Killingly officials provide updates on school facilities projects

BY JASON BLEAU
VILLAGER CORRESPONDENT

KILLINGLY — Several projects have recently become a priority in the Killingly School District ranging from facility upgrades to essential repairs to ensure the safety and usability of current facilities.

Assistant Superintendent of Killingly Schools Jeff Guiot provided updates on several projects during the Board of Education's Oct. 23 meeting that were the center of discussion earlier that day before the Facilities Committee charged with assessing the needs of all the district's school buildings. Each project is in different stages of planning and execution.

The first topic was a project that is just finding its footing, addressing ongoing leak issues at Killingly Intermediate School (KIS). The facility has experienced recent roof leaks that will soon require a long-term solution. Guiot explained that the district is exploring the potential of repairing or outright replacing the roof to see which is more cost effective.

"We had received an estimate for a repair. We are having some significant issues with the roof leaking in multiple different places. We just remedied a situation in the gym at KIS that required a pretty (extensive) repair due to a substantial leak, so it was brought to the Facilities Committee to determine next steps as to whether or not we want to continue to repair the roof or look into replacement of the roof in its entirety," said Guiot.

Over the summer, the district reached out to a consortium to receive a rough estimate for repairing the current roof. That quote came to around $357,000. The facilities committee is now seeking quotes for a full roof replacement so they can compare the prices and provide a recommendation to the Board of Education for a full response plan.

The second project is one that is in the works and was discussed earlier this year as a major need for the district. In June the Board of Education gave its blessing to creating an access road to the lower fields at Killingly High School. The Board approved the use of $79,336 to design the road which was part of the original plans for the high school and would create a new emergency access point for the fields. Guiot explained that the project is well into the design phase.

"The majority of the design work is complete. I'm expecting to have the design work in the next couple of weeks and then we will bring that to the facilities committee for them to do a presentation to figure out what the next steps are in that proposal," he said.

Those plans would provide a blueprint and final price estimates to kickstart the bidding process.

The final topic of concern is one that has already been resolved, but highlights the

Fire damages Connecticut National Golf Club Clubhouse

BY JASON BLEAU
VILLAGER CORRESPONDENT

PUTNAM — An early morning fire damaged part of the clubhouse at Connecticut National Golf Course in Putnam, a popular location for weddings, fundraisers, and other events as well as a hub location for the Club with a store and other amenities.

The East Putnam Fire Department confirmed the first calls were received a little before 5:30 a.m. on Monday, Oct. 28 by a third party for smoke in the basement of the clubhouse followed by a call from an employee minutes later. First responders arrived to find fire in the B-side walkout basement that had managed to break into the upstairs ballroom section of the clubhouse.

Firefighters were able to knock down a significant portion of the fire from the exterior before making entry containing most of the damage to the basement and ballroom and preventing a total loss of the building. The fire was deemed under control by 6:54 a.m. and crews remained on the scene for several hours.

The golf course was closed for a day after the incident as officials assessed the situation and damage. An update posted to social media on Oct. 29 indicated plans to repair the clubhouse.

"We want to thank everyone who has reached out. Everyone is safe and no one was injured or hurt. Unfortunately, the clubhouse sustained significant fire and smoke damage and some serious structural damage and is unusable and will need major repairs," wrote the Club.

Golf activities will continue out of the Club's maintenance building and a trailer.

East Putnam Fire Department was assisted by East Thompson Volunteer Fire Department who established a water source at the Chase Road and Fivemile River dry hydrant, the Dudley

Elmer Preston named Thompson's Veteran of the Month

THOMPSON — Elmer Preston, of Old Route 12 in the Mechanicsville Village of Thompson, has been chosen by the Nominating Committee to be the fourth recipient of the newly formed Veteran of the Month Program for the Town of Thompson. He is the November 2024 awardee, and the community is so very pleased and proud to honor him in this capacity.

It is very appropriate to honor Preston in November because November is the Month that this Country honors its Veterans, and Elmer certainly epitomizes Veterans in Thompson. In addition to his service to his country, having served for the better part of two years in East and West Germany from 1963 to 1965 as part of the G-2 Intelligence Brigade, he has been a Member and long time Commander of the Veterans of Foreign War (VFW) Post 10088 in Quinebaug for the past 55 years. He is also a 40-year Member of the American Legion Post 67 of Thompson. During his time in the VFW, Preston has served in every conceivable capacity as an Officer (every office), and as the "go to person" who has seen it all, and done it all for his Post. He has been advisor to old and new Members, an enthusiastic advocate for everything that the VFW stands for. He is commonly referred to as Mr. VFW.

With Preston, you also get two volunteers for the price of one. His wife Carol has served by her husband side for many, many years in the VFW Auxiliary. She has also served with enthusiasm and grace in every conceivable capacity as well. Together Elmer and Carol have served the VFW for almost 100 years an accomplishment which should not go unnoticed. Elmer has served in the 4th District of the State VFW and on the State level for many, many years. Five of those years, Elmer served as the State of Connecticut Department Chaplain. Together, one of the highlights of this couple's time with the VFW, was in 2020 when they both attended the Annual National Western Veterans of Foreign War Conference in Hawaii to continue their Education and broaden their Knowledge in the VFW Program to serve us better. You would also know Elmer as the long-time organizer and participant of the annual Memorial Day Parade in Thompson and the Annual Veterans Day Ceremony each year held on Veterans Day at the Memorial Park on Riverside Drive.

Elmer was a heavy truck and Bus driver in Germany and often transported Commanders and Generals across the East and West Berlin border demarcation before the unification of East and West Germany. Elmer did his training at Fort Gordon, Georgia and Fort Eustis, Virginia before being assigned to his duties in Germany. Elmer was awarded the Army of Occupation Medal in Germany, and was a carbine marksman during his Service to our Country. Elmer is also a 25-year Member of

Halloween fire levels garage in Thompson

A fire engulfs a structure at 90 Thompson Rd. on Halloween Day.

BY JASON BLEAU
VILLAGER CORRESPONDENT

THOMPSON — Fans and supporters are coming together to help a local racer and his family recover following a dangerous fire on Halloween day.

Reports were received a little after 3 p.m. about an odor in the area of Thompson Road. The cause was confirmed to be a structure fire at 90 Thompson Rd., a building significantly set back from the roadway. Matthew Grauer, Chief of the Thompson Fire Engine Company also known as the Thompson Hill Fire Station, which was one of the first departments on scene, said responders arrived to find an involved fire made more dangerous by the dry conditions that threatened to evolve the situation into a larger brush fire.

"The actual garage and home was close to 2,000 feet off the road up into the woods. The homeowners were not home, so they didn't know it was happening and nobody called it in until somebody smelled smoke in the area, but obviously with the brush fires and everything going on in the area people are smelling those and calling them in right away. By the time the call for a structure fire came in the garage was well involved. The two-story garage contained racecars and things like that and was used as a shop. The heat of that fire did a lot of damage to the siding of the house, but they were able to stop it before it did any major damage to the home, but it did jump over into the woods which started about an acre-and-a-half brush fire at a time where we already had warning about dangerous fire conditions," said Grauer.

The situation caused the team of responders from several departments to split their efforts between the structure fire and controlling the brush fire. It took more than an hour and roughly 40,000 gallons of water to bring the full situation under control. Two firefighters did have to be treated due to overheating on an unseasonably warm Halloween day but there were no major injuries from the scene. The garage and all of its contents was considered a total loss. A cause of the fire was under investigation as of this story.

In addition to Thompson Hill, responders from East Thompson Volunteer Fire Department, Community Fire Company, Quinebaug Vol Fire Department, West Thompson Fire Department, Thompson Emergency Management, East

PUZZLE SOLUTION

Pomfret Historical Society to examine New London's connections to slave trade

POMFRET — On Nov. 16 at Pomfret Community Center at 1:30 p.m., the Pomfret Historical Society program will present "New London: A Microcosm of American History, Slavery, the Real West Indies Trade, and the Struggle for Freedom and Civil Rights 1637-2023" with New London Historian Tom Schuch.

This presentation will discuss the origin of slavery and the international slave trade in Connecticut through the lens of its largest port, New London. It will explore the integral role that New London played in the real West Indies Trade as a prime provisioner and enabler of the 'sugar island' slave labor camps. That trade, which was the intersection of the Triangular Trade, the West Indies Trade, the coastal trade, and the slave trade, was central to New London's economic prosperity in the 17th and 18th centuries. Those provisions sent to the West Indies were crucial to the survival of that slave labor system, and they produced lucrative profits for both the island planters and the Connecticut merchants at the expense of millions of captive Africans who were literally worked to death. The talk will be loaded with facts and images: names of ships, owners, captains, numbers of enslaved captives, and the prominent families (including the Malbones) who engaged in this trade. And it will include at least two stories that are virtually unknown in New London: two New London slave ship captains who were slain on the coast of Africa during shipboard insurrections of kidnapped Africans.

Tom Schuch is a New London native and a graduate of Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., with a longstanding interest in social justice issues. He has an avid interest in history, particularly John Brown, the Civil War, and has a special interest in unknown, forgotten, hidden or suppressed local history. This interest led to the discovery of several of the sites that are now part of the New London Black Heritage Walking Trail. He has given over 50 presentations and podcasts of his findings, including published articles in Connecticut Explored Magazine, and several local newspapers. Meet & Greet and Pomfret Historical Society updates begin with refreshments at 1:30 p.m. All are welcome. Suggested donation $5.

Tyrone Farm hosts Horse and Trail Trick or Treat Ride

POMFRET — Sunny, warm weather made the Pomfret Horse and Trail Fall ride a scenic seven miles at Tyrone Farm in Pomfret near the end of October. The trails were in terrific shape thanks to the excellent clearing, mowing, and marking by Tyrone Farm. Buckets of Halloween candy and apples were tied on trees. Horses and riders could trick or treat along the trail while enjoying several hundred acres of woods and fields with cross-country jumps.

Gina Labbe, co-ride secretary, said, "Maintaining the trails and fields is a tremendous amount of work. We are indebted to Tyrone Farm for allowing us to enjoy the magnificent scenery once again. Tyrone Farm owners, Bill and Diane MacLaren, made sure we had everything we needed from road signs to extension cords for the potluck chili. They have supported the horse community and the rural atmosphere in Pomfret for decades."

Vanilla Bean gift certificates were awarded to the best costumes, and the turnout did not disappoint. Nearly everyone dressed in the spirit of the season. First place was the riding team of Jane Gurzenda, Emily Beaudry, Haylee Boudreau, and Regan Fontaine dressed as witches. Second place was tied with Anna Tromza dressed as Mrs. Claus, and Sarah Gornbein and Michelle Lewis as characters from "The Wizard of Oz."

Gina said, "Our members who volunteered worked behind the scenes to make the ride the best it could be. As one rider said, 'It's the best ride of the season.'"

Pomfret Horse and Trail Association is a non-profit dedicated to promoting safe horsemanship and open space preservation. Annual donations are made to the Wyndham Land Trust, the Audubon Society, and the Abington 4 H Camp. For more information, go to: www.pomfrehorseandtrail.com.

Correction

It has been brought to our attention that Sen. Mae Flexer did not succeed Joe Courtney in 2015, as incorrectly reported in last week's front page election preview, but in fact succeeded former senator Don Williams.

The Villager deeply regrets any confusion that may have resulted from this unintentional error.

NCCO concert brings "Ode to the Season of Joy" Nov. 22 & 24 at Clark Chapel in Pomfret

BY JANE ANDERSON VERCELLI
NCCO PRESIDENT

POMFRET — The Northeast Connecticut Community Orchestra is excited to present a concert featuring a creative arrangement of Beethoven's "Ode to Joy" in honor of the 200th anniversary of Beethoven's 1824 completion of his Ninth Symphony which features the Ode to Joy in the final movement.

The concerts will be held on Friday, Nov. 22 at 7 p.m. and Sunday, Nov. 24 at 2 p.m., at Clark Memorial Chapel, Pomfret School, Pomfret; Admission is free and donations are welcomed.

Under the direction of conductor Linda Rondeau Tracy, the orchestra will perform the "Fantasia on Greensleeves" by Vaughan Williams, with a flute duet performed by Joan D'Auria from the Willimantic Orchestra, and Lisa Peeling who also plays cello with NCCO. The audience (and especially "trekkies") will also enjoy Ms. D'Auria's flute solo in "The Inner Light" from Star Wars composed by Jay Chattaway.

The opening number is a lovely musical depiction of the seasons of life in "Colors of Home" by Alan Lee Silva. Another relatively short and satisfying selection in the program is "Parade of Stars", based on "Rigaudon" by Andre Campra.

The concert also features Three Dances from Handel's "Water Music", "Danza in G" by Vivaldi and a lyrical arrangement of Brahms Waltz No. 15.

The finale will be the 10-minute seasonal classic, "A Christmas Festival", by the late Leroy Anderson who made his home in Connecticut for much of his life. This piece, composed by Anderson at the request of Arthur Fiedler for the Boston Pops in 1950, is an arrangement of familiar Christmas carols and songs including Joy to the World, Deck the Halls, God Rest Ye Merry Gentlemen, Good King Wenceslas, Hark! The Herald Angels Sing, The First Noel, Silent Night, Jingle Bells and O, Come All Ye Faithful.

Since NCCO was founded in 2012, the orchestra has grown and now includes musicians from many towns throughout eastern Connecticut. We perform two concerts per year, one in the winter and one in the spring. In the summer we regroup as an ensemble consisting of about half the musicians and meet once a week to play lighter music.

To donate to NCCO, send your check to NCCO Treasurer Saul Ahola, 88 Butts Rd., Woodstock, CT 06281

Embracing the shift: Falling back to a cozier season

As the clocks roll back an hour and daylight slips away a bit sooner, it's easy to feel the initial sting of losing those precious evening rays. The transition to shorter days and longer nights can be tough—our routines are thrown off, the dark arrives before dinner, and it feels like our world has shrunk just a little. But while that initial adjustment can feel jarring, there's an opportunity in this seasonal shift to lean into something more comforting and cozier.

When we fall back, we enter a season that invites us to slow down and settle in. The crisp, cool air outside becomes a reason to pull out our favorite sweaters, gather around fires, and sip on warm drinks that taste like nostalgia. It's a time when neighborhoods start to glow with holiday lights, and homes become filled with the sounds of friends and family reconnecting over shared meals and laughter.

For those who thrive on outdoor adventure, the shift also marks the beginning of snow sports season. The first snowfalls dust the world in white, creating a canvas that catches the sunlight and transforms the simplest landscapes into scenes of breathtaking beauty. Whether you're skiing down a mountain, sledding with the kids, or taking a quiet walk as snowflakes fall around you, there's something undeniably magical about embracing winter's gifts.

And while the early nights may initially feel like a loss, they can also be an invitation. An invitation to slower evenings at home, wrapped in blankets, breathing in the cool, refreshing air as it seeps through the window. An invitation to more time spent catching up with loved ones, sharing stories, and building up the excitement for the holidays ahead.

Adjusting to the time change isn't always seamless, but soon enough, we settle into this season and realize it's not so bad after all. It's the season of comfort, of gathering, and of finding joy in the simple things. So, as we turn the clocks back and brace for the darker evenings, let's remember to also turn our focus to the light—whether it's in the glow of holiday decorations, the sparkle of snow under the sun, or the warmth shared with those we love.

To the Editor:
 Tuesday, we cast our ballots for the candidates of our choice. We joined together to decide the direction of our country for the next four years. As citizens, voting is our privilege and duty, but our responsibility doesn't end there. When we vote, we give our power to individuals to act on our behalf and in our service. In that regard, we are accountable for their actions. So after the election, it is up to us to make sure our elected officials fulfill that service for we the people—all of us. We do this by communicating with them and each other, and working in our communities to promote the values that guided our votes.

It is also up to us to respect, and encourage others to respect, the peaceful transfer of political power no matter what the outcome of an election. Except for 2020, we have enjoyed over 200 years of presidents who peacefully transferred power to their successor. Tolkien, in his famous trilogy, "The Lord of the Rings," warns of the dangers and addictiveness of holding onto power through his characters. Frodo was told by the Wizard Gandalf to wear the ring of power as little as possible, and only when necessary. Gollum, who refused to give it up, went mad.

When we accept the outcomes of our elections (and our national elections are exceedingly secure), we show respect for the votes of our community members and fellow citizens. We are in this together! When we work together, we make better decisions, build a better country, and ensure the future of our democracy.

We are what we save

My late brother was a tidy man. His clothes were lined up with the knife edges of his blue Oxford cloth shirts and the sharp crease in his chino pants aligned in the closet, ready to be worn, but my niece and I piled them into her car and brought them to Good Will. There was only one random drawer left to clear out of his last home in an attractive retirement community. As I tossed items into a trash bag, I thought about what we save and how those endless, small decisions define so much.

The desire to collect things begins early. One of my grandsons has a box under his bed that contains various treasures he has accumulated in his young life. He favors stones, shells, coins and dead insects. His sister favored very small plastic dolls, but that interest waned.

I can't resist saving glass jars, especially ones with good lids. Bonne Maman jam jars are especially prized. One of my most organized friends saves them too. They pile up until they overwhelm the space and I reluctantly put them in recycling. I use them to hold homemade salad dressing and left over dumplings from the Thai restaurant, but what they really represent is potential. I want to be resourceful and combine bits of leftovers into something delicious. That almost never happens.

There is a museum in Iceland that exhibits a remarkable assortment of random stuff. My husband and I were stuck in the airport there once, but we didn't get to visit the place. Perhaps next time. Iceland is rife with museums – their website says there are 266 in that tiny country. Several focus on items such as matchbooks, tools and keys. I was once given a match book collection. It was filled with items from fancy restaurants in New York City during the '90's. Most I had never visited. I don't smoke, so the bag could last for the rest of my life. The giver of the stash had moved to a different life and rather than toss them, may have thought she was giving me the artifacts of her once glamorous life.

Wine corks pile up too, although most of the wine I drink come in screw top bottles. Once a retired colleague made a hot plate out of wine corks and sent it to me for Christmas. The corks were framed. Another friend recently gave me a wooden block with three upright dowels in a base. It is for drying plastic food bags and it works very well. Now I can reuse the clean bags and feel virtuous.

Fancy friends collect cars and take great pleasure in restoring, driving and showing them off. An old friend began collecting antique bottles and turned it into one of the best collections anywhere. My collection of random keys is of no value and occasionally messes up my life when I try to use a key of no identifiable origin for a door. Dried up Sharpie pens have lost their oomph by linger with free, ugly ball-points. Books are a category to themselves and flood me with ripples of regret when I give them away.

In the last drawer my brother left behind, I found what really mattered to him. With my eyes brimming, I tossed birthday cards from his children, grandchildren, and friends, notes and newspaper clippings I sent him, Christmas cards with photos and love notes from his wife. His life for the past decade or more was played out in the drawer. I have something similar in my writing desk. We are what we save, after all.

Why retirement planning is different for business owners: Key strategies and considerations

As a business owner, your path to retirement likely looks quite different from that of a typical employee. While you may have more control over your financial destiny, you also face unique challenges and opportunities when it comes to planning for your golden years. Let's explore why retirement planning is different for business owners and how you can leverage your business to help fund a comfortable retirement.

The business owner's retirement advantage

One of the biggest advantages for business owners is the potential to use their business as a significant retirement asset. Unlike employees who primarily rely on savings and employer-sponsored plans, you have additional options:

Business sale: Many owners plan to sell their business to fund retirement. This can potentially provide a large lump sum, but requires careful planning and valuation.

Ongoing income: You may be able to structure a gradual exit that provides continued income from the business even after you've stepped back from day-to-day operations.

Flexible contributions: As your own boss, you have more control over how much you can contribute to retirement accounts in profitable years.

Unique challenges for business owner retirement planning

While these advantages are significant, business owners also face some distinct challenges:

Concentrated risk: Having a large portion of your net worth tied up in your business can be risky. What if the business struggles or fails?

Difficulty saving: Reinvesting profits into the business often takes priority over personal retirement savings, especially in early years.

Lack of built-in benefits: Unlike many employees, you don't have access to company-sponsored 401(k) matches or pension plans.

Unpredictable income: Business income can fluctuate, making consistent retirement contributions challenging.

Leveraging your business for retirement

Here are some key strategies business owners can use to maximize their retirement potential:

Establish a business-sponsored retirement plan

As a business owner, you have access to retirement plans with higher contribution limits than typical IRAs.

FINANCIAL FOCUS
 JIM ZAHANSKY
 INVESTMENT ADVISER

Options include:

SEP IRA: Simple to set up and allows for large, tax-deductible contributions.

Solo 401(k): Offers high contribution limits and the option for both employer and employee contributions.

Defined Benefit Plan: Can allow for very large contributions, especially beneficial for older business owners.

Create a succession plan
 Whether you plan to sell your business or pass it on to family members, a well-thought-out succession plan is crucial. This should include:

- A clear timeline for your exit
- Strategies for maintaining or increasing the business's value
- Plans for training your successor
- Diversify Your Investments

While your business is a valuable asset, it's important not to put all your eggs in one basket. Consider:

- Investing in a diversified portfolio outside of your business
- Real estate investments (both personal and commercial properties)
- Exploring passive income streams separate from your main business

Maximize tax-advantaged savings

Take full advantage of tax-deferred and tax-free retirement savings options, including:

- Maxing out contributions to your chosen business retirement plan
- Contributing to a traditional or Roth IRA (if eligible)
- Considering a health savings account (HSA) for tax-free savings on medical expenses

Build business value
 Focus on strategies to increase your business's value over time, such as:

- Developing systems and processes that don't rely solely on you
- Building a strong management team
- Diversifying your customer base and revenue streams
- Consider Alternative Exit Strategies

Beyond a traditional sale, explore options like:

- Employee stock ownership plans (ESOPs)
- Selling to a key employee or family member
- Structuring a gradual buy-out

Planning for challenges

Be prepared to address common obstacles in your retirement planning:

Have a contingency plan: What if you can't sell your business for the price you expect? Or if you need to exit earlier than planned due to health issues?

Don't neglect personal savings: Even if you plan to fund retirement through a business sale, it's crucial to have diversified savings as a safety net.

Consult with professionals: Work with financial advisors, accountants, and lawyers who specialize in small business issues and can provide tailored advice.

Start early: The sooner you begin planning, the more options and flexibility you'll have.

Regularly review and adjust: Your retirement plan should evolve as your business and personal circumstances change.

Retirement planning as a business owner offers unique opportunities but also requires careful consideration of risks and challenges. By leveraging your business effectively, diversifying your investments, and planning for various scenarios, you can work towards a secure and fulfilling retirement. Remember, the key is to start planning early and to regularly review and adjust your strategy as your business grows and evolves.

Remembering those who served

In mid October, I received an email from an old "folk mass friend" from my days at St. Anne's Church in Ballouville. Larry Ouillette wrote, "With Veteran's Day coming up next month I thought you would be interested in this interesting fact about Killingly High School. When my father was in high school, he dropped out of school (KHS) to enter the service during WWII. When he came back after the war, he went back to Killingly High School to finish. At that time there were 6 students who were war veterans finishing their high school career. I remember my father telling me they were given their own homeroom, and the rules were somewhat relaxed for the veterans. For instance, if they wanted to go to the boiler room and have a smoke with the janitor that was allowed (Or at least tolerated). Attached are two pages from the 1947 KHS yearbook highlighting the six veterans who graduated that year." (email, Oct. 14).

Larry included pages from the 1947 yearbook with photos and biographical sketches about the six veterans. This seems a most appropriate time to honor them. Larry's father, Armand Phillip Ouillette, enlisted July 12, 1944 and served in China, Japan, Hawaii, New Guinea, Admiralty Islands, Phillipines, New Caladonia. Nicknamed "Pete", Ouillette received several ribbons and medals.

Other veterans who came back to finish their high school education at Killingly High School included Richard C. Bonneville, "Bonny," who enlisted in the U. S. Marine Corps in 1941. Places of service include Guadalcanal, Iwo Jima, New Zealand, and Hawaii. Richard received two Purple Hearts. The yearbook wished him best of luck in his desire to become a registered pharmacist.

Robert Damase Boulais, "Bob," served in the U.S Navy and received several medals including the World War II Victory Medal, American Area Medal and the Asiatic Pacific Medal.

Richard Peter Ennis, "Bark," served in the Army Air Corps. While enlisted, he attended Radio School and Advanced Radio School. Campaigns included the Rhineland Campaign, and the India Burma Campaign. He received a number of medals and ribbons.

Another veteran was Charles Kaskela, "Cat," who enlisted in the U. S. Naval Air Force on April 13, 1944. He served in the Asiatic-Pacific theater. Among his citations and medals were the Philippine Liberton Medal and the World War II Victory Medal.

Wallace V. Peabody enlisted June 27, 1944 and served as a motor machinists mate, 3rd class in the Navy. He, too, served in the Asiatic theater. Wallace also received a Victory Medal. The yearbook noted that he "has a talent for music, especially the trumpet. We will remember his beautiful playing of 'For Sentimental Reasons' in the variety show."

As we celebrate Veterans Day, let us remember the above Killingly veterans and the many others who fought for our freedoms. My guess is that each of you has several men and women in your families who served in recent conflicts. Both my parents served in World War II. In fact, that is how they met!

On Nov. 2, I had the pleasure of attending a program on the history of trolleys at the Killingly Historical Center. Jon McPartland from the CT Trolley Museum in East Windsor, Connecticut gave a most interesting PowerPoint presentation then answered many questions. At the end of the 19th century, electricity was becoming more common, especially in cities, so enterprising individuals with a "can do attitude" decided to utilize it in the field of transportation. Horse-drawn trolleys already existed so why not power them by electricity? McPartland spoke about the Connecticut (trolley) Company in his section of the state, but similar companies were springing up in other sections, including here in Northeastern our town. Photos included trolley stations in East Killingly, Elmville, and at Wildwood Park. The photo archives at the Killingly Historical Center also contain pictures of the trolley in Danielson and Dayville and the trolley barn nearer Route 101 and Upper Maple Street (part of present-day St. Joseph's Cemetery). Some were included in Images of America Killingly ad Killingly Revisited. Do stop at the Center to see the old photos.

In the Studio

"In the Studio" features artists from the Quiet Corner--home to many artists and makers, some of whom have national or international recognition for their work in fine art, handcraft, performing art, art education, and graphic art. In this series, we'll talk with our artist neighbors and learn about their careers, current projects, and connections to our towns. We'll also learn some "artspeak" terms in our conversations, demystifying some of those "artist words". Visiting the Connecticut Audubon Society Center at Pomfret (218 Day Rd.) to see a new exhibition of work (now running through December 24) featuring nature photographers Steven Rosendahl and Amy Porter, I had the opportunity to meet with Steve, a resident of Woodstock.

On our family property, there's a pond that we've allowed to return to its natural state. Here is a Blue Darter, resting on a fallen tree at the edge of this pond. Throughout the summer, it would often land on me or even on my camera. I also shared a video of it in flight on my Instagram page @StevenRosendahl (I frequently post birds seen there on Instagram). I work closely with my wildlife subjects, spending weeks gaining their trust. Over that time, I feel I develop a real bond with them.

You've photographed nature in numerous national parks, the Southwest, New England, and overseas. Are your locations planned photo destinations or happenstantial?

His interest in photography started when he was ten years old. He graduated from Brooks Institute of Photography in the early 1970s with degrees in Commercial Illustration and Motion Picture Production. He founded the Institute of Visual Communication, owned an art gallery promoting photography as fine art, and worked as a producer at CBS and ABC affiliates.

Hello Steve, and thank you for taking time to speak with me about your photography. All of the photos I saw at your exhibit at the Audubon and on your website are incredibly beautiful and sensitive. Tell us about these examples.

I had the privilege of visiting this Great Blue Heron nest three times during the spring of 2024. On my first visit, I witnessed the pair's courtship, which included the male bringing sticks to build their nest--most of which the female rejected. The image you see here captures one of their chicks at about a week old. By my final visit, the young herons were beginning to take flight. Experiencing these moments made me feel deeply connected to this family.

Tell us about this drag-

For my day job, I work as a manufacturing consultant, helping small manufacturing companies streamline their processes and software. I also train shop floor employees on these new systems. My job takes me all over the country and the world, offering unique opportunities to photograph nature in different regions.

Since bird habitats are delicate, most photographers are protective of their locations. It took time to build a network of naturalists willing to share their insights with me, but I now have a list of stops along the U.S. East Coast and abroad. My first inspiration to photograph swamps came when I unexpectedly stumbled upon Clyde Butcher's Big Cypress Gallery in the middle of the Big Cypress Preserve. (I also want to give a shout out to Clyde, who was just awarded the National Medal of Arts by President Biden last week.)

What plans do you have for future projects or photo locations?

I have an ongoing project focused on lily pads on the surface of Blackwater Swamps. The first year of the project was published in the summer edition of Nature Vision Magazine, and I plan to continue the project for several more years.

Now that I've mostly retired and have had the pleasure of meeting the great folks of various Audubon centers across the country, I'm putting together plans to train birders to become photographers. The first training project is scheduled for the spring of 2025 at the Audubon Swamp Gardens in South Carolina. This location also has special significance--it's where the Audubons lived and studied southern water birds and where [artist and ornithologist] James Audubon created his last two bird paintings. It is also the home of his patron, Rev. John Drayton. The Great Blue Heron nest featured in the first photograph is located here as well. If anyone is interested in attending the training project next spring, or would like to hear more about the stories behind these images, please feel free to reach out to me at steve@MISysGuy.com.

Photographing nature requires a lot of patience, correct? What other personal qualities come into play?

Photography is about light and being in the right place at the right time, often requiring much patience. While I'd like to attribute it to other personal qualities, nature gives me far more than I could ever cultivate on my own. I started my photographic journey at age 10, and each time I pick up the camera, it shapes me into a better person. Thanks for interviewing me.

Thank you for your insights. I encourage our readers to explore our website www.StevenRosendahl.com

I also recommend readers visit the Connecticut Audubon Center for workshops, trail walks, artist-in-residence programs, children's activities, and gifts for nature lovers. The Center in Pomfret manages the Bafin and Trail Wood nature sanctuaries.

Word of the day: ornithologist a person who studies birds including appearance, songs, behaviors, habitats, migration and flight patterns.

Happy Election Week

We stand at the crossroads of another chapter in our nation's story. The act of voting, an honor hard-won and cherished, reflects our journey from a small group of colonies to a mighty republic, constantly tested and reshaped by the hands of its people.

It all began in 1775 with a small group of determined colonists who risked everything for self-governance. Visionaries like George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, and Benjamin Franklin knew that independence from Britain was only the start. They would go on to craft a nation based on untested ideals of liberty, rallying under the Declaration of Independence—a declaration of rights for all who would call themselves American, even if America's early reality fell far short of this lofty vision.

We faced immediate and daunting challenges. As westward expansion continued, conflicts erupted between settlers and Indigenous tribes.

Tragically, Native American nations were forced from their lands, often with devastating consequences that continue today, reminding us of promises not kept and wrongs that still echo through our history.

Even as America grew, another dark shadow loomed: the institution of slavery. By the 1800s, slavery was entrenched in American life, particularly in the South, where millions of people lived in bondage. Abolitionists like Frederick Douglass, Sojourner Truth, and Harriet Tubman risked their lives to challenge this brutal institution. Their courage would be a rallying cry for the Civil War, a four-year battle that tore the nation apart. Yet, under the leadership of Abraham Lincoln, the Union's victory brought freedom to enslaved people and solidified the principle that "all men are created equal."

The fight for freedom did not end there. The women's suffrage movement took hold in the late 19th century, as Susan B. Anthony, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, and countless others pushed for equal rights. Decades of relentless advocacy finally succeeded with the passage of the 19th Amendment in 1920, granting women the right to vote and affirming that America's promise of freedom extended to all citizens.

Just when we seemed to be on a path of unity, the world was thrown into chaos. World War I and later World War II. Veterans of those wars, like Dwight D. Eisenhower and George S. Patton, returned as heroes, their courage reinforcing America's role as a beacon of freedom, yet even as our soldiers fought for liberty abroad, Americans at home wrestled with deep issues of justice and equality.

The Civil Rights Movement of the 1960s marked a new era of change, challenging systems of segregation and discrimination. Leaders like Martin Luther King Jr., Rosa Parks, and John Lewis reminded the nation that "freedom for all" meant just that—for every race, creed, and color.

They pushed America toward the promises written into its founding documents through marches, sit-ins, and speeches, which led to legislative milestones like the Civil Rights Act and the Voting Rights Act, which continue to protect and empower citizens today.

Since then, we've faced significant challenges and times of turmoil—from foreign wars to September 11th and beyond.

Through it all, our strength has been found not in perfection but in a continued willingness to change and strive for a better future.

And here we are again, after a divisive election, with candidates on all sides calling for different paths forward.

We must remember that we are united by a shared love for our country and by the knowledge that, regardless of who sits in the Oval Office, the power rests with the people. We must uphold the ideals that have defined America: liberty, justice, and freedom for all.

So whether your candidate wins or loses, whether this election played out precisely as you'd hoped or not, we all have a role to play in moving forward. Our nation's history is built on debate, disagreement, and, ultimately, unity in the pursuit of freedom. That pursuit makes us the "shining city on a hill"—a place of hope, progress, and promise. Our light must never be extinguished.

Together, we can keep America strong, free, and fair—a place where all voices are heard and everyone, regardless of race, religion, or background, can pursue their dreams.

Happy Election Week, and may our love of country keep us united, now and always.

In the days following the fire, the garage was confirmed to be the shop for local racecar driver Matt Lowinski-Loh, a regular competitor at nearby Thompson Speedway. His brother John Lowinski-Loh, Jr., who has also competed at Thompson Speedway, posted on social media confirming that Matt Lowinski-Loh lost all his racing assets in the blaze and that a GoFundMe campaign has started to help the family rebuild.

"My brother Matt and honestly my whole family are some of the most hard working, kind, helpful, selfless people I have ever met. They earned everything they owned. They are always willing to help others and put them before themselves. Years upon years of hard-earned money gone in a matter of minutes. Matt also lost more than that. Things that are priceless. Every trophy he ever earned, pictures, rewards and more. Those things no one can replace. Insurance won't come close to paying out enough to replace what they lost in tooling, race cars, parts, etc. Myself and my brother and family have never gone through something like this before and don't ever look for handouts, but we are at a point after today we could use help from others to help rebuild. I know my brother and family would very much appreciate it and definitely deserve it," John posted in the GoFundMe.

As of this writing the GoFundMe has raised $7,887 towards its goal of $40,000. Those wishing to date can search "Rebuild Hope for Matt and His Family" on GoFundMe.

One of the most knowledgeable antique dealers I've worked with used to call Tiffany "the magic word." The Tiffany name coupled with the quality and craftsmanship of their pieces commands a premium.

Tiffany's history dates back nearly 200 years. Their website states that Charles Lewis Tiffany and John B. Young opened a "stationery and fancy goods" store with a $1,000 advance from Tiffany's father. The shop opened at 259 Broadway in New York and focused on "American style" goods that differed from the styles of the day in Europe. In 1845, the Tiffany & Co. Blue Book became the first direct-mail catalog, offering jewelry and accessories to those who couldn't travel to the New York store.

Tiffany's silverware designs earned them a bronze medal at the 1867 Paris Exposition. At the turn of the 20th century, they opened locations in London and Paris. They weren't only known for their silverware. In 1878, they showcased one of the largest and finest yellow diamonds at 128.54 carats with 82 facets.

Louis Comfort Tiffany took over the business in 1902 and formed Tiffany Studios and other offshoots of the main company. Tiffany & Company continued to produce silver and jewelry while Tiffany Studios produced Tiffany Lamps and stained glass. Louis Comfort Tiffany also produced bronze, glass, pottery and other functional and artistic pieces as Tiffany Studios and under different brands.

Tiffany Studios closed in 1932 while Tiffany & Company continued to run. Tiffany & Company produced china for White House dinners, military medals, and sports trophies. Their jewels have been worn by famous women including Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis and Elizabeth Taylor. Tiffany & Company still runs their landmark store on 5th Avenue in New York City. You can even order breakfast at Tiffany's in their Blue Box Café.

As you would expect, the quality and beauty of Tiffany pieces continues to make them popular with collectors. In one of our auctions last month, we sold a group of Tiffany bronze and glass desk accessories that brought $1,200. We also sold a Tiffany "Olympian" pattern sterling silver flatware set for $3,500. An antique Tiffany 18 karat gold necklace with tourmaline stones brought $23,000.

Stained glass pieces have also fetched some amazing prices at auction. "The Danner Memorial" window made by Tiffany Studios from the First Baptist Church in Canton, Ohio, sold for a little under $2 million in 2000. A one-of-a-kind Tiffany stained glass and bronze lamp that was exhibited at the Exposition Universelle in Paris in 1900 and at the 1901 Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo, N.Y., went to auction in 2021. It lit up the auction hall and the bidder's home when it sold for $3.7 million in 2021.

We have some specialty auctions coming up including a major collection of Civil War memorabilia and a collection of memorabilia of some Hollywood legends. As always, we continue to accept consignments of fine jewelry, sterling silver, paintings by well-known artists, advertising signs, coins, old comic books and baseball cards, and almost any other valuable antique or vintage item for future auctions. Please visit our Web site, <https://centralmassauctions.com>, for links to upcoming events.

Grow healthier gardens with the help of a soil test

Soil is the foundation of a healthy garden, but let's be honest, most gardeners don't like spending time, energy, and money on it. It's more fun to show off pretty flowers or share tasty vegetables. But creating a healthy soil foundation will increase your growing success which means more beautiful flowers, larger harvests, and a healthier landscape to enjoy.

When creating a new lawn, landscape, or garden bed, begin with a soil test. Use soil testing to evaluate your fertilization practices and diagnose problems in existing lawns and gardens. Prioritize and spread out the cost by starting with new and struggling gardens or lawn areas. Then implement an ongoing testing schedule that tests one or two existing gardens each year. Testing lawns and gardens every few years can help improve their health while helping you avoid improper and overfertilization that can negatively impact your landscape and the environment.

A soil test report tells you what if any fertilizer is needed and what fertilizer is best to use for the plants you are growing. It also evaluates the soil pH, acidity, and alkalinity, advising you of any needed adjustments. Testing this before fertilizing or adjusting the soil pH can help avoid years of problems caused by applying too much or the wrong fertilizer, lime, sulfur, or other products.

You can take a soil sample for testing whenever the soil is not frozen, and you have not recently applied fertilizer. Fall is an excellent time as it allows you to implement the soil test results before the next growing season.

Contact your local or state University Extension Service to locate a qualified soil testing lab near you. Many have a state lab that provides this service for a fee while others provide lists of soil-testing labs in your area.

Take separate samples for each type of planting, garden bed, and if needed, lawn area. As you may have discovered, the soil can vary greatly from one place to another. Fill may have been added when the house was built, topsoil used to create planting beds, and other soil amendments incorporated that can impact your growing success. Taking a sample from individual planting beds, mixed borders, and the lawn provides better information on the existing conditions and what is needed for growing those types of plants.

Use a clean trowel and bucket to gather the soil sample. If needed, slide away mulch and remove a narrow slice of soil, four to six inches deep, where many plant roots grow.

Take several samples from the garden or lawn area you want to test. Collect samples from each edge and several throughout the middle of the bed or lawn area. Mix the samples together, place about a cup in a plastic bag, and send it to the soil testing lab. Allow several weeks for the test to be completed and the results returned.

Consider adding soil testing to your garden preparation and ongoing care. This investment will help you grow health-

Why you should shop local for the holidays and beyond

Various components come together to make the holiday season a festive time of year. There is a lot to get done in a short amount of time during the holiday season, and part of that includes shopping for all of the family members and friends on your shopping list. Shopping can be a complicated process that involves identifying which stores will be the best places to shop. Local retailers make the perfect place to shop for holiday items.

According to the American Express Business Economic Impact Study, more than two-thirds of every dollar spent with a local business stays in the community. Indeed, shopping local benefits consumer and community alike. The following are some of the many perks to shopping locally throughout the holiday season.

- Personalized attention: Small businesses are known for their personalized customer service and owners and staff are often lauded for taking the time to interact and learn about their customers, a dynamic that is impossible at larger retailers.

- Meet and interact with people: Shopping in-person at local stores, you'll see faces from your community and become better known in the local area.

- Shorter lines: Local stores are bound to have smaller crowds and thus shorter lines. That translates to less stress and hassle when it comes to getting in and out with holiday gifts.

- Smaller carbon footprint: Pollution, traffic congestion, habitat loss, and resource depletion may not occur on the same levels when shopping locally compared to patronizing big box stores. That's because local retailers tend to create or source their products locally, whereas many big box stores secure their goods overseas.

- Easier parking: This goes hand-in-hand with smaller crowds, as shopping locally does not typically require driving up and down endless aisles at malls or standalone retail stores in an effort to find a parking spot. Local retailers in town may have on-street parking or closed lots that are convenient to shoppers.

- Small batch shopping experience: Consumers can secure items in small businesses that are not carbon copies of those found across the country at major retail chains. When seeking a unique, thoughtful gift, shopping locally is the way to go.

Shopping locally this holiday season provides an array of benefits to consumers, and helps to solidify a strong Main Street in communities.

needs for the ongoing upgrades at the old high school at 79 Westfield Ave. Guiot revealed that the building recently underwent a weeks-long upgrade to the aging bathrooms due to failed plumbing on the EASTCONN side of the facility.

"There was substantial rot and leakage that was coming from the walls of the plumbing in the bathroom, so we quickly determined that and had the repairs done. It was a significant repair. Walls had to be removed. The entire plumbing was redone in those bathrooms. That plumbing actually serves eight bathrooms, four downstairs and four upstairs that mirror one another in the design. All of the plumbing was rotted because it was all original and needed to be retrofitted to what was needed to fix the problem," said Guiot.

Those bathrooms are now fully repaired and operational. The 79 Westfield Ave. building is currently under renovation to become Killingly's new community center.
