Ikebana demonstration and last call for Bites, Books and Blooms tickets

WEBSTER — Summer may be ending, but get ready for flowers, flowers everywhere! Friends of the Gladys Kelly Library announce that this year, for the first time, there will be a free floral art event to kick off the week of the big Bites, Books and Blooms fundraiser. Diana Hart Smith, a Sogetsu Master of Ikebana, will conduct a Japanese Floral Arrangement Demonstration on Monday, Sept. 21 at 6 p.m. at the library, 2 Lake St., Webster. Sogetsu designers use flowers, fruits, vegetables, and assemblages of unconventional things (clock parts, metal tubes, electronic components, etc.) to construct designs. Note that although the demonstration is free, registration is required on the library website, gladyskellylibrary.org, or at the library.

Then, on Wednesday, Sept. 23, 6 – 8 p.m., return to the library for its fourth annual fund-

A generous grant from the Janet Malser Humanities trust combined with our own fund raising efforts made it possible for this much needed project to proceed.

Established in 2009, the Janet Malser Humanities Trust continues Janet Malser's legacy of supporting educational, cultural, historic, and charitable initiatives throughout the communities of Webster, Oxford, and Dudley.

Job change?

Whether retiring or changing jobs, you'll want to know your retirement account options.

There are four potential options for your 401(k) when leaving an employer:

- Leave it in your former employer's 401(k) plan, if allowed by the plan.
- Move it to your new employer's 401(k) plan, if you've changed employers and your new employer plan allows for it.
- Roll the account over to an individual retirement account (IRA).
- Cash it out, which is subject to potential tax consequences.

We can talk through your financial goals and find the option that works best for you.

On Saturday, Sept. 19, Oxford residents are invited to take part in the Fall Town-Wide Yard Sale, a community favorite that turns neighborhoods into one giant bargain-hunting destination.

Whether you're looking to downsize, make a little extra cash, or simply connect with neighbors, this is the perfect opportunity to give your gently used items a second life. The cleanup doesn't stop there!

Also on Sept. 19, the Oxford Department of Public Works will host a Community Shredding Day from 9 to 11 a.m. at the DPW Administrative Office, 450 Main St. This free service is available exclusively to Oxford residents and provides a safe, secure way to dispose of sensitive documents and unwanted paperwork.

Dudley Conservation Land Trust announces fall events

DUDLEY — The Dudley Conservation Land Trust (DCLT) today announced its vibrant line-up of upcoming autumn events designed to connect community members with local protected open spaces. Highlights include an educational mushroom forage, the highly anticipated celebration of the newly acquired Antos Farm sanctuary, and the Annual Member Meeting. In tandem with these gatherings, the all-volunteer organization is extending a popular promotional drive to help fund ongoing conservation efforts.

The autumn programming kicks off with a Mushroom Foraging expedition at Wieloch Woods, located at 380 West Main St. in Dudley, on Saturday, Sept. 19 from 10 a.m. to noon. Led by expert mycologist Jonathan Kranz, this walk covers the basics of mushroom ecology, habitat, and safe identification. While the event is entirely free to the public, space is limited and interested participants should register ahead of time on the DCLT Events Calendar.

The schedule continues on Sunday, Sept. 27 with the Annual Member Meeting at the historic Black Tavern, located at 138 Center Rd. in Dudley, from 5 to 7 p.m. This meeting serves as a core event where active members will cast votes for the incoming Board of Directors, review accomplishments, and discuss future goals. Attendees will also enjoy dinner from The Rose Room, featuring carefully curated, locally sourced ingredients. Interested individuals can sign up for a yearly membership to gain voting eligibility and support local conservation efforts by visiting the DCLT Membership Page.

Public celebrations resume on Saturday, Oct. 3 at Antos Farm (90 Marsh Rd., Dudley). The morning kicks off with a pre-celebration mini hike from 8 to 8:45 a.m., giving community members of all ages and hiking experience levels a chance to explore. The main Antos Farm event will follow immediately from 9 to 10 a.m., celebrating the important acquisition and commemorating the landmark 100th anniversary of the farm's founding in 1926. Attendees will have the unique opportunity to meet descendants of the founding family and learn about the wildlife corridor being developed through Dudley and Oxford. The celebration ends at 10 a.m., allowing attendees to head to the Grange (139 Center Rd., Dudley) for the annual Apple Festival.

To support its ongoing land preservation goals, DCLT is extending a promotion offering free merchandise for new recurring monthly pledges. Anyone who commits to a monthly recurring gift of $15 or more before the start of the annual meeting on Sept. 27 will receive a free DCLT hat or t-shirt. Enrolled supporters can pick up their merchandise during the Annual Member Meeting or at the Dudley Grange Apple Festival. To sign up, select the "Monthly" option on the secure DCLT Donation Page.

Further details, event RSVPs, and background information available through DCLT's new Website: <https://dudleyclt.org>.

Upcoming history talk examines fact vs. fiction in “Death By Lightning” series

WEBSTER — Paul E. Lambert, Sr., a 31-year member of the History department at Nichols College in Dudley and a staff member of the Samuel Slater Experience, will give a presentation on Sunday, Sept. 20, entitled “Fact vs. Fiction – ‘Death by Lightning’ and the assassination of President James A. Garfield.” The talk will begin at 1 p.m., and is free to attend with registration. Samuel Slater Experience is located at 31 Ray St. in Webster.

Everyone loves a good story. Seeing it unfold before your eyes on a theater screen or on TV can really make it come alive and make it something to remember. When that story is about an actual event from the past, however, the historian wants to be sure that what viewers are getting is both memorable and accurate.

“Death by Lightning” is a television miniseries that was released by Netflix in November 2025. It is based on the events historian Candice Millard writes about in her 2011 book “Destiny of the Republic: A Tale of Madness, Medicine and the Murder of the President.” This four-part program tells the story of how James A. Garfield rose to the presidency in 1880. A political reformer and supporter of civil rights for the slaves freed by the U.S. Civil War, he would frequently find himself at odds with many fellow Republican politicians – including his own Vice President, Chester A. Arthur. Only four months into his term, he would be shot by a disgruntled office-seeker, Charles Guiteau; he would suffer a long, agonizing decline in health at the hands of incompetent doctors until he finally died on September 19, 1881. His successor, Chet Arthur, would unexpectedly become the reformer that Garfield had hoped to be.

Garfield is one of our lesser-known presidents; his short term left little time to establish a legacy, and many Americans simply aren't aware of the facts behind his assassination and death. Did Hollywood get the story right?

Auburn resident sets out to raise awareness for Frontotemporal Degeneration REGION — The Jim Tobin Memorial is inviting the community to support two upcoming events dedicated to raising awareness of Frontotemporal Degeneration (FTD), advancing research, and advocating for families affected by the disease.

The Third Annual Jim Tobin Memorial Golf Tournament will be held on Saturday, Sept. 26 at Holden Hills Country Club. Registration is now open for foursomes at $500 per team, and individuals who do not golf are welcome to attend the Italian buffet lunch for $40 with advance registration. The event will also feature raffles, contests, and sponsorship opportunities. Net proceeds will benefit the Frontotemporal Disorders Research Center at UMass Chan Medical School and The Association for Frontotemporal Degeneration (AFTD).

On Sunday, Sept. 6, Auburn resident and David Prouty High School graduate Devyn Tobin will take on the “From Lab to Legislator” Walk, a 40-mile one-man journey from UMass Chan Medical School in Worcester to the Massachusetts State House in Boston. Wearing a 40-pound weighted vest to symbolize the weight FTD places on families, he hopes to increase public awareness, support research, and encourage legislative action for those living with Frontotemporal Degeneration.

Both events honor the memory of Jim Tobin, a longtime Spencer resident, Air Force veteran, husband, father, and grandfather who lived with FTD. Many members of the Tobin family, including Jim's wife, continue to call Spencer home and hope the community will join them in honoring Jim's legacy and supporting efforts to improve the lives of families affected by FTD.

Twenty-five years later, remembrance becomes a responsibility

Twenty-five years is a milestone that forces a nation to confront an uncomfortable fact about memory.

There are now millions of American adults who were not alive on Sept. 11, 2001. Many more were too young to remember where they were when the first plane struck the World Trade Center, when a second plane confirmed that the nation was under attack, when the Pentagon was struck and when Flight 93 crashed into a field in Pennsylvania.

For them, Sept. 11 is history. For millions of others, it remains memory.

That distinction made Friday’s observance at Webster Fire Headquarters especially meaningful. Veterans stood alongside police officers, firefighters, military representatives and officials from Webster and Dudley as the American flag was raised and lowered to half-staff. There were no elaborate gestures necessary. The simple act of gathering, remembering and speaking the names and meaning of that day served its purpose. On the 25th anniversary, however, remembrance carries a new responsibility.

Webster Selectman Elaine Davies captured it well when she said it is the task of those who remember Sept. 11 to pass those memories to people who were not yet born.

That responsibility extends beyond recounting where we were that morning. Future generations should understand the nearly unimaginable scale of the loss. They should know about the firefighters who climbed stairwells while thousands of others descended them. They should know about police officers, emergency medical personnel and ordinary civilians who remained behind to help strangers. They should know about the passengers and crew aboard Flight 93 who acted after learning what was happening elsewhere. They also should understand that the consequences did not end when the smoke cleared.

Military members were sent into wars that followed the attacks. First responders, recovery workers and others developed illnesses associated with their work at the attack sites. Families lived with losses that did not become less simply because anniversaries accumulated.

Those stories are part of the history that must be preserved. But there is another memory worth carrying forward. It is the memory of what happened in communities across America afterward.

People displayed flags. Blood donation centers filled. Neighbors checked on neighbors. Police officers and firefighters received expressions of gratitude from strangers. Political and cultural differences did not disappear, but for a period they seemed smaller beside something much larger.

Dudley Town Administrator Jonathan Ruda spoke after Friday’s ceremony about that sense of shared purpose and the possibility of finding it again. That may be one of the most worthwhile lessons to draw from this anniversary.

Unity does not require agreement on every issue. A community does not have to think with one mind to recognize common obligations. People can disagree strongly and still treat one another decently, support those who serve them and come together when a neighbor needs help. Webster and Dudley demonstrated a small version of that Friday morning.

Town borders mattered little. Titles mattered little. Veterans, emergency responders and municipal officials gathered for the same reason. A quarter-century after Sept. 11, ceremonies such as this one are becoming increasingly important rather than less so.

Children born this year will learn about the attacks entirely from others. Eventually, firsthand witnesses will become fewer, as happens with every defining event in history. That makes remembrance an obligation passed from one generation to another. The photographs must be preserved. The stories must be told. The sacrifices must be explained. The names must continue to be read. And perhaps the most difficult part of remembering is recognizing that remembrance should influence how the living conduct themselves. Honor the firefighters by respecting service. Honor the military members by understanding sacrifice. Honor the civilians who helped strangers by helping neighbors.

Honor those who died by refusing to allow Sept. 11 to become merely another date printed in a history book. Twenty-five years have passed. The responsibility to remember now belongs not only to those who witnessed that day, but to everyone who inherits its history.

Gravestone Girls Come to Auburn

BY HELEN POIRIER
AUBURN HISTORICAL SOCIETY

The Auburn Historical Society and Museum will present the Gravestone Girls at their Sept. 17 meeting starting at 6:30 p.m. at the newly renovated Camp Gleason. The Gravestone Girls will start with the burial grounds of New England in 1600 and 1700s, of which Auburn has two, through the 19th century nation-wide rural cemetery movement. They will conclude with the 21st century locations. Learn why we have cemeteries and grave-stones and why they look like they do. See how styles and art have evolved over the past 400 years. And yes, there is art in them there burial places. The meeting will be free and open to the public.

Camp Gleason was opened in June 1942 by the South Works American Steel & Wire Company. Over fifteen hundred people attended the opening of the camp that was named after George D. Gleason who was a general superintendent of the South and Electric Cable works. George was born July 29, 1890, in Worcester to John H. and Lillian L. Ford Gleason. He first worked as a civil engineer then entered American Steel and Wire in 1917 as a draftsman at the South Works. He was made assistant superintendent of the South Works in 1930 and general superintendent in 1939 where he remained until his retirement in 1955. According to the article about his retirement, George love living and working in the area and passed up promotions because he would have to leave Worcester. Many of the highlights of his career include direction of a project that kept the company’s Worcester steel furnaces going during World War II, direction of the merger of North and Central with South Works, and supervi-

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Election choices

To the Editor:

As election season is upon us all, we are bombarded with tv. and radio commercials, signs everywhere, and political messages in the mail. Much of what I see and hear from many candidates or supporters is, ‘We’re going to fight Trump!’ ‘We’re going to stand up to Trump!’ ‘We’re going to do this and that,’ and everything else anti-Trump! That may be enough for some of the voters reading this. Their minds are made up already, and will cast their votes for anyone saying or writing such things. They will vote by the D or R, blue or red that those letters represent, without ever finding out from these candidates what exactly it is they are going to do.

How are you going to lower my taxes instead of the constant rise that takes place? How are you going to make all the things you talk about free, free, free without actually raising everyone’s taxes to pay for it? Nothing is free; it is simply a way of everyone paying while only a few actually use.

With socialism on the rise, how are you going to tell everyone that spent 20 or 30 years paying off a mortgage that their

To the Editor:

So, residents of Dudley have to vote on a Proposition 2 1/2 override again. Again. Just as they did in 2023.

That vote and revote, some three years ago, pretty much squandered the credibility of the selectmen and Town Manager Jonathan Ruda to a depth that still reverberates. First, they attempted to raise property taxes by 33 percent to meet the unconscionable demands of the Regional School Committee. When that was rejected, they held hostage the town’s treasured Public Library, effectively firing a much-admired head librarian and decimating its staff.

Finally, it was left to a private citizen to find a less painful path through the crisis, underlining the abject incompetence and apathy of town officials. Months later the town manager magically found money for, among other things, enhancing his executive assistant’s retirement package and creating a new position of assistant town manager to replace her. Their playbook for this override seems pretty much the same. This time, however, the hostages are police, firefighters and the Public Works Department.

After voters resoundingly rejected the first attempted override last June, town officials spouted their usual, disingenuous apologies and proposed cutting the earlier $1,985,187 request by roughly $1.27 million. My first question is why were these savings not included in the initial request? My second question is why should anyone believe that there are not even more compromises to be found in the budget - say about $717,630 worth, which they’re seeking in this latest request?

Nobody wants to skimp on public safety. But do the schools really need a full-time police officer patrolling their halls? What about that Public Information Coordinator? The town’s current budget provides a pittance, $1,000, for the Senior Center, which is forced to depend on legions of unpaid, dedicated volunteers for most of its services. Meanwhile it pays a Public Information Coordinator nearly $22,000. For what?

Many municipal, state and federal agencies, as well as private companies, employ Public Information Officers to answer inquiries from the public or journalists. That’s not what happens here. To obtain most serious information in Dudley and other small towns you have to file a request house is no longer theirs. Socialism does not allow for personal property rights, only certain possessions. And are you going to mandate what possessions we are allowed? Such as which cars we can and cannot own or pay even higher taxes for something not approved of? Are you going to mandate how we heat your homes in the winter or cool in the summer? They are, in fact, government property now.

Or are you going to uphold the Constitution and Bill Of Rights that each of us has to protect us from such things, or give in to the special interest groups that make huge donations?

These may sound like foolish questions, but as usual, I will ask anyone reading this, don’t take my word for it; look it up. The information is easy enough to find.

Some of these questions need to be asked because some of the candidates that sound so good have a long list of things they will push forward that will not end so great for anyone, D or R. We will all be the same (the have nots), while the same politicians stay rich and in power forever.

JOHN GIAQUINTO
DUDLEY

with the town clerk, who is a designated “Records Access Officer.” (RAC). The town’s Public Information Coordinator is not involved. Apparently, her duties include writing occasional puff pieces about town activities for local newspapers and managing the town’s Facebook page. By the way, neither Webster, Southbridge, Oxford or Charlton - all towns larger than Dudley - employ a Public Information Officer.

And if Mr. Ruda were truly concerned about preserving essential public safety services, he might consider some compromises of his own. His employment contract provides him the option of accepting $6,000 a year for using his own personal vehicle or, alternately, using a town-owned vehicle for his personal transportation. He’s not chasing fires or pursuing law breakers. Wouldn’t it be a gracious example for him to forego that prerequisite and commute the few miles to his office on his own dime like the rest of us?

Also, don’t get me going on the shameless School Department’s consistently tone-deaf demands on already financially-strapped residents of Dudley and Charlton. Now it wants $11,183,734 for capital improvements, few of which seem urgent, from residents already struggling with exorbitant prices for fuel, groceries, electricity, housing and health care.

After that you have the pathetic refusal of Nichols College, legally a not-for-profit, tax-exempt institution, to contribute even a penny to compensate the town for its many services through a Payment in Lieu of Taxes agreement - payments that nearly every other private college in the state makes to their communities. Never mind that Nichols often boasts about being the town’s historic center and rakes in thousands from its golf course, which is classified for property taxes under Chapter 61B, limiting its assessment to no more than 25 percent of its actual value, because it’s a recreational property open to the public.

Considering all this, the bottom line for voters seems clear. This is not the time to pour more money into the School Department. And simply arguing that the override must be approved just to preserve essential services is just not good enough. Dudley voters deserve better leadership. Certainly, they deserve a more detailed and honest explanation of why this seems to happen here over and over again.

Even more, they just deserve a break.

What does financial fulfillment actually feel like?

ANTONOPOULOS

Feeling financially fulfilled means so much more than just the number in your bank account. It’s about being able to take your family out to dinner without calculating whether you can afford it. It means sleeping soundly on a Sunday night, knowing that if the water heater gives out tomorrow, you can handle it. And it’s saying yes to a vacation because you planned ahead and the money is there.

In short, financial fulfillment is the feeling that your money is supporting the life you want.

Yet true fulfillment is surprisingly rare. Only 16 percent of Americans are financially fulfilled, according to a 2026 study by Edward Jones and Gallup, “Money and Meaning: Understanding Financial Fulfillment.” Those at the other end of the spectrum, the financially stressed (32 percent), often say that money regularly controls their daily decisions. Most Americans (51 percent), however, fall in the middle — the financially conflicted. They manage to get by but often carry a persistent undercurrent of worry.

Notably, where you land on this spectrum has less to do with your income than you might expect. More than half of households earning $175,000 or more are still financially conflicted.

Building the foundation

So, the question becomes, “What do financially fulfilled people do differently?” Simply put, they tend to have foundational planning structures in place. Five behaviors show up consistently among the financially fulfilled, and they’re simple steps you can take, too.

Build an emergency fund (98 percent of fulfilled have this). Aim for saving three to six months of living expenses in a liquid, easily accessible account. When you know you can handle the unexpected, you stop bracing for it, and lower stress gives you a higher quality of life.

Create a financial plan for retirement (91 percent of financially fulfilled have one). It’s hard to feel in control if you don’t know where you’re going. A retirement plan puts a real number on what you’ll need and lays out a clear path to get there, with built-in protection against life’s unexpected curveballs.

Save intentionally for major milestones (87 percent of financially fulfilled do). A home renovation, a new vehicle or a child’s education don’t have to feel disruptive. Setting money aside deliberately for the milestones you anticipate means you can say yes without scrambling.

Put an estate plan in place (66 percent of financially fulfilled have). Estate plans are not just for the wealthy. A will and basic estate plan help ensure what you’ve worked for still reflects your wishes after you’re gone.

Work with a financial advisor (60 percent of financially fulfilled who sought any guidance have used an advisor in the past year). The internet is great, but real guidance comes from a credentialed person who knows you and your family and what you want your money to do for you.

Knowing that your money is working toward the life you want doesn’t happen by accident. Feeling financially fulfilled is worth the effort and may be more achievable than you realize.

Somebody is stealing the daylight

It happens every September, and every September, I somehow manage to be surprised by it. I look out the window sometime after supper and think, “Why is it getting dark?” As though there has been some sort of mistake. As though I should call somebody.

For most of the summer, daylight spoils us. You can finish supper, look around the house, decide you ought to do something useful and still have enough daylight left to avoid doing it for another hour.

There is time to mow a little grass, putter around outside, talk to a neighbor or stand in the driveway staring at something that needs fixing while making absolutely no progress toward fixing it.

Then September arrives. At first, nothing seems particularly alarming. The afternoons can still be warm. The trees are mostly green. Nobody has put the snow shovel by the back door yet, unless that person is either extremely organized or knows something the rest of us don’t. But the daylight is quietly packing its bags.

One evening you are outside at 7:30 without giving it a thought. A couple of weeks later, you glance at the clock at 7, and the windows have turned into mirrors. That is when you know summer has begun slipping away.

My wife handles this transition better than I do. She accepts that seasons change because she is a rational adult. I behave as though daylight is something we purchased and therefore ought to receive in the quantity promised.

“Yes,” she’ll say.

“It wasn’t dark this early last week.”

This conversation has taken place every September for roughly 30 years.

Marriage is partly about love, partly about companionship and partly about listening patiently while another human being reports the same seasonal phenomenon three decades in a row. There is something about these September evenings that changes the rhythm of a small town.

In July, evening stretches. People are still outside. Lawnmowers are running. Somebody is washing a car. Kids are squeezing another half-hour out of the day. A neighbor wanders over and a five-minute conversation becomes 25 because nobody is particularly concerned about the clock.

September puts everybody on notice. The shadows stretch across the yard earlier. Porch lights appear. Cars traveling down Main Street have their headlights on before supper has had much time to settle.

You start measuring outdoor jobs differently. In June, you might think, “I’ll get to that after supper.” In September, “after supper” is no longer a time. It is a threat. You also discover how many things are harder to find in the dark.

I recently went outside to retrieve something I had left in the yard. I knew precisely where it was. At least I knew precisely where it had been when there was daylight. I spent several minutes wandering around before admitting defeat and going back for a flashlight. The object had not moved. Apparently, my ability to locate stationary objects disappears shortly after sunset.

There is a melancholy side to all of this, of course. Summer always seems as though it ought to last longer. We spend months waiting for warm evenings, open windows, cookouts, gardens and those long stretches of daylight when 8 o’clock somehow feels like the middle of the afternoon. Then suddenly, the sun starts keeping bankers’ hours.

But I’ve reached an age where I appreciate September more than I once did. There is something comforting about lights coming on in houses a little earlier.

Drive through one of our towns around dusk and you see lamps glowing through kitchen windows. Porch lights flicker on. Restaurants and little businesses look warmer against the darkening street. The world seems to draw inward a bit.

Soon enough, there will be leaves to rake, furnaces to consider and the annual mystery of discovering what happened to the gloves you distinctly remember putting somewhere sensible last spring. I’m in no hurry for any of that. For now, though, I’m trying to appreciate these September evenings for what they are. They are the hinge between seasons. Summer has not entirely left us, and autumn has not entirely arrived. There is still warmth in the afternoon, but evening carries a warning. Use the daylight while you’ve got it.

Take the walk. Finish the yard work. Sit outside for another few minutes. And when you look up one evening and discover that darkness has arrived much earlier than expected, don’t bother announcing it to your spouse.

Trust me. They already know.

Poets at Large presents Knowles and Aeroelastic Flutter

POMFRET — Poets at Large will continue its seventh season on Saturday night, September 26th with two disparate types of poetry. The show begins at 7 p.m. at The Vanilla Bean Café, 450 Deerfield Rd. in Pomfret, and featured that night will be Frederick-Douglass Knowles II and performance artist duo Aeroelastic Flutter. Suggested donation is $10.

Knowles is a Hartford Poet Laureate Emeritus, an English Professor at CT State Community College and author of “BlackRoseCity” (Author House 2011). He is the recipient of The Nutmeg Poetry Award, a Connecticut of the Arts Fellow in Artistic Excellence in Poetry/Creative Non-Fiction, and a two-time Pushcart Prize nominee. He will be showcasing work from his newest book, “Sinking in Moonlight Alone.”

Aeroelastic Flutter is a spoken word and sound collaboration, combining the often-absurdist poetry of Jim Whitten with the guitar work and sound exploration of Nicholas Pecsok. Their project experiments with lo-fi audio and borderline performance art, challenging audiences to reevaluate how poetry can be performed and defined.

Poets at Large has brought over 150 published and awarded poets to the area since 2020 and dozens of people have participated in the open mic portions during that time. Poets at Large is a project of Windham Arts. All events are ADA compliant and are recommended for ages 16 and up. Readings

Zion Lutheran Church thanks Abissi family for Sign of Faith

OXFORD — Janet Abissi, Zion Lutheran Church’s oldest member at 93 years of age, is a vivacious soul who is deeply rooted in her faith. When she notices that something needs to be done for Zion’s church property or ministries, she always gives back to the church she loves. She shared that her mother and father were “always at church doing one project or another” and she carries on that tradition. She also related that her late husband Frank “loved this church because he found members to be so friendly and welcoming.” Janet sang with Zion’s choir for years and shared a delightful memory of Frank passing by the choir after Communion and giving her a wink. The choir loved those winks, too! When it became apparent that Zion’s roadside church sign, built by Bay Path more than thirty years ago, was looking shabby, this nonagenarian conceived of a plan to give “glory to God” and to honor Frank’s memory. After planning meetings and family conversations, the Abissi family decided to donate a new sign to create a lasting invitation to members, visitors and passersby along the busy highway. Janet and her children, Frank Jr and Leana, Carl and Cathy, Kim and Bob, and Mark and Maria made this dream a reality. The gift that welcomes all was dedicated by Pastor Michael on the last Sunday of July. Zion’s thankful congregation celebrated after the dedication with beautifully decorated cake for coffee hour.

Francis N “Skip” Szczepanski 1914-2005 Floral Collection on exhibit at Gladys E. Kelly Public Library

Francis “Skip” Szczepanski
WEBSTER — Francis

N. “Skip” Szczepanski expressed his love of the natural world and beauty of flowers, not only in the loving care and the enjoyment of tending his home garden, but also in creating a series of floral paintings. He had a passion to capture the beauty of flowers before they faded. This persistent passion is revealed in many oil paintings that include anniversary floral arrangements, landscapes, as well as fresh cut flowers from his own garden.

“Skip’s” paintings span the 1950s through the late 90s. This exhibit will make for a beautiful backdrop to the Friends of the Library’s annual fundraiser,

Bites, Books, and Blooms. “Skip” Szczepanski’s work will be on display in the Community Room at the Gladys E. Kelly Public Library through Oct. 13.

The Dudley Woman’s Club 19th year kick-off event was a wild west success! More than 40 members plus guests gathered at the Mill@French River on Sept. 10 for an evening of games, laughs and comradery while sporting some cowgirl glam. The theme was fun, yet some serious club work unfolded with the awarding of $20,000 in donations to local charities: HANDS (Helping Address the Needs of Dudley Seniors), REAS (Residential Energy Assistance for Seniors), and Stars of the Future. Members also generously donated school and art supplies to the Boys & Girls Club of Webster - Dudley valued at $421. We thank The Mill at French River for hosting our events! Throughout the afternoon, visitors browsed vegetables, perennials, cut flowers and prepared foods on display and available for purchase while enjoying live music by The Bad Tickers.

The event offered residents an opportunity to celebrate Dudley's agricultural roots, support local growers and vendors, and enjoy an afternoon of community activities.

AgriFest was sponsored by the Dudley Agricultural Advisory Commission and the Dudley Recreation Commission.

A limited number of tickets may be sold at the door on the night of the event, but get yours now for $50 at gladyskellylibrary.org, or at the library. You won't want to miss this wonderful evening. There will be door prizes, a 50-50 cash prize, and raffle baskets and even an Ikebana arrangement

Why do the Friends of the Library raise money? They want to keep all of the excellent programs offered by the library free for all children and adults of our community. If you have enjoyed the concerts, yoga classes, book clubs, historical talks, or visits from storybook characters or even from Goose, Webster's famous runaway lizard, please consider supporting this event. Even better, become a Friend yourself.

Can't make it to either the Ikebana demo or the BBB but still want to see the creative displays? The Ikebana arrangements will stay in the library for public viewing during library hours Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 22 & 23, and the BBB's books in bloom will remain on site for everyone to enjoy through the day after the gala—Thursday, September 24th from 9am to 8pm.

TRUST

Through its generous investment in local organizations, the Trust has helped strengthen the fabric of the communities it serves.

Located at 21 North Main St. in Webster, the Church of the Reconciliation has been a place of worship, fellowship, and community service for more than 150 years. In addition to its historic sanctuary, the church's former rectory now serves as Reconciliation House, a sober living residence that provides housing for up to six residents and a live-in house manager.

The church's Fellowship

Hall serves as the heart of parish and community life. Open and in use seven days a week, it hosts two Scouting groups, a daily Alcoholics Anonymous meeting, a women's 12 step meeting, a Narcotics Anonymous gathering, Al-Anon meetings, the monthly Building Bridges luncheon for veterans, Sunday fellowship gatherings, and other community activities.

The replacement of the aging boiler ensures that these vital programs can continue uninterrupted while also allowing the church to expand its outreach and service to the community. Without the support of the Janet Malser Humanities Trust, maintaining this essential community space would have been a significant challenge.

The Church of the Reconciliation extends its heartfelt gratitude to the Trustees of the Janet Malser Humanities Trust for their vision, generosity, and commitment to strengthening our community. Their support will benefit not only our parish but the many individuals, families, veterans, and community organizations who gather in our Fellowship Hall every week.

The church is deeply grateful for this investment in our shared future.
