Webster sets five focus areas for Strategic Master Plan

WEBSTER — Webster's Strategic Master Plan Committee (SMPC) has finished gathering information and community feedback and is moving into the next phase of Plan development. Over the last several months, the Committee reviewed relevant town plans and evaluated Webster's strengths and opportunities for improvement. Local businesses, government leaders, and community members expressed their views about Webster and its future through focus groups, a community survey, and interviews.

Five areas on which to focus the Plan emerged from this effort. The Committee now is developing strategic goals and objectives for them. Thanks go to all who took the time to share their ideas with the SMPC.

Information gathered provided valuable information. In general, there was a call for Webster to make better use of its resources, strengthen its economy, and help people feel more connected to the community. Business participants expressed confidence in Webster's potential for economic growth, pointing to its affordability, regional location on a major highway, the Webster lake, existing businesses, and workforce resources. They called for strengthening business support, attracting investment and jobs, and improvements to commercial areas—particularly the Downtown. They also emphasized leadership, coordination and collaboration, well maintained and safe commercial areas, streamlined business processes, and consistent follow through. Community participants expressed a strong attachment to Webster, including its lake, history, public services, and local organizations. They identified opportunities for a more vibrant and appealing Downtown, better transportation connections, and more recreation and community participation. Their feedback emphasized building on what Webster already offers while making it easier for people to take part in community life. Government participants highlighted dedicated employees who respond to residents' needs and emphasized the ability to work across departments. They also identified challenges, including financial pressures, staffing needs, maintaining town buildings and property, and changing community needs. Setting realistic priorities that can be addressed, assigning clear responsibility for work, and tracking progress are important to them.

Based on the information gathered, the Committee agreed upon the following five strategic focus areas on which to center the plan:

Economic Development and Downtown Revitalization will include steps to strengthen the local economy, support

Antonio Marcuccio named Saint Joseph School's 2026 Volunteer of the Year

WEBSTER — During the Family Mass celebrated at Saint Joseph Basilica on Sunday, Oct. 4, Saint Joseph School recognized Antonio "Tony" Marcuccio as the recipient of the 2026 Saint Joseph the Worker Volunteer of the Year Award.

Presented annually, the award honors an individual whose generosity, talents, and commitment have made a meaningful difference in students' lives. Recipients embody the qualities of Saint Joseph through humility, service, faithfulness, and dedication to hard work.

Born and raised in Southington, Conn., Marcuccio moved to Killingly in 1992 and graduated from Killingly High School in 1996. He and his wife, Katie, now live in Thompson with their sons. Jacob graduated from Saint Joseph School in 2026 and now attends Marianapolis Preparatory School, while Johnny is currently in seventh grade at Saint Joseph School.

Marcuccio rarely misses a field trip, school play, athletic event, or opportunity to help. He began coaching intramural basketball in 2022 and continued for three seasons before becoming an assistant coach for the JV boys' basketball team. He has also coached fall cross-country. When spring cross-country needed coaches, Tony and Katie stepped forward immediately. This year, Tony will serve as the varsity boys' basketball coach.

"If you see Mr. Marcuccio at a Saint Joseph athletic event, he is usually wearing a hat," said Athletic Director John Kottori. "As a volunteer in the athletic program, Mr. Marcuccio has worn many hats.

Each hat is a sign of his dedication to supporting all of the students in our community."

Kottori described Marcuccio as a "champion volunteer" and a role model whose selfless service strengthens the athletic program and demonstrates the school's mission through his actions.

A scary good time had by all at Dudley's Spectacular Spooktacular!

DUDLEY — The Halloween fun in Dudley began on Oct. 29, when gaggles of ghosts, goblins, princesses and other costumed characters gathered at the Pearle L. Crawford Memorial Library for fun and photos.

Dozens of costumed children and their families then paraded to Town Hall, where they enjoyed games, learned about fire safety and shared some s'mores.

The Town of Dudley's annual Halloween Spooktacular was, once again, a big hit with the little ones. And, judging by the smiles, the adults had a good time, too!

The costume contest featured some creative entries, with top honors going to:

Most Unique: Pirate in a pirate ship

Funniest: Mr. and Mrs. Potato Head

Scariest: Headless Horseman

Hosted by the Dudley Recreation Commission, this annual Halloween tradition wouldn't be possible without the many volunteers who generously contributed their time and enthusiasm to make the event a success.

Thanks go out to the Harriet K. Crawford Endowment Fund for the Pearle L. Crawford Memorial Library, the Dudley Police Department, the Dudley Fire Department and all the dedicated event volunteers.

Thanks to everyone who helped make this year's Spooktacular another memorable community celebration.

Auburn Historical Society and Museum to host Veterans Day remembrance open house

AUBURN — The Auburn Historical Society and Museum will have an open house to honor Veterans instead of a monthly meeting on Thursday, Nov. 19 from 6 to 8:30 p.m. at the Museum, 41 South St.

Military exhibits placed throughout the museum will include uniforms that have a connection to Auburn residents and may have a mini biography with them. There will be military equipment such as ammunition casings, practice bomb, pistols and rifles. Personal items include World War I toiletry kit, instruments used to pass the time, military missal book, and a army navy service book. Letters to and from the home front with one special embroidery done to "my sweetheart" with beautiful detailing. The scrapbooks of articles and pictures from the newspapers which reported on the men and what they were doing or where they were going or those who didn't make it home. Some of the documents include copies of draft cards, discharge orders, and muster rolls.

Some veterans came from a long line of family members who served their country over several generations, like in the Legasey family. William Francis Legasey Sr. was born Oct. 1, 1872, to George J. and Mary E. Kenneway Legasey. He served in World War I as a S2/C2-NI class, which means Seaman Second Class Non-Commissioned. This indicates that William did not specialize in a specific rating or job within the Navy. This is the only information that could be found regarding his service according to his grave marker.

William Francis, Jr. enlisted in the Navy in November 1942 and served in World War II and it is his uniform that the Auburn Historical Museum will have on display. He was a Junior Electricians Mate Third Class. He was stationed on the USS Bangust in the Asiatic-Pacific Theatre and was honorably discharged March 1946.

The women are included with pictures of Carrie Guy Jacox, Pauline McIlvane and Phyllis Gallant, who has the Post Road Cane for being the oldest resident in town. There is also an exhibit case showing what the "Warriors of the Home Front" did while the men were away. There was the Auburn Air Wardens of WWII that patrolled the streets, especially at night to ensure the blackout rules were followed. They are Civil Defense helmets, official first aide kit, cards to identify aircraft flying overhead, and a picture of the Auburn Airport Reserve Corp c. 1940.

There is also the "Veterans' Project" database still available to enter family members and be apart of the those who served especially from Auburn that future generations can search for. The museum is always looking for donations to enlarge and enhance the collection and will be welcome on this day.

This article is made possible by the Auburn Historical Society & Museum, 41 South St. The museum is open Tuesday and Saturday mornings 9:30-12:30 and may be reached at auburnmuseum@verizon.net or 508-832-6856, www.auburnhistoricalmuseum.org or follow us on Facebook at Auburn Historical.

Webster, Dudley to honor veterans with 21st annual Veterans Day Parade Nov. 11

WEBSTER/DUDLEY — Veterans, community organizations and residents will gather Wednesday, Nov. 11, for the 21st annual Veterans Day Parade, continuing a tradition of honoring the men and women who have served in the United States Armed Forces.

This year's parade will feature Vietnam War veteran Armand Jalbert, who served in the U.S. Army, as grand marshal. Retired U.S. Marine Corps Lt. Col. William Conley Jr. will serve as guest speaker during the ceremonies.

The annual observance will begin at 11 a.m. at the Veterans' Court of Honor at the Dudley Municipal Complex, where participants will gather for a ceremony recognizing the service and sacrifices of military veterans.

The program will include a prayer led by the veterans' chaplain, a three-shot ceremonial volley by the honor guard and the playing of Taps. Conley will then deliver a commemorative address.

Following the Dudley ceremony, veterans and participating organizations will march in procession to the Webster Veterans' Court of Honor, where a second ceremony will feature another chaplain's prayer, ceremonial volley and the playing of Taps.

The ceremonies are expected to conclude at approximately 12:45 p.m.

Andrew Kozlowski, a U.S. Air Force veteran, will serve as parade chairman and master of ceremonies. He is joined in organizing the event by co-chairmen James Brinker, U.S. Army; Gary Jacobson, U.S. Air Force; Victor Jankowski, U.S. Army; Alan Martin, U.S. Army; Richard Norton, U.S. Air Force; Ronald Prest, U.S. Navy; and Stephen Rogerson, U.S. Army.

The parade will feature representatives of several veterans organizations, including the Webster/Dudley Veterans Council, Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Legion, Polish American Veterans and Disabled American Veterans.

Ladies Auxiliary units, Sons of the American Legion and participating Scouting organizations will also take part.

The procession will be led by the honor guard carrying the colors and ceremonial weapons, followed by Jalbert in a vehicle. Representatives of the participating veterans organizations and community groups will follow in the designated marching order.

All former military personnel are welcome and encouraged to participate, regardless of whether they belong to a veterans' organization.

Marching veterans assigned to the honor guard and other organized units are asked to assemble with their respective colors and ceremonial weapons at the St. Louis School yard parking area, next to the gymnasium at the bottom of the entryway, by 10:15 a.m. Bus transportation will depart at approximately 10:30 a.m. for the Dudley Municipal Complex.

Other veterans wishing to march should report directly to the Dudley Municipal Complex by 10:45 a.m. Participating Scouting organizations should also assemble at the complex at 10:45 a.m.

Organizers have arranged three vehicles for veterans who would prefer to ride rather than march. Those planning to use the vehicles should report to the Dudley Municipal Complex by 10:45 a.m.

An additional vehicle will be positioned at the rear of the parade to assist anyone who experiences difficulty completing the march.

For safety, marchers are asked to maintain approximately 30 feet of separation from vehicles and other designated groups in the procession.

Following the ceremonies, the Polish American Veterans on Ray Street in Webster will host refreshments for parade participants. All participants are invited to attend.

Kozlowski emphasized that the purpose of the annual observance is to recognize both those currently serving in the military and those whose service has concluded.

The parade offers residents of both communities an opportunity to come together in appreciation of the sacrifices made by generations of American service members.

Organizers encourage veterans to participate and residents to attend the cere-

Honoring exceptional care

Dr. Adelina Healy reflects on compassionate nursing

DUDLEY — For Dr. Adelina Healy of Dudley, navigating the final days of her late husband, William Healy, at UMass Memorial Health Harrington was an exceptionally vulnerable time. Yet, amidst the pain of saying goodbye, Dr. Healy found a profound sense of comfort and peace—all thanks to the extraordinary care delivered on the Medical-Surgical unit.

Dr. Healy, an experienced professional who understands healthcare deeply, was struck by the rare combination of technical skill and genuine heart displayed by the staff. One nurse in particular, newly credentialed Registered Nurse Jordana Panarelli, left an indelible mark on the Healy family during Bill's final days.

"There was a nurse who went far beyond expectations right before Bill passed away," Dr. Healy recalled. "She worked the 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. night shift, demonstrating extraordinary compassion and empathy to Mr. Healy and our entire family. She ensured our privacy and offered genuine love and caring."

For Dr. Healy, the level of attentiveness provided during those overnight hours allowed her to step away and rest when her family needed it most.

"In all my years at the bedside, this nurse truly had it all together," Dr. Healy reflected. "I could go home at night with complete peace of mind knowing she was there. Her name was Jordana."

Jordana, whose healthcare journey began as a Licensed Practical Nurse (LPN) in 2019 before graduating from Quinsigamond Community College's LPN-to-RN pathway and earning her RN licensure earlier this year, considers that level of human connection central to her philosophy. Her approach—treating every patient with the dignity and warmth she would want for her own family—is what resonated so deeply with Dr. Healy.

Hospital leadership echoes Dr. Healy's gratitude for the exceptional standard of care on the floor.

"From the moment Jordana joined our team, she has demonstrated an extraordinary commitment to her patients and their families," said Meaghan Krajcik, Manager of Medical-Surgical Services, ICU, Step-Down Unit, Pediatric Surgery, and Float Pool. "She consistently goes above and beyond to provide compassionate, safe, and thoughtful care."

In a fast-paced medical environment, the heartfelt experience shared by Dr. Adelina Healy stands as a powerful reminder of what matters most in healthcare: the profound, lasting impact of true empathy, human dignity, and quiet moments of extraordinary care.

Novena to St. Jude

St. Jude, glorious Apostle, faithful servant and friend of Jesus, the name of the traitor has caused you to be forgotten by many, but the true Church invokes you universally as the Patron of things despaired of; pray for me, who am so miserable, pray for me, that finally I may receive the consolations and the succor of Heaven in all my necessities, particularly (make request), and that I may bless God with the Elect throughout Eternity. Amen. (repeat each day sincerely until granted; publish as granted.)

Thank you St. Jude for answered prayers. BC

A plan for Webster's future must lead to action

There is something encouraging about a community taking the time to consider where it stands, what it values and where it hopes to be in the years ahead. That is precisely what Webster has been doing through the work of its Strategic Master Plan Committee, which has now completed its information-gathering phase and begun developing goals for the town's future.

The committee's findings offer an interesting picture of Webster. Residents are proud of their community, businesses recognize its economic potential, and municipal leaders understand both the opportunities and the financial realities that come with maintaining a growing and changing town.

Perhaps the most important takeaway is that Webster does not need to reinvent itself to move forward. It needs to make better use of what it already has.

Consider the town's location, its businesses, its history and, of course, Webster Lake. These are tremendous assets that many communities would welcome. Yet having valuable resources and making the most of them are two different things.

Downtown revitalization is an especially important part of that equation. A healthy downtown does more than provide places to shop or conduct business. It gives a community a recognizable center, somewhere residents and visitors can gather, spend time and develop a stronger connection to the town.

Improving downtown Webster will require more than attractive storefronts or occasional special events. It means creating an environment where existing businesses can succeed, new businesses feel welcome and property owners have confidence in the area's future. It also means addressing practical concerns such as maintenance, accessibility, safety and the ease of doing business.

None of these improvements will happen overnight, and none will come without challenges. However, a coordinated approach with realistic objectives could make a meaningful difference over time.

The committee's attention to communication and civic participation is equally worthwhile. One of the frustrations frequently expressed in communities of all sizes is that residents do not always know what their local government is doing until a decision has already been made.

Making information easier to find, explaining decisions clearly and providing meaningful opportunities for public input can help build confidence in municipal government. Residents should not have to become experts in town procedures to understand matters that affect their neighborhoods, schools or property taxes.

Financial stability is another essential consideration. Every improvement comes with a cost, and municipal budgets are already expected to cover a wide range of competing needs. Maintaining schools, public buildings, roads, parks and other facilities requires careful planning, particularly when postponing maintenance today can create larger expenses tomorrow.

That is why the committee's fifth priority, accountable implementation, may ultimately prove the most important.

Communities have produced plenty of impressive planning documents over the years, only to see some of them gather dust. A strategic plan should be more than an attractive report filled with admirable intentions. It should establish achievable priorities, identify who is responsible for carrying them out and provide a reasonable way to measure progress.

Not every recommendation will be affordable immediately. Some may require outside funding, partnerships or several years of preparation. Others may be accomplished through relatively modest changes in how the town operates. Being clear about those distinctions will help residents understand what can reasonably be expected.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A heartfelt thank you to the Janet Malser Humanities Trust

To the Editor:

On behalf of St. Louis League of Catholic Women, I wish to express our heartfelt thanks to the Janet Malser Humanities Trust for awarding the League a 2026 grant. Their generosity and commitment to the arts, humanities, community service, and conservation have made a meaningful difference in our mission.

This funding will allow us to sponsor a Christmas Concert for the community performed by the Worcester Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Maestro Roderick MacDonald, on Sunday, Dec. 20 at 4 p.m. at St. Louis Church, 14 Lake St., Webster. Admission is free, and tickets are not needed. Light refreshments, provided by the League, will be served at intermission. We deeply admire the legacy of Janet Malser, whose passion for culture, education, and community shines through in the Trust's ongoing support.

With appreciation,

DR. ADELINA N. HEALY
PRESIDENT, ST. LOUIS LEAGUE OF CATHOLIC WOMEN

Another sad story

To the Editor:

During WWII, the battle for the island of Iwo Jima was fought over a five-week period in 1945.

America lost 5,931 Marines during this battle and the Japanese army lost about 18,000 men. On the day the Marines took control of Mount Suribachi on this eight-square-mile island, six Marines raised the American flag on this summit. The famous photo of this flag-raising became an enduring symbol of determination, sacrifice and courage during WWII. The most famous photo of the war was taken by Joe Rosenthal of the Associated Press.

The Iwo Jima War Memorial statue was delivered and dedicated on Nov. 10, 1954 at the US Marine Training Base in Quantico, Virginia. On Oct. 21, a 27-year-old non-citizen named Miguel Alonso Maldonado Sujano was arrested for taking a sledgehammer to the limestone statue, causing over $100,000 in damage. This non-citizen is not only ungrateful for living in America for the last 20 years under the DACA program, this action also shows he despises America. It appears there are other non-citizens living in America who care nothing about our history, our culture or the sacrifices of the US Marines who died on the island of Iwo Jima.

Donations are being raised privately to repair the damage to this statue, which has honored our Marines since 1954.

Who are you gonna believe?

To the Editor:

The elections will be over by the time this letter is published, and hopefully, voters will have rejected the abhorrent attitudes expressed in Carl W. Wilson's letter published in the Oct. 30 edition of the Webster Times. The issues, however, will likely remain in our national conscience.

Mr. Wilson rails against other people's hatred, but seems to reserve exceptions for his own dislike of undocumented immigrants and Democrats. In his view, President Joe Biden opened the borders and "imported terror" on American families; Gov. Maura Healey squandered billions providing housing; sympathetic mayors declared sanctuary cities; and they all lied about it. He presumes millions of immigrants are all child abusers, rapists and "not good people," who commit " horrific murders." He claims we don't hear about all these crimes because the "news media" doesn't want us to. So just how does he learn about them?

Most immigrants — illegal and legal — that I know of are, very much to the contrary, hardworking, productive people who create businesses, pay taxes and take jobs that most Americans would never consider. Unfortunately, many of these admirable human beings, as well as U.S. citizens, have been swept off the streets, imprisoned, deported and even murdered by ICE agents, who seem to take perverted pleasure in assaulting their victims, terrorizing children and breaking up families, adversely affecting the economy and striking fear in communities all across the country.

Painting all undocumented immigrants as criminals makes no more sense than presuming all college men are drug-addled rapists because of the Cornell University scandal or that all gun owners are potential mass murderers because of the myriad shooting tragedies perpetrated by disturbed, white citizens. How can Mr. Wilson still believe that non-citizens are able to vote in elections to any significant degree? Trump's Justice Department — I'd call it the Injustice Departmen — has lost, what, 26 suits alleging non-citizen voting, mostly for lack of evidence that this is happening, a reality supported by study after study after study.

Mr. Wilson's claim that "everyone gets mail-in ballots with no proof of citizenship required" is just plain wrong. I can't get a mail-in ballot unless I am a registered voter in Dudley and request it. Registering requires a vetting process to confirm both my residence and identity. I don't have to produce evidence of citizenship. But in order to do that I would probably have to acquire a birth certificate, a passport, or some sort of naturalization document that most elderly voters and citizens of modest means would have extreme difficulty obtaining, resulting in their disenfranchisement.

Mr. Wilson fears Democratic hopefuls who have "socialism/Communist ideas." Conservatives make those two words sound like a deadly disease. I don't know of any candidate that has embraced Communism. Many of us, however, understand that socialism has been an important part of American democracy almost since its inception. Socialism, after all, is the root of the term Social Security, probably the most popular government program in history. It is also the theory that provides essential community (uh-oh, there's that terrible Communism-like word again) services like public education, fire and police protection that individuals cannot possibly provide for themselves except by pooling their resources.

As a proud Democrat, I was never conditioned to hate Donald Trump. But Trump has come to personify many things that I do hate: corruption, bigotry, misogyny, pathological lying, gratuitous cruelty, incompetence, narcissism, contempt for the law. I hate fake news, but most of it, these days, comes from the lies uttered regularly by Trump, his Cabinet and the sycophants who tell us we're in the Golden Age of America, when we are quite obviously in the sewer they have created.

To quote Chico Marx, "Who you gonna believe? Me or your own eyes?"

Whatever happened to a little mystery?

LANTERNS ALONG MAIN STREET

By CHARLES

I was thinking the other day about how much we know about everybody else's business these days, whether we want to or not.

There was a time when you could go a whole week without knowing what your neighbor had for supper, where your cousin went on vacation, or what some fellow you haven't seen since high school thinks about the price of eggs. Now all that information is available before you've finished your morning coffee. And apparently, we're supposed to be interested.

Don't get me wrong. I enjoy hearing from old friends, and I'm glad there's a way to keep up with people who live far away. It's a wonderful thing to see pictures of a new grandchild or hear that somebody's daughter graduated from college.

But somewhere along the way, we seem to have decided that every moment of our lives needs an audience. I don't quite understand it.

The other day, I saw somebody announce on the Internet that they were heading out to buy groceries. Not that they'd found some extraordinary bargain or discovered a new store. They were simply going grocery shopping. A little while later came another announcement. They'd arrived. Then a picture of the shopping cart. And finally, a report that they were back home. I suppose I should have been relieved that the expedition ended safely.

Now, I'm not suggesting that people shouldn't enjoy themselves. If somebody wants to photograph a sandwich before eating it, that's their business. I simply wonder when we started believing that the rest of the world needed to see the sandwich, too.

When I was growing up, there was a certain amount of mystery surrounding other people's lives. You knew your neighbors, of course. You might know where they worked, what kind of car they drove, and whether they were the sort who kept their lawn looking like a golf course.

But you didn't know every thought that passed through their heads. And that wasn't necessarily a bad thing. If somebody had a disagreement with a relative, the entire town didn't hear about it before lunchtime. If a couple went out for their anniversary, they didn't need to provide photographic evidence. And if somebody made a particularly good pot roast, the family enjoyed it without waiting for strangers to offer their approval. There was something comfortable about that.

I'm not pretending the old days were perfect. Small towns have always had their share of gossip. Sometimes people knew more about their neighbors than they had any right to know. The difference was that gossip generally traveled at the speed of conversation. Nowadays, it travels at the speed of a button. And once something gets out there, good luck putting it back.

I sometimes wonder what my father would have thought of all this. He was a man who didn't waste many words, and he certainly wasn't interested in broadcasting his daily activities.

If somebody had handed him a telephone and suggested he use it to tell hundreds of people what he was having for lunch, I suspect he would have looked at them for a long moment before asking whether they had anything useful to do. He had a way of making a point without making a speech.

Of course, the younger crowd might say I'm missing the point. Sharing things is how people stay connected now. And they're not entirely wrong.

I've seen some wonderful examples of that connection. Old friends finding each other after decades. Families sharing happy occasions across thousands of miles. People offering encouragement to somebody having a difficult time. Those are good things, and I'd be foolish to pretend otherwise. But I still think there's value in keeping a few things to ourselves.

Not every pleasant afternoon needs to become a public announcement. Not every disagreement needs a jury of strangers. And not every opinion needs to be delivered to the world before we've had a chance to think it through.

Sometimes an experience is better when we're fully occupied enjoying it instead of figuring out how to describe it afterward.

A good meal tastes every bit as good without a photograph. A beautiful sunset

The committee deserves recognition for seeking input from businesses, residents and municipal officials rather than developing its recommendations in isolation. Those different perspectives are necessary because the future of Webster affects everyone, although not always in the same ways.

With the plan expected to be completed by the end of February, the coming months represent an opportunity to turn that feedback into a practical roadmap.

Residents who have not followed the process can review the committee's materials through the town Web site at www.webster-ma.gov. There is still value in understanding the priorities being developed and following the decisions that will come afterward.

Webster has a strong foundation on which to build. Its future will depend less on how ambitious its strategic plan sounds and more on whether its recommendations produce visible, lasting improvements.

The community has helped identify the destination. The next challenge is making sure the town has a workable route to get there.

doesn't require an audience. And a conversation with an old friend can be meaningful even if nobody else knows it happened. Maybe that's what I miss most. The idea that a person's life could contain a few quiet chapters that belonged entirely to them.

I'm not planning to throw away my phone or move into the woods. I like modern conveniences as much as anybody, especially when they work properly, which is another matter altogether.

But I am making an effort to keep a little mystery in my life. For instance, yesterday afternoon I went somewhere, did a few things, and came home. Had a perfectly nice time, too. And that's all you're getting out of me.

Powerful drug prevention performance in Oxford Nov. 19

sOXFORD — The Oxford Police Department, Fire Department, Board of Health and Oxford High School are joining forces with Drug Story Theater to present «Back to Life,» a powerful theatrical production designed to educate young people and their families about the dangers of recreational drug use and the potentially deadly consequences of fentanyl and other substances found in illicit drugs.

The performance will take place Thursday, Nov. 19, at 7 p.m. in the Oxford High School auditorium.

Based on a true story, "Back to Life" follows a seemingly ordinary night of partying that takes a tragic turn. The approximately 20-minute play is performed by young people participating in Drug Story Theater's treatment program, bringing firsthand perspectives on substance use and its consequences to the stage.

The production is intended to encourage candid conversations among students, parents and community members about the risks associated with experimenting with drugs, particularly the presence of fentanyl and xylazine in counterfeit pills and other illicit substances.

Organizers hope the presentation will help audiences understand that what might appear to be a relatively harmless experiment can have devastating consequences when drugs contain powerful substances that users may not realize they are taking.

Drug Story Theater's educational approach recognizes that adolescents naturally seek opportunities to take risks, socialize and experience pleasure. However, the organization emphasizes that today's illicit drug supply presents dangers that can turn experimentation into a life-threatening situation.

Following the performance, audience members will have an opportunity to participate in an interactive discussion with the young performers and Dr. Joseph Shrand, a nationally recognized expert in adolescent addiction.

The discussion will address the science behind adolescent addiction, the effects of fentanyl and xylazine, and practical steps families and communities can take to prevent overdose deaths.

An important component of the evening will be education about Narcan, the brand name for naloxone, a medication capable of reversing an opioid overdose.

Participants will learn how to recognize the signs of an overdose, understand how Narcan works and recognize the importance of making the medication readily available.

While Narcan can reverse the effects of opioids such as fentanyl, it does not reverse the effects of xylazine, a non-opioid sedative that may be mixed with illicit drugs. Nevertheless, naloxone should be administered when an opioid overdose is suspected, and emergency medical assistance should be sought immediately.

The Oxford Board of Health will provide Narcan free of charge to parents and guardians attending the evening performance.

Organizers also hope to reduce the stigma associated with carrying or administering Narcan, emphasizing that having access to the medication can mean the difference between life and death during an overdose emergency.

Drug Story Theater has presented "Back to Life" at public schools, universities and conferences throughout Massachusetts, reaching thousands of students and other audience members. The performances have been supported through earmarked funding from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The Oxford presentation is being made possible through the cooperation of the Oxford Police Department, Oxford Fire Department, Oxford Board of Health and Oxford High School, along with municipal opioid remediation funds.

By combining live theater, personal experiences and medical expertise, the program seeks to give students and families information they can use to recognize dangerous situations, make informed decisions and potentially save lives.

For more information about Drug Story Theater and the upcoming presentation, visit www.drugstorytheater.org.

Boys & Girls Club of Webster-Dudley receives Janet Malser Humanities Trust grant for arts programming

DUDLEY — The Boys and Girls Club of Webster-Dudley has been awarded $12,500 from the Janet Malser Humanities Trust in support of Club Creations, the Club's year-round arts initiative for local youth.

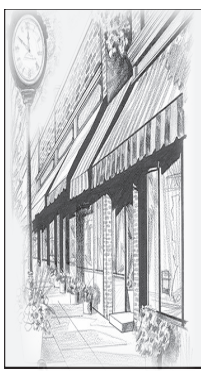

Club Creations gives young people consistent access to visual arts, digital media, and performance-based programming. For many participants, the Club is the only place where structured creative opportunities are available outside of school. The grant will help sustain dedicated program leadership and the day-to-day materials that keep hands-on arts programming running throughout the year.

"We are deeply grateful to the Janet Malser Humanities Trust for this support," said Ian Nugent, Executive Director. "Arts programming is where a lot of our members find their voice. They build confidence, skills, and can find they are good at something they may not have even thought of trying before. This grant makes that possible for another year."

The program serves youth from Dudley, Webster, and the surrounding areas, and work created through Club Creations is shown publicly at Club events.

Janet Malser, a lifelong resident of Dudley and Webster, was an artist, a musician, and a longtime volunteer across the tri-town community. The Trust she established continues to fund educational, cultural, and charitable causes throughout the area.

The Boys and Girls Club of Webster-Dudley is a nonprofit organization providing year-round out-of-school time programming for youth ages five to 13, serving roughly 250 young people annually. More information is available at www.bgcwebsterdudley.org or by calling 508-943-0037.

MAJOR GENERAL SALEM TOWNE LODGE

SOUTHBRIDGE

SOUTHBRIDGE — On Wednesday, Oct. 28, the Southbridge Food Share Pantry, located at Trinity Episcopal Church at 446 Hamilton St. in Southbridge, invited Master Masons to its annual meeting. The pantry has long served Southbridge, Sturbridge, Holland, Wales, Brimfield, and Charlton.

With many local families facing hardship, providing food for children and families remains a shared priority of the pantry and Southbridge's Major General Salem Towne Lodge (MGSTL). Through the lodge's Community Outreach Service Projects, MGSTL has conducted food drives at local grocery stores for years and donated the collected items to the pantry. During the meeting, food share pantry president Karen Engell presented the attending Master Masons with a Certificate of Appreciation for their continued support.

The certificate recognized MGSTL members for years of collecting food—often in harsh weather—for the pantry and the communities it serves. Their commitment to the lodge's Community Outreach Program helps the pantry provide food to local residents in need. MGSTL members are honored and grateful to receive this recognition from the Southbridge Food Share Pantry.

On this coming Saturday, Nov. 7, MGSTL will host a food and coat drive at Big Bunny Market, 942 Main St., Southbridge, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Donations of food, personal-care items such as toothpaste and deodorant, and gently used winter coats and jackets are welcome and will benefit the Southbridge Food Share Pantry. At its March 2026 food drive, the community donated 156 bags of food—enough to fill three pickup trucks. This time, MGSTL also hopes to collect boxes/bags of winter coats and challenges the community to surpass 156 bags of food, filling at least three—and perhaps four—pickup trucks.

Benjamin Franklin, a renowned Master Mason, once asked, "Is There Greatness In You?" If so, join us to support this community food and coat drive. If you would like additional information about Freemasonry, go to www.massfreemasonry.org and read about this great fraternity and find a lodge nearest you.

November Art Show at Booklovers' Gourmet spotlights two artistic journeys

WEBSTER — Booklovers' Gourmet, 72 East Main St., Webster, presents Jim Wilton and Laura Cenedella-Two Artistic Journeys in the cafe gallery from Nov. 3-28. A public reception will take place on Friday, Nov. 13 from 5-7 p.m. The show may be viewed during regular business hours: Tuesday-Saturday 10 a.m.-5 p.m., Wednesday 10 a.m.-6 p.m. For more information, call 508-949-6232.

Jim and Laura's artwork complement one another seamlessly. Although each artist has traveled a different path, together they express their shared and individual experiences through photography and painting.

Jim R. Wilton is an award-winning, largely self-taught artist who has worked in painting and photography for many years with a strong focus on lighthouses, sunsets, outdoor scenes, landscapes, portraits and plein air work. He began photographing in 2008, which opened up digital photography and wider accessibility for his practice. Jim is active in the arts community as a member of Ruth Wells Arts Center and Blackstone Valley Art Association. He has self-published two coffee-table photo books and been featured in magazines and shares work on Facebook and Etsy. His photography has appeared on book covers and calendars. He has an overall passion for capturing nature and the intricacies of life.

Laura Cenedella is a painter and photographer based in Brookfield, Massachusetts. Her artistic journey began with a focus on art during high school. She has since developed into a semi self-taught artist. Laura's work has been recognized with numerous awards from organizations including the Massachusetts Cultural Council, the Blackstone Valley Art Association and the Massasoit Art Guild. She is an active participant in the arts community in Massachusetts and Rhode Island. Laura is a board member of the Blackstone Valley Art Association, member of the Massasoit Art Guild, member of the Worcester Art Museum and The Ruth Wells Center for the Arts. Her art has been exhibited in libraries across Massachusetts, a one-woman art show in 2025 and 2026 at the Ruth Wells Center for the Arts and for a second year in a row at the Worcester Art Museum.

While painting remains her primary passion, Cenedella is also an avid photographer. Her photographic work was featured in the Small Stones 2025 and 2026 Art Catalog. Laura works across various mediums, including oil, acrylic, watercolor, and pastels. She has created commissioned pieces such as murals and pet portraits. businesses, and revitalize the Downtown.

Community Assets and Webster Identity will lay out strategies for enhancing and better utilizing those places that are key to our community, such as the lake and Memorial Beach, and steps to connect people to Webster.

Communication and Civic Participation will address how the town can best share information and help people learn about and participate in town decisions, government, and community life.

Financial Stability and Municipal Assets will examine ways to keep town finances on a sound footing and maintain and improve schools, municipal buildings, parks, and recreation areas.

Municipal Capacity and Accountable Implementation will emphasize governance, resources, and clear responsibilities needed to provide services, carry out the plan, and track progress. For each of these areas the Committee is drafting goals that describe what Webster wants to achieve and objectives that make those goals more specific. The Plan is on track to be completed at the end of February.

Community members can read the strategic planning background information and reports, as well as watch videos of the SMPC meetings on webster-ma.gov. Go to the pull down Government tab and select Strategic Master Plan Committee. Residents also can take the opportunity to sign up for town updates about town meetings and committees by going to "Notify Me."

Marcuccio's contributions extend well beyond coaching. He regularly helps set up and break down intramural games. Drawing on his 28 years of construction experience, he repaired large openings in the school's exterior brickwork when ventilation ducts were removed during the conversion of the former kitchen into a STEM lab. He also repaired the school's front steps after vandals damaged them.

During the winter, Marcuccio could often be found at school late at night or as early as 4 or 5 a.m., shoveling and blowing snow from the entrance and sidewalks so students and staff could enter safely. These are only the acts of service known to school administrators; he has undoubtedly helped the athletic program, teachers, and school community in many other ways.

Marcuccio has never asked for reimbursement or recognition. He simply keeps asking what more he can do.

During the presentation, Principal Beth Boudreau recalled the time Bishop Robert J. McManus drew Marcuccio's winning raffle ticket during a recent Open House. When Marcuccio was called to the office over the intercom, he arrived apprehensively, believing he was in trouble with the principal. This time, Boudreau assured him he was being called forward again for a very good reason.

The presentation also included a lighthearted reference to Marcuccio's devotion to the Buffalo Bills, who were playing the New England Patriots that day. Boudreau joked that honoring a Bills fan in Patriots country proved that "Christian charity truly has no limits."

"But all football rivalries aside, there is no question that Tony has always been on Saint Joseph School's team," Boudreau said. "We are incredibly fortunate to have him."

"I love the Saint Joseph School community," Marcuccio said. "I think, as a whole, we really stand out compared to other schools. That is special, and I am proud to be a part of it."

Saint Joseph School is deeply grateful for Marcuccio's humble and generous service and is blessed to honor him as the 2026 Saint Joseph the Worker Volunteer of the Year.

Greetings from Breeds Hill…and Other Stories of Fact & Folklore for the 250th – Thursday, November 5th 6:30-7:30PM

As America commemorates and celebrates its 250th Anniversary, Ted Reinstein looks back. Way back. Even years before independence was actually achieved, events took place that would shape how the new nation would look back at its founding. Paul Revere's ride? One of the most momentous nights in U.S. history. And, like any big night, there was a bill. And America's first expense report. Who knew? (The first bean counters even tried to stiff Revere!) While many New Englanders pride themselves on knowing the difference between Bunker and Breed's Hill, few know that the bad blood over this historical inaccuracy continues—meet Jed Breed, thirteenth-generation direct descendant of the Boston farmer whose name should be in the history books, not an answer in "Trivial Pursuit." Find out why Concord and Lexington are still doing battle—not with the British, but each other. Visit historic Copp's Hill Burying Ground, and find

Amnesty International has adopted his case as a human rights defender on the grounds of censorship and freedom of expression. Following the film, there will be time for discussion and Q&A with Suzanne E. Wright, China Coordination Group Chair, as well as other members of the local Amnesty group. AI Group #356 meets monthly at Booklovers' Gourmet in Webster. For more information, call 508-949-6232.

Cat Moon Shadow Concert – Thursday, November 12th 6:30-7:30PM

This is a heartfelt tribute to the iconic singer-songwriter Cat Stevens and is presented in an intimate, acoustic, singer-songwriter style. John expertly connects with his audience, creating a musical journey through the timeless songs of Stevens. His voice is strikingly reminiscent of Cat in his prime and Fuzek pours raw emotion into each performance. The show, which includes a mix of beloved hits and hidden gems, lasts approximately two hours, offering an unforgettable experience of music and stories that pays tribute to the soul-stirring music of this legendary artist. The songs of Cat Stevens are beloved-"Wild World", "Father & Son", "Peace Train", and of course, "Moonshadow". Stevens was a superstar in the heyday of 1970's singer-songwriters and his music was omnipresent. His songs can still be heard on the radio, in films, and occasionally performed by Cat himself at a rare performance. Unfortunately Cat Stevens canceled his October 2025 tour of the United States and there are currently no plans to reschedule. This leaves Cat Stevens fans wanting to hear his music performed, live. Fuzek entertains his audience with an array of music spanning the 1960s through 1970s albums as well as background about the songs and Cat Stevens.

First Congregational Church of Oxford to host annual Christmas Tea and Gift Shop Dec. 5

OXFORD — The First Congregational Church of Oxford will welcome the holiday season with its annual Christmas Tea and Gift Shop on Saturday, Dec. 5, from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m., continuing a cherished tradition that has brought people together for more than 25 years.

The annual event offers visitors an opportunity to enjoy a traditional holiday tea, complete with fine China, a selection of premium loose-leaf teas and an assortment of homemade foods.

Organizers take pride in providing an authentic tea experience, serving selections purchased from Asiago Teas. Unlike traditional tea bags, loose-leaf tea allows guests to experience the flavors and aromas of carefully selected tea leaves.

Each serving is presented in a China teapot and poured into a China teacup, adding an elegant touch to the holiday gathering.

In addition to the tea selections, guests can enjoy a variety of homemade soups, sandwiches and desserts prepared for the occasion.

Several dining options will be available, with prices ranging from $6 for tea and dessert to $18 for a complete meal featuring soup, a sandwich, dessert and tea.

The Christmas Tea has been a longstanding holiday tradition at the church, offering an opportunity for friends, families and neighbors to gather during the busy Christmas season.

The event also includes a gift shop, providing visitors with an opportunity to browse while enjoying the festive occasion.

QCC receives nearly $2 million to support parenting students and their children

WORCESTER — Quinsigamond Community College was recently awarded a Child Care Access Means Parents in School Program (CCAMPIS) grant of more than $1.9 million. The College will use the grant to fund its Parent Success at QCC (PSQ) program, which will provide access to childcare for eligible students.

"At QCC, over 30 percent of students are parents, many of whom work full-time and part-time jobs," QCC President Dr. Luis Pedraja said. "Due to the high cost of living and low availability of childcare, these students are often in the difficult position of missing classes to take care of family responsibilities. The PSQ program will help alleviate this challenge for many parents by providing childcare assistance and support services, enabling them to remain enrolled, complete their studies, and graduate. In turn, they will be better positioned to advance their careers, improve their families' quality of life, and contribute meaningfully to their communities."

PSQ is a collaborative initiative that brings together many areas of QCC such as Parenting Student Support Services, The Children's School: Early Childhood Education Lab School, and various other departments of the college. The program will also work with licensed childcare providers in the community to subsidize care for eligible students.

"Having to be in two places at the same time has been difficult," a recently surveyed QCC student said. "…I have to drop my child off at school and be at clinical during my nursing rotation at nearly the same time."

Associate Director of Parenting Student Support Michelle Brennan has seen studies showing that more than 50 percent of student parents who don't receive proper support end up leaving school without a degree. However, at QCC, 80 percent of students Brennan has supported have continued their education.

"Our goal is to empower these students who are working incredibly hard to improve the lives of their families," Brennan said. "We've seen that quality childcare and education promote upward mobility and increased earnings for parents, and eventually for their children as well. "

The PSQ program will utilize a case management approach to connect students with community resources, build peer support networks, and provide workshops covering topics such as child development and time management.

According to Brennan, services will be integrated to benefit the entire family. She described the "whole-family" model used in education and social services, which offers support to both parents and children to foster educational success and financial security.

"When we run a workshop on a topic such as financial literacy, children will have a parallel activity and then come back together for a family conversation on the topic. We're helping them build the skills to plan for their families together," Brennan said.

Brennan also noted that funding the PSQ program through CCAMPIS will help fill in the gaps that are often present between the K-12 and higher education schedules.

"Finding childcare when QCC is in session and my daughter does not have school is super hard, whether that be school vacations, professional development days, or snow days. I have missed several days of school as a result," said another QCC student.

The four-year CCAMPIS grant is issued by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Administration for Children and Families (HHS/ACF) on behalf of the U.S. Department of Education (ED).
