Killingly bringing back middle school Athletic Director

BY JASON BLEAU
VILLAGER CORRESPONDENT

KILLINGLY — The Killingly Board of Education has approved bringing back a middle school athletic director who will serve in a complimentary capacity helping alleviate some of the responsibilities of the district wide athletic director in the new year.

The Board of Education voted unanimously on Dec. 11 to once again fund the middle school athletic director position which had been zeroed out in the existing teachers' contract. Currently District Athletic Director Jim Lackner is charged with overseeing games for both the middle and high schools. Superintendent Susan Nash explained that after discussions with the Board of Education's Personnel Committee and Lackner the need for a middle school athletic director was apparent.

"There was always, and still is, a stipend in the teachers' contract for a position at the middle school for support for the athletic director, but when we had, through the budget process last year, created a district-wide full time athletic director, we did zero out that line using those funds for that position. In discussion with our current athletic director, there are some constraints. He certainly can't be at a middle school game and a high school game at the same time, many times they do play on the same day at the same time," said Nash.

The middle school athletic director will perform many of the same duties as the district director but specific to the middle school including breaking down and setting up equipment, organizing referees for games and other responsibilities. Board of Education member and former Killingly Athletic Director Kevin Marcoux spoke from experience as he supported the proposal.

"I share Jim's pain in what he does. There's no doubt he needs that position. He needs help. He can't be in two places at once. If we want to have supervision and cover liability and check all those boxes this is to me a must," Marcoux said.

The position is not a new addition to the teachers' contract as it was an existing item that was simply de-funded. The Board of Education's decision will fund the position as a Level 3 Stipend of $5,441, the same as it was before it was de-funded. Because it is a stipend within the teachers' contract the position will be filled by an internal candidate.

Renee Therrien named Thompson's Veteran of the Month

THOMPSON — Sgt. Renee A. Therrien has been chosen by the nominating committee to be recognized as the January 2025 Town of Thompson Veteran of the Month.

Therrien is the first female recognized as Veteran of the Month since this new program was initiated in August, 2024.

Therrien has served her Country for three decades, first joining the Air Force National Guard in 1987, and remained in that capacity for a four-year period thru 1990. She was stationed for most of that period of time at the Bradley Air Station in Windsor Locks. After a 12- year break from Military service, she re-enlisted into the Army National Guard in 2002 and was stationed at Camp Rell in Niantic, Ct. She remained in that capacity for five years through 2006.

While stationed at Camp Rell, she was activated and assigned to the 208 PSD for a one -year deployment in Kuwait, supporting the American efforts in Operation Iraqi Freedom. While in Kuwait, at Camp Doha, she worked in the Post Office, checking mail for contraband to assure that packages being processed were safe to be mailed back to the States. Renee was then assigned to an administrative role at Camp Arifjan a welcome Center for troops preparing to come home from Iraq. There she assisted many war fatigued veterans and assisted them in preparing to return home from the horrors of the war and fighting that they had endured. During that time in Kuwait, Therrien also completed a security mission at Camp Virginia completing her tour of duty in Kuwait before being re-assigned to Fort Benning, Georgia where she eventually was separated from her active service time. She then was employed as an educator for the United States Department of Defense at the Yokota Air Force Base in Tokyo, Japan from 2006 to 2008.

Therrien comes from a long, rich military family history, as her dad, Norman, was drafted and served in Germany. Both brothers, Chad and Brian Therrien, enlisted into the Army National Guard. Chad served for 22 years, and Brian served for six years. Ironically, both her dad, Norman, and brother Brian were

Ferncroft Wildlife Rescue comes to Pomfret

POMFRET — If one of your New Year’s resolutions is to pet an opossum, we can help you with that. And even if that isn’t on your 2025 list, admit it, now you want to do it!

The educational ambassador opossums of Ferncroft Wildlife Rescue (FWR) in Woodstock will be at The Connecticut Audubon Society (CAS) Center at Pomfret on Saturday, Jan. 11 at 2 p.m. Brandi, a real charmer, will be making her debut. Old hands Bob and Wendi will join her.

Pam and Bill Lefferts, who operate FWR, emphasize their opossums are not pets. Pam explains, “They are all non-releasable, wild animals. They have injuries that we could not correct or heal, and they would not survive in the wild. We are licensed to keep them and present public programs.”

learn about the natural history of opossums and how you can help them survive the winter. Opossums are unique and gentle creatures. They are not native to the New England states, and with hairless ears, feet, and tails, they often suffer from debilitating frostbite. Hypothermia and starvation are also major problems.

Pam will share Brandi’s remarkably interesting story, which she plans to turn into a children’s book. She has already authored a book about her first educational ambassador opossum, Lavender. “From Pouch to Couch: Why Lavender the Opossum Lives in a House” will be available at the event.

New Year’s victory

After their stunning victory on Christmas morning, 1776, Washington and his army held Trenton, aware that the British would not let the humiliation go unanswered. Just days earlier, they had achieved the impossible. After a daring midnight crossing of the icy Delaware River, Washington’s army launched a surprise attack on the Hessians, overwhelming the enemy in a fierce battle. The victory saw over 900 enemy soldiers captured and reignited hope for the revolutionary cause.

But Washington knew the war wasn’t over. The British, eager for revenge, sent reinforcements to crush the rebellion. Washington, outnumbered, outgunned, and with no easy escape, prepared his men for the inevitable showdown. Suspense hung in the frigid air as the sound of marching British troops grew closer each day, setting the stage for a desperate fight to survive.

On Jan. 2, the British arrived in Trenton with 8,000 men under General Cornwallis. “We’ve got the old fox now!” Cornwallis reportedly exclaimed, convinced there was no escape for the Continental Army. Throughout the day, Washington’s men battled fiercely, holding the British at bay in skirmishes that pushed them to the brink. As night fell, the British, certain of their impending victory, settled in to rest, confident they would crush the rebels at dawn.

But Washington wasn’t about to wait for defeat. Knowing that holding Trenton was impossible, he devised a bold plan. On New Year’s night, under the cover of darkness, he ordered his men to quietly abandon their campfires, leaving them burning brightly to deceive the British into thinking the army was still there. Then, in a daring maneuver, Washington led his troops on a silent march toward Princeton.

Princeton, about 12 miles away, was strategically vital. It housed a smaller British force and was a key supply and communication hub. Striking Princeton would weaken the British and allow Washington to escape the trap at Trenton and keep the momentum of his campaign alive.

In the early hours of Jan. 3, Washington’s army arrived at Princeton under the cover of darkness. The Redcoats caught off guard, scrambled to defend themselves as the Continental troops launched a swift and ferocious attack.

Initially, the element of surprise worked in Washington’s favor, but the British quickly regrouped. Their disciplined volleys tore through the smoke-filled air, threatening to break the Continental line.

Amid the chaos, General Hugh Mercer, one of Washington’s most trusted officers and a key leader, was surrounded by British soldiers and mortally wounded while leading a daring charge. His fall sent a ripple of panic through the American ranks, and the line began to falter. Soldiers hesitated, their resolve wavering as confusion spread across the battlefield.

At that critical moment, Washington rode to the front, a commanding figure on horseback. With bullets whizzing past him, he placed himself squarely in the line of fire, rallying his men with an unshakable display of courage. “Stand firm, men!” he shouted, his voice steady and resolute, cutting through the din of battle.

Inspired by their commander’s fearless leadership, the troops surged forward with renewed determination.

The tide of the battle turned. The Continental soldiers pressed their advantage, outflanking and overwhelming the British forces. By mid-morning on Jan. 3, 1777, the town of Princeton was firmly in American hands. The victory was hard-fought and costly, but it proved once again that Washington’s leadership and the army’s tenacity could triumph against all odds.

The back-to-back wins at Trenton and Princeton reinvigorated the revolutionary cause at its darkest hour. Washington’s daring maneuvers and ability to outthink and outfight the British proved that the Continental Army was a force to be reckoned with.

Cornwallis, upon discovering Washington’s brilliant escape, was stunned. Across the colonies, news of the victory spread like wildfire across the colonies, inspiring hope and a new wave of recruits joining the fight for independence.

General Washington and his band of underdogs had prevailed. His New Year’s resolutions were clear: defy the odds, outwit his enemies, and keep the dream of independence alive, no matter the cost.

Let this be the year you face your battles, big or small, with the same fearless resolve—proving that, like Washington and his army, you, too, can achieve greatness against the odds. What will your resolutions be this year?

Leave the phone ‘til last in the morning

Most weeks, our Editorial space is typically some- thing our staff is curious about. While the subject of cell phone and screen addiction comes up often, this week, there was a noticeable shift in our view on the topic after receiving a wise tip.

That tip was to ignore your phone, don’t even look at it, until 30 minutes after you wake up. In that time, sit down, have your morning coffee and read a book. When you start to scroll on your phone just after waking up, you put yourself into what’s called a passive scrolling phase, which can derail your entire day and ward off productivity.

A few days into following this new advice, and there is a noticeable sense of comfort and relaxation that can carry you throughout your day. It’s like taking 30 minutes every morning to get back to the basics and recall simpler times.

Most people feel like they are in control of their phone use, but are you? How can you determine if you have a phone addiction, or are just part of the modern era grind? We’ve said it before, and we’ll say it again, nothing beats the days of watching Jeopardy uninterrupted, without the pressure of responding to a ding from your phone.

In 2011, only 35 percent of the population owned smartphones, now 81 percent do. It is our main form of communication, so much so that now there is a term called nomophobia, or the fear of going without your phone.

Excessive cell phone use is a huge problem for many. As far as addiction goes, some experts say the dopamine connection the phone offers can be linked to something akin to a drug addiction. The triggering of that chemical in your brain, reinforces compulsive behavior. When we can’t predict when we will receive a text or a “like” on social media, we check our phones more often.

Adolescents are more vulnerable to this problem than any other age group. Excessive use in that age group is such an issue that most teenagers never turn off their phones. Experts say that the younger a child has access to a phone, the sooner the problems begin. Problematic cell phone use is linked to low self esteem, low impulse control, depression and anxiety.

Signs you may have a phone addiction could be that you reach for your phone if you’re bored, you feel anxious or upset if you can’t get to your phone, you wake throughout the night to check it, or your phone has caused you to get into an accident. Other signs could be that you spend most of your waking hours on your phone, and that it interferes with personal relationships or work.

When trying to focus on work, or any task, you are significantly disrupted and your concentration is thrown off.

Ways to break the addiction in order to fix your relationships, your health and other responsibilities include figuring out if there is a larger issue as to why you’re using your phone so much. Are you avoiding something else bigger? Resolving the larger issue at hand, could cause a decrease in phone use.

Change your settings to remove notifications and other alerts, set your screen to dark mode at night, keep your phone out of sight and never charge it in your bedroom. After a certain time, set your phone up so that only emergency contacts can get through to you, everyone else can wait. Try replacing games on your phone with real in person games, or develop a hobby you’ve been wanting to try. Too much cell phone use can develop into a loss of control.

There have been some experiments where people have gone two days without their phones. Some people choose to give up their phones all together, while others make significant changes to reduce use.

The potential risk of depression, insomnia and lack of productivity just isn’t worth it. Think back to pre cell phone times. While there are safety benefits to having a phone, we don’t need to be connected 24/7, and we don’t need to respond or answer our phones just because they ding.

Your responsibility is to yourself and it’s wild how much you can get done if you just unplug. Take a breather, shut your phone completely off for 15 minutes and see how you feel. If you do try this trick, send us an email and let us know what you find.

Don’t hold your breath

To the Editor:
The latest threat of a government shutdown was like a broken record. We’ve all seen this partisan circus too many times to take it seriously, but the disturbing difference this time was how much influence Elon Musk had on the process. A billionaire businessman who hasn’t been elected to any position in government shouldn’t be able to leverage decisions in our Congress. He’s looking more and more like the puppet-master to puppet Trump.

Both political parties have their share of Breaking News: Trump Downgrades Soaring Rhetoric On Campaign Promises.

At an August rally in No. Carolina: (if you elect me) “Prices will come down, and they’ll come down fast. Not only with insurance, with everything.”

In a Time Magazine interview in December: “It’s difficult to bring down the price of groceries once they’ve gone up.”

One of his favorite talking points at rallies was that tariffs would fill the government coffers to overflowing.

During a recent post-election appearance on “Meet The Press,” he said (you guessed it) he could not guarantee that tariffs would not lead to higher consumer prices. He added “I can’t guarantee anything, I can’t guarantee tomorrow.”

He might also have added he could guarantee he wouldn’t be going to prison thanks to voters he himself described as “poorly educated.”

On the September debate stage, Trump promised to end the Russia-Ukraine conflict “before even becoming president.”

At his first post-election press conference. Trump suggested (yep) ending the war in Ukraine “would be more difficult than easing tensions in the Middle East,” another subject this buffoon has not a clue about.

This from Rex Huppke, opinion writer for USA Today:

“An entire community of legal immigrants in Ohio got labeled dog eaters to give stupid politicians something to fearmonger. A convicted felon who had been found liable for sexual abuse and charged with a multitude of other crimes, a guy who lies with such reckless abandon he has all but eradicated the idea of ‘facts,’ got elected president-again-on a promise of cruelty to others. Trump is irredeemable, and he brings out the worst Americans have to offer.”

One comment about this article some of us can’t argue with was from a man who said “The country is currently blanketed with some form of psychosis.”

Trump has no conscience. You can kiss morality goodbye.

Those of us who voted for Kamala did so out of a sense of decency, a candidate to best preserve our values.

See what Trumpers voted for? A bonafide clown show starring Orange Bozo.

Keep in mind Trump received 49.81 percent of the popular vote while Kamala garnered 48.33 percent, a margin of 1.48 percent. But 1.7 percent voted for “other” candidates. There really was no landslide as Trump claims since 50 percent of Americans rejected Trump.

Trump hasn’t even been given the oath of office by Chief dictator-maker Roberts and he’s wasting no time creating havoc with our allies.

Start by making Canada the 51st State?

Trump will make history indeed

To the Editor:
On Jan. 20, Donald Trump will make history in so many ways.

He will be only the second president elected to non-consecutive terms, after Grover Cleveland; historic. According to Bloomberg polls, in his first term, he was the most unpopular president going back to FDR, and his highest approval rating never got as high as 50 percent and his overall average approval rating was a mere 41 percent, lower than Biden’s current 42 percent; historic. (Oh, and for the record, Biden’s highest rating was 57 percent and his lowest was 36 percent, still higher than Trump’s 34 percent.) He also won both times getting less than 50 percent of the popular vote; historic. The majority of voters voted against him in three elections, yet he still won the presidency for a second term;

“drama,” but the dysfunctional mess of the first Trump presidency could be even worse the second time around. Republicans will have control, but they’ll need to stop fighting among themselves to accomplish anything. Democrats may decide to just sit back and watch the opposition party implode. Both parties working together for the benefit of the American people is what’s supposed to happen --- don’t hold your breath.

Two steps back

Prime Minister Trudeau wasted no time in heading down to Mara Lago to kiss up to Trump instead of saying what my Quebecois Memere would surely have told him- “Mange la Merde.”

Canadian big guns have been flexing some muscle though, like considering shutting off electric power to some of our northern states. So there.

Let’s continue messing with international order. How about threatening little Denmark (just like bully Trump’s idol, Hitler) concerning Greenland, their sovereign territory. In recent days they’ve been showing some spunk by pumping up their defenses as a show of strength to their NATO ally, the USA! Trump, where’s Greenland? He points to Australia.

Here’s more of Donny’s imperialistic expansionism plan. Why not the Panama Canal? We already have a treaty and fair-trade agreement with them. Not good enough, let’s take it all back. Come on Panama, claim the Erie Canal.

It never ends. Two years ago, Trump orders his flock of sheep not to raise the debt ceiling limit so he can harm Biden’s economy. Now he not only wants to raise the limit but eliminate it all together. This would accommodate more tax cuts for the ultra-wealthy and big corporations. This helped add $8Trillion to the debt in his last 4 years of nothingness. He also lost more jobs and had the highest unemployment since The Great Depression.

Joe Biden’s administration created 16.1 million jobs, had record low unemployment, a manufacturing boom and a stock market increase of 50 percent. He capped Medicare and prescription drug costs for seniors, even for some of you, Trumpers. Your president wants to end the Affordable Care Act. But no, eating bottom round instead of top sirloin puts meathead back in the White House. Food prices are high because of food chain oligarchs’ price gouging and Trump’s screw up during Covid.

By the way, all the good things Joe Biden accomplished in his tenure, guess who in the next few years is going to take all the credit? The same guy who told his rally goers Biden was a disaster.

At least we can all sit back and enjoy the MAGA factions trying to tear each other apart thanks to co-president Musk and this H1 B Visa business.

MAGA cultists are screaming betrayal. Oh, it’s wonderful.

Nicole Wallace of MSNBC put it this way: “This is what happens when a political movement is grounded not in a set of policies or even an ideology that’s recognizable, but in one person.”

historic. He is the only convicted felon to win the Oval Office; historic. He is the only president to file for bankruptcy for six companies; historic. The closest analogy I can think of to explain how the most unpopular president to ever hold the office again won back the presidency after losing it is this. America took some ground beef out of the refrigerator, found it green with mold and a rotten smell. Put it back in the refrigerator, then took it out again a week later and used it to make meatloaf for dinner.

Enjoy the meal, America.

January vices

I’ve resolved to keep my vices for the New Year. I’m not going to give up Cape Cod reduced fat potato chips or to chips or inexpensive white wine from Pomfret Spirit Shoppe. The lower fat chips are crispier and the wine, with a handful of ice cubes tossed in the glass, equals a fine French Sancerre to my plebian palate. I’m at an age where I feel I should enjoy life, especially if it isn’t off the rails, but a bit of self-improvement is welcome.

The people I really love who love me back give me more joy than ever. I don’t want to criticism them, so I will resolve to bite my tongue when I could disagree, provide a salient point or just find fault. I can take private pride in being circumspect.

My brother died in October, and as time passes, I feel less sadness, but often more clarity at the quiet lessons he taught me by often not saying much. Don’t get me wrong, I come from a family of prodigious talkers. We talked to each other. We talked to friends, strangers and the dogs. My husband and I talk constantly. He is a man of wide interests and a good sense of humor. He loves sharing what he just read, heard or thought, including observations on the stock market, politics and his annoyance at the term “natural flavoring”. He and our daughter have a chocolate business, which requires extensive, precise labeling and “natural flavoring is entirely too vague for them to use. I’ll continue to love talking by being natural, not artificial.

My brother often began phone calls with a detailed commentary on the weather. He watched the Weather Channel and knew more about our weather than I did. It took me years to understand why an intelligent, educated man watched the Weather Channel. Finally, I figured it out- the weather is beyond politics, beyond sad world stories, beyond the petty distractions of life because it is bigger than all of it. It is endless and timeless. We are all empowered to talk about the weather. The topic was his way to refrain from bemoaning lost friends and his aches and pains. It was a way of connecting through avoidance, a classic New England maneuver that I respect and practice.

A month or so ago I did a program at my library for people with memory issues and their caretakers. I was a fill-in for the real leader, who is trained in working with such groups. I read up on what to expect and copied out a number of poems to read. We sat in a circle and as I watched the caregivers help their people settle in I felt I was in over my head. The first poem worked as a caregiver, a former teacher, read it beautifully. Next came a Frost poem, then “Casey at the Bat”, which was a home run. Two men, who had been distant, perked up and talked about the poem and baseball. We all laughed and for a moment it seemed we were as one.

I’ve just read “Time of the Child” by Niall Williams. In a small town in Ireland, every aspect of life is observed and commented on. The postmistress manages the gossip, but everyone has a role to play. They connect through understatement. In bleak January, the virtuous can keep their resolutions. I will keep my vices and embrace self-improvement by talking less and listening more. The challenges of 2025 are uncertain, but weather, conversations and memories are the natural flavorings for living a good life.

2025 Market & Economic Outlook: Maintaining strategic focus in a shifting landscape

After two years of a strong bull market, 2025 begins on a positive note, with investors optimistic about the future. The Federal Reserve is expected to continue cutting interest rates, though more slowly than they did last year. Lower rates should benefit both the economy and corporate earnings. Earnings should also receive a boost from the incoming

Trump administration's new policies, which are expected to include lower taxes and fewer regulations. Of course, there are always things to worry about and this year at WHZ Strategic Wealth Advisors, we'd put high stock market valuations, large US deficits, and wars around the world on our list. But those concerns are overshadowed by the solid US government, growing economy, and technological innovation that continues to make the US the best place in the world to invest. Peering into 2025 with Trump back at the helm. 2024 turned out far better than the naysayers feared when the year began. The highly anticipated recession never arrived and the economy grew by roughly 2.6 percent year-over-year. The presidential election came and went without any rioting or disruption. And equity investors had reason to be jolly after the S&P 500 rose more than 20 percent in 2024, bringing its two-year gain to roughly 50 percent.

Investors begin 2025 more bullish about the markets than they were a year ago and for good reason. Over the next 12 months, the stock market should be supported by a Federal Reserve that's expected to continue cutting interest rates. Corporate earnings should benefit from the new Trump administration, which is expected to cut taxes and regulation. Companies should also profit from the surge in demand for artificial intelligence products or because they're using artificial intelligence to enhance productivity. It's a backdrop that makes Corporate America the envy of the world.

Market momentum could certainly take a breather at some point given the S&P 500's forward P/E is north of 22. But there are so many positive winds propelling the US markets forward that we'd expect any pullback would be short lived. Here's a look at the important market drivers of 2025:

Fed's Still Cutting. One of the biggest changes in 2024 was the Federal Reserve's shift from a rate tightening cycle to a rate cutting cycle. Inflation decelerated during the course of the year, allowing the Fed to cut rates by half a percentage point in September and a quarter of a percentage point in each October and December.

In 2025, the Federal Reserve had indicated it will slowing its rate-cutting pace because the economy has been stronger than expected and inflation readings have been a touch higher than expected. Federal Reserve officials have signaled their intention to cut rates two more times over the course of the next 12 months. Doing so should help the economy continue to grow moderately.

Trump returns. President-elect Donald Trump returns to the Oval Office with a strong mandate to lead from voters and the latitude to get legislation passed in a Republican-controlled Congress. Trump's campaign promises included cutting corporate taxes for companies producing goods in the US to 15 percent, which should help those companies' margins and earnings improve.

Candidate Trump also promised to extend the tax breaks in the 2017 Tax Cuts and Jobs Act and to slash taxes on Social Security and tips. Homeowners in our area stand to benefit if Trump follows through on his promise to lift the $10,000 cap on state and local property tax deductions. These tax breaks should boost consumers' confidence and fatten their wallets, allowing them to continue shopping even after the holidays come to a close.

Though not officially in office, Trump has already announced the Department of Government Efficiency, to be headed by Elon Musk and Vivek Ramaswamy, who have a mandate to dismantle government bureaucracy, slash excess regulations, cut wasteful expenditures and restructure federal agencies. The duo has already floated the idea of combining a number of financial regulators under one roof, a move that would certainly be cheered by bankers. Any savings could help pay for Trump's proposed tax cuts.

As 2025 progresses, we'll certainly be keeping an eye on US debt levels and bond investors' willingness to fund deficits. Even though the Federal Reserve has been cutting short-term interest rates, longer-term interest rates have remained elevated, potentially reflecting bond investors' nervousness over the deficit.

Continued US Outperformance. We continue to expect US markets to outperform the markets of other nations. In addition to a strong economy, the US boasts companies that are in the midst of a technological renaissance. Nvidia built the computer chip that's powering the calculations behind artificial intelligence. OpenAI, Meta Platforms and others have developed AI software that helps people work more efficiently. And companies that embrace these new AI tools have the potential to improve their margins and earnings

These companies also benefit from being headquartered in a country with a stable government. The US isn't facing early elections like France or Germany. It's not fighting deflation like China, nor is it in the middle of a three-year war like Russia. For this and so much more we are thankful as another year begins.

Is hydrogen the new diesel?

To the Editor:

In the midst of the usual kneejerk hatred towards electric cars, I may have come across as someone turning a blind eye to hydrogen, but that is not the case. I'm well aware that hydrogen has been a rival to electric cars in terms of future fuels for a very long time. In the '90s, when I was growing up and first learning about possible successors to gasoline, I definitely remember seeing hydrogen on that list, and it was the most futuristic of the bunch. A decade later, it seemed a lot less futuristic when I heard George W. Bush talking about a future with hydrogen cars in 2004 in one of his speeches during his re-election campaign.

Fast forward to today, and we just had a prototype hydrogen truck set a Guinness World Record for traveling about 1,800 miles without refueling. The truck's called H2Rescue, and is being developed for disaster response so it can deliver supplies to areas where diesel might be in short supply. It also can serve as a portable power generator and since the "exhaust" of a hydrogen vehicle is water, that water could also be collected, treated, and repurposed as well, though the truck only produces a gallon per hour via "exhaust."

This may sound like the funeral bells for electric cars since electric trucks have had major disadvantages due to limitations in battery tech being able to scale up for larger vehicles like semi trucks, but H2Rescue, like every hydrogen car I've checked out as the technology has developed, has an electric component as well. Hydrogen cars are essentially hybrids, and if built correctly can also have some of the same pluses as electric cars like being able to not need transmissions in vehicles (and their assorted costs). However, hydrogen has major problems related to the fuel still needing to be manufactured - and often using fossil fuels to do so via electrolysis. Manufactured fuel also needs to be stored too, adding to the problem where gas stations still need to be a thing because of needing huge tanks to store the fuel, as opposed to electric chargers being able to go wherever the grid goes.

I can only see hydrogen as a diesel of sorts, being used where electric tech isn't up to snuff yet, if it goes anywhere at all with all that baggage that's too similar to fossil fuels. I still say we will gain a lot by liberating the American consumer via fuel that can be generated whichever way we can rather than needing to be manufactured, shipped, and stored. Likewise, the end of the internal combustion engine and things like actually needing a transmission should also be a plus for consumers when there are less major parts in a car that could need to be repaired.

Hydrogen sounds cool, but I only see a niche future for it while the rest of the motoring world drives on lightning.

We need to do better

To the Editor:

In an unbridled display of sarcasm and anger in this space on Jan. 3 toward undocumented immigrants and two letter writers, Stephen Bibek missed a great opportunity to confront two very important issues facing our country: immigration and our bloated, unwieldy, inadequate, profit-driven healthcare system.

Of course, Dave Clark was not suggesting in his letter of Dec. 20 that 50 million migrants a year (the so-called "open borders," which is not, and never has been, a thing) would be an acceptable number to come to the United States. And Cris Cadiz, in the same issue, was simply pointing out that one of the major items on the new Republican administration's agenda is cutting Medicare and Medicaid funding, something which would affect untold numbers of people who are not enormously wealthy and thus would seem to be of more than passing interest to many of us. Mr. Clark was making the humane and obvious point that most of us are descended from immigrants (some willing and some not so) and to paint all recent undocumented immigrants or migrants with the same brush (that they are all rapists and criminals) is a sad replay of what was done to the Irish, Polish, Germans, Italians, etc., etc. He made no statement (either direct or implied) about how many immigrants/migrants we should accept. The decline in the number of small and rural hospitals is due to a number of factors, among them: low patient volumes, high fixed costs, staff shortages, changes in Medicaid and Medicare policy, including reimbursement, inadequate private insurance reimbursement (to make way for bigger profit), physician specialization (highly specialized physicians are difficult to recruit to rural areas), patient desire to go to the "mecca" medical center, and general changes in demographics. Simply put, migrants are not by any means a significant cause of small hospitals failing. Virtually no one across our political spectrum thinks that our immigration system is good; it is underfunded, it lacks an overriding philosophy and set of goals; it is, in a word, a mess. But the way to fix it is have all stakeholders hash it out, something akin to the bipartisan Senate border bill crafted by Republican James Lankford and Independent Kyrsten Sinema, but which was deep-sixed by Donald Trump so that he could continue to run on a fear of migrants, a tactic which, as Mr. Bibek obliquely points out, seems to have worked. And, linking our messy healthcare system to the migrant issue does no one any good — it is more stone-throwing, anger without a purpose. We really can do better; we very much need to.

PUTNAM — Dec. 21 proved to be a challenging one for the Putnam Rotary's Interact Club with temperatures in the 20s.

The Interact members and their classmates braved the cold — even colder than last weekend — and manned the Salvation Army kettles for one last time.

The Dec. 21 total kettle donations were $2,335.43 and the final tally for all donations was $11,447.75. The Putnam Rotary Club's donation of $500 is included in the grand total.

Danielson foot bridge closed amid structural concerns

BY JASON BLEAU
VILLAGER CORRESPONDENT

DANIELSON — Visitors to Danielson’s downtown may have noticed a significant change that will impact the accessibility of the area near Commerce Avenue and Water Street, as the footbridge over Fivemile Pond has been closed to pedestrians due to structural issues.

The footbridge is part of the Quinebaug River Trail and often serves as a way to access Main Street from Prospect Avenue on the other side of the pond. However, in December, Killingly Town Manager Mary Calorio told the Town Council the bridge had to be closed after it was deemed unsafe for continued use in its current condition.

“We became aware that on one of the structural footings on the bridge the concrete has let go so we’re engaging with a structural engineer to begin the analysis of what needs to be done and what our true limitations are on it,” said Calorio. “We recognize it’s only a foot bridge. It’s not having weighted vehicles going over it, but that side of the bridge, that abutment area is truly sagging. It has no structural reinforcement at this time.”

Calorio said the bridge was closed after a visual inspection, not an official examination of its overall condition. The bridge is owned by the town, which means the municipality oversees maintenance and securing funding for its repair or replacement. The town isn’t sure whether the bridge can be salvaged, or whether a whole new structure will be required and is utilizing available funding for professional services to cover the cost of a structural engineer.

Regardless of the extend of the wear and tear, the structure has been deemed unsafe for continued use at this time.

“Being a foot bridge, I don’t know what the requirement is for duration of time in between inspections, but we generally would contract out for the thorough inspections that have to take place. Visual inspections are a different matter. It was visually noted by some of our emergency response that there might be a cause for concern, and we went out and did a visual inspection which is why we took the precautions that we did,” said Calorio.

The town is working to determine as quickly as possible whether a full replacement or simple repairs could allow the bridge to reopen. Fences and signage have been erected to prevent pedestrians from using the bridge and the public is cautioned against ignoring these warnings due to the heightened risk of crossing the structure. Any repair would require capital investment funding. Calorio indicated it’s unlikely the town would be able to cover the full cost for any repairs out of pocket and that there had been no official cost analysis as of the December Town Council meeting.

their efforts and make a contribution to the hospital.

During the luncheon, Iamartino presented a $25,000 check to Day Kimball Health CEO Kyle Kramer. This donation is part of the Woman’s Board’s $250,000 pledge to support the hospital’s da Vinci robotic surgical system, a cutting-edge technology that enhances the precision and outcomes of surgical procedures. With this latest contribution, the Woman’s Board has donated $125,000 toward this commitment.

“The Woman’s Board has had another remarkable fundraising year,” said Iamartino. “Through steadfast commitment, dedication and hard work, our members continue to raise funds for the hospital and support healthcare programs and services that make a difference in our community. I am extremely proud of our work and our 130 years of staying power!”

The event featured guest speaker Sidney Migliori, M.D., an orthopedic surgeon with the Ortho Group at Day Kimball Health (DKH) through its partnership with Ortho Rhode Island. Dr. Migliori specializes in sports-related and age-related surgeries, including shoulder, knee, and hip replacements. She shared insights into advancements in orthopedic care now available to patients locally.

“The Woman’s Board exemplifies the power of community collaboration and philanthropy,” said Kyle Kramer, chief executive officer, DKH. “The Board’s dedication and generosity over the last 130 years has made a significant impact in helping us invest in expanding healthcare services for Northeast Connecticut. This latest contribution toward the da Vinci system is another example of their unwavering commitment to enhancing patient care, and we are deeply grateful for their support.”

The Woman’s Board has a legacy of supporting Day Kimball Hospital through fundraising initiatives that address the region’s healthcare needs. Through the efforts of the 170 members of the Woman’s Board, along with the community’s support of their events, it is the mission of the Woman’s Board to raise funds to enhance the quality and services of Day Kimball Hospital.

Happy New Year to you all. May 2025 be filled with happiness and good health for you and your families. To those of you who are grieving, my sincere sympathies. Several close family members passed away this time of year, so I can easily empathize.

As you all know, over the holidays, our oldest living President, James Earl Carter, the 39th U.S. President, went home to our Creator. Carter's one-term presidency (1977-1981) was not considered very successful; some considered it a failure. The Iran hostage crisis was a low-point. The Camp David Accords, with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, a high-point. "He made human rights a central theme of U.S. policy...Two cabinet-level departments --Energy and Education--were created under Carter." However, It was in his retirement that he went on to do his greatest good--as a great humanitarian. In his "retirement" years Carter and his wife worked hands-on for Habit for Humanity, helping build a house each year for many years. Instead of a normal presidential library, he established the Carter Center at Emory University from which "the Carters travelled widely on peacemaking and other humanitarian missions." In 2002 he was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize for "decades of untiring effort to try to find peaceful solutions to international conflict." (Nobelprize.org). May we imitate his goodness and compassion and reach out to those around us who can use our help. (Quotes from The Day, Monday, Dec. 30, pp. 1 & 6).

Do you remember who was governor of Connecticut in January 1977, as Carter was preparing to take in office? It was Ella Grasso, who was a groundbreaking-er in this state, being the first female governor. A Democrat, she served from 1975-December 1980. Our 29th Senatorial district also had another female, Sen. Audrey P. Beck, representing us. Those of you who are young women may think, "So what?" Now women are commonly seen in high positions, but not then--not in politics; not in business; not in sports; not on television. I am so happy to see the changes that have occurred during my lifetime.

What was happening here in Northeastern Connecticut as Carter was preparing for his presidency? A few articles from the online Windham County Transcript provided some background. "Charles LaBrec, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger La Brec of Green Hollow Road, Danielson, was named winner of the annal Bausch & Lomb Science Award at Killingly High School. George Ridge, son of Mr. & Mrs. Gerald Ridge of Route 12 Derryville has been named runner-up. The Science Award--a handsome bronze medal--is presented each year to winners at more than 8,000 participating schools." (WCT Jan. 6, 1977, p. 1; killingly-pl.org).

If you think back to 1977, you might recall that winter wonderlands blanketed the landscape then changed to a mess. The front page of the January 13 Windham County Transcript showed photos from the region. "Deluged by Snow: Killingly's deep drifts and frozen ponds sparkled under a bright sun last weekend, only to melt to ankle-deep slush in Monday's rain that became Tuesday's sheets of ice. Area residents agree we haven't seen a winter like this in quite a while."

Meanwhile, the Killingly Town Council was contemplating changes to the Sewer Authority. "Council to Study Changing Control of the Sewer Authority. Plans to bring the Sewer Authority under direct control of the Town Council were initiated by the Council Tuesday. The council voted to seek a response from the authority on a plan which would abolish the authority and create a sewer commission. The commission would be in the Department of Public Works and under direct council control. The present authority was created before Killingly instituted a Town Council form of government." Members of the Council mentioned in the article included Robert C. Hire, chairman, Joseph Collison, and Peter B. Mann." (WCT Jan. 13, 1977, p. 1; kpl.org).

Do any of you recall attending Greek Nite at the Elks that January, 1977-or other evenings? A small ad promoted the event, "Danielson Lodge of Elks #1706, Annual Greek Nite, Saturday, Jan. 22, Elks Lodge #1706, Center Street, Danielson. 7 p.m. A complete Greek menu--Roast Leg of Lamb dinner: 9-1 American and Greek dancing. Donation $7.50 per person. Members & guests." (Ibid, p. 2).

I'm sure a number of readers or family members attended Putnam Catholic Academy. It was advertising its placement test for Jan. 15, 1977. (Ibid). Please share memories and photos from that and other schools which are no longer in existence.

If you were inclined to take in a movie at the Danielson Cinema Woody Allen was appearing in The Front with two shows on Friday and Saturday evenings. The children's matinees on Saturday and Sunday featured Once Upon A Time. (Ibid).

"Killingly High School soccer stars Dave Chandler and Ed Hatzche have been chosen to both the All-Eastern Connecticut Conference and the All-State soccer squads. Chandler, the (team's) magnificent goal tender; finished the season with four shut-outs and five one-goal games... Hantzsche was one of the most dangerous forwards in the state." (I bid, p. 6)

My New Year tip to readers is to do something for someone else.

I love the quote from motivational speaker Zig Ziglar, who famously said, "You can have everything in life you want if you will just help enough other people get what they want."

Overall, acts of kindness benefit both your mental and physical well-being. I know some of you are saying, "Mike, I am too busy, too stressed, too overworked, and overwhelmed." How can I help others when I can barely help myself? We can look to the late President Jimmy Carter. He served as president of the US and then quietly faded into the background, but he and his wife went on for decades to serve others.

Why? When you do

ATTITUDE OF GRATITUDE

something nice for someone, your body experiences several positive mental and physical benefits:

Random acts of kindness release serotonin (which improves mood), dopamine (which creates a sense of pleasure), and endorphins (which reduce pain and stress).

Being kind can lower cortisol levels, your stress hormone, making you feel calm and relaxed. Helping others can release oxytocin, which benefits your heart by reducing blood pressure and inflammation. Positive emotional states from being kind can strengthen your immune system, making your body less prone to illness. Doesn't that sound great?

You start making your community a better place as one kind person with one kind act. Kindness can have a ripple effect, starting with one person at a time and one town at a time, by helping you focus on positive situations and giving you an opportunity to bring good to the world even when times are difficult or challenging. The way I spell love is t-i-m-e. You don't have to give money; you can just contribute your time and energy to make things better in our little quiet corner.

How?

Donate food, toys, or books. Volunteer to serve food at a homeless shelter or the Veteran's Coffeehouse. Leave an extra tip at your local restaurant. Drop off a meal to a family with a new baby or who just experienced a huge personal loss. Doing something to improve someone else's day, for no good reason, will enrich your day exponentially.

Where?

There are many local places where you can help. I will begin by saying I love this quote, "Act local, think globally," to mentally set your course. My suggestions include TEEG, Interfaith Human Services of Putnam (food donations, diaper bank, fuel, and more), the Putnam Resource Center, volunteering for your local historical society, and local boards (zoning, economic development, wetlands, etc.) or even shoveling the snow off a neighbor's sidewalk. There are many opportunities to lift up our neighbors and our towns.

Trust me. I could share study after study about how helping someone else improves people's moods more than getting a gift themselves, but I know this from personal experience. While running my business, I decided to do a community project and raised a few thousand dollars for Paul Newman's Hole In The Wall camp in Eastford. When I met with the staff, they showed me the million-dollar contributions that the camp had received. Even though they appreciated the donation, it felt like a drop in the bucket to this internationally funded group. It was then I decided to do something more local. I had a very good friend who struggled with drugs, so I thought supporting local children through D.A.R.E programs might be a better choice. All the money stayed local, and each school could receive money from the generous contributions of local businesses and people in our towns. To me, it was a win-win for our kids. I felt that if drugs started to ruin my friend's life, they could destroy anyone, and I was a person who could help.

Since retiring, I have had more time to give back to the community, and I absolutely love it. I am happiest when I help others. I love being busy and giving my time, advice, and experience to others. I have always tried to pass on the philosophy of having "an attitude of gratitude."

My favorite quote for the new year is, "If you want to touch the past, touch a rock. If you want to touch the present, touch a flower. If you want to touch the future, touch a life."

—Author unknown

President Carter recently passed away at age one hundred. For years after his presidency, he served his community with grace, humility, compassion, dignity, courage, and love. Let's be like Jimmy; together, we can lift up the world.

P.S.: I am helping to organize a celebrity bartender fundraiser for Interfaith Human Services of Putnam (daily bread/diaper bank/fuel assistance) on February 20 at Montana Nights Axe Throwing in Putnam from 5:30-8 p.m. if you want to kick off your generosity and have lots of fun. Hope to see you there!

Transportation memorabilia

Happy New Year! Thank you to those of you who reached out after my latest top 10 auction items column. As I mentioned in that column, there are many other categories of antiques and collectibles that are selling well in addition to those I listed, but we've had good results recently for the 10 items I mentioned.

We'll start in reverse order with number 10 on my list: transportation memorabilia. Before European settlers arrived, Native Americans traveled by foot, canoe, and some by horseback.

The colonists used many of those same methods to travel. Many of the trails used by Native Americans were widened to accommodate wagons. By 1735, stagecoaches were running between Boston and New York. Sailing ships were used in Egypt prior to 3000 BC. Steamship development started in the 1700s and Robert Fulton made the first commercial steamboat trip from New York to Albany in 1807. In 1830, the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad ran the first train service for passengers and freight. As for aviation, the Wright Brothers made the first heavier than air powered aircraft flight in 1903.

Whether by plane, train, automobile, or ship, many collectors have an attachment to some form of transportation memorabilia. I'll start by discussing nautical memorabilia and trains. I'll cover additional methods of transportation in my next column.

Ship paintings by good artists are always popular. We sold a ship painting by Canadian artist John O'Brien for over $20,000 in 2016. Over a decade ago, we auctioned a book of trade cards, many related to the 19th century shipping trade, which brought a figure in the mid-thousands. Some of our more recent sales were for a brass ship's telegraph for $1,250, a model of the U.S.S. Constitution by Lannan Ship Galleries in Boston that brought $1,300, and a Chelsea Ship's clock for $550.

Some rarer pieces can bring even stronger auction results. A 1907 moonlight image of Cunard Lines Lusitania sold for over $15,000 in 2015. George Henry Hunt was planning his return to the United States on White Star Line's "Oceanic" in 1912. The Oceanic developed mechanical problems and he was transferred to the Titanic before its ill-fated journey. Hunt was lost at sea when the ship sank. The letter he wrote to his parents explaining the change in his travel plans sold for $275,000 at auction in 2022.

Railroad memorabilia collectors often like to collect items from their area. Others specialize in certain categories like railroad signs or lanterns. Railroad pocket watches are also popular with collectors. In 1895, railroads required that pocket watches contain 17 or more jewels so that they would be precise enough for workers in the industry. In 2020, we sold a Ball Official Railroad Standard 23 jewel gold filled pocket watch for $425. In 2023, an Elgin 10-karat gold railroad pocket watch brought $600. In 2011, we sold an Illinois Watch Co. "Railroader" 14-karat gold pocket watch for $1,300. Other collectible railroad memorabilia we've sold includes a group of brass and nickel cap badges that went for $190 in 2011. Signs and broadsides are also popular with collectors. An enamel Newmarket, New Hampshire, railroad station sign fetched $400 last year. A sign with a map of stations along the Boston and Albany Railroad sold for even more. A Norwich and Worcester Railroad excursion broadside (sizeable sheet of paper printed on one side) to see the Worcester professional baseball team play in 1881 brought $1,300 in 2022.

Railroad memorabilia has brought strong prices in other auction houses as well. A 1935 poster advertising trips to Atlantic City sold for $7,500 in 2023. A rare Kansas Pacific railway lantern from 1869 reached $41,900 in 2022. For those who like larger memorabilia, a New York Central System caboose that had been restored and described as a tiny house sold for $37,500 in 2018. That's some steep train fare.

We are still cataloging the Civil War memorabilia auction, an online auction of antiques in a Beacon Hill estate, and a comic book, sports memorabilia, and collectibles auction. We are also accepting consignments of items in my top 10 list for future auctions. Please visit our website <https://centralmassauctions.com> for links to upcoming events.

2025 is the year of the Monstera

Kick-off 2025 with the addition of a monstera plant to your indoor garden. You'll join other gardeners observing 2025 as the Year of the Monstera. Each year, the National Garden Bureau (NGB) selects and celebrates one plant in each of the following categories: annual, perennial, bulb, edible, and shrub. The plants are chosen for their popularity, easy-care nature, adaptability, diversity, and versatility.

Monstera certainly meets the criteria and as NGB declared it is "the world's most iconic indoor plant." The large, glossy heart-shaped leaves have distinct perforations called fenestrations. Scientists speculate these holes allow tropical downpours to pass through, minimizing plant damage.

There are several different monstera, ranging in size and leaf shape including some with variegated leaves. Some are easy to grow while others are a bit fussier. Always check the plant label for specifics on caring for the monstera you select.

One of the most popular and readily available is the Monstera deliciosa, commonly called split-leaf philodendron, even though it is not a philodendron. It's known for its large heart-shaped perforated leaves on thick stems. In its native habitat, it can grow 66 feet tall but typically grows up to 7 or 8 feet indoors. The flowers that seldom appear indoors are like a peace lily with a cone-shaped structure (spadix) surrounded by a cupped white sheath (spathe). The flowers may be followed by an edible fruit that tastes like a combination of pineapple, banana, and mango. This flavorful combination inspired its nickname, fruit salad plant, and the botanical name that translates to delicious monstrosity.

In general, these tropical beauties prefer growing conditions like that of their native habitat. They prefer bright, filtered indirect sunlight. Avoid direct sunlight that can scorch or cause leaves to turn yellow. Grow monstera in a quality well-drained potting mix in a container with drainage holes. Water them thoroughly when the top two inches of soil are dry. Pour off excess water or place the pot on pebbles in a saucer. The pebbles elevate the pot above any water that collects in the saucer to avoid root rot. As this water evaporates, humidity increases around the plant.

Further boost the humidity by placing your monstera with other plants. As one plant loses moisture or transpires, the neighboring plants will benefit.

Only apply houseplant fertilizer when the plants are actively growing, usually March through October. Let the plant and your garden goals be your fertilization guide. Fertilizers provide needed nutrients to plants in need of a nutrient boost or when you want to stimulate more growth.

Support the plant with a moss pole or trellis as it starts to climb. The large aerial roots attach to nearby surfaces to help them climb. In nature, these roots help monstera to climb trees and have been used to make rope in Peru and baskets in Mexico.

Use these beauties to create an indoor tropical paradise or to provide some green relief. No matter your indoor décor, this unique plant will make a welcome addition.

Therrien received many Military awards and recognition. Among them were the National Service Defense Medal, both the Army and Overseas Service Ribbons, the Global War on Terrorism Expeditionary Medal, the Global War on Terrorism Service Medal and the Armed Forces Reserve Medal.

"We deeply appreciate the commitment shown by our town leaders and the community in making this initiative a priority. Your support not only helps keep our firefighters safe, but also ensures we can continue to serve this community with the dedication and strength it deserves. Thank you for standing behind us in our mission to protect Woodstock."

The other expenditure, the culvert project, is part of a partnership between the Connecticut Department of Transportation and the town that will see work done on the bridge over Gravelly Brook on County Road including adding a culvert and widening the roadway. The project has been in the works for some time and is one of several culvert-related initiatives in progress in Woodstock. The town began work on replacing another culvert on Harrisville Road in October. CT DOT released a project plan in May which has been made available in the minutes of the July 1 meeting of the Inland Wetlands and Watercourses Commission on the Town of Woodstock website. That document shows the County Road project including the addition of a 10-foot-wide by nine-foot-high culvert under the road and widened the roadway from 21.7-feet to 24-feet.

Laurie (Smith) LeClair 1961 - 2024

Laurie LeClair, 63, formerly of Plainfield, CT, passed away after a brief bout with cancer in Austin, TX on December 8th, 2024. However, everyone who knew her knows she died from a broken heart. Born in Warwick, R.I. to Clifford and Laura (Nobriga) Smith on December 5, 1961, Laurie was one of five children. Many of her fondest childhood memories were spending time at her grandmother's house, traditional Christmas Eve and Christmas celebrations there, large family outings at R.I. state parks and at the ocean, playing games with her siblings and cousins, and time spent with her godparents.

She grew up in R.I. and CT, graduating from Plainfield High School in 1979. Along the way, she had numerous jobs and earned two Associate degrees. Her greatest career accomplishment by far was becoming a bestselling author; having started seriously writing when she was in her late twenties. With nearly 70 books written, she enjoyed writing with heart and humor and making a difference with her story telling.

However, nothing compared to the day when her world changed forever at the Plainfield Dog Track where fate intervened one June evening and she met the love of her life. Two years to the day later, Laurie married James LeClair in a beautiful ceremony at the Norwich Rose Garden. They were best friends and soul mates on a wonderful adventure together for over 41 years until his untimely death in 2021. After his passing, Laurie donated ten rose bushes and had a plaque created in honor of them and their love where it is placed permanently at the Norwich Rose Garden for all to see.

Laurie was predeceased by her beloved husband, Jim, both parents, godparents Clarence and Jeannine Smith, nephew Charles, niece Catana, and niece Bernell.

She leaves behind her brothers Mark Smith (wife Kathy), William Smith (wife Patty), and Matthew Smith all of Florida; sister Deborah McQuesten (husband Gary) of CT. Also, she leaves behind three generations of nieces and nephews, numerous cousins, in-laws, and friends.

The best way to honor Laurie's memory is to take a long drive somewhere, windows down, warm sunshine on your face, radio cranked up with '70s music playing, singing along as loud as you can, and enjoying the heck out of the moment knowing she's right where she wants to be—with her beloved sweet Jimbo.

In lieu of flowers, please donate to the charity of your choice or to the Arbor Day Foundation where you can have trees planted in Laurie's name. For information go to: <https://shop.arborday.org/trees-in-memory>
