Former Putnam woman named Harvard Athletic Director

BY RON P. CODERRE
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Erin McDermott, a former Putnam resident, was named Athletic Director at Harvard University on Thursday, May 7. McDermott is the first woman in the long and prestigious history of Harvard, which was founded in 1636, to hold the position. Her appointment takes effect on July 1, 2020.

McDermott, who was born in Webster, Mass., resided in Putnam for the first four years of her life before moving to Massachusetts with her family. She is the daughter of Thomas McDermott, who starred on the basketball court at the former St. Joseph's High School in North Grosvenordale and Kathleen Donnelly McDermott.

"We are thrilled to welcome Erin McDermott to the University," Harvard President Larry Bacow told The Harvard Gazette. "She understands and appreciates the values of the Ivy League — that our athletes are students first. She brings to her new role deep and broad experience as well as an abiding love of competition. I am confident that she will build on the considerable accomplishments of Bob Scalise at a moment of remarkable challenge both across the nation and throughout higher

American Legion District #4 awards two scholarships

REGION — As part of its commitment to youth, The American Legion District #4, which encompasses Tolland and Windham counties, recently announced its two scholarship recipients for 2020. The American Legion's mission is based on four pillars — Care and Rehabilitation of Veterans; Defense of our country; Americanism; and Service to Youth. In awarding the scholarships, District #4 Commander Ronald P. Coderre noted, "These awards are part of our service to the youth of our area and our commitment to promoting Americanism in our young people. We're honored and proud to support these worthy individuals."

The 2020 scholarship awards are being presented to Emily Guerrero of Rockville High School and Justin St. Martin of Putnam High School, two area high school seniors.

"The District scholarship committee received a large number of applications this year. Following much deliberation, the committee made its selections. Both of these young people demonstrated wholesome American qualities. Their applications indicated strength in the area of American citizenship. We're very pleased to make these presentations," said Commander Coderre.

Emily Guerrero excelled in academics and extracurricular and community activities in her school and community. She served as vice president of her class, participated in track and cross country and was recognized as a STEM scholar. She was also honored by the Connecticut Association of Boards of Education with awards in Student Leadership and Excellence in Computer Science and Business Education.

Ms. Guerrero is active in the Youth Peer Advocate program at her school, serves on the Youth Advisory Board of her community and is a team captain for the Relay for Life. She is the daughter of Anthony and Pamela Guerrero of Vernon. In September she will be attending Seton Hall University in New Jersey, where she will focus her studies in the field of Nursing. Her goal is to be a Doctor of Nursing Practice, specializing in neonatal nursing.

Justin St. Martin is a member of the Putnam High School National Honor Society and the Student Council. He participated in soccer, golf, baseball and basketball and was honored as a Connecticut Association of Schools Scholar-Athlete. He's active in Boy Scouts, attaining the rank of Eagle Scout. He's also a member of the Putnam Leo Club, a division of the Putnam Lions Club and volunteers in a number of non-profit organization programs.

St. Martin is the son of Michael and Amy Beth St. Martin of Putnam. He'll attend Landmark College in Putney, Vermont in September, where he'll study Computer Science.

According to scholarship committee chairman Albert Cormier of Mayotte-Viens American Legion Post #13, Guerrero and St. Martin will each be the recipient of a $1000 scholarship. Under the current conditions created by the COVID-19 crisis, the arrangements for the presentations are pending.

Centreville Bank Charitable Foundation donates to organizations offering COVID-19 relief

PUTNAM — The Centreville Bank Charitable Foundation has awarded $45,000 in emergency funding to nine Connecticut organizations, today announced Harold M. Horvat, bank President, CEO and Chairman. Centreville recently completed the acquisition of Putnam Bank, which operates as a division of Centreville.

"Now that our merger with Putnam Bank is complete, Centreville is proud to be part of the Eastern Connecticut community and we are committed to providing assistance where it is needed most," said Horvat. "We realize that there continues to be an enormous amount of work to help the people and organizations of Eastern Connecticut that are being impacted financially by this pandemic. We hope that our ongoing support assists those who need it most."

Putnam Rotary supports local first responders

PUTNAM — Call it a "rapid-response" fund-raiser. "Rapid response," much like the beneficiaries of the Putnam Rotary Club's latest fund-raiser.

First responder ambulance/EMT crews received $1,400 total from the Putnam Rotary Club to spend on Personal Protection Equipment (PPE) that they might need. In less than two weeks, an idea was conceived, carried out and the checks went out.

One Putnam Rotarian who works with local emergency personnel heard about different needs in different ambulance corps. Some needed masks; others needed face shields; still others needed gloves. Instead of giving crews the items, the club thought that giving the funds instead would allow the crews to get exactly what they needed.

The icing on the cake was word that "First responders are first in line ordering from Amazon."

Putnam Rotary Club President Richard Naumann, in a Zoom meeting with his club and follow-up email, asked Rotarians send checks to the Rotary Club's treasurer. Another Rotarian compiled a list of crews in need in the club's area of service.

Within days, club members had contributed $700. Naumann said the club added another $700 from the District and the checks were mailed to the crews.

The following first responders received funds: Pomfret Fire District, Putnam EMS, East Putnam Fire Department,

Civil War and Memorial Day

Memorial Day dates back to the late 1860's, following the Civil War. Since this weekend is Memorial Day weekend, in honor of the many men who participated in this War Between the States, I thought I would devote this column to Civil War happenings. I don't have a relative in my direct line who was a Civil War veteran, but my great grandfather's older brother James William Lyter served in a Pennsylvania regiment. Since he wasn't born until 1848, he must have enlisted as quite a young man. I know many of our local men were also quite young.

Several interesting publications on local history in my personal library provided me with an abundance of information on what was taking place here in Northeastern Connecticut and in the Southern military camps throughout the war. In his "Historical Memoir of the West or Brooklyn Side Danielson, Connecticut," H.V. Arnold noted various changes in the daily routines following the inauguration of President Lincoln and the secession of several Southern states. In 1861 "the President called for 75,000 men for three months service and people realized that a civil war was inevitable, though there was an illusion quite generally prevalent that it would be short. The remainder of April and May in Danielsonville was characterized by war-meetings, public addresses and enlistments of men for the war."

The war affected the local factories and "the mills now began running on shortened time and were stopped each Saturday, giving operatives some leisure to take all the more cognizance of what was in progress...Soldiers trains taking whole regiments of men to the war began passing through the village in long trains of passenger coaches. These things set the Brooklyn side boys at playing soldiers, though the 'depot boys', as they were called made no such demonstration."

As the war progressed, men from the Killingly-Brooklyn area were among those who enlisted in the Eighteenth Regiment Connecticut Volunteer Infantry. It was formally organized in Norwich on Aug. 22, 1862 and left that day for Baltimore, Maryland. Colonel William Grosvenor Ely of Norwich, who was born in Killingly December 11, 1836 the son of Jesse and Mary Grosvenor

"Dear Transcript Letters from Windham County Soldiers During the Civil War 1861-1865" by the Killingly Historical & Genealogical Society provides heart-wrenching glimpses into the feelings of family and friends awaiting news of their loved ones and letters from the war zone. The Transcript of June 25, 1863 carried the following (apparently by the editor): "We have no need to say to our readers that the past the days have been days of intense and painful anxiety on the part of the citizens of our County, and the heavy burden has not now been fully lifted from the minds and hearts of our people. Not alone about the hearthstones where weeping fathers and mothers, wives and children, brothers and sisters, in deep suspense waited tidings from the absent ones...In these hours of our sadness we have one consolation--the Eighteenth never flinched. They met the shock of battle with a bravery and determination that has not been surpassed in the present war...The Eighteenth with their gallant Col. Ely, who proved himself worthy to lead as brave man as ever went to battle--will receive the homage due the heroic." (p.291,2).

Anxiously awaiting news of the men "on Saturday morning our citizens determined, if it was possible, to ascertain the fate of the mass of the Eighteenth as we could obtain no information from either Major Peale or Capt. Palmer, the only commissioned officers or privates who were in the last charge that escaped; and E. L. Cundall, Esq., Major Keech and Mr. Lorin Bates left on the noon train for Baltimore and Harper's Ferry." (p.293).

Cundall sent a letter from Baltimore dated June 21, 1863 noting some of what he had learned, although he had no complete report. Colonel Ely was being held prisoner; Lt. Co. Nichols was wounded and was also a prisoner; Surgeon Holbrook was reported killed but that was not confirmed; Captain Bates (Co. B) and Capt. Bowen (Co. H) were wounded and were prisoners; Lt. Blanchard (Co. B) was reported killed; Alonzo Potter of Williamsville was sick and a prisoner. (p. 294). That campaign left many casualties and a number of prisoners. The State of Connecticut later erected a monument to the 18th Connecticut Volunteer Infantry Regiment at Winchester National Cemetery in Winchester, Va. ((/stonesentinels.com/less-known/winchester-sites/national-cemetery/18-ct/). Visit the website if you wish to see the monument.

It was not long after the War that graves of those killed in the War were decorated. In fact, as early as 1866 the Southern women had begun to decorate graves of both Confederate and Union soldiers. In 1868 the Commander in Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic issued a general order designating May 30 as a memorial day. Its purpose was to decorate the graves of those who had fallen in battle thus it was originally referred to as Decoration Day instead of Memorial Day. (www.americaslibrary.gov)

Like many towns in Northeastern Connecticut, Killingly chose to honor its Civil War veterans with a statue. The one at Davis Park in Danielson reads as follows: "Erected A.D. 1878 by the Women's Monument Association and Town of Killingly in Honor of the Soldiers and Sailors who served in the War of 1861 for the Preservation of the Union." As we celebrate Memorial Day even though we will have no parades or formal ceremonies due to Covid-19 restrictions, let us pause to remember those who sacrificed so much for us. We can still put flags on our houses and in our yards. We can still visit cemeteries in small family groups. We can still play patriotic music. We can still honor our forefathers and pray that our country is never so divided again.

education.”

McDermott replaces Scalise who announced his retirement following 19 years at the helm as AD for the Crimson.

Since 2013, McDermott has served as the athletic director at the University of Chicago, a Division III school. Prior to her arrival in Chicago, McDermott held athletic administration positions at two Ivy League schools, Columbia and Princeton, where she worked for Gary Williams.

The new Harvard AD is no stranger to athletics, especially basketball. A 1990 graduate and three-sport athlete at Oakmont Regional High School in Massachusetts, she led the Spartans to the Massachusetts District championship and eventually to the state title game in her senior year. In the semi-finals, Oakmont defeated favored Southwick High School, which was led by Rebecca Lobo who went on to All-American fame at the University of Connecticut.

In the semi-final upset of Southwick, McDermott went head-to-head with Lobo, who tallied 30 points. McDermott was credited with a great defensive effort. She laughs about that story today, noting that Lobo was probably averaging 50 points per game at the time. Following her days at Oakmont, she was recognized by the school with her enshrinement into the Spartans Athletic Hall of Fame.

Following her brilliant high school athletic career, she was highly recruited by numerous Division I schools, finally selecting Hofstra University on Long Island, N.Y. She graduated in 1994, and was honored as Hofstra’s top female athlete, following an outstanding basketball career. She later earned a Master’s degree from UMass Amherst.

“I really could not have dreamed up a more perfect place to land than at Harvard. I never thought that this was truly possible,” McDermott recently told The Gardner News.

Regarding her transition to Harvard, she told the Boston Globe, “I envision my first 90 days on a listening tour of constituents, and my goal is to try to build relationships as quickly as I can. Credibility and trust happen through consistency in message and being able to show that I believe in this whole ideal.”

“It’s not a they and us; they are us and we are them, and we are all the same.”

Less than a half century ago, the little girl who grew up in Putnam probably never dreamed of Harvard. But hard work, attention to detail and building relationships has paid off handsomely.

“We are all very proud of Erin,” said her father, Tom McDermott.

James M. Ward, 57

NORTH GROSVENORDALE-James M. Ward, 57, of Ravenelle Rd., died peacefully at his residence on Friday, May 1, 2020. He was the loving husband of Susan (Andrews) Ward. Born in Winthrop, Massachusetts, he was the son of James Ward of Bellingham, MA and Patricia (Arnell) Pumphret of Winthrop, MA.

Jimmy was a proud veteran serving with the United States Air Force where he learned Communications. After leaving the Air Force, Jimmy continued to work in the communications field as he became a cell phone tower engineer, owning his own company for many years. His favorite part of his job was the fact that he loved to climb 1,500 feet up to the top of the tower to meet the helicopter, at which time an extension was placed on the tower. Jimmy's business allowed him the opportunity to travel throughout the United States, which this proud Patriot loved, but no matter what state he found himself in he was able to find a gym to workout in. He was also known for his love of animals, especially his Mastiffs that he raised.

In addition to his wife, Jimmy is survived by his son, James Riley Ward of Alaska; his two daughters, Charlene Ward of upstate New York and Jady Ward of Thompson, CT; his stepson, Colton Andrews of Shrewsbury, MA; his sister, Tracy Ward Adkins of North Carolina; his half siblings, Sean Pumphret, Paul Pumphret Thomas Pumphret, Caitlin Pumphret, and Kathy Pumphret Norris all of Winthrop, MA as well as Lisa Ward, Maureen Ward, Brian Ward, and Roger Ward all of Bellingham, MA and five grandchildren.

At the request of the family and due to the Corona Virus, funeral arrangements are private and have been entrusted to the Gilman Funeral Home and Crematory, 104 Church St., Putnam. At a future date, the family will schedule a Celebration of James' life. Memorial donations may be made in honor of James Ward, to The Animal Rescue League of Worcester, 139 Holden St. Worcester, MA 01606. For memorial guestbook visit www.GilmanAndValade.com.

He was born in Hassakee, Syria on January 6, 1937 son of the late Naoum and Jamileh (Kolo) Youssef.

Mr. Youssef was a member of St. Mary's Syriac Orthodox Church.

He was the owner of the former East Side Bakery in Worcester and prior to that owned and operated a bakery on Long Island.

George continued at home to cook and bake for his family and friends, which he enjoyed doing.

"George Youssef was the most kind hearted and selfless person I have ever met and I find myself wondering how I got so lucky that I ended up with him as my grandfather. He did everything in his life with God and his family at the center, and we are lucky enough that he passed that wisdom onto us. As much as we grieve his passing, he made sure to let us know how he will never leave us as long as we keep that same faith in God that he exemplified.

Our grandpa George was a giver. He never let us go hungry, as we all know that no one could bake half as well as he did (the secret ingredient had to be his love) and no one could make a kafta sandwich as good as his. However, that is not what I think of when I say my grandpa was a giver. Our grandpa George was a giver because he gave us his wisdom, he gave us his compassion, and luckily for us, he gave us his whole heart. As much as it hurts us that he is no longer physically with us, his grandchild, Isabella, has constantly been reminding me that he isn't gone because he always said that he is always in our hearts and I know he will never leave mine.

More than anything, I would like to say Thank You to our Grandpa George. Thank you for teaching us that God comes first. Thank you for teaching our parents how to raise us. Thank you for all the meals. Thank you for all the lessons. Thank you for your love."

"We Love You Dido George."

Be excellent to each other

It seems as though human kindness has taken a back burner as of late, and we're not sure why. The remarks on social media between people bashing one another over politics or whether or not businesses should re-open, or whether or not the new Coronavirus is as 'real' as 'they' say, are over the top. Social media is certainly both a blessing and a curse.

Social media is a great way to keep in touch with friends and family, but it's also a platform for strangers to draw baseless conclusions and put each other down from behind the comfort of a keyboard. Once upon a time, those on opposing sides had face to face productive conversations. Those have since been replaced with this new format complete with emoji's and other memes or belittling GIFs.

Even more worthy of a raised eyebrow is how many people read a post or a news story from some random, disreputable source and then share it as incontrovertible fact. Nine times out of ten, a simple fact check will prove these "click-bait" posts to be non-factual. There are fake doctors putting out interviews on YouTube and people will just fall for them hook line and sinker. Please pause a moment and question what you're looking at objectively and always check the source.

It seems as though the regard for how we treat one another has been given a new standard, and we believe we know why; however, we'll leave that for our readers to decipher. Kindness and empathy along with professionalism is still alive and well and it's how our country has moved forward the way it has since its inception. Let's not forget that despite the current climate. What we need to remember is that no matter what you think, we are all on the same side.

When we're perusing online, it's not our job to correct a person if it can't be done in a positive way. If a person is being negative and inappropriate in how they interact online, then your best bet is to simply not engage. A heated argument never ends with any side switching to the other. A more productive means of conversation over a hot button issue would be to simply ask the other person questions. This is the best way to make a person think. A light-hearted example: "I see you think blueberry pie is better than Boston Cream pie — can you explain why?"

Asking questions from a meaningful angle can go a long way. Here's the truth of the matter, we don't know everyone we interact with online. With that being said negativity just fuels more negativity. It's easy to disagree with someone in a positive way. Another example could be, "I understand the point you're trying to make; however, I don't agree. With that being said, enjoy your day. It should be a sunny one!" Always try to leave things on a positive note. If you're feeling angry, go for a run or a drive. Don't take your frustration out on strangers online.

As Fred Rogers always said, "When I was a boy and I would see scary things in the news, my mother would say to me, 'Look for the helpers. You will always find people who are helping.'" This has never been truer than in our current situation. With this pandemic, the outpouring of love and support we have seen does far outweigh any negativity. In Brooklyn, N.Y., every night at 7 p.m., everyone bangs pots and pans outside their windows as a way to show appreciation for local healthcare workers. This is something we have seen happening in several cities across the country. On a local level, people are raising money for food pantries and running errands to protect the elderly and other vulnerable populations. We dig it. At the end of the day, the glass should always be half full.

To quote one of our favorite duos from our childhood filmgoing experiences, Bill and Ted, "Be excellent to each other!"

Our problems are of our own making

To the Editor:
It seems that most of today's news and information sources have become so biased that they're only believable by whomever wants to take their bait. (But it's on the Internet, it has to be true, right?) Has anybody ever considered looking into the "bias" and "factual" ratings of your news sources? That can be done by checking out sites like: "Media Bias/Fact Check," or "AllSides."

I recently had an exchange with a fellow on Facebook who provided anti-Trump views that came from the "Center for American Progress." CAP was founded by John Podesta (Chairman for the 2016 Hillary Clinton campaign), and is partially funded by George Soros. (Soros, now there's a man beyond reproach?) CAP as a news source is rated "mostly" factual, but being that they're almost as far left (bias) as you can get - what did you expect them to say? Does anybody still remember that old saying: "you have to consider the source?"

Yes, it is very unfortunate that we are suffering with Covid-19. The U.S. was ill-equipped to deal with this pandemic in the first place. We did not have the means to quickly produce more PPE, and unfortunately, we are now scrambling to provide it and make more testing available. Isn't it time to

Road closures pose a safety hazard

To the Editor:
I am writing this letter with my concerns about the construction of the Airline Trail and the simultaneous closure of Holmes Road and Modock Road. After making some phone calls and doing some research, I was informed that the projected time frame for the closure of both of these roads is from April 1 to approximately Sept. 1. The simultaneous closure of these roads for a prolonged period of time is a safety and liability issue for residents of both Holmes Road and Modock Road. I have spoken to several of my neighbors, and we have a number of safety concerns.

What would happen if a tree were to come down on South Modock Road, as is prone to happen? What if there were a fire in that location? My neighbors and I would be unable to safely evacuate our homes because of

A lack of leadership

To the Editor:
Hold on, America; it cannot go on longer. To Mr. Jay of Woodstock Valley, hang in; the end is almost near, your points were very precise and true.

At this point, the country lacks a President who portrays, commands and gives respect to the country. He lacks accountability and empathy for most citizens of this country. Republicans, who are sick of him have left the party this past election in 2018, either by retiring in disgust or losing an election. Those who will do anything to be near power, will do whatever it takes to have their master approve of them, even to giving up their own moral compass and values. We all know what it is called, been mentioned hear many times over the last 42 months, begins with a C. These 42 months of what history will looked back upon as a black stain on this country. His lack of empathy for those who have lost their lives in this pandemic is something that cannot be explained and understood by rational people and human beings. It is always about whose fault it is and whose to be blamed, anybody and everybody but himself. In the next paragraph you will find out whose fault it is.

What Trump did was by not taking the reins in the beginning of the crisis in January, never mind since in March, when he drop the ball and left to the governors of each state to deal with it, causing the pandemic to gain further control, he showed a lack of leadership and more importantly accountability. In not helping the country get thru a health crisis not seen in the history of the world and making the governors, who mostly have done good job, solve the problems 50 different ways. This just made the pandemic harder to get under control and cost more lives, all the while Trump is working on reelection. This way he could cheerlead and criticize any governor he did not like or did not give him proper respect, in his mind. I advise you to read on the internet website (Vent 201) and see how in October 2019 people sat down and tried to figure a plan on how to best handle a situation like this, in case it happened in the future. I suspect Trump or his people never ever read, saw this and of course acknowledge its' existence. The best way to attack a crisis similar bring back "Made in the USA?" In addition to most of the things we buy, our pharmaceuticals are being made in China, and they supply half of the worlds face masks. If I wanted to open up a window and yell out, "I'm mad as hell and I'm not going to take it anymore," I'd be yelling at the country that both spawned this virus and took our manufacturing jobs!

My hat goes off to those innovative Americans who are pitching in by making and donating masks, as it does to you, Mr. John A. Day, Jr., for your service in the medical field and especially for even wanting to be involved at this time. Funny thing is that I also like Wormtown IPA, and I hope that when this mess is all over we can possibly enjoy one together. And no, you're not crazy, but as that feeling of being powerless goes, I think it's also because that no matter what we say - or who we blame - we are all just pawns in one big chess game! I found this little quote that I feel sums it up: "Welcome to the United States, where we pretend our problems are created by one man and ignore that both parties have been failing us for decades."

our only means of egress via South Modock Road would be blocked. Given that the Holmes Road project is fully approved and the Modock Road project is only partially approved, why was the Holmes Road project not completed first to allow for safe egress?

Moving forward, will you be shutting down River Road at the same time as Modock Road? If this were to happen and schools were able to reopen, there would be no way a school bus would be able to turn around. Please help to solve this problem. This project has been poorly planned and executed, and the compromised safety of numerous taxpayers is the result! I welcome you to drive by the project sites to experience this unsafe and frustrating situation.

According to, Trump you cannot fault him; no, it is not his fault. The fault belongs to Obama, Biden, Comey, the media, the democrats, MSNBC, CNN, the Cuomos, China, Russia, immigrants, Pelosi, Schiff, FBI, CIA, HHS, John Kelly, Rex Tillerson, Mueller and his staff, George Conway, Manafort, Bill and Melinda Gates, people that counted how many were at the Inauguration, Mexicans, Washington Post , NY Times, Bezos, Sundland, Dr. Bright, soon to be DR.'s Fauci and Burks (soon to be let go or minimized), the reporter from CBS who asked a question, E Kania, Anderson Cooper, Chuck Todd, Robert Gates, Gen. Those who loved their 401k's, bank accounts, their job and the stock market, how do you feel now.? A lot of it is gone, but what is more troubling is what he tried to protect (money) not people of this country, his main concern was the damage to be done to his reelection campaign, that was utmost in his mind in the face of the oncoming pandemic. Always about him, not you or us. This country is in bad shape, and will be for a while because of one persons' lack of leadership, accountability and lack of any empathy for the citizens of this Country, as in a recent editorial someone skillfully researched all the things Trump he has tried have failed at, everything he touches it goes down the ... Only good thing the USA will not join that list of things that he has failed at.

Is bald beautiful?

My mother always told me that when I was born, before she actually got to see me for that first moment, the doctor and nurses began to laugh, and the Doc said, "Look at all that black hair!"

In 1988, I went on an all liquid diet which was the rage at the time. My hair started thinning and I was assured it would grow back, but it didn't. No bald spots, but the thickness was gone, and I always regretted going on that fad diet.

Now I have cancer and am in chemotherapy. Every day when I wake up, I seem to have lost a

Toast is always a sure thing

The smell of something burning is unmistakable. I know it is a piece of toast turning to a hard black piece of charcoal.

Adding to the odor of charred wheat are the assorted nuts and seeds that have fallen to the bottom of the toaster oven from previous uses. Fortunately, the smoke alarm is not so sensitive that it bursts into an annoying bleats every time it catches a whiff. Pandemic or not, our household runs on toast.

My husband is a toast-a-holic. He and family members toast something, generally bread, approximately four times a day. Even the grandchildren have fallen in line. We use a toaster oven now, but through the years have operated with a variety of appliances. Regardless of the engineering involved, every one created browned toast and a fair number of flames.

When I was growing up, we had a silver-colored rectangular toaster that held two slices of bread. Push it down. Wait. Watch the smoke rise and pop the bread up. We were quite modern compared to some. I loved watching the old-fashioned toasters that had two doors that flopped down exposing the blazing hot grills. I think the bread had to be turned with tongs to toast both sides. I remember watching a friend touch the rods with a fork and get an electrical shock and a smack from his mother.

It took decades before manufacturers offered four-slice toasters, which is odd because many families were quite large. I've always admired an expensive brand of English toaster- a Dualit. My husband found a less costly version and gave it to our daughter as he thought her household was deficient in the toaster department. English people I have known can't live without plenty of toast, although I've always been puzzle by the existence of toast racks. My Welsh grandmother left one that held toast upright. It must have always been cold.

In college, I loved the rotating toasting machines in dining halls. The first time the bread went through it wasn't cooked and the second time it burned. Standing around watching the process was how I made several lifelong friends. The bagel craze added to the art of toasting as an under cooked bagel is not good. I hope people still bond by toasters.

When I dream of the places where I loved eating toast, one stands out. The old Ritz in Boston had a café that looked out on the street and across to the public garden. They made a delicious dish of creamed mushrooms on toast that was classic New England cuisine: butter, toast, cream and gently fried mushrooms. Avocado toast is the posh toast choice now and it is more suited to modern taste. I'd be happy for either one served with a thick linen napkin and a taste of life as it once was.

Toast can serve a medicinal purpose. A sweet Scottish Terrier, Piper, licked the lid of a can of paint one Sunday afternoon as we were touching up a bedroom. We called poison control and were told to feed him charred toast mixed with olive oil. Piper ate it gleefully and survived for more misadventures.

I read Roger Rosenblatt's memoir, "Making Toast," years ago. His daughter died suddenly leaving her husband and three small children. Rosenblatt and his wife moved in to help. All Roger could make was toast, but toast provided comfort and focus for the grieving family. The power of toast is a good image.

As we live in uncertain times, we must take comfort wherever we can find it. Toast is always a sure thing.

High School Bio, part I

To the Editor:
School definitely got weird over the past two months. I teach high school biology and both I and my students have had to figure out how to ‘do school’ online. Some students have handled the transition with relative ease while others have struggled to overcome many challenges. For some students, a lack of motivation and video games keep them from doing online school. Other students have told me they are working long hours to help support their family and have no time to attend online classes. Learning has been compromised in many ways. Normally, my students would be in biology class 340 minutes each week but now they are online, at most, 120 minutes. Consequently, my students, and probably many other biology students in schools across the region, have learned a lot less than they would in a regular, non-pandemic school year.
But all is not lost biology students! In this short essay and in a second one that will appear next week, I will give you brief lessons on a topic you likely didn’t learn about this year. Indeed, even in a normal year, there is one topic that is often missing from biology in public schools. Both the Next Generation Science Standards and the Advanced Placement curriculum, which guide instruction for most of the biology courses offered in Connecticut’s public high schools, lack any mention of human evolution. Despite being one of the topics my students wonder most about, teachers are not actually required to teach it.

But here’s the problem: If you don’t learn about human evolution in high school, you are even less likely to learn about it later. Some graduates don’t go to college and those who do might never take a biology course there. So, unless you decide to go figure out the science on your own, this essay (and next week’s) might be your first and last opportunity to learn anything about the evolution of our species.
First, some background. Evolution is a huge topic, it’s the topic of biology, and the word can be used in many different contexts. But there are two core principles of evolution. The first is that genes can become more or less common in a population depending on whether they are ‘good’ or ‘bad’. If a gene helps an organism leave more offspring, it can become more common over time. That’s called microevolution. This kind of evolution has been demonstrated for countless species, including humans, and it is considered a well-established fact within biology.
The second core principle of evolution is that all life that exists today and that has ever existed is related to all other life by common ancestry. White-throated Sparrows, for example, are closely related to all other sparrow species but they are also related to pigeons, elephants, mushrooms and humans. This idea is generally referred to as macroevolution and the evidence for it is so overwhelming that it’s also considered a fact by biologists. So evolution is true. Evolution is real. If a non-biologist ever tries to tell you that evolution is ‘just a theory,’ they are wrong. They either don’t know what a theory is or they are trying to deceive you. Beware!

We don’t have a lot of time...er...space here so let me give you the shortest, most profound truth of human evolution I can:
Humans are mammals.
Humans are mammals. Mammals are a group of animals that share certain features, although not every mammal will possess every feature. Generally, mammals are endothermic (warm-blooded), they have hair, three tiny middle ear bones, mammary and sweat glands, a 4-chambered heart, a muscular diaphragm, a brain region called the neocortex and they give birth to live young.
Why do mammals share these traits? It’s no coincidence. Mammals living today have inherited the genes to make these structures from a common ancestor who lived about 145-200 million years ago. An interesting consequence of our common ancestry with other mammals is that about 8 percent of our genome is the inherited genetic remnants of ancient viral infections. The same viral fragments can be found in the genomes of other mammals and even reptiles, their DNA sequences having been passed on across millions of years and generations. Some of those broken viral genes have evolved new functions, including the ability to code for proteins that are now essential in the development of placentas.

So yes, humans are related to chimpanzees and we have the genes, bones, physiology and viral signatures to prove it. But we are also related to rats, bees, oak trees and bacteria. If you are feeling cooped up these days with your annoying brother or sister, you can tell them they are related to parasitic toe fungus. The science exists to support your claim! It’s an astonishing realization that life on Earth has basically been one long, uninterrupted series of cell divisions. Single-celled microbes reproducing and evolving new forms over more than three billion years.
Next week, I will conclude our short course on human evolution by telling you the story of your 125,000th great-grandma and what she did for a living, two million years ago.

Who is gaslighting whom?

To the Editor:
In a recent editorial, the following question was asked: “So this is where I need help with my gas-lighting problem. Can someone please help me understand why so many Americans still support this man and his Administration unconditionally?”
We’ll begin with the author’s supposition that support is unconditional. I do not think for one moment people support President Trump unconditionally, and it would also be fair to say that every President who served this country encountered disagreement and contention to varying degrees.
For those who cast their vote for Trump, it is my opinion that it was based on who they felt was the most qualified candidate based on the choices given to them on the ballot in 2016.
The Democratic Party’s choice was Hillary Clinton, who had a litany of corruption and shady dealings with Russia and China. She flagrantly made available sensitive and top security information to foreign actors via her own server and email accounts. She’s a politician who used her Clinton Foundation as a pay to play slush fund. A person who bragged about taking down an elected president of a foreign country (Gaddafi in Libya), to name a few of her “qualifications.” Her disdain for the American citizens is very clear. Remember how Hillary, and then President Obama, left several American personnel and an American Ambassador to die without lifting a finger, all in an attempt to cover their arms to terrorist shenanigans.
Mr. Trump, at the time, was an unknown in the world of politics; a businessman with a large ego. What he did have, in my opinion, was a genuine desire to do things differently in an attempt to “drain the swamp” of corruption and self serving manipulation, trickery and back room dealings that continue to erode the financial and social fabric, and the rule of law. He saw the need to slow down the loss of jobs to foreign actors at the expense of the American middle class. A strong economy needs to be a producer, not just a consumer of goods. He was a businessman who it was felt would most likely approach things from a different perspective rather than the typical political “what’s in it for me” culture (unaccountable power and money) that has evolved and operates regardless of the impact on our nation and we citizens.

Now as to the comments with respect to the view of gaslighting, which I point out are more opinion rather than factual. I would like to ask who is gaslighting whom?
To begin answering that question, I would like to lay out the following with respect to what the Democratic party has been doing (or trying to sell) to the American people for the past three and a half years, all the while doing nothing to correct or address the real problems this country is facing. In fact, the Democratic Party has done everything to obstruct any meaningful legislation and has wasted time and taxpayer money aimed at trying to overthrow an elected president.
The Russia impeachment farce by the Democrats, on which we have spent millions and millions of taxpayers’ dollars, has proven to be a bust. The Mueller investigation has, and continues to be, exposed for the fraud and corruption it is. We learn that the dossier was paid for by the Clintons and the DNC. The Schiff / Nadler impeachment “trial” once again is a bust as we slowly learn how due process was nonexistent, and it was more of a circus distraction, how evidence that exonerated the President and others was ignored and held out of sight from the citizens. We are learning how selective negative items (at times taken out of context) were leaked to the press. We are now learning that the fake Russia plot involved many of the agencies (DOJ, FBI, CIA to name a few) that are supposed to protect this country and its citizens. Newly released documents (FOIA) show it likely goes to the top, right up to Mr. Obama.
We have just waded through a Democratic candidate presidential primary campaign where we watched a parade of socialist candidates that would give free this and that to everyone and anyone (including Illegal immigrants).
Upon the conclusion of this farce, it appears the best candidate they now have to offer is Joe Biden. Mr. Biden is 77 years old with 40-plus years in politics and no major accomplishments! He has not been able to hold a discussion without mixing up his facts or losing his train of thought. He at times forgets what position he is running for or where he is. Really, is this the kind of person we want to elect to run this complex country? Should this person be the one to have his finger on the nuclear option if we should have disagreements with another nation? A man who actually admitted to an illegal quid pro quo with Ukraine for US aid? In another attempt to ensure they are able to sway the election to a positive outcome for them is the item the Democrats included in their recent Coronavirus stimulus proposal. They want to do away with any voter ID requirements. You know, so anyone illegal, dead or otherwise compromised could vote for the Democratic candidate.

In conclusion, it’s not that anyone has unconditional allegiance to President Trump; rather it relates more to the choices American citizens are given. With respect to myself, the Democratic party (socialist, communist) is not my choice. Based on the Democratic primaries and question and answer sessions, here is what I have learned as to what the current Democratic Party stands for:
They will tell you what you want to hear but do what they really want to do.
We are deplorable (Hillary) if we dare to disagree.
We are the dredges of the earth (Joe Biden) if we dare to disagree.
They will open borders and let everyone in, regardless of the impact to the citizens.
They will nationalize corporations (Warren, Sanders).
They will take away your rights to protect oneself.
They will increase taxes to destabilizing heights.
They will grow the government with unlimited powers. They will trash the Constitution.
The citizens will be subservient to the government.
Regardless of what one thinks of the current “elected” President, none of this would have been exposed if one of their handpicked puppets had been elected initially.
For those who cannot accept who won the election, it has become an insane and blind vendetta to disparage, manipulate and create obstacles for any type of success. It has reached the point where they have attempted to actually overthrow an elected president. This was initiated and plotted long before he actually won. In my opinion, this is treason.

What has been exposed (and many are taking notice) is that this country is in dire straits as to who/what is actually calling the shots and how we the people have consistently been sold out. If it wasn’t for the fact that Trump could finance his own run for office and win we the people would be none the wiser as to the level of disdain the democrats have for the citizens and the extent to which they will go to obtain power and money.
Like it or not, the swamp is being exposed; however, years of entrenchment will not allow for overnight change.
No, President Trump’s supporters do not necessarily agree with everything that he is doing, or at times his approach, but I believe that a large majority are totally tired and turned off by the constant empty promises of greedy politicians (on both sides) who continually promise the same things but do nothing but worsen the state of this country. They do not even hold themselves accountable to the laws.
We needed change, and we got it. As those responsible are exposed and routed, it won’t be pretty. Their attempts to stop the exposure, as we have already experienced, will have no bounds. They will use outright lies, fabrications, coercion, disparagement, obfuscation, dirty tricks, stonewalling, distractions and foreign governments. Gaslighting is a form of psychological manipulation in which a person or a group covertly sows seeds of doubt in a targeted individual using the previously mentioned tactics. Gaslighting depends on “first convincing the victim that his thinking is distorted and secondly persuading him that the victimizer’s ideas are the correct and true ones.” So who is Gaslighting who?
Where our country is today with respect to the political process and its affects are ugly. Any attempt to reel it in will also be very discomforting to many but is needed if our nation and its Rule of laws is to survive.

What to do with your retirement investment accounts from a previous employer

Throughout the COVID pandemic, some people have been less personally, professionally, and financially impacted, while many are left needing quick access to cash and others are now searching for new jobs. For those finding new employment, one question you may be asking is, “what do I do with my previous employer-sponsored retirement accounts?” If you or someone you know has lost their job or has recently found new employment, you may have a lingering retirement investment account that needs consideration.

Typically, there are three options to consider: stay in your previous employer’s plan, roll over your assets to a new plan, or cash out your assets. There are many advantages, disadvantages, and planning strategies to consider to help you determine the right move for you. Ultimately, choosing the right option may help you achieve your retirement goals, and allow you to Live Well.

Stay in your previous employer’s plan

You generally have the option to leave your old retirement plan where it is, as long as your balance is at least $5,000 (if it’s less than that, your employer may be able to automatically cash you out). You will not be able to actively contribute anymore, but the money that is already there will remain invested and participate in investment gains (and losses), based on how you set up your asset allocations.

Staying in your previous employer’s plan is certainly the easiest route, and if your old plan has access to quality investments that are now closed to new investors or can offer them for lower fees, it may also make sense. However, if you originally allocated your retirement plan funds in a way that no longer reflects your current financial life goals and you don’t commit to adjusting your allocations over time, it could be costly.

An old plan that is invested too aggressively means you might face more volatility than you are comfortable with. On the flip side, a too-conservative investment strategy means your money is not taking the appropriate amount of risk to meet your goals, and you could be missing out on greater opportunities for growth.

It is all too easy to fall into the old “out of sight, out of mind” trap with a retirement account you are no longer actively contributing to. And an investment style that is not aligned to your current needs and risk tolerance could mean less retirement income for you when the time comes – so be wary of letting old plans sit idle.

Roll over into a new account

There are a few options for rolling over your retirement assets into a new account. You can either roll over into your new employer’s plan or into an individual retirement account (IRA).

Depending on your personal situation, you may be able to consolidate your retirement accounts by rolling the balance from your old plan into your new employer’s plan. Just make sure to ask your former plan administrator for a direct rollover so the money never touches your hands – if it comes to you as a check that you have to deposit in the new plan, the transaction is considered a taxable distribution. The amount distributed, including the amount of the income tax withholding, would be subject to ordinary income tax, plus an additional 10 percent early withdrawal penalty if you are under the age of 59 and a half.

Consolidation is a pretty common route, and the upside is that you don’t have to keep track of multiple retirement accounts or remember to update your asset allocations in a separate, older account as your investing style and risk tolerance change.

Another option is to move your funds into an Individual Retirement Account, or IRA. As with 401(k)s (private sector), 403(b)s (non-profit organizations), 457s (government employees), and other defined contribution plans, IRAs have their own sets of rules. There are two basic kinds of IRAs: traditional and Roth. The big difference is in when they are taxed. Traditional IRAs, like 401(k) plans, defer taxes until retirement, when you may be in a lower tax bracket and therefore would owe less tax on the earnings.

Roth IRAs, on the other hand, are funded with after-tax dollars, so there is no immediate deduction benefit, but there are eligibility requirements associated with starting a Roth IRA. However, the earnings grow tax-free, which can yield a bigger potential payoff for retirees.

There are other differences, too, so make sure you understand the options before going with either a traditional IRA or a Roth IRA. For more details about their differences between traditional and Roth IRAs, visit the IRS Web site at www.irs.gov.

Cashing out

There is one final road you can choose when determining how best to manage your retirement account when you leave your job: cashing out.

Your contributions, and any matching contributions from your former employer for which you are vested, are yours to do with what you choose. That includes cashing out. This can be tempting, as we could all make use of a sudden windfall, especially right now.

But remember that when you put that money away, it was specifically earmarked for retirement. The longer you leave money in your plan, the more opportunity it has to benefit from compound interest in a tax-deferred setting. If you drain your savings now, you are robbing yourself of that money’s potential to grow.

If you take a cash distribution from your retirement account with no intention of paying it back, you must claim the account balance as income for that year and pay ordinary income tax on that amount. There is a chance this could push you into a higher tax bracket. However, the CARES Act eliminates the 10% early-withdrawal hit, and 20 percent federal tax withholding, on early 401(k) withdrawals for those impacted by the crisis.

While this may seem like a beneficial option, unless you don’t have any other options, you should refrain from cashing out. If you must access and use the money now due to an absolute emergency, consult with a tax professional to understand the impact.

BOGDANSKI

If you haven’t felt any stress during this pandemic then you must be superhuman. This time in our lives will be recorded as one of the most emotionally draining ever. The shift of our culture, the change in our daily routines, and social isolation all contribute to the stress families are feeling. We may not be able to totally remove stress but we surely can take steps to reduce it. Here are a few suggestions.

Step 1 - Healthy eating. Your body is your temple. You have all heard this mantra about food. Imagine you owned a million-dollar racehorse. You probably wouldn’t feed it candy and cookies all day. Fruit and vegetables are definitely the prescriptions for fueling the body for energy and clarity. Prime your body for good health and immunity from disease by eating fresh fruits and veggies.

Step 2 - Exercise. Your kids don’t need the Marine Corps workout, but they need to move. Climbing trees, throwing a ball, walking through the woods are all great spring activities. Since we are closed at our martial arts school we have been doing classes on zoom. Parents are quite happy their kids have this regular routine of exercise and healthy interaction.

Step 3 - Reduce electronics. Being social creatures, we have turned more to Facebook and Instagram to get our social fix and see what is going on in the world. It’s natural to keep up with your friends and relatives, but please don’t overdo it. If you or your kids spend too much time on Facebook, there is a tool built into the app that can help you limit your time. Go to the settings page on either app and select either “Your Time on Facebook” or “Your Activity on Instagram.” At the top is a dashboard showing average time spent on the app you are using. Underneath is the option to set up a daily reminder that will send an alert when you have reached the time limit you have allowed yourself.

Step 4 - Talk about it. In these circumstances, kids can easily pick up on the climate of fear through the media or conversations in your household. Information is knowledge and it is best to talk about the pandemic in age-appropriate language to reassure your children they are staying safe. In our martial arts program, we teach students how to deal with stress in a self-defense confrontation. The first step is to address fear. We use the acronym F.E.A.R. - false expectations appearing real. Kids need to realize that their life is mostly not at risk.

Step 5 - Take a breath. When we get anxious we change the way we breathe. Quest martial arts classes begin and end with an exercise that teaches us to focus, maintain an inner calm, and develop mental clarity by taking slow deep breaths. The breathing is done by breathing slowly in through our nose and out through our mouth. Breathing techniques and methods are directly related to reducing or increasing stress.

Step 6 - Sleep. A tired child is easily frustrated by simple, daily tasks. Here is a basic rule of thumb: six- to 12-year-olds need nine to 12 hours/day and 13- to 18-year-olds need eight to 10 hours/day. Dear parents, you know how irritable you can be if you are sleep deprived. Adults that are sleep deprived exhibit the same symptoms as people that have had several alcoholic drinks.

Step 7- Sharpen the saw. This is a concept from the book, “Seven Habits of Highly Effective People” by Stephen Covey. Two people are chopping wood. One worker takes a break every hour while the other works furiously at the task. At the end of the day, the person who took the break had a substantially greater pile. The worker who had less wood asked his friend, “How in the world did you end up with more wood cut than me?” He asked curiously. His friend responded, “You didn’t notice that every time I stopped to rest I sharpened my saw.” Take a break and just do something that makes you happy!

little more of my hair. Add to the fact we are in quarantine and can’t get it trimmed, my head is beginning to look like a mangy old coyote during the heat of the summer. I wear a ball cap around the house. I’m avoiding mirrors and am in denial. A friend recently said, “just shave it off. It will grow back.” (I’ve heard that one before) Another said, “And when it grows back it will be curly and a different color?”

A different color? Not black? Really? As of now, my thinning hair would be considered “salt and pepper” and I’ve been fine with that because the pepper was still black. But curly and a different color?

Cancer can strip you of more than your hair. I’m in the fight of my life and I plan to win. To fret about my hair seems ridiculous. I must face the reality that sometime soon, I’ll head into the bathroom and probably just shave it all off. I get weird thoughts like, “Will I still be a Moore? Will people stare at me? If they realize I have cancer will they pity me?”

Being a columnist, author, and speaker, you must fight for attention. I’ve always enjoyed standing in front of large crowds to share my stories. I’ve never shied away from being in the spotlight. Now I find myself happy for quarantine so no one can see me. Silly

... I know. Silly or not it’s the truth.

I haven’t taken the step yet to shave what’s left of the former thick and black mop on my head. I’m a fighter. Some things are worth fighting for and I’m realizing that my hair just isn’t worth it. I’m fighting for my life. My hair should be the least of my worries.

What is it I’m really worried about? I guess I don’t want to die bald and that’s a thought that I must strip out of my head and heart because I’m not giving in or up. Stage 4 Stomach Cancer has met its match. I’m going to beat cancer and you can take that to the bank ... although you’ll have to take it through the drive-in window as quarantine seems to have the lobbies closed.

So, is bald beautiful? guess I’ll soon find out.

PS - There is nothing to take lightly about cancer, but contrary to the belief of some, cancer doesn’t have to be a death sentence. It is serious business, but the attitude of the patient plays a major role in treatment and recovery with any health crisis. Do not allow a medical professional to place a time stamp or expiration date on your life. It’s your life. Fight with all your might. Only speak positive and uplifting words into your head and heart. Only associate with others who do the same. Do your own research. Read about positive imaging. Be up to date with what the universities, major cancer centers and research hospitals are doing. There are advances and breakthroughs daily. Be optimistic, be positive and fight. Never give up or give in. Cancer is beatable. Believe it and fight.

Bronze age comic books

In a past column, I wrote that I would dedicate a future column to comic books. There is so much collector interest in comic books, and they have been selling so well recently, I will dedicate the next three columns to them.

Comic books have a longer history than you might expect. Swiss cartoonist Rodolphe Töpffer created “Histoire de M. Vieux Bois” in 1837. The book was retitled “The Adventures of Mr. Obadiah Oldbuck” when it was translated into English in 1842. It is considered the first comic book, according to the South Florida Reporter.
The first modern comic book was published nearly 100 years later, in 1933. It contained several comic strips that had previously appeared in newspapers. According to the South Florida Reporter, “the term ‘comic’ implies that the tone of these strips are always humorous, that couldn’t be further from the truth. Comics have been used as a medium for telling stories of all kinds.”
Comics are categorized in four different “ages.” The Golden Age was from 1938 to 1956. The Silver Age took place from 1956 to 1970. The Bronze Age went from 1970 to 1985 and the Modern Age began in 1985 and continues today. Some experts also include the Copper Age from 1984 to 1991.

As you might expect, older comics are typically more valuable. Condition is also a huge factor in determining what a comic book is worth. Comics featuring superheroes are the most desirable.
Even a few Modern Age comic books can be valuable. Spiderman issue # 300 can sell for hundreds of dollars in exceptional condition. The Walking Dead issue # 1 can bring thousands of dollars for a copy in pristine condition.
Some Bronze Age comic books can also sell for high prices. A near mint Hulk issue # 180 from 1974 sold for over $2,000 recently. That comic book featured the first appearance of Wolverine. Two near perfect copies of Iron Fist # 14 each fetched over $2,000 at auction this spring. A Marvel Spotlight issue # 5 with the first appearance of Ghost Rider and in great condition sold for $4,000 in a recent online auction. A “Giant-Size” X-Men from 1975 in great condition recently brought $4,300. Hulk issue #

181 has a full story on the Wolverine. A near mint version sold for over $10,000 online recently. I know many of you have been using this time to clean and organize. Maybe you’ll stumble across some old comics that were tucked away years ago. My next article will be on Silver Age comic books.
COVID-19 has changed the antiques and collectibles market dramatically. Shows, live auctions, estate sales, and shops are all feeling the effects. We have shifted our focus to online auctions for the time being. We are currently accepting valuable items that can be shipped to buyers across the country for our June online only auction. You can call or email us for no-contact options for consigning your items. We have some online auctions and an estate sale that we will be running when regulations permit.

Mary Jeannette (Richard) Vienneau

GARDNER - Mary Jeannette (Richard) Vienneau died peacefully at the Rose Monahan Hospice Home in Worcester, MA on May 11, 2020 after a brief, yet coura- geous battle with cancer. Jeannette was born on April 16, 1941 in St. Anthony N.B. Canada daugh- ter of the late Zoel and Alma (White) Richard.

She was the eldest of three daugh- ters, growing up in St. Anthony N.B. and Springhill N.S. Times spent on her Grandparents farm was one of her favorite stories to tell. She loved to dance and those sure were the dancing days. From the teenage dances to the many years of weekend dancing with Charlie. She met and married the love of her life Charlie, celebrating 60 incredible years. Having dual citizenship, they moved to Gardner in 1963 to raise their family and then retiring in Lower Five Islands, N.S. Canada. They loved their additional “Community & neighbor Family” there, making it their special home. Her beautiful voice was heard often at home as she loved to sing and also played piano. Friends would visit and music filled our home. Holidays were especially joyful as she harmonized with her Mom and sisters and of course the dancing. Her Faith was her guide, so strong and steady. She was always at peace knowing God was beside her in every step of her life. Family was her whole heart, and that wasn’t just her very own. Many became “family” through out the years. Whether they stayed for din- ner or stayed indefinitely. There was always room for more and she had this incredible way of only seeing beauty in others. Her unconditional love was limitless. She became Nana to everyone from then on. Together with Charlie they always offered a safe place for anyone who needed it. She loved to cook and fresh bread was a staple, especially warm. Passing along many family favorites for us to continue. Many games were always played from Canasta, Parcheesi, Skip Bo, jigsaw puzzles and she was a whiz at video games as well. She enjoyed these all with every generation from eldest to youngest. She was predeceased by her hus- band Charlie on Nov, 7, 2019. She has leaves behind a son Charles Vienneau of Gardner, MA., a daughter Angie Sabettini and her husband Peter of Littleton, MA. Five grandchildren Nina Sabettini, Ashley Vienneau, Amanda Vienneau, Jessica Flaxington, Justin Vienneau. Her 6 great grandchildren Dominic, Kenzie, Jaydon, Rylee, Brooke, Kaislee. Her sisters and best friends Dianne Henrie and husband Gerald, Louise Gallant and husband Ronald. She also has so many beloved nieces, nephews, relatives and friends in the U.S. and Canada. Here are some things she wanted to share Smiles – They are free Be kind to everyone - especially now Help each other, do your part - espe- cially now Forgive each other our short com- ings, we all have them. If you can’t help someone, please don’t hurt them. She wanted everyone to know how grateful she is for such a wonder- ful life. She was so blessed to have her Faith, Family, Friends. She and Charlie had so many adventures from Canada, Mass., CA, Las Vegas. She wanted to be sure to thank Dr. Michael Mutchler for all the years of superior care & friendship. Heywood Hospital, UMass Oncology and The Rose Monahan Hospice Home for the compassionate and loving care she received. Due to the current circumstances of Covid 19 her life celebration will have to be held at a later date. Please omit flowers and donations may be made in her memory to St. Jude Children’s Research Hospital. The Shaw-Majercik Funeral Home, 48 School St., Webster, MA has been entrusted with her arrangements. When it can be smart to hire a painting pro

Few things can revitalize a home more readily than a fresh coat of paint. Thanks in part to the affordability of paint and its ease of application, painting is something that even novice DIYers can typically handle. According to the marketing advice guru Brandon Gaille, it is estimated that residential interior paint only lasts around three years before it needs to be updated. Exterior paint can fade, chip and peel due to various environmental factors. As a result, many homes can likely use a fresh coat of paint in at least one room. As DIY-friendly as painting can be, when attempting to paint the interior or exterior of their homes, homeowners may learn that some painting projects are best left to the professionals. Painting requires skill, patience and a knowledge of how various paints — including finishes for particular applications — will hold up. Novice painters may do more harm than good by dripping paint on expensive carpeting or floors or fail to recognize the nuances that indicate a spot-on painting job. Professional painters have spent hours upon hours learning the ropes of what works — and what does not. Painters often understand that painstaking preparatory work is crucial to getting pristine finished results. Walls and ceilings must be properly repaired and prepared even before a base coat is applied.

Professional painters also have an eye for details. And because professional painters make a business out of doing interior and exterior surfaces, they understand which techniques can improve efficiency. That means a professional job can typically be completed much more quickly than a DIY project. Even though some people think they'll save money by painting their own homes, that's not necessarily true. Professionals already have all the equipment necessary, unlike novices who may need to make repeated and potentially costly trips to the hardware store for supplies. Plus, if mistakes happen, DIYers have to spend additional time and money fixing them.

Safety can be a large motivator for turning painting over to a pro. Navigating exterior areas or tall interior ceilings can be challenging and may require scaffolding or tall ladders DIYers do not have. Risk of falls or other injuries increase with lack of experience.

Painting can give a home a facelift, and oftentimes it is smart to turn the work over to professionals to ensure the job is done just right.
