

Robert Surprenant Memorial sees success in year one

BY JASON BLEAU
VILLAGER CORRESPONDENT

KILLINGLY / BROOKLYN — It's been a successful first year for the Robert Surprenant Memorial Fund founded in honor of a lifelong member of the Brooklyn and Killingly communities to continue his spirit of giving and supporting local community endeavors.

The Robert Surprenant Memorial is actually a larger organization named after the man many affectionately called "Supe" which his daughter Bethany Tucker said was founded in December of 2024 to keep his memory alive. Supe passed away in August of that year and was known for his time as a coach, volunteer, and a one-time member of the Killingly Board of Education. In the year since the organization was founded the funds raised have helped support local youth sports and recreation programs with plans to also contribute to holiday giving initiatives.

Tucker said the organization has grown quickly, holding its first major fundraiser in 2025 called the Bob Supe Classic, a golf tournament held at Foster Country Club, which was a huge success in its first year and is expected to become an annual event. So far the organization has donated money to NECONN soccer, which Supe coached for around 15 years, Killingly youth hoops, the Killingly and Brooklyn summer cands, and Supe's grandkids have also contributed to the cause by holding a lemonade stand with plans to donate the profits to support local holiday toy drives.

After such a successful first year, Tucker said she's proud they have been able to continue her father's spirit of giving.

"A lot of the money we're giving away is going back to youth sports and other community programs," she said. "My dad loved community; he grew up in Brooklyn and went to high school in Killingly and lived here his entire life. We want to keep most of our fundraiser money in the community that he grew up in, and he loved so much."

Proceeds from the golf tournament, which attracted around 136 participants, will also support the American Heart and American Lung Associations. Year two of the event has already been announced for next June. Tucker revealed that they are looking to expand their fundraising efforts possibly with a celebrity bartender night and other concepts yet to be announced.

Two Stop & Shop fundraisers benefit Eastern's resident food pantry this October WILLIMANTIC — Eastern Connecticut State University's food pantry, Shawn's Cupboard, will receive support this October through two Stop & Shop charitable giving programs. Throughout the month, the Willimantic grocery store will donate $1 to the campus pantry for every $2.50 spent on a reusable "Community Bag." In addition, Eastern has been chosen as a nonprofit partner in Stop & Shop's "Bloomin' 4 Good" initiative, which fights hunger statewide by donating $1 for every specially marked $11.99 bouquet of flowers sold in Connecticut stores.

"Eastern utilizes donations to purchase fresh produce and other high-demand items, which keep the shelves in Shawn's Pantry stocked throughout the year," said Michelle Delaney, vice president for Student Affairs. "Every dollar raised will be used to support Eastern students who are experiencing food insecurity."

Shawn's Cupboard is overseen by Eastern's Campus Ministry, which reports steadily increasing usage and visitation among students to the food pantry.

"In the 2024/25 school year, there were a total of 1,327 visits with a total of 8,717 items taken," according to Nancy Brennan, Campus Ministry administrative assistant and Shawn's Cupboard coordinator. "For this fall 2025 semester, we've already had 250 visits with a total of 1,724 items taken."

With three months remaining in the calendar year, the ministry reports 539 unique students who have used Shawn's Cupboard so far in 2025.

"The ultimate reward received from Stop & Shop's generosity is the realization that they are helping to fulfill our Mission Statement," said Brennan. "It is through their generosity that students are getting enough to eat, which makes them able to meaningfully engage in their classes and in society."

Brennan also noted that the Campus Ministry relies on student volunteers and monetary donations to help operate Shawn's Cupboard.

"Without our wonderful benefactors, Shawn's Cupboard would not be able to keep the Cupboard as full or offer as much of a variety of food to our students," she said. "I am very lucky to always have my wonderful student volunteer Zaine Gutierrez-Valenzuela who helps get all the volunteers to staff Shawn's Cupboard, as well as helps shop and keep track of the volunteer hours."

Shawn's Cupboard is located in the Knight House Multifaith Center and is open to any Eastern student experiencing food insecurity.

DANIELSON — At the Borough of Danielson Fire Commissioners' meeting on Sept. 23, Fire Chief Charles Kelleher announced his resignation, effective Oct. 1.

Pomfret School students channel gratitude at Westview

DAYVILLE — A group of students from Pomfret School visited Westview Health Care Center this week to offer a spontaneous, sincere visit to patients and residents.

Westview Therapeutic Recreation Director Louise Taylor was contacted by Pomfret School educators Bobby and Erin Fisher about such an experience to supplement a course they are currently teaching. Mr. Fisher is Pomfret School's Director of Spiritual Life, and Mrs. Fisher is Pomfret School's Director of Wellbeing, and they have set out to teach students about the merits of actionable altruism. Revolving around themes of kindness, acknowledgement, and service, they are leading this particular class through real-world applications of grace and giving in addition to their classroom dialogue.

Mr. and Mrs. Fisher of Pomfret School reached out with a request to sit and talk with Westview patients and residents during lunch time. For many at Westview, the mid-day meal is served in the company of others in the Formal Dining Room where there is always room for a few more friends to pull up a chair. Westview Therapeutic Recreation Director Louise Taylor welcomed our kindred visitors and offered guidance as they found their places among the tables. She pointed out that any sense of fellowship in this setting is valued; encouraging their conversations with helpful suggestions to promote social scenes all across the room.

This good deed by
widely appreciated by

Westview patients, residents, and staff members in turn. Westview is not only thankful for their time commitment, but truly obliged for the genuine sense of presence they brought to our patients and residents at lunch this week. Westview would like to send extra special thanks to Bobby and Erin Fisher for coordinating such a grateful gathering, and for echoing the message of benevolence in our hearts.

Speaking on this visit to Westview, Mr. Fisher outlined the reliably familiar rewards found by blossoming new human connections: "Intergenerational visiting like this—having a moment together to sit alongside somebody who may be older, may be a complete stranger—gives our students the opportunity to be curious as listeners. It helps them to tap into our human capacity to offer kindness, compassion, and to ultimately develop friendships. Surely an experience like this at Westview provides our students an opportunity to deliver some kindness, but I think as we return to school, we'll find that a

A group of 18 people, including students and staff, posing in front of the Westview Health Care Center. The building is a large, light-colored structure with a prominent entrance and a sign that reads "Westview HEALTH CARE CENTER". The group is arranged in two rows, with some people standing on a small step or platform in front of the entrance. The scene is set outdoors on a sunny day with a clear blue sky.

Westview Health Care Center Administrator David T. Panteleakos noted his appreciation for this dually-uplifting visit, commenting, "I am so impressed with Pomfret School for having curriculum that focuses on kindness, giving, and community as areas of study. Those concepts are certainly important to our efforts here at Westview, and we are always happy to share our space with all generations to cultivate sustained compassion in our community.”

Westview Health Care Center is a 103-bed inpatient skilled nursing facility, which includes a distinct and self-contained 28-bed sub-acute short term rehabilitation unit and outpatient physical, occupational and speech therapies including: Sports Medicine, Adolescent/Pediatric, Adult, and Aquatic Outpatient Centers, all dedicated to providing outstanding quality health care services. The Dayville, Connecticut facility is consistently ranked among the top nursing facilities in the nation, according to the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services as well as U.S. News and World Report, consecutively for the past 17 years.

Firefighters respond to a small blaze at Mack's Catering in Thompson on Sept. 21.

JASON BLEAU
VILLAGER CORRESPONDENT

THOMPSON — Fire officials have deemed the cause of a fire at a local eatery in Thompson to be accidental, causing minor damage to the building but otherwise avoiding significant losses.

On Sept. 21, the Quinebaug Fire Department was dispatched to 773 Quinebaug RD., less than a mile from their headquarters, to local eatery Mack's

Catering Service where a structure fire was discovered. Firefighters were joined by mutual aid who helped extinguish the blaze which resulted in significant smoke damage to the interior of the building while the fire itself was contained to the front of the structure and the inside entrance wall. According to a press release from Thompson Fire Marshal James Seney, Jr., the fire was caused by an improperly disposed cigarette.

“After a thorough investigation by the Thompson Fire Marshal’s Office and a representative from the Connecticut State Police Fire and Explosives Investigation Unit, by using physical evidence, witness statements, and surveillance video footage from a nearby business, the fire has been determined to have started in the front of the building at ground level in the dry mulch. The fires ignition was a result of improper disposal of smoking materials onto combustible materials,” Seney said.

The fire started in the front of the building and traveled along the exterior of the main entrance, eventually into the front wooden wall of the structure. The damage impacted a restaurant supply storage area and while the blaze itself was relatively contained, the extended smoke damage stretched further into the structure.

The Thompson Fire Marshall confirmed the property housed Mack's Catering Service which has since reported on social media that they plan to eventually reopen describing the damage as "minor" with repairs to begin immediately. For now, the company is planning to operate out of a food truck and their catering services remain uninterrupted by the incident.

Brooklyn Town Library clock ticks once again

BY LISA BURBANK
DIRECTOR

BROOKLYN TOWN LIBRARY

BROOKLYN — It stopped at 6:24, either a.m. or p.m., sometime before Sept. 18, 1962. We know this because of some archived minutes from a library executive board meeting where repairs to the clock were discussed on that date, and then-president of the board, Eleanor Bergland, offered to have it repaired at her expense. Whether the clock had only recently stopped in 1962, or had been still for some time before this, is unknown.

We also don't know how long the clock has hung on the wall at Brooklyn Town Library. It had been hidden behind a bookshelf when one current staff member first started working here in 2020. As the shelf was dismantled to make way for a new children's room, and mystery paperbacks moved upstairs into the adult fiction section, the beauty of the old timepiece was revealed. It is easy, due to the age of the clock, to assume that the clock has been here since the library took residency at 10 Canterbury Rd. in 1913, but as the old adage states, never assume.

The timepiece, identified as an E. Howard Gallery Clock by horologist Pete Belmore, would have been crafted sometime in the 1880s or 1890s. Though Brooklyn Town Library Association was incorporated in 1893, we lived in the basement of the Brooklyn Town Hall for our first twenty years. Our current building was originally constructed for the Windham County Bank in 1822, later becoming The Windham County National Bank just after the American Civil War in 1865. The Windham County National Bank then moved to Danielson in 1895, and the building became home to Brooklyn Savings Bank sometime after that. When Brooklyn Savings Bank later moved to East Brooklyn in 1913, a group of Brooklyn citizens purchased and donated the building to the library.

Was the clock already here? Did it come with the building, as we assume due to the year of clock's manufacture? Or was it purchased by, or for the library? These questions and more may never be answered.

However, three weeks ago, Pete Belmore, who visited our library as a patron, caught sight of the clock as he passed our children's room. Confidant that he could repair it and bring it back to life again, and after much deliberation with our executive board, Pete removed the face of the clock, took the inner mechanism home to his workshop in Webster, Massachusetts and made good on that promise.

The E. Howard Gallery Clock started its new journey of life at 3:25 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 2, its gentle ticking welcoming patrons to the Brooklyn Town Library after more than six decades of silence. Welcome back, E. Howard!

Autumn’s quiet harvest

October in Northeast Connecticut carries a rhythm that no clock can keep. The mornings are slow to warm, the air smells faintly of wood smoke, and the fields hum with a final burst of effort before winter stills them. Farmers bring in their last loads, but around here, harvest is about far more than crops. It’s the season when the community itself gets gathered in.

Walk through the Quiet Corner and you’ll see how much happens when no one’s really watching. The Thompson Fire Department rakes leaves outside the station between calls. Pomfret seniors stack canned goods for the food pantry. At the Woodstock Fairgrounds, volunteers take down banners and fold tables, already talking about next year. In Brooklyn, scout troops and church youth groups are helping older residents cover storm windows or split firewood before the first frost. None of it makes the front page, but all of it keeps these towns stitched together.

Maybe that’s what defines this corner of Connecticut more than anything else — the instinct to help without needing to be asked, the refusal to let neighbors fend for themselves. It’s not the loud kind of community spirit you find at parades or ribbon-cuttings. It’s quieter, steadier, built from the same hands that mend roofs, pack lunches, and wave from pickup trucks on Route 169.

There’s a lesson in that, especially as the days shorten and the election signs start to sprout beside the pumpkins. The headlines can make the world feel divided, but the work of small towns is cooperative by nature. The person who disagrees with you at a meeting might be the same one who plows your driveway after a storm. The teacher who volunteers on the town green is also the parent coaching Little League on Saturday morning. We depend on each other in ways that don’t fit neatly into slogans or party lines.

The local harvest fairs, library fundraisers, and craft shows filling the October calendar all serve a purpose beyond entertainment. They raise the money that keeps senior lunches running, youth programs afloat, and volunteer departments equipped. When we buy a raffle ticket or toss a few dollars into a donation jar, we’re paying forward the support that makes our communities resilient.

It’s easy to overlook that kind of labor because it isn’t dramatic. There’s no breaking news in a neighbor dropping off soup, or a teacher buying extra supplies for her classroom. But the quiet kindnesses of a small town are what keep the lights on — literally and figuratively. They turn a cluster of roads and ZIP codes into something that can endure a tough winter, or a tough year.

So before the last leaves fall, take a moment to notice the people who make this region what it is: the volunteers who line the fields for the Memorial Day parade, the high-school band that keeps practicing long after sunset, the local boards trying to stretch every tax dollar. Thank them. Support them. And if you can, join them.

Because when the frost comes and the noise of the outside world grows louder, the true harvest of the Quiet Corner won’t be measured in pumpkins or corn stalks. It will be measured in how much we still care about one another — and in how willing we are to keep showing up, season after season, for the place we all call home.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Vote Democratic on Nov. 4!

To the Editor:

There’s good news and bad news in Killingly. The bad news is that the Republican Town Councilors are running Killingly into the ground, wasting our tax dollars while making it harder for our families. Property assessments and taxes have skyrocketed, but the community is seeing little to no benefit. All the Town Council seems to do is hire consultants for tens of thousands of dollars. Our wastewater treatment plant is maxed out, which they knew was a potential problem years ago. But those managing capacity were never held accountable. For years to come, Killingly won’t be able to pursue reasonable economic development because there will be no way to treat the resulting wastewater. Even now no one knows where in the world the money to expand this plant will come from. Just ask at the next Town Council meeting. Finally, the members of our community have had to intervene to make sure Killingly retains its natural beauty and rural character. Now I understand that several years ago the Planning & Zoning board approved a huge warehousing and distribution complex to go in off Westcott Rd., which is being advertised now. I can’t wait to fight my way through a snarl of tractor trailers 24 hours per day as I head to the grocery store. Haven’t you had enough of Republican rule? Isn’t it time for a change? Vote for Jim Rivers, John Labelle, Dave Griffiths and Petros Kostaras for at-large Town Council. The good news is that our Board of Education, where Democrats hold the majority, have improved our kids’ education and mental health enormously in just a couple of years. The graduation rate at Killingly High has risen from 88% to over 93 percent. Chronic absenteeism has been cut almost in half. Test scores are improving across multiple grades. Staff turnover, which was among the highest in the Quiet Corner, is lower. More students report feeling safer at school, and feel they can talk to someone if they are down or feeling anxious. These results have been achieved without busting the budget. (Republicans are now pushing a lie that bullying is up, but just ask them where they got their data - it doesn’t exist.) Please return chair Susan Lannon and board members Misty Murdock and Nelson “Buzz” King to our Board of Ed, and elect Kyle Provencher to join them. Republicans are no longer the party of “fiscal responsibility,” and they ignore or bully Democratic and Independent voices. The Democratic Board of Education is getting fantastic results by collaborating across the aisle with their peers, and by listening to staff, parents and students. Killingly deserves the best in both worlds – Vote row A on Nov. 4. Thanks very much,

Mike Bogdanski has my support

To the Editor:
I am writing to endorse Mike Bogdanski as a candidate for Selectman in the town of Putnam in the upcoming November elections. I have known Mike going back to my days as Mayor of Putnam 1989-1991 and have found him to be a dedicated and successful businessman, a community supporter for numerous organizations, and a person who helped to build character in thousands of young people in Northeastern Connecticut. Mike has served, or is serving, on numerous boards and commissions over the years. He has found the time and energy to serve on the Putnam Zoning Board of Appeals, the Inland – Wetlands Commission, the Economic Development Commission and the Redevelopment Agency. He has provided countless hours to the Aspinock Historical Society and as a member of the NE CT Chamber of Commerce to name but a few. Mike has the values and community spirit that make him an ideal Selectman:

We are in a war...against despotism

To the Editor:

Well, the Destruction Duo had their meeting of the Brass, and it was a resounding – oh, what’s the word - bore, proof of stupidity, wasted millions of dollars? Almost everything said had been said before or could have been done on-line. The most frightening thing Hegseth said was his emphasis on war. The message was unmistakable — a return to war-fighting and preparation for winning wars as the main mission of the Military. The Administration’s increasing use of the word War is only meant to inflame and intimidate other countries and US citizens. At the meeting, Donnie Despot said, “I’ve never walked into a room so silent. If you applaud, applaud.” He doesn’t know Military protocol prohibits applause to prevent expression of partisanship and politics. He also said, “You can do anything you want. If you don’t like what I’m saying you can leave the room.” Yeah, right. And I’m sure the Generals and Admirals hung on every word about how Despot goes down stairs slowly instead of “Da Da Da Da Da Bop” Bop’ing down like Obama. Another incoherent rambling was, “When I have a general and I have to sign for a General because we have beautiful paper, the gorgeous paper, I said throw a little more gold on it. They deserve it. I want to use the big beautiful firm paper.” Such brilliance certainly invites invoking the 25th Amendment. Despot also said something clearly un-Constitutional and impeachable. “The military brass is about America’s number one enemy: Americans. Last month, I signed an executive order to provide training for a quick reaction force that can help quell civilian disturbances. This is gonna be a big thing for the people in this room because it’s the enemy from within and we have to handle it before it gets out of control.” OK, yes, we are in a war after all, viz. the Constitution, the rule of law and a society built on trying to improve our lives against this Fascist cadre of Despot, Miller, Ludnick, Johnson, Hegseth, Project 2025 and a corrupt Supreme Court.

Brooklyn’s future is on the ballot — your vote matters!

To the Editor:

Too often, we think the big elections are the ones that matter most. But the truth is, municipal elections hit closest to home. They decide who fixes our roads, funds our schools, and sets our local tax rates. In the 2023 municipal election, less than 30 percent of Brooklyn residents went to the polls to vote, below the state average which was roughly 33 percent. (CT Mirror) That means just a handful of voters decided how our town is run - our taxes, our roads, our schools, our safety. We can change that this year. This municipal election, Brooklyn Democrats have a strong slate of candidates who care deeply about our community and its future. Brooklyn voters will be electing candidates for:
First Selectman: Joe Bellavance
Board of Selectmen: Sherri Vogt
Board of Finance: Bob Smanik and Rick Ives
Board of Education: Melissa Perkins-Banas
Board of Assessment Appeals: Susan

Wasstrom These Democratic candidates are ready to lead with proactive leadership, fiscal responsibility, and a commitment to quality education and town services. To learn more about these candidates go to: brooklynctdems.com. Early voting starts this month on Oct. 20 and runs through Nov. 2 at the Clifford B. Green Building. Election Day is Nov. 4, with polls open from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the Brooklyn Middle School. You can register to vote online or check your voter registration status at MyVote.ct.gov. Every vote matters, especially in local elections, where outcomes are often decided by just a handful of ballots. If you want to see a town government that reflects your values, make your plan to vote and encourage your friends and neighbors to do the same. Working together we can make a difference in Brooklyn. Vote Democrat. Vote Row A. Your town. Your vote. Your voice is your power.

U.S. Navy!

In the summer of 1803, six American warships sliced through the Atlantic, crewed by fewer than 2,000 barely trained men—farm boys, fishermen, and dockhands. The newly formed United States was broke, its Navy skeletal, its trade raided by Barbary pirates from North Africa, bleeding off an estimated 20 percent of American maritime commerce. Their orders: reach Tripoli and challenge a rogue regime that extorted even the greatest empires. Few expected them to return.

For generations, European powers had bought peace with gold—but as Barbary raids on American merchants escalated, President Thomas Jefferson faced a choice: submit, or fight with a navy that barely existed.

When the Americans arrived, the enemy was waiting—light, fast, and ruthless. They were outnumbered, but not outmatched.

The Americans trapped them in port, daring the pirates to come out and fight. However, just as momentum was building, disaster struck. The Philadelphia, one of the strongest of the American warships, ran aground off Tripoli and was seized with all 307 aboard. The captured ship was refloated, turned against its own fleet, and now flew the flag of the enemy— one of America’s greatest warships, lost in a single day.

Refusing to let the ship be used against them, they launched one of the boldest raids in naval history: Under the cover of night, disguised as Maltese sailors, they floated into harbor on a captured pirate vessel, boarded the Philadelphia, and turned her into a floating inferno.

The raid ignited American morale, but the war dragged on—until one man dared to rewrite the story. Enter William Eaton—former US consul to Tunis, burning with vengeance, armed with a wild plan. Eaton’s target? Derna—a coastal city, lightly defended and exposed to the desert. Eaton would cross the sands and strike it from behind. The goal was to show that the US could do what no European power dared: land troops in North Africa, raise an army, and defeat the pirates on their own soil.

In March 1805, William Eaton assembled a ragtag force of 8 U.S. Marines, 40 Greek and Italian mercenaries, about 100 Arab cavalry, and scattered Bedouin fighters.

Fewer than 500 men—fractured by language, loyalty, and purpose—marched forward. They crossed hundreds of miles of desert where water vanished, men hallucinated, and camels collapsed in blinding sandstorms. Sun scorched by day, the cold bit at night. Food ran short, tempers flared, tribal help deserted, and the campaign nearly collapsed over broken promises.

The road to Derna was carved through hell.

After seven weeks, they arrived at the gates ready for war. Eaton attacked as US warships unleashed cannon fire from offshore. The fighting was brutal—gunfire ripped through tents, smoke choked the hillside, and Eaton was shot through the wrist, but pressed on with his arm in a sling. After fierce close combat, Derna fell, and for the first time in history, the Stars and Stripes flew triumphantly on foreign soil. It was this moment that inspired the famous line still sung today in the Marine Corps Hymn: ‘to the shores of Tripoli’.

The victory stunned the Barbary world. Eaton marched across a wasteland and took a city no one thought could fall. The pirates’ resolve broke, and they signed a peace agreement within weeks, and the American prisoners from the Philadelphia walked free. What began as a desperate gamble became one of the boldest military feats in the early history of the United States.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Promises made, promises kept

To the Editor:

First, I would like to point out the hypocrisy in Ms. Arends’ letter on the government shutdown. Every single Republican in the House and Senate voted in favor of keeping the Government open with the exception of Rand Paul. Ms. Arends quoted Senators Murphy and Blumenthal on how bad a shutdown would be residents of Connecticut and the rest of the country. Yet when it came time to vote both Connecticut Senators voted to shut the Government down despite their own warnings. I guess that represents leadership to some people. There have been 319 homicides in Chicago this year to date. Someone here praised Governor Pritzker because he refuses to allow the National Guard to help protect the people of Chicago. I bet the 319 families of the dead would have welcomed the help. It that leadership?

When I read some letters here, I am reminded of the quote “Any fool can criticize, condemn and complain – and most fools do.» Attributed to many different people. Each week, someone is attacking President Trump no matter what he does. What is always missing is solutions. The latest complaints are about First Amendment rights. At the end of his first term, Trump was banned from Twitter, Facebook and other social media platforms. Anyone critical of the Covid vaccine was de-platformed. The Biden administration pressured social media to silence anyone critical of their administration. The New York Post was banned from social media for reporting

Michelle Murphy will be an asset to Killingly

To the Editor:

My mother and grandmother were very involved in politics in the town of North Smithfield. They both supported the Democratic Party. I, myself, have never been very interested in politics. As time goes on, I realize there are things I like and dislike about both parties. I strongly believe that few things in life are all black and white. I believe much of life is grey. I feel politics should be based more on supporting policies and not parties.

I would like to endorse Michelle Murphy (Shelly) as Killingly Town Councillor at Large. I have lived in Killingly for 11 years. My friend Shelly is running for Killingly Town Councilor at Large.

I will vote for Shelly not only because she is my friend, but because she is passionate and capable in everything she does. I believe in her.

I met Shelly after the loss of her brother several years ago. Shelly and her brother share many wonderful and kindhearted qualities; both extremely hard workers that would give you the shirt off their backs and the last dollar in their pocket without ever looking for anything in return. Knowing the Murphys has been a blessing in my life.

Putnam’s future will be safe in Dave Coderre’s hands

To the Editor:

My name is Judy Rovero, and for many years, I was proud to stand by my late husband, Danny Rovero, as he served the Town of Putnam as Mayor. Danny dedicated his life to our town, always looking for ways to move our community forward. He was a lifelong Democrat, and he believed deeply in the values of our party.

But Danny also believed that good ideas and strong leadership transcend party lines. That is why I want to speak to you today about a man my husband respected and mentored: Dave Coderre.

Danny and Dave worked together for years. They did not always agree on every issue, but Danny saw in Dave a dedicated, forward-thinking leader with a true passion for our town’s future. He trusted Dave’s judgement on the Hunter Biden laptop story.

Most non-biased people realized Joe Biden was not all there. Yet some we ready to give him another four years as long as that kept Trump out of office. We now know Biden had a a note card reminding him who Hillary Clinton was. When inflation hit 9 percent in 2022, the Biden apologists said “It is a world-wide issue - nothing Biden can do.” On the wars in Gaza and Ukraine, “Biden didn’t start those wars - what can he do?” And sadly, as Biden opened the border and let in 10 million illegals, the response was “The border is secure” and then “Only Congress can close the border.” Trump did what they said could not be done. That is leadership.

When Trump announced his tariffs, we were told it would cause high inflation and even a recession. Someone here declared our allies would not stand by the US in light of the tariffs. How wrong was that? Trump has used trade policy to end wars - Israel and Iran; Pakistan and India, Rwanda and the Democratic Republic of Congo; Thailand and Cambodia, Armenia and Azerbaijan. He is still working on Gaza and Ukraine but I am confident he will end those as well. Despite resistance he is also going to make Portland and Chicago safe as well. Someone said he would not go into a red state. Well, he sent troops to Memphis. That is leadership. It is nice to have a real President running the White House instead of an auto-pen.

Shelly contributes so much of herself to the things she believes in. Whether it is her community, her church, her job, the people she is close to, strangers and stray animals alike. She is selfless in her efforts to help in any way she possibly can. She has this passion, because she has had to work so hard to get where she is in life, overcoming several obstacles and hardships.

Shelly is one of the most authentic people I have ever met. She wins people over simply by being her true self. Knowing Shelly as I do, I believe she can offer support and knowledge that will aid our community to maintain all that is good, and help make the things that are working well, work even better. She has strong convictions, yet she is fair and able to listen and view situations from all different perspectives. She isn’t running for office to impress anybody. She is running because she wants to help the community. I know that Shelly will do what is ethically and morally correct, regardless of the situation. I know she will be an asset to the community, in the same way that she is an asset and a dear friend to me. This is why I endorse Michelle Murphy (Shelly) for Killingly Town Council at Large.

I know in my heart that if Danny were here today, he would be endorsing Dave Coderre for Mayor. He would recognize that Dave has the same selfless dedication and commitment to moving Putnam forward that he did.

Today, I am proud to give my personal endorsement to Dave Coderre. He has the experience, the vision and the passion to lead our town. I ask you to join me in supporting him and ensuring that Putnam’s future is in the best of hands.

When does political spin become misrepresentation?

To the Editor:

When does political spin turn into outright misrepresentation of facts? In a recent communication to voters, a Killingly BOE Republican member claimed that bullying has increased since “the Democrats took over.” That’s a serious charge — but also a false one. It’s a typical anti-public school scare tactic from a faction that doesn’t support quality public education.

Survey data from both students and teachers comparing 2022 to 2025 show no rise in bullying. In fact, the results point to stable improved perceptions of safety and respect in our schools. Facts, it seems, are stubborn things.

Let’s also clear up the “Democrats took over” myth. The current Killingly Board of Education has five Republicans, three Democrats, and one unaffiliated member. The working majority is actually a bipartisan coalition — one Republican, one unaffiliated, and three Democrats — who have been trying to focus on real educational priorities rather than national culture-war distractions.

That coalition deserves our continued support. They’ve shown that cooperation, not confrontation, gets things done. By backing Susan Lannon, Misty Murdock, Nelson King, and Kyle Provencher, Killingly voters can help keep the focus where it belongs — on students, teachers, and the quality of education in our town, not on political grandstanding.

Our schools deserve leaders who care more about students than slogans — and who remember that local education should be about learning, not ideology.

Are term limits really the solution?

To the Editor:

As I read Mr. Ed DeLuca’s letter in the Villager on Oct. 3, I was very impressed with his first two paragraphs.

We all complain about our members of Congress, yet we keep re-electing them again and again. Mr. DeLuca calls for term limits as the best solution, but is it? There were no constitutional term limits on the president until the 22nd amendment was ratified on Feb. 27, 1951. It was the Republican Party in Congress that pushed for this amendment after Franklyn Delano Roosevelt was elected to an unprecedented fourth term, a term that he never got to complete due to his death in office on April 12, 1945. His Vice President, Harry Truman, assumed the role of President, and then went on to win reelection in 1948. The recently ratified 22nd Amendment prevented him from running again in 1952. So for 20 years, the people chose to keep the Roosevelt/Truman administrations. The Republican Party took that power away from the people in 1951, because they did not want the people to be able to keep electing the president of their choosing. Of course, in ratifying the 22nd, they did not include term limits for members of Congress, because that would be like shooting themselves in the foot.

So, why did we end up with 20 years of the same administration? Well, among other things, Roosevelt got us through the great depression, gave us Social Security, and after Dec. 7, 1941, when the Japanese bombed our Naval Base at Pearl Harbor, laid the framework to end both the war in the South Pacific, and the war in Europe. The people did not wish to change ships, they were happy.

Many of us today want to see term limits imposed on members of Congress. But what we all forget is that the most powerful term limit of all rests in the hands of the American Voter. Every two years we have the power to fire the entire House of Representatives and 1/3 of the Senate. We choose not to. Do we really want to take that choice away from the voters? Mr. DeLuca does. To implement term limits, is to remove the choice of the people to elect their own representatives. If the majority of the people want that, they can push for an amendment to the constitution.

I would propose a different solution. First, there should be no pensions for elected officials, except the President. They can only have Social Security and a personal retirement plan, similar to a 401K. They can only contribute to mutual funds, and cannot purchase any individual stocks or bonds while in office. Their health care plan ends with the end of their service. They cannot work as lobbyists until they have been out of office for 12 years. This removes many incentives to remain in office for more than two or three terms. Then, any incumbent protections, like access to ballots, must be removed. We do not have a democracy when we only have two choices. Then, if they wish to continue to serve, and the people want them, then, like now, we end up with the government we deserve.

But the irony in Mr. DeLuca’s letter is, he does not mention the push by Republican members of Congress to work around the 22nd Amendment in order to allow Donald Trump to run for a third term, but would ban Barack Obama from doing the same. Much like in 1951, they want the game rigged in their favor.

In Mr. DeLuca’s third paragraph, he reverts back to the person I’m used to reading. He displays some faulty memory, or he only listened to a single news source. There were many people, both in congress, and on broadcast media that complained about the mass deportations in the Clinton and Obama administrations, and not all from right wing sources, but NPR and prominent democrats. But another major difference is that Clinton and Obama did not send masked marauders into cities, elementary schools, and churches. They did not split up families. They did not attempt to violate the 14th Amendment to the Constitution. They did not deport people to countries other than their country of origin. They targeted specific individuals, using a scalpel, rather than a cluster bomb to root out actual criminal aliens. They did not just go after people with dark tans who spoke Spanish. There is a clear difference between the two methodologies.

Local student shines on runway at New York Fashion Week

WEBSTER — Carter Meehan, a fifth-grade student at St. James School, is already turning heads in the entertainment world. The young actor and model recently took the spotlight at New York Fashion Week, walking the runway in the Rookie USA "RookieKids Runway on Broadway" fashion show.

Meehan was selected to model for the debut of 3Brand, the clothing line founded by NFL quarterback Russell Wilson and recording artist Ciara. The exclusive, invite-only event drew a star-studded audience, including Wilson and Ciara themselves, along with celebrities such as Busta Rhymes, Ice-T and Coco Austin, Lil' Kim, Josh Hart, Adrienne Bailon, JWOWW, and Dascha Polanco.

This isn't Meehan's first time in the spotlight. He has already built an impressive résumé in television, film, and commercials. His work includes the role of Kyle in Season 14 of "Blue Bloods," as well as appearances in "Dexter: New Blood," "Evil Lives Here," and the holiday movie "A Royal Christmas Holiday." PUTNAM — The Greater Putnam Interfaith Council and community members recently gathered at the Living Faith United Methodist Church to celebrate International Peace Day.

A GPIC tradition for more than 20 years, the program featured members of various faith groups offering prayers, readings and music.

This year the GPIC Peace Pole was transferred from its most recent location with the Daughters of the Holy Spirit to the Methodist Church. Made by GPIC member Steve Champ, the pole has the words "May Peace Prevail On Earth" in eight languages representing local nationalities. Through the years it has been placed in various locations.

The program ended with the singing of "Let There Be Peace on Earth," followed by refreshments and fellowship.

International Peace Day was established in 1981 by the United Nations General Assembly. Two decades later, in 2001, it was unanimously voted to designate it as a period of non-violence and ceasefire. This year's theme is "Act Now for a Peaceful World."

Donahue Industries pledges $10,000 to Northeast CT Education Foundation in support of Advanced Manufacturing Technology Center Fund

Director of the AMTC Steve LaPointe, Donahue Industries President Kyle Wojcik, CT State Community College Quinebaug Valley Director of Institutional Advancement Monique Wolanin, Donahue Industries VP of Operations Joe Draleau, and Donahue Industries team members Scott Macleod & Jennifer Rudzinski.

REGION — On Tuesday, Sept. 16, members of Donahue Industries visited the Advanced Manufacturing Technology Center (AMTC) at CT State Community College Quinebaug Valley. They presented a check to the Northeast CT Education Foundation (NCEF) for the AMTC Fund which supports AMTC students and the program at Quinebaug Valley.

The story of how this donation came to pass is an excellent example of how this region thrives through collaboration and connectivity. After initially learning about Donahue Industries through an ad on WINY Radio, AMTC Director Steve LaPointe contacted the company's President Kyle Wojcik and VP of Operations Joe Draleau to invite them for a tour of the Center. Both were impressed with the facility and the programs offered.

Donahue Industries President Kyle Wojcik commented on what a valuable resource the AMTC is to his business and other manufacturers, noting, "When we first visited the AMTC at Quinebaug Valley, we were blown away by how amazing the facility is, how professionally it is run, and the fundamental skills that students learn during their training. Knowing that an employee came from the AMTC instills the confidence that we are getting the best candidate for the job, someone who is prepared and professional." AMTC Director Steve LaPointe noted the importance of partnerships between the college and local manufacturers, "Connecting the students we serve with our business and industry partners is crucial to growing the pipeline of skilled employees to benefit our community."

The mission of the Northeast CT Education Foundation is to provide scholarships and other financial support to residents of Northeast Connecticut who want to pursue higher education. To learn more about the NCEF, visit www.necteducationfoundation.org. The message was clear: the United States would not just send ships; it would send men, cross deserts, storm walls, and bleed on foreign ground to defend its people and principles.

This October 13th marks the 250th anniversary of the United States Navy—born in uncertainty, and defined by resolve.

From the shores of Tripoli to every ocean since, the US Navy, along with the US Marine Corps and the entire American military, has stood as a shield for freedom and a symbol of courage. To all who have served and continue to serve: Thank You.

Today, we face new adversaries—One nation with a fleet much larger than our own. Once again, we may be outnumbered, but we will never be out-matched.

Like Eaton before us, we'll rise to meet the challenge. May God bless the USA!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Everyone has a story worth listening to

To the Editor:

So often now, we hear how “divided” and “polarized” our population is over political differences or candidates or office-holders. Now that we are moving up toward local elections, it has been refreshing in my town of Thompson to notice that, so far, the candidates have treated each other with respect and friendliness on a personal level, while still articulating where their positions might differ. I hope that continues until election day and beyond. It might become a model for the future, as more and more voters realize the truth of what my Uncle Arthur Terwilliger said during my growing-up years: “We can disagree without being disagreeable.” I am so grateful that the adults around us never allowed their differing opinions or values to descend to the levels we are now subject to daily, especially on the federal level.

How to explain to young people who are just now learning about voting and politics that polarization and division not only are not necessary to govern competently, but that it is actually harmful to our nation to have its political leadership label and politicize everything? So, what has been politicized? The COVID pandemic; opinions of singers, artists and authors; whether or not women and people targeted by racism are worth as much as white men; gun ownership; immunization for infants; curricula in schools and colleges; immigration law and policy; how the military and National Guard should be used; sports teams; the brand of car you drive; and other opinions or supposed indications of whether you are Right or Left.

There are actually people who have assumed they know that I am a “deranged leftist” because one opinion I have posted online or maybe in one of these letters to the Editor lines up with their idea of what all leftists are like. In reality, I have found that most of us are much more complex than that, and that our beliefs are much more likely based upon our personal experience than on whether or not we agree with a political figure or party. Life is not as simple as black or white and nothing in between.

So, how do you find out what people truly believe or support? It is simple, but all too often lost in the chaos of talking over each other, walking away from people around whom you feel uncomfortable, taking offense at careless or ill-thought-out wording, or conversations that are loaded down with feelings. Another quote from Uncle Arthur: “The good Lord gave us two ears and one mouth for a reason.” Listening to each other can make all the difference in defusing polarization. I don’t mean just not talking while someone else is speaking. I mean truly listening and not reactively composing your responses or arguments while another person tells you their experience or opinions.

This can be very hard to do: give your full attention to someone who is spouting ideas that you cannot abide or who is in the throes of anger, frustration or confusion. To truly show interest in what that person has to say and let them complete their thoughts, even to offer encouragement like: «and how did that experience affect you?» «what kind of help do you need with that?» «tell me more about what that meant to you.” or “I’m really glad that you can tell me what your experience has been.” We really can learn so much from one another by listening. And I have found that very often, when the person is finished talking to an interested listener, you may then be asked what your own experience or opinion is. You know, like a respectful, human conversation where people can actually connect with each other.

I think it is possible for each of us to decide what our own standards are for interactions with both strangers and with people we know have opinions or beliefs that do not line up with our own. And if those beliefs involve feelings of superiority or justification for cruelty to other people, I have found that it usually means there is something frightening or confusing, misunderstood or just plain ugly in that person’s past experience. Words are not the same as actions. Words have power, but only if we allow them to. If someone hurts my feelings, I could just tell myself that the person is having a bad day and I look like a safe target. These are all difficulties that we encounter in human relationships. Because we are all human and no one is perfect. (Except my mother, of course. Oh, and maybe Uncle Arthur.) But I think that it is worth it to try and figure out how to peacefully and respectfully interact and talk with each other even though media reports surround us with invective, trash-talk and blatant attempts to divide us for the benefit of someone who does not care what happens to us.

Suppose we all decided to just get along with each other because we have much more in common than not? That everyone has a story worth listening to? Agreement is not a requirement. Maybe worth a try.

Respectfully,
CLAUDIA TERWILLIGER ALLEN

community. I believe that a broader perspective on school finance, including how highly successful school systems operate and their associated costs can help illuminate the district’s needs and the expenses involved. We should avoid blame and focus on data and needs. My role is not only to ask but also to clearly explain our requests and connect budget needs to a vision, a goal, and a necessity. Therefore, I am committed to working with our Board of Education to develop a strategic plan that aligns with our vision and shared goals, guiding our district’s budget decisions. I believe this demonstrates transparency and responsible stewardship.

In my brief time here, I have been thoroughly impressed with every member of the WPS staff I have met, and I am confident that our collaborative approach will bring significant benefits and foster pride within our community. At its core, a high-quality education should create opportunities and empower all students to reach their hopes and dreams. When the school district has clear direction and vision, this roadmap for success will inspire confidence and build a partnership where our school’s success and our community’s success are closely connected. We have an amazing staff, incredible students and families, an outstanding Board of Education, and Boards of Finance and Selectmen that care deeply and work collaboratively to support our Woodstock community. Together, we can make this happen!

I believe that collaboration, active listening, and building trust through clear, honest, and multidirectional communication are essential. Thank you again for supporting Woodstock’s students and schools. I hope you will continue to partner with us as we take the next step toward a new level of excellence in our district. Thank you for the privilege of serving as Superintendent of Woodstock Public Schools. I look forward to working with you!

Respectfully submitted,

I grew up in a family that was very active in church. As a toddler, I heard the Bible stories. Preachers and Missionaries routinely shared stories that built my faith. Whenever someone in our family got sick, we prayed for healing. I was blessed to grow up as a believer. I had no doubt that God could heal. Before I ventured into high school and college where people began to express unbelief, I thought it was normal to believe that God healed. I personally witnessed many healings.

One of the most dramatic healings I saw with my own eyes as a teen, happened on a Sunday night at our church. A teenager that my family routinely picked up for church came to church that night with a cast on his ankle. I don’t remember if he had broken or fractured it, but it was in a hard cast, and he hobbled into church on crutches that night. We had a powerful move of God during the service and his faith was inspired. He began to ask God to heal his foot. Eventually he was so confident that God had heard his prayer that he removed is cast and tenderly put his foot down. Realizing that God had done the healing he had prayed for, he began walking and then dancing in the altar area. When we took him home that night, he was not using his crutches.

But I also had a very different ferent experience in those growing up years. When I was eight, something happened that jarred my young faith. I had a friend who was very close to my age who attended our church. His name was Mitch and he had diabetes. Mitch had some diabetic complications and became sick. I remember being told he was very sick. So, when we visited his home, I was not allowed into his room. But I heard my parents and his as they gathered around his bed and began calling out to God for a miracle. I expected their prayers to be answered, but a few days later my mother told me that Mitch had died. That was a lot to process.

So, which is it? “Does God heal, or doesn’t He?” “Why should we pray for healing?” Those are fair questions. Here are a few truths that I keep in mind when I am trying to understand this topic:

God wants to heal and told us to pray for healing. If we never pray, no one ever gets healed.

Believers are not naive. We are not supposed to hide our head in the sand and pretend God will make everything turn out smooth.

Believers should not create a false narrative in order to protect our faith. We should not make up stories of healings that don’t really happen.

We don’t have to make excuses for God. If he chooses not to heal, he is still God.

The truth is that God heals. The Bible tells us that we are healed by His stripes and we are encouraged to ask for healing. Physical healing was a huge part of Jesus and the Disciples’ ministries. There are many scriptures that bear that out. Here are two:

Jesus saw the huge crowd as he stepped from the boat, and he had compassion on them and healed their sick. – Matthew 14:14

They begged him to let the sick touch at least the fringe of his robe, and all who touched him were healed. – Matthew 14:36

The Bible makes it clear that God is the one who decides whether or not we are healed. It also teaches that sickness and death are not the worst things that can happen to someone. But it clearly demonstrates that God is a healer, and that it never hurts to ask. I’ve seen it happen many times with my own eyes!

Executives: How the Big Beautiful Bill Act affects your compensation and financial planning

The One Big Beautiful Bill Act (OBGBA) has introduced some of the most meaningful changes to executive financial planning in years. For high earners, it brings larger tax savings, new opportunities for equity and benefits planning, and—perhaps most importantly—long-term stability in the tax code. Here’s a closer look at what this all means for executives and their financial strategies.

Bigger tax savings for executives

One of the most immediate benefits is the expansion of the State and Local Tax (SALT) deduction. The cap has jumped from $10,000 to $40,000 for households earning under $500,000. In high-tax states like Connecticut, New York, and California, that can translate into $7,500 to $12,000 in annual savings. For many executives, this reduces effective tax rates by two to three percentage points—a meaningful bump in take-home pay.

OBGBA also makes permanent several provisions from the 2017 Tax Cuts and Jobs Act, including lower marginal tax rates for high earners and the 20% deduction for qualified business income. Together, these changes provide a predictable tax environment that executives can plan around for the long haul.

Equity and deferred compensation opportunities

That stability is especially important when it comes to stock options, restricted stock units, and deferred compensation. With tax rates now locked in, executives can confidently design long-term strategies for exercising options, diversifying concentrated stock positions, or scheduling distributions from nonqualified deferred compensation plans. Extra cash flow from the SALT deduction makes it easier to fund these strategies without straining liquidity.

More room for benefits and perks

While OBGBA doesn’t directly change the rules for Health Savings Accounts, the additional cash flow it generates makes maxing them out far more achievable. HSAs continue to be one of the most powerful tools available, combining upfront deductions with tax-free growth and withdrawals for medical expenses.

The rising cost of healthcare also makes executive wellness benefits—such as physicals and comprehensive programs—more valuable. And with more cash available to contribute, flexible spending accounts can play a bigger role too, with less worry about the “use it or lose it” rules.

Estate and succession planning

For wealth transfer, OBGBA’s combination of stable tax rates and higher after-tax cash flow opens new doors. Executives can pursue more consistent annual gifting programs, leverage grantor trust structures with greater confidence, and strengthen charitable giving strategies.

Those with business ownership or side ventures should also pay attention to how the Act affects succession planning. Buy-sell agreement funding, insurance strategies, and business valuations may all shift in light of the new environment.

Putting extra cash to work

For many executives, the expanded SALT deduction alone frees up thousands of dollars a year. That money can be put to work in a number of ways: maxing out retirement contributions, building stronger emergency reserves, upgrading insurance coverage, or accelerating debt repayment. The key is to deploy it strategically, rather than letting it disappear into everyday spending.

Geography also plays a role. By making high-tax states more financially competitive, OBGBA may influence career mobility, retention decisions, and even real estate planning.

Next steps

For immediate impact, executives should consider adjusting payroll withholding to capture SALT benefits throughout the year, rather than waiting for a refund. Reviewing compensation packages for restructuring opportunities is also smart. Looking further ahead, the certainty OBGBA provides makes it possible to build

Your support for our schools is appreciated

To the Editor:

On behalf of Woodstock Public Schools, I would like to extend my sincere gratitude to the community for its ongoing support of our schools. As your new Superintendent, it is both my duty and privilege to communicate openly and frequently with all Woodstock stakeholders and community members.

It is essential that every resident, whether you have students in our schools or not, receives regular updates on the direction, progress, and priorities of Woodstock Public Schools. To that end, I invite all community members to sign up for district communication using the Woodstock Town Hall site: <https://www.woodstockct.gov/subscribe>. Enter your email. Then click in the Board of Education box under News or Announcements. This will help taxpayers and residents stay informed about important events, school news, and opportunities for involvement.

One such opportunity is the development of a new district vision. The voices of our entire community will help shape this vision. I hope you will participate in this process, and I look forward to meeting with you. Let’s find a time to connect! Whether you’re a parent, grandparent, alumnus, business owner, elected official, or concerned citizen, your input is extremely valuable, and I want to hear from you. I believe that, together, we can truly reach our full potential.

As we strive for exceptional educational results, I recognize that increased budgets must be paired with greater accountability and transparency. As a district, we are committed to ensuring that every dollar spent yields strong academic outcomes and is managed in a responsible manner. This requires clear expectations and open communication. We need to share the WPS story, highlighting and celebrating successes while acknowledging areas where we may have fallen short. Trust, honesty, and transparency form the foundation of this relationship, with a genuine commitment to working together in the best interest of our students and

Did you know that there was a Major League umpire who came from Danielson, Connecticut? If the name Frank Dascoli comes to mind, you are right. He umpired at a time when the National and American Leagues each had their own umpires (no interleague play). His first National League game was on July 4, 1948, and his final game was on Aug. 9, 1961. He umpired 2,056 major league games, three World Series, and two All Star games. Dascoli was born Dec. 26, 1913 in Canterbury, Connecticut, lived in Danielson, died Aug. 11, 1990 and was interred in Holy Cross Cemetery in Danielson. He was a 1931 graduate of Killingly High School and was inducted into the Killingly High School Alumni Athletic Association Hall of Fame in 2015. (https://www.baseball-almanac.com/players/umpire.php?p=-dascofr88; findagrave).

Two major league baseball players also had connections to Killingly High School: Roger LaFrancois and Bruce Boisclair. Roger LaFrancois was born in 1956 in Norwich, and was drafted by the Boston Red Sox in 1977. “LaFrancois was the catcher who worked all 33 innings of ‘The Longest Game’ for Pawtucket, the first 32 innings played on April 18 (and 19, since it ran until 4:07 a.m.) and resumed on June 23. Pawtucket won, 3-2. LaFrancois was 2-for-8 in the game.” He caught for the Boston Red Sox in 1982. Although his major league career was brief, he continued to play, coach and manage baseball teams. Some may remember when he was at Killingly High School. Roger spoke about his career; ‘After my playing days’ he said, I had a long career in coaching. I took a couple of years off. I did one year of teaching physical education at a high school...He also did some coaching and recruiting work with the Cape Cod League in 1986-87. ‘My first [managing] job was in 1988 with the Montreal Expos, a short-season club in Jamestown, N.Y. We had a heck of a team. I had four or five guys on that team who ended up playing in the big leagues — Marquis Grissom and Wilfredo Cordero. That was my introduction to [managing in] pro ball and I had a pretty good club.’ The team was 49-27... Over the years, he has also been involved in a considerable number of philanthropic and community organizations, helping raise money for the Special Olympics and to help fight ALS, and for 10 years he was a committee member with the Connecticut Sports Foundation. For nearly 20 years, he was chairman of a fundraising sports auction for Day Kimball Hospital, which raised over $300,000 for pediatric programs. His primary focus now will likely revolve around a very successful annual event he runs. In 2003, he founded the World Baseball and Softball Coaches Clinics at the Mohegan Sun Resort in Connecticut, which attracts more than 2,000 coaches each year.” For more from this nice write-up read Bill Nowlin’s article at https://sabr.org/biopros/person/roger-lafrancois/.

Bruce Boisclair was another pro baseball player with Killingly connections. I’ve run out of room to write about him in this column so will continue with him next week.

spending two solid hours testing their endurance while a group of roughly 20 bicyclists took to the streets for a 30-mile ride of their own through Putnam. The day also included a youth fun run organized through a partnership with Northeast Opportunities for Wellness.

Hale YMCA Wellness Director Cindy Nowlan explained the Livestrong initiative is a 12-week program for cancer survivors and those currently fighting cancer to put a focus on their health and wellbeing. Many continue their involvement with the YMCA beyond the course finding a sense of community among their fellow survivors and fighters and the many patrons of the center.

“It’s that connection with other people that are going through the same thing that’s so important,” Nowlan said. “Today we have a lot of our survivors out here riding and volunteering. We have signs up so people can read all of their stories. It is the most fulfilling program we can possibly offer.”

Jennifer Looney, Executive Director of the Hale YMCA, explained that while the Ride for Wellness is very fitness focused, the mission goes well beyond just riding bikes for a cause.
