clarity. In nearly 40 years of living in Pomfret, I can't recall a period so steeped in negativity, rumor, and unfounded accusation.

It all seemed to start with the budget vote. Remember the dramatic tales of out-of-towners rushing in to vote—or locals somehow voting twice- to what end? The math, as they say, simply doesn't work. The budgets passed by serious margins. The number of votes did not exceed the number of people in the room. What those stories did accomplish, however, was to stir up mistrust and turn neighbor against neighbor. Mission accomplished; I suppose.

Then came the special town meeting, where residents overwhelmingly approved the interlocal agreement with Putnam-and overwhelmingly rejected the Republican-proposed ethics commission. By a landslide. (202 yes to 35 no, for those keeping score. The petition to hold the meeting had a mere 22 signatures—so 13 extra votes were picked up at the meeting) Ironically, those who demanded the meeting now complain that only 240 people showed up. Petition for a meeting, get a meeting, dislike the result, complain and again cast doubt on the vote. That's democracy for you.

Next up: the so-called "Pomfret Forest liability crisis," which, it turns out, wasn't a crisis at all. The town's risk management specialist confirmed last month that Pomfret is fully covered for the mountain bike trails and features. And that "breach of easement?" Also unproven. The State hasn't even inspected the property, and Section lock on to a plan and refuse to 3 of the easement itself clearly allows trails and trail improvements. Facts are stubborn thingsthough apparently inconvenient or optional for

Meanwhile, we've been treated to Republican claims of "conflicts of interest" and "backroom" deals"— and get this- "missing money." All without a shred of proof. It's the classic political two-step: accuse loudly, investigate nothing, and hope the echo does the work. The chair of the Pomfret Republican Town Committee has spent months calling for "honesty and transparency" while spreading misinformation and baseless accusations. The result? He earned the lowest There were a mix of children vote total of all 28 Democratic and Republican candidates on the ballot.

Thankfully, Pomfret voters know the difference live theatre and don't move between holding leaders accountable and tearing a community apart.

Healthy competition is vital to American democracy

To the Editor:

It must be getting more difficult to identify as a Democrat. Right or wrong, the party is being attached to some pretty divisive stuff, i.e. socialism, men in women's sports, pro-crime (cashless bail/ defund the police, etc.), antisemitism, anti-Christian, anti Second Amendment, anti school choice, pro Hamas, racial division, political violence, political "Lawfare," illiberal college 'cancel culture," violent riots, etc. Many national leaders fear the Democrat party is in danger of harmful long term losses from these attachments because they predict that the party is becoming much too radical for centrist Americans (the bulk of our population).

The USA is great because our founding principles encourage competition in elected offices, business, schools, etc. And to have healthy competition, we need healthy rivals. Republicans should hope for competitive (mainstream) Democrats, and Democrats should wish the same and enjoyed the second act, of Republicans. USA history witnesses that radicals of all stripes are not effective in the end. If No catastrophe befell the audiyou don't have a competitive political system, you have a one party system, and you've likely birthed something akin to a dictatorship ... something unworkable in the American experience.

Of course, I could barely get out of the row I was in as the aisle was blocked by two people, one with a walker. I couldn't smell or see smoke. We moved in an orderly, if slow way out to the street where we stood in the late afternoon sun and waited. Soon two Hartford fire trucks pulled up and efficiently entered the building. It was a false alarm. With over 3,000 people in the audience plus the cast now outside, it took me a few minutes to spot my daughters. Whew, I thought, catastrophe averted, once again. Some want to help and become fire fighters, professional like the Hartford crew, or trained volunteers such as many of my neighbors. # The new things to know about building generational wealth now Building generational wealth has evolved dramatically in 2025, with new strategies, technologies, and generational shifts fundamentally changing how families approach long-term financial planning. As we witness the largest wealth transfer in history-with $84 trillion expected to change hands by 20481 understanding these emerging trends isn't just helpful; it's essential for creating a lasting financial legacy.

The great wealth transfer revolution

We're living through an unprecedented moment in financial history. Baby Boomers are passing down their wealth to Gen X and Millennials, with Gen X set to inherit $14 trillion in the next decade alone, compared to Millennials' $8 trillion.<sup>2</sup> This massive transfer requires families to rethink traditional approaches to wealth building and preservation—exactly the kind of comprehensive planning we address through WHZ's holistic financial planning approach.

What makes this transfer particularly significant is how different generations view money and wealth management. While Baby Boomers built wealth through traditional methods, younger generations are embracing more diverse strategies that reflect their unique experiences and values

Key pillars of generational wealth building

1. Start early, start smart: The average American made their first investment at 27 years old, with Gen Z starting earlier at 20.3 The compound effect of starting early cannot be overstated—with a 10 percent return on investment, you can turn $100,000 to $1.6M in 28 years. This is why our "Plan Well. Invest Well. Live Well." process emphasizes creating investment strategies tailored to your life stage and timeline.

2. Debt elimination strategy: Think of debt as missed opportunity. Why pay interest when you could be using that cashflow for other financial goals? Prioritizing the elimination of consumer debt like credit cards, student loans, and car loans creates the foundation for wealth accumulation. Lowering debt can also improve your credit score and relieve financial stress,<sup>4</sup> freeing up resources for strategic investments.

3. Business ownership and equity: If you own a business, be aware of how it can provide a consistent stream of income, assets, and opportunities for future generations. Whether through starting your own venture or strategically investing in existing businesses, ownership stakes create wealth that compounds over generations. At WHZ, we work with a multitude of business

FINANCIAL FOCUS

JONATHAN MATTHEWS INVESTMENT ADVISER owners to help them optimize compensation structures and succession planning so they can maximize generational wealth transfer.

4. The critical role of financial education: Perhaps the most alarming statistic in wealth transfer is this: up to 70 percent of family wealth is lost by the second generation, and up to 90% of family wealth is lost by the third generation.<sup>5</sup> The primary cause? Lack of financial education among heirs.

Sixty percent of heirs feel unprepared to handle their inheritance,1 increasing the risk of financial mismanagement. This makes financial literacy education for the next generation as important as wealth accumulation itself. The greatest legacy you can leave behind is knowledge, empowering your heirs with the skills needed to manage and grow wealth responsibly.

Educating the next gen-

Building generational wealth requires intentional planning, sound financial management, an understanding of how to pass down assets while minimizing taxes, and educating future generations on how to manage and grow their inheritance.6 This involves:

Regular family financial meetings discussing goals and strategies

Age-appropriate money conversations with children Involving heirs in investment decisions and estate planning discussions

Teaching the principles of compound interest and long-term thinking

At WHZ, we facilitate family meetings and help clients involve the next generation in financial planning conversations, ensuring a smooth transition of both assets and financial wisdom.

Modern estate planning considerations

Eighty-nine percent of high-net-worth firms cite family-focused services as a top growth strategy,² recognizing that successful wealth transfer requires comprehensive planning beyond simple asset distribution. Today's estate planning must account for digital assets, business valuations, and complex investment structures.

Our fiduciary approach means we work alongside your team of professionals – CPAs, attorneys, and estate planners – to create integrated strategies that optimize tax efficiency while protecting your legacy. We help clients navigate everything from trust structures to business succession planning, ensuring that wealth transfers smoothly across generations.

Taking action: Your next steps

Building generational wealth requires more than individual effort—it demands strategic planning and partnership. Whether you're in your "Balancing Act Years" juggling career growth and family responsibilities, or approaching your "Next Chapter Years" preparing for retirement, the principles remain the same: strategic planning, consistent action, and expert guidance.

At WHZ Strategic Wealth Advisors, our comprehensive approach considers how to fit each of your financial goals into your ideal financial picture—protecting and continuing to build your wealth to leave a legacy for your loved ones and the causes you care about.

A friend indeed

"A Friend in Need is a Friend Indeed" is a phrase that describes the most important characteristic of a true friend. Most noteworthy, the phrase means that a true friend is the one who helps someone else at a time of need.

One day while Jesus was teaching, some men came carrying a paralyzed man on a sleeping mat. They tried to take him inside to Jesus, but they couldn't reach him because of the crowd. So, they went up to the roof and took off some tiles. Then they lowered the sick man on his mat down into the crowd, right in front of Jesus. Seeing their faith, Jesus said to the man, "Young man, your sins are forgiven. Stand up, pick up your mat, and go home!" And immediately, as everyone watched, the man jumped up, picked up his mat, and went home praising God. Everyone was gripped with great

JOHN W.

HANSON

ACTS II

BEYOND praised God, exclaiming, "We have seen amazing things today! (Luke 5:17-26)

Can you imagine the paralyzed man's thoughts? He may have been a little nervous that his friends might drop him, that Jesus would turn him away or that their efforts would be in vain. But Jesus never disappoints, instead He is touched and moved by our willingness to act in faith and our trust in Him.

The paralyzed man in Luke 5, had friends indeed! They went the extra mile by cutting a hole in the house roof where Jesus was teaching and lowering their friend down so he could be touched by Jesus. These friends were instrumental in the life of their friend – a man who experienced a life

Have you met anyone lately who has never even heard about Jesus, His love, His healing or saving power? There are many! All it takes is a kind word, a helping hand.... small gestures that mean so much to those in need, or to those who haven't experienced the presence of God yet.

In Matthew 5:14-16, Jesus taught: "You are the light of the world. A city set on a hill cannot be hidden. Nor do people light a lamp and put it under a basket, but on a stand, and it gives light to all in the house. In the same way, let your light shine before others, so that they may see your good works and give glory to your Father who is in heaven."

Can I just encourage you today? The more you share the light within you, the more you want to share! Even if you have felt ineffective in reaching out in the past, it was not in vain. You planted seed in someone's heart; now God can do His work in their life! You can be more than a friend.... You can be the friend that leads someone to know 'the friend that sticks closer than a brother' – Jesus! God changes lives, but often people are the hands, feet and mouthpiece God uses to accomplish His Kingdom purpose on earth. We have the privilege to carry our friends, loved ones and even those we haven't met to God in prayer and believe in faith that some of those searching people will cross our

Author's triumph over tragedy resonates with audience at Putnam Library

PUTNAM Putnam Library presentation room filled with people, stories, and questions during the "Back from Suicide" book talk on a recent fall evening.

Author Lisette Rimer said the talk brought out personal experiences with suicide, abuse, and depres-

"People opened up about their own ordeals with suicide. It was as if they had been waiting for the opportunity for a long time," Rimer said. "I was hoping for a sense of community on this difficult topic, and that's exactly what happened."

Rimer said she had to learn about depression and suicide because there was no other explanation for her son Patrick's death in 2006.

"He was the least likely person to die by his own hand. He was funny, sarcastic, and happy for most of his life," she explained.

Patrick attended Pomfret School on a full scholarship, achieved perfect

SAT scores, and graduated as valedictorian in 2001. A few months before he graduated with honors from Stanford in 2005, he was hospitalized for depression and suicidal ideation. He passed away nine months

"Patrick's death made me confront my ignorance emotions breaks down the about depression," Rimer said. "I learned that depression attacks the very part of our being that makes decisions, including the decision of whether or not we should kill ourselves. It causes anxiety, hopelessness, and desperation. The constant stress of those connections in the brain. Depression and the resulting suicide are physical as well as mental diseases."

A PowerPoint presentation focused on the high rate of suicide for young people. In 2023, suicide was the second leading cause of death for 10- to 34-year-olds. LGBTQ+ young people were four times as likely to attempt suicide than heterosexual youth. Rimer stressed the difficulty of young people coming out.

"They have to hide a very big part of themselves unless they're lucky enough to be in an accepting atmosphere," Rimer said. "They have to hide their identity, and that adds stress and anxiety."

Many in the audience asked questions or talked about their own experiences with suicide.

Rimer said, "We got to a deep level of conversation, and I hope sharing those tragedies helped others as much as they helped me. We need that sharing to keep our lives in perspective. I am deeply grateful to the Putnam Library for providing the opportunity for those stories to be told."

Questions and personal experiences continued until the library closed for the evening.

"Suicide is chaos," Rimer said. "And the grief afterward never stops. We keep wondering what more we should have done. It was helpful to share that chaos with others who have been through it."

Since the first U.S. Census is dated 1790, I even have a clue to where some of the individuals who are purchasing items are located. The names seem to be from what is now the area near Killingly Memorial School in Danielson---the Westfield section of Killingly.

First, who were Hutchins and Hills? There were eight Hutchins men listed in the 1790 census for this southern section of town: Silas, John, Amas(a), Shubel, John, Isaac, Zadock, and Penuel. The first several lived on Green Hollow Road, not far from the Plainfield line. According to H.V. Arnold's Memories of Westfield, Danielson, Conn., Zadock "and his wife, Ellizabeth, lived in a house on the road that stood on the premises opposite Hutchins Street. Mr. Hutchins had been a soldier in the war of the Revolution, and while residing in the vicinity of the church* was a maker of household furniture. In his old age he drew a soldier's pension. Couples about to be married, as a preliminary, placed an order with Zadoc Hutchins for house furnishings in those days not easily procurable in the interior towns. After the death of his wife, Mr. Hutchins went to live with a son in Thompson." (p. 57-8) (*The first Westfield Congregational Church was erected in 1796 just a little north of where Killingly Memorial School now stands---think property with gazebo). Zadock Hutchins seems to be one of the proprietors of the store from the way the entries occur in doctor and lived where Killingly Memorial School now stands. "'Dr. Penuel Hutchins was a dignified man of commanding appearance, wearing the old Colonial custom until the last few years of his life. The

which he carried into the sick room contained enough medicine to last a modern physician a year at least, besides the inevitable lancet. unmarked ability and keen discrimination won for him an enviable reputation among neighboring physicians, so that he was often called in council and his judgment deferred to in critical cases." (Arnold, op. cit.., p. 58; Source of his quote not given).

The daybook contains entries for a Daniel Hills so he apparently lived close enough to visit the "store." The 1790 U.S. Census Windham County, Connecticut has two entries in the index for that name. One individual lived in Voluntown and had one male over 16 and 6 females in the household. The second Daniel Hill lived in Plainfield and had 8 in the household which included 3 males 16 and up and 5 females. It is impossible from the little available information to tell which individual might be the proprietor with Hutchins. It appears that Zadock Hutchins had the day-today operations of the store, which fits nicely with what

Arnold says. Now I'll provide a few examples of what people were purchasing at that time. I'll leave the spellings as they were in the daybook. On Nov. 20, 1792, Hutchins & Hills seemingly made a few purchases for the store in Boston: an account book, 1 barrel, 1 Quire paper, 6 Quires "Rapping" paper, bag for pepper, cask for crockery, Box for pipes. So what was this Quire of paper? According to AI "A quire of paper is a quantity of 24 or 25 sheets, depending on the paper type. Historically, it was 24 sheets, while a quire of 25 sheets is standard for modern machinemade paper and forms a 500-sheet ream." Zadoc Hutchins purchased half a yard green baize and 12 coat buttons for himself, debit---entered as Dr. (Most of the entries were by debit. On May 25, 1793, Rufus Howard brought in three pounds of butter for credit. That same day Betsey Hulett brought in 24 yards tow cloth for credit. Although we were now the United States, accounting was still kept in the British pounds, pence, Joseph and shillings). Cady purchased an iron "shovle" (sic) and one Almanack; Ellijah Youngs also purchased one iron shovel and one Almanack; Wilson Keys, Jun. purchased one Almanack; Zadoc Hutchins (by Asa) purchased one slate. Nov. 21, Silas Hutchins purchased an Almanack and 4 pipes; Zadoc Hutchins, one spelling book; Elijah Young's son purchased a pint of rum and a darning needle on his father's account; Joshua Sunsimon purchased two yards coating, two yards "ribon" (sic). Two entries for Josh Sunsiman appear in "A Directory of Native and African Americans in Windham County, CT and Vicinity, 1650-1900" by Marcella Houle Pasay. One was a colonial militia veteran who served in Israel Putnam's Company. The second was the son of Isaac & Mary and the husband of Martha and "may have lived in the vicinity of what is now Old Furnace State Park." (both p. 515). Nov. 22 Barnibus Davis purchased a number of buttons, apparently in two different sizes. Daniel Hills purchased 4 and a half quarter and half quarter of striped coating, a stick of twist* and a number of buttons of different sizes. *This definition from the online Oxfod Dictionary seemed to fit twist the best--- "a fine strong thread consisting of twisted strands of cotton or silk." Thomas Burgess bought a Bible; Elias Stearns, quarter pound ginger; Josiah Russell, an Almanack; William Reede, 1 yard and ¼ Lacey foile (?); Zadock Hutchins, pair Shears (against credit by cash ). Nov. 23, 1792: Capt. Silas Hutcins, ½ Quire paper; Zadoc Hutchins by David Youngs-2 ounces pepper, 2 ounces Allspice; Joshua Sunsimon-yard of coating. November 24-Daniel Hills, an ink stand; Zadoc Hutchins, Quarter pepper. 27-Joshua Nov.

Sunsimon, quarter yd coating; Noah Titus, one ink stand; Silas Hutchins by Calvin, 1 lb. "rasons" (sic); Doctor Penuel Hutchins, to raisons, yd and 1/2 shoe binding; Oliver Spalding, 3 ½ yds of Holland. November 28- Zadoc Hutchins-1 quart of Rum; George Robinson by Priscilla Davis, ½ lb. ginger; Widow Denielsonpair of candle sniffers, 1/2/lb "rasons", ½ dozen needles, ½ ounce cinnamon; Wd Danielson, nutmeg; Hutchins & Hills to "mittings", Noah Titus, "mittings"; Miss Bushe, to handkerchief; Zadoc Hutchins, sundries, Nathan Witter to (?) "soop" plates; Daniel Hill, to yd ½ "taste" (?); Noah Titus, to yd ½ Quallity (?). Nov. 30-Doctor Penuel Hutchins by wife-pair ½ pint glasses; Benjamin Chamberlinan Almanack; 4 ounces raisons; Daniel Hills (?); Capt. Silas Hutchins-to two gallons brandy; Zadoc Hutchins-gallon molasses; Capt. Ephraim Warren-an Almanack; Boaz Stearns by son-quarter pound "poder"; Silas Hutchins by Joseph Cary-four gallons rum. Zadoc Hutchins-to cash; Widow Sanders-skein of

Note that several women came into the store including the Widow Danielson, Miss Bushe, Priscilla Davis, and Widow

Sanders Widow Sanders was the widow of the second Nell Alexander. The family name was originally Elllick-Sanders, thus "Sanders." She appeared that way in the 1790 census. Notice that Captain Silas Hutchins was purchasing large quantities of brandy and rum. He operated a tavern in the vicinity. Arnold mentioned that when Roswell Whitmore was ordained as pastor of the first Westfield Congregational Church " in 1813 the Ordination Ball (was) held the same evening at Captain Silas Hutchins Assembly Room under the management of Messrs. Malbone and About 1833 Hutchins. Capt. Silas operated a hotel/ tavern on Franklin Street closer to the Danielson cotton mills. (H.V. Arnold, Memories of Westfield, p. 65, 72; see Images of America Killingly by Natalie L. Coolidge and Robert A. Spencer, p. 11--they give Hutchins Tavern on Franklin Street an 1837 date).

Thus ends the entries for the first month. I am anxious to continue extracting information from the account book. It is especially valuable for names of women who do not yet appear in the census records. Please, if your family has any old account/ day books consider having photocopies made at the Killingly Historical Center. You, of course, would keep your original. Like diaries, they provide valuable information about everyday life in our community.

Life balance

We all want to move forward — to reach the goal, finish the book, launch the business, get in shape, fall in love, or become the person we know we could be. We all have dreams, and most of us don't lack the desire. What we lack is the willingness to act when the timing isn't perfect. I'm all about maintaining a work-life balance, and boundaries are essential, but I sometimes think that it's not the world slowing us down — it's our own rules. The quiet, self-made commandments we invent in the name of balance, boundaries, and self-care. Rules like "I don't check emails after 5," or "I don't work weekends," or "I don't follow up twice with the same client." They sound healthy responsible even — but sometimes they're invisible fences around our potential.

We build them to stay sane, but if left unchecked, they can also prevent us from going where we truly want to be in life. A lot of these rules come from a good place. We've been burned before. We've felt the crash after burnout, the sting of rejection, the exhaustion of trying too hard. So we promise ourselves limits: never again, not on Sundays. POSITIVELY But what starts as SPEAKING protection can quietly become a kind of confinement. MOORE Sometimes growth begins exactly where discomfort starts.

TOBY

Every ambitious person eventually faces a crossroads between their rules and their results. The people who go far — the ones we admire — aren't necessarily smarter or luckier. They're just the ones who decided certain rules didn't apply to them. Stephen King ignored the publishing world's "one book a year" rule. He wrote so fast that his publisher couldn't keep up, so he created a pseudonym— Richard Bachman-to release more. When readers discovered the truth, both names became bestsellers, and the rule was never taken seriously again. Or take Jeff Bezos, who in Amazon's early days answered customer emails and support calls at 2 a.m., believing connection mattered more than sleep. That obsessive rule-breaking focus on customers became the DNA of one of the world's biggest companies. Or Ed Sheeran, who not after hours, played dozens of free or low-pay gigs in a single year, sleeping on couches and busking on street corners. Friends said he was devaluing his art - but those nights built the loyal fan base that later filled stadiums.

Or Elon Musk, who broke Silicon Valley's "focus on one thing" rule. While most founders were told to master one company at a time, he was building rockets, cars, and solar panels all at once.

Each one of them broke a rule that sounded smart but wasn't serving the dream.

I'm not suggesting that people should work 24/7, but I am saying that sometimes you need to work 24/7. Knowing when to be flexible with your work-life balance can change your entire future. It's knowing the difference between a guardrail and a cage.

Discipline isn't always about sticking to the same schedule forever; sometimes the boundaries need to bend. The rules that once protected your peace can, at a different season of life, start protecting your comfort instead. And comfort is a silent thief of momentum.

Every ambitious person reaches a point where "balance" becomes an excuse.

Where the rule that once made sense starts standing in the way, the truth is, you can't build an extraordinary life while staying entirely within ordinary limits.

Your next breakthrough may not require a new plan, a new mentor, or a new skill. It may require pushing past self-imposed boundar-

Examine the rules vou've established for yourself. Keep the ones that keep you healthy — the ones that let you rest, recover, and reconnect with life. But question the ones that keep you safe at the expense of your potential.

We all need balance, and progress isn't found in balance alone. It's found in the moments you lean just a little further than what feels comfortable - when you stay an extra hour, take the extra call, send the extra pitch.

You don't need to give  $up\ balance-just\ bend\ it\ in$ the direction of what matters most.

your holiday gatherings with the help of succulents. You and your guests will enjoy the easy-care beauty of succulents. Their subtle colors and dramatic form make them great gifts and decorations now and throughout the year.

Small-scale succulents provide a multitude of opportunities for incorporating them into your holiday celebrations. Just select containers that complement, but don't overpower their charm.

Create a succulent garden to use as a centerpiece for the table. A shallow container filled with a variety of succulents with different shapes and colors is sure to capture everyone's attention. Set the container on a saucer to protect the table and add a complementary table runner for even greater impact.

Add a unique flair to the table by placing cocktail glasses filled with succulents next to each guest's place setting. This makes a unique table decoration and party favor for guests to take home as a reminder of your fun gathering. Use a few planted cocktail glasses to decorate the beverage table or bar.

Grow these plants in a cacti and succulent potting mix. These fast-draining mixes help reduce the risk of overwatering. Further reduce this risk by using holes that are only slightly larger than the succulents' root system. Growing them in too large of a container for the plant size will retain moisture longer that can lead to root rot, decline, and even the death of your plants.

After the party continue to provide proper care so your centerpiece will be ready for your next event. Move the succulent planter to a cool, draft-free location near an unobstructed south-, west- or east-facing window. If light is limited, consider adding artificial lights.

Water thoroughly but only when the top few inches of soil are dry and just often enough to keep the plants from shriveling. These winter-growing conditions often encourage a spring display of colorful and unique flowers.

Share these directions with your guest and if possible, the name of the succulent. This helps your guest keep the plants alive to enjoy for years to come.

WAYNE

TUISKULA

It's been nearly a month and a half since my last auction news update, and there's a lot to report. I'll start by sharing news about a rare piece of Titanic memorabilia being auctioned in the United Kingdom.

Frederick Sutton, a 61-year-old first-class passenger from New Jersey, was lost at sea when the Titanic sank on April 14, 1912.

Some of his personal effects were recovered and given to his family. The family held them for over 100 years before deciding to now auction the memorabilia. Mr. Sutton's family received his belongings in a white canvas bag marked "46." It included a firstclass passenger list that had been damaged by the cold Atlantic waters after the tragic incident. The collection includes a note from Titanic's White Start Lines. Families of missing passengers were advised that they would have to pay for a first-class ticket to return deceased family members' bodies that were recovered. "This is callous in the extreme but goes to illustrate how different the world was in 1912," the auctioneer said in the BBC article. The passenger list is estimated to bring £100,000 ($131,350 U.S.).

A massive collection of memorabilia from the estate of colorful and eccentric Indianapolis Colts owner, Jim Irsay, will be sold in several auctions. Irsay had shared some of his collection with the public in 2023 when he offered free concerts to the public with the opportunity to view some historical and pop culture memorabilia. One of the stops on the tour was at Boston's TD Garden, where I was fortunate enough to see some of the rare artifacts. Items being auctioned include "an Apple II manual signed by Steve Jobs, Hunter S. Thompson's Red Shark convertible and Jack Kerouac's original typewritten manuscript of "On the Road,"" according to the Indy Star.

A toilet might make an impact on the art world when it goes on the auction block later this month. Made of gold, the working sculpture was designed by Italian artist Maurizio Cattelan and is titled "America." It "was created with 101.2 kilograms (223 pounds) of gold," according to MSN. An identical one was stolen from England's Blenheim Palace in a brazen 2019 heist. Cattelan is the artist who sold "Comedian," a banana duct taped to a wall, for $6.2 million last year.

No estimate for the toilet was provided, but the gold used is worth approximately $10 million at current rates. The artist is hoping it bowls over bidders and brings much

Local author hosts book signing at The Arc Emporium in Woodstock

WOODSTOCK — Ron Coderre, author of the recently published book "The Flood of 1955," is happy to announce a special book signing at The Arc Emporium thrift store in Woodstock Thursday, Nov. 13 from 4 to 5 p.m. The Arc Emporium is located at 22 Route 171 in Woodstock.

Barry Shead, General Manager of The Arc Eastern Connecticut—operators of The Arc Emporium is pleased to host a local author.

"The Arc Emporium is a local business with an important mission," he said. "And as a community entity, we felt this was an opportunity to not only showcase Coderre's work but to acquaint local people with the work that goes on daily at The Emporium."

Coderre, who was 14 at the time of the flood, will speak about his experiences and memory of the event, which occurred Aug. 19, 1955. Residing in Putnam at the time, Coderre and his family lived on Sunnyside Avenue and were able to witness firsthand not only the raging Quinebaug River but also many of the heroic events that occurred. continued from page A1 same as Democrats tightened their hold on the board after flipping control two years ago. Misty Murdock, Nelson King, and Susan Lannon were all victorious on the Democratic ticket ousting incumbent Republicans Kyle Napierata and Kelly Martin and defeating their GOP running mate Stephen Schroth. Additionally, Democrat Kyle Provencher was victorious in filling a vacancy left by the passing of Democrat Danny Rovero, defeating Republican Diane Summa in the process.

Republicans did claim a small victory as their Board of Assessment Appeals candidate Kevin Gaudreau was victorious over Democrat Nancy Grandelski.

PUTNAM

Putnam also saw a shift to Democratic control as incumbent Mayor Barney Seney, running on the Democratic ticket after leaving the Republican Party and becoming unaffiliated, secured his fifth term while his ticket swept the major races.

Seney was challenged by Republican Dave Coderre, Putnam's current chair of the Board of Finance, and claimed victory in a 53 to 46 percent margin. All other Democrats on the Board of Selectmen ticket also earned victory: incumbents Gloria Marion and Scott Pempek along with new selectman Mike Bogdanski. The results oust incumbent Republican David Pomes from the board while his fellow incumbent GOP candidates Ricky Hayes, Roy Simmons, and Michael Paquin secured seats, albeit all with less votes than their Democratic challengers. That splits the Board of Selectmen evenly along party lines but with Senev as an unaffiliated Democrat

Democrats also dominated the Board of Finance and Board of Education races. For Board of Education, with five seats and one vacancy listed as expiring on the board's website, Democrats Francis Bousquet, Jon Chad Neal, Elizabeth Beman, and Jamie Heath received the most votes while GOP candidate Monique Mailloux had the next highest vote tally over fellow Republican James Purdon. Democrat Jill Zangerl ran unopposed to fill a vacancy. The result effectively gives Democrats a majority on the board.

The Board of Finance also saw Democratic success with Putnam's town website indicating three available seats with Democrats Kerstin Forrester and Shane Donahue and Republican Julie Quinn earning the most votes. Quinn's victory came down to a single vote between her and Democrat Paula Hanlon according to tally recorded by the Secretary of State while GOP candidates Walter (Scott) Irwin and Lisa-Jean Clifford were not elected to the board. Two alternate seats were also up for grabs with Democrat Linda Garcia and Republican Christopher Steinbrick earning more votes than Republican Ronald Michael Stewart in the three-person race.

The final significant race on Putnam's ballot was for the Special Services District Authority also saw significant Democratic success. Democrats Anne St. Onge, Ross Johnson and Jon Carvalho were in the top four vote-getters joined by Republican Norm Perron who was second only to St. Onge in total votes received. The remaining candidates, in order of total votes, were Republican Steve Gagnon, Democrat Stephen Etzel, and Republicans Brian Maynard and Earl Rosebrooks.

Putnam's election also decided seats on the Library

Directors and the Board of Assessment Appeals.

THOMPSON

While the Democrats made waves and wrestled control away from the GOP in several communities, Thompson remained a Republican stronghold.

Thompson's situation was unique as the only town in this year's election guaranteed to install completely new leadership on the town's highest elected board as all three sitting selectmen choosing not to run for re-election. It ended up being a night of easy wins for the Republican party.

Republican First Selectman candidate Nick Donohue dominated the election, earning more than 65 percent of the vote compared to the 34 percent earned by Democratic challenger Andrew Irby. Donahue's running mate Larry Consiglio, Jr. also joins the Board of Selectmen while Democratic selectman candidate Geoffrey Bolte earned more votes than Irby, making Bolte the third selectman.

The victory was one of many for the GOP in the region's northeast-most community as Republican candidates for Board of Finance Rob Werge and Steven Herbert outpaced the lone Democratic nominee Brian Loffredo, although Democratic exiting Selectman Ken Beausoleil was elected unopposed to the board to fill a vacan-Republican Board of Education candidates Daniella Caverly and Rick Medieros also earned more support than Democrat challengers Amanda Jean Lincoln and Melissa Dragon.

Republicans also claimed victories in all other races including the Planning & Zoning Commission, Library Trustees, and Zoning Board of Appeals.

BROOKLYN

Brooklyn will also have a completely new Board of Selectmen after the incumbent First Selectman was ousted in the election.

Democrat Joe Bellavance, the chair of the town's Economic Development Committee, claimed victory over incumbent Republican First Selectman Austin Tanner in a decisive vote tally of 47 to 29 percent. while petitioning candidate Michael Patrick Rekola earned 23 percent of the vote. Bellavance's running mate Sherri Vogt also earned enough votes to secure a selectman seat, flipping control of the town's top board from Republican to Democrat.

While Tanner had hoped to continue to lead the town alongside his new running mate Kayla Burgess, it was Burgess who received more votes giving her the third selectman seat and ousting Tanner. Petitioning incumbent Selectman candidate Joseph Voccio also failed to earn enough to join the

The rest of the election results were mixed in terms of party success. While Republican Sandy Brodeur earned the most votes for the Board of Finance, her running mate David Fuss received less votes than Democrats Robert Smanik and Richard Ives. Kayla Burgess was tied with Democrat Melissa Perkins-Bana for the most votes for Board of Education followed by Republicans Justin Phaiah and Dann Stuyniski. Democrat Susan Wasstrom earned the most votes for Zoning Board of Appeals followed by Republicans Joanne Eiler and Justin Phaiah.

POMFRET

The contest for First Selectman in Pomfret was foregone conclusion with incumbent Democrat Maureen Nicholson running unopposed, but the battle for the remaining Board of Selectmen seats was decided on Election Dav.

Three candidates went 70th Annual Interfaith into the day hoping for success with only two able to serve on the town's highest board. The result saw the party endorsed candidates. Democrat Patrick McCarthy and Republican Martha Emilio, triumph handily over a petitioning candidate Alan Burgess Chubbuck.

The rest of the ballot saw democratic dominance across the board. Democrats Christian Smutnick and Norine Reingold earned more votes than Republican Heather A. Semenza for Board of Finance and Democrats Leigh Grossman and Nicholas Stellitano outpaced Republican nominees Kathleen Sposato and Brent Tuttle as well as petitioning candidate Sara Emilia Garcia-Gomes for Board of Education. Democratic nominees also dominated races for Board of Assessment Appeals, Planning & Zoning Commission, Zoning Board of Appeals, and Library Trustees, although it's worth noting that some contests were uncontested.

WOODSTOCK

The Woodstock political parties made headlines earlier this year by cross endorsing numerous candidates on the ballot, so it's no surprise that the election produced little drama at the polls.

Republican Chandler Paquette, who succeeded the late Jay Swan as an appointed First Selectman, officially won the seat with no competition and will be joined by Democrat Kate McDonald and Republican Christopher Mayhew on the Board of Selectmen keeping the current board slate intact for at least another two years.

While the 2025 election in Woodstock avoided the trend of party politics, it is worth noting Democrats showed some strength in terms of overall success. The Board of Finance race for example showed Democrat Ivar McDonald earning more votes that Republican David Fortin, although cross endorsed candidate Philip Parizeau easily earned the most votes. This means McDonald and Parizeau will join the board. Democrat Margaret Wholean and Republican Wendy Costa also earned seats as alternates in separate uncontested elections.

Democrats also had good numbers for Board of Education where their candidate Matthew Bennett outpaced Republican Judith Decharme Folkerts although again it was a cross endorsed candidate, Sonia Greene who earned more votes overall and all three candidates were guaranteed spots on the board. Democratic nominee Susan Swan earned more votes than Republican Shawn Bordeur to fill a Board of Education vacancy.

The Planning & Zoning Commission, while not a contested election, also show Democratic momentum with Joseph Polulech, Syd Blodgett, and Joseph Adiletta outpacing Republican David Morse while Democrat Amy Monahan earned an uncontested seat as an alternate.

EASTFORD

Eastford's election contained the least amount of drama of any ballot on Election Day, with only two truly contested seats up for grabs and one secured by a significant margin.

The current Board of Selectmen will remain intact as First Selectman Deborah Richards was cross endorsed by both parties and incumbents Ashlyn Ellsworth, a Democrat, and Paula Rocellini, a Republican, were uncontested. Richards faced a contest from petitioning candidate Michael Schultz, although she easily fended off the challenge.

The rest of the ballot, including races for Town Clerk, Treasurer, Collector, Board of Education, Board of Assessment Appeals, and Constables, were all essentially decided going into the day with no true contest among them.

The only true race was for the Library Board of Trustees where Democrat Meghan Martinez received less votes than Republicans Mary Dogostin, Seth Budd, and Armen Beermann.

VFW Auxiliary announces kick-off of annual Illustrating America Art Contest

PUTNAM Auxiliary Post 1523, Putnam, is excited to announce the kick-off of the VFW Auxiliary's annual Illustrating America art contest. Local students in grades K-8 can share how they view our world through their drawings and paintings while competing for national awards. The contest rewards the artistic abilities of elementary and middle/junior high school students.

Students must submit an original two-dimensional piece of artwork. The entry must have been completed during the current school year, and the application must include a parent or guardian signature.

Students begin by competing at the local VFW Auxiliary level. The firstplace winner from each Auxiliary advances to the Department (state) competition. The contest consists of three grade divisions: K-2, 3-5 and 6-8. The Department (state) firstplace winner in each grade division will be forwarded to the VFW Auxiliary National Headquarters. There are awards for first, second and third place in each grade division. All state winning entries are judged at National Headquarters in Kansas City, Mo. in and an image may be shown at the VFW Auxiliary National Convention. Winners will be notified via the email address provided on the winners' entry form.

Student entries must be submitted to the VFW Auxiliary by March 31. Interested youth, parents/ guardians and teachers should contact the listed above more information. Visit http://www.vfwauxiliary.org/what-we-do/ youth-activities for eligibility requirements, contest rules and an entry form.

About the VFW Auxiliary The VFW Auxiliary is one of the nation's oldest veterans' service organizations and our members are the relatives of those who served in a location of foreign conflict.

We have nearly 470,000 members representing all 50

the Philippines, Thailand, Panama, Guam and France who volunteer millions of hours and give millions of dollars to support veterans, military service personnel and their families.

We are a voice for veterans on Capitol Hill and are instrumental in assisting the pass or block legislation that impacts veterans and their families. We are one of the top 10 providers of volunteer hours in the VA medical system. Every year, members fundraise millions of dollars for charitable projects that benefit veterans and their families. We also provide hundreds of thousands of dollars in scholarships for our nation's youth. With more than 3,600 Auxiliaries, there is likely one in your area working to improve the lives of America's uncommon heroes. Learn more at www.vfwauxiliary.org.

The Temple Beth Israel Preservation Society of Danielson and the Federated Church of Christ of Brooklyn are pleased to announce the 70th Annual Interfaith Thanksgiving Service, a cherished community tradition celebrating seven decades of faith, gratitude, and fellowship.

DANIELSON

The service will take place on Tuesday, Nov. 25, at 7 p.m. at Temple Beth Israel, 39 Killingly Dr., Danielson. Admission is free, and all members of the community are warmly invited to attend.

This beloved event has been observed every year for seven decades, with the service alternating annually between the Federated Church of Christ and Temple Beth Israel. Together, these two historic congregations have built a lasting bond grounded in mutual respect, shared values, and a commitment to serving the wider commu-

Thanksgiving Service to be held at Temple Beth Israel

"The evening will include prayer, song, reflection, and fellowship, offering a moment of unity and gratitude for neighbors of all faiths and backgrounds," said Rev. Jane Newall, minister of the Federated

Church of Christ, who encourages all to attend.

Attendees are invited to bring non-perishable food items to be donated to the Friends of Assisi Food Pantry. Cash donations collected during the service will benefit the Community Kitchens of Northeastern Connecticut.

"All are welcome," said Norman Berman, President of the Temple Beth Israel Preservation Society. "At a time when our world can feel divided, this gathering reminds us that gratitude and compassion have the power to bring us together."

John J. LaRoche October 5, 1954 - October 30, 2025

Dayville - John J. LaRoche, 71, of Country Acres Park, passed away on October 30, 2025, after a long battle with lung cancer. He was the loving husband of Amy Vaillancourt for many years. Born in Putnam, Connecticut, he was the son of the late Laurent Richard LaRoche and the late Anne R. Hayes.

In John's early years he grew up on the family farm in Thompson raising cows, sheep, ducks, chickens and any wild animal that came along. In his late teens the travel bug set in, he began the journey by hitchhiking across the country. He went west and hit every state with the occasional phone call for bail money. When he returned home, he began a career of many his favorite being a welder at EB. Around that time the kids started to arrive, first Shannon, then Sheila, and then his mini me Little Joey. This journey took him out to Montana and Oklahoma where he resided for many years until the travel bug hit again this time he ended up in Florida. In his later years he decided he wanted to come back home and settle into the northeast to begin his final adventure. This is when he meets his wife Amy, and he settled into life the entire time rescuing and rehabilitating many abandoned baby deer that he would encounter. He was lovingly referred to as the deer whisperer. John had a love for all things Harley related; he owned many bikes and loved nothing but riding as the wind blew through his hair. He was also an avid collector of many parts and always on the hunt for more. He could probably build a whole bike with all the parts hanging around. John was a man in Dayville, CT. with a heart of gold and if he had the part needed he would gladly give it up.

Check Lee. the Assistant Director of DEEP Dam

Safety Programs, said WISH followed its inspection schedule, which is when the seepage was detected and DEEP recommended close monitoring of the dam. In September they started getting calls that the water level was low, and WISH's representatives determined the seepage was occurring at the bottom of the dam at a higher-than-expected rate. In recent weeks, sediment movement has also been confirmed making it a much larger issue indicating internal erosion and possible structural issues resulting in DEEP's order to relieve pressure.

"We agree with the engineer that WISH has, and our engineers agree, that this is a situation where we want to make sure the pressure is off the dam, and we can minimize any internal erosion as best we can," said Lee. "There's one more complicating factor with this dam. We know that there's people using the top of the dam, or the crest of the dam, for access to their homes or seasonal properties and that's an additional concern.'

These complications have resulted in a scenario where failure of the dam wouldn't only create a risk to properties and life but also cut off access to property along the waterfront. This, combined with potential easements, wetlands impact, and a lack of guarantees the lake could be refilled, made an implication of breaching the dam as an option very unpopular. Breaching would involve removing the dam completely, so it no longer impounds water, effectively draining the pond and removing the risk of failure but also removing the entryway to lakeside properties and potentially impacting the aesthetics of the pond.

Lee made it clear that DEEP is not making any recommendations, and that WISH will make the ultimate decision on how to proceed.

"Just to be clear, the agency is not advocating for the dam to be taken down or the pond to be drained, but we are concerned about the dam safety issues," said Lee. "It is a privately owned asset, and WISH is the owner. They're going to make the decision that's in their best interest. WISH has the right as the property owner to maintain that dam as they see fit as long as they do it within the regulations of the State of Connecticut."

Harold Kahn, Principal Account Officer with WISH, told residents he couldn't comment on the future state of the dam but clarified that the company's dams are "legacy assets" owned by predecessors to WISH which, as he put it, is currently a shell company that is now very small with minimal assets and thus little cash to invest in repairs. The town of Killingly has turned down several offers to purchase WISH's dams due to maintenance cost, but this new situation has some locals asking if town officials might reconsider or if DEEP could possibly purchase the structure. While representatives of DEEP admitted the agency has an interest in preserving the lake as they own around 162 acres of the surrounding area, they were unsure if the agency would be in a position to purchase the dam.

Regardless, a lot still has to be worked out, and WISH has yet to solidify what approach it plans to take. WISH was given 60 days from the date of notice to provide a response plan to DEEP.
